RHEM. 3 5 In watchings.) When in the middes of many miseries and persecutions, the Apostles yet of their owne accord added and required voluntarie vigils, fastings, and chastitie, we may well perceiue these workes to be wonderfull gratefull to God, and specially needfull in the Clergie. Voluntarie penance.

FVLKE. 3 The works whereof the Apostle speaketh, are acceptable to God, but not as penance satisfactorie for sinne, nor as meritorious of saluation (which is of grace,) and not of workes: and these exercises are also needfull for the Ministers of the Church, to make them more apt to doe their duetie. But where you exact chastitie, (meaning abstinence from mariage) the worde signifieth puritie, and by Theodoret is interpreted, Contempt of money. Chrysostome, Reiecting of gifts, and preaching the Gospell freely. Ambrose, Either chastitie of the body, or of the Gospell. Oecumenius, Modestie and preaching the Gospell freely, and sincerely in all things. This place therefore chargeth not the Ministers of the Church with continencie, except they haue the gift, and will vse it to Gods glorie. Satisfaction. Merite. Continencein the Clergie.

RHEM. 14 What societie.) Generally here is forbidden conuersation and dealing with all Infidels, and consequently with Heretikes, but specially in prayers, or meetings at their Schismaticall Seruice, preaching, or other diuine office whatsoeuer. Which the Apostle here vttereth in more particular and different termes, that Christian folke may take the better heed of it. No societie (saith he) nor fellowship, no participation nor agreement, no consent betweene light and darknes, Christ and Baal, the temple of God and the temple of idols: all Seruice, as pretended worship of God set vp by Heretikes or Schismatikes, being nothing else but Seruice of Baal and plaine Idolatrie, and their conuenticles nothing but conspirations against Christ. from such therefore specially we must seuer our selues alwaies in hart and minde, and touching any act of religion in body also, according as the children of Israel were commaunded by God to separate themselues from the Schismatiks Core, Dathan, and Abiron, and their tabernacles, by these words: Depart from the tabernacles of the impious men, and touch ye not those things which pertaine to them, lest you be enwrapped in their sinnes. Not to communicate with Heretiks in any act of religion. Num.16.26.

CHAP. VII.

RHEM. 1 He proceedeth to exhort them to puritie, and to receiue him into their charitie. 3 Which lest they should thinke he speaketh to accuse them, he commendeth them highly, both for their behauiour toward Titus, and for their penance which they had done vpon his other epistle.
FVLKE. 1 The Apostle commendeth the Corinthians for their repentance, not for Popish satisfactorie penance.

HAuing therefore these promises, my deerest, let vs cleanse our selues from all inquination of the flesh & spirit, perfiting sanctification in the feare of God.

2 Receiue vs. We haue hurt no man, we haue corrupted no man, we haue circumuented no man.

3 I speake not to your condemnation. for I said before that you are in our hartes to die together and to liue together.

4 Much is my confidence with you, much is my glorying for you: I am replenished with consolation: I do exceedingly abound in ioy in all our tribulation.

5 For also when we were come into Macedónia, our flesh had no rest, but we suffered all tribulation: without, combats: within, feares.

6 But

HAuing therefore these promises (dearly beloued) let vs cleanse our selues from all filthinesse of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holinesse in the feare of God.

2 †Receiue vs: we haue wronged no man, we haue corrupted no man we haue defrauded no man. † Or, vndertake

3 I speake not this to condemne you, for I haue shewed you before, that ye are in our harts to die and liue with you.

4 I vse great boldnesse of speach towardes you, I glory greatly in you: I am filled with comfort, and am exceeding ioyous in all our tribulation.

5 For when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on euery side: without were fightings, within were feares.

6 Neuer-

6 But God that comforteth the humble, did comfort vs, in the comming of Titus.

7 And not onely in his comming, but also in the consolation, wherewith he was comforted among you, reporting to vs your desire, your weeping, your emulation for me, so that I reioyced the more.

8 For although I made you sorie in an Epistle, it repenteth me not: albeit it repented me, seeing that the same Epistle (although but for a time) did make you sory.

9 Now I am glad: not because you were made sorie, but because you were made ‖ sorie to penance. For you were made sory according to God, that in nothing you should suffer detriment by vs.

10 For ‡the sorow that is according to God, worketh penance vnto saluation that is stable: but the sorow of the world worketh death.

11 For behold this very thing, that you were made sorie according to God, how great carefulnes it worketh in you: yea defense, indignation, yea feare, yea desire, yea emulation, yea reuenge. in al things you haue shewed your selues to be vndefiled in the matter.

12 Therefore although I wrote to you, not for him that did the iniurie, nor for him that suffered: but to manifest our carefulnes that we haue for you before God.

13 Therefore we are comforted. But in our consolation, we did the more aboundantly reioyce vpon the ioy of Titus, because his spirit was refreshed of all you.

14 And if to him I gloried any thing of you, I am not confounded: but as we spake al things to you in truth, so also our glorying that was to Titus, is made a truth,

15 And his bowels are more aboundantly toward you: remembring the obedience of you al, how with feare and trembling you receiued him.

16 I reioyce that in al things I haue confidence in you.

6 Neuertheless, God that comforteth the humble, comforted vs by the comming of Titus.

7 And not by his comming onely, but also by the consolation which he receiued of you, when he tolde vs your vehement desire, your weeping, your feruent minde toward me: so that I reioyced the more.

8 For though I made you sory with a letter, I repent not, though I did repent: For I perceiue that the same Epistle made you sorie, though it were but for a season.

9 I now reioyce: not that ye were made sory, but that ye were made sorie to repentance: for ye were made sorie to God ward, that in nothing ye might be hurt by vs.

10 For godly sorow, causeth repentance vnto saluation, not to be repented of: but the sorow of the world causeth death.* 1.Pet.2.19.

11 For beholde, this selfe same thing that ye were made sorie to God ward, how much carefulnesse it hath wrought in you: yea what clearing of your selues, yea what indignation, yea what feare, yea what vehement desire, yea what zeale, yea what punishment? for in all things ye haue shewed your selues that ye were cleare in that matter.

12 Wherefore, though I wrote vnto you, I did it not for his cause that had done the hurt, neither for his cause that was hurt: † but that your good minde toward vs, might appeare among you in the sight of God.

† Or, but that our care towards you in the sight of God, might appeare vnto you. So hath Codex Complutensis, Ambrosius, and Theophylactus, and so readeth the olde translation, and the translation of Stephanus.

13 Therfore we are comforted in your comfort: yea and exceedingly the more ioyed we for the ioy of Titus, because his spirit was refreshed by you all.

14 But if I haue boasted any thing vnto him of you, I haue not bene ashamed therin, for as we speake all things vnto you in trueth, euen so our boasting which I made vnto Titus, is found a truth

15 And his † inward affection is more aboundant toward you, while he remembreth the obedience of you all, how with feare and trembling ye receiued him.

† Or, his bowels are.

16 I reioyce that I haue confidence in you in all things.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. VII.

ANHEM. 2 10 The sorow that.) Contrition or sorowfull lamenting of our offences, is the cause of saluation. Not onely faith then saueth, as the Heretikes affirme. Slander.

VLKE.2 The Apostle saith, That sorow for sinne worketh repentance which is necessarie vnto saluation. But euerie thing that is necessary to saluation, is not a proper efficient cause thereof. We affirme not that onely faith saueth, as though nothing els were necessary to saluation. But we affirme that onely faith is the instrumentall cause of our iustification before God, apprehending the mercy of God in Christ (whereby we are iustified,) yet is repentance and the fruites of faith necessary to them that shall be saued, as by the iustice of faith. Iustification by faith.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. VII.

HEM. 3 9 Sorie to penance.) *The sorow which a man taketh for worldly losses or any temporall aduersity, is not here commended, but that which is and ought to be in all men for their sinnes past, which is called here, Sorow towards God and for penance, otherwise called Contrition, and is a thing exceedingly requisite and much praised, the fruites whereof are these that the Apostle reckoneth, working saluation. Which doctrine is farre distant from * Luthers, and Caluins, and such wicked Libertines, that teach contrition to be altogether a meanes to make sinners either hypocrites, or to put them in despaire.* Contrition for a mans sinne worketh saluation.

* To 2. in assert. art. 6. a Leone damnat.

VLKE. 3 Contrition or sorrow for sinnes past, is necessarie vnto true repentance, (some fruites whereof the Apostle rehearseth,) neither doth Luther or Caluine teach otherwise: Luther speaketh against the Popish heresie of penance, or sorow to be satisfactorie for sinne, and not against sorow which worketh true repentance, and amendment of life through faith in remission of sinnes. Slander.

CHAP. VIII.

RHEM. 1 By the example of the poore Macedonians he exhorteth them to contribute largely vnto the Church of Hierusalem, 7 and by praising of them, 9 and by the example of Christ. 14 and by their owne spirituall profite in being partakers of that Churches merits, 16 and by commending the collecters that he sendeth.

FVLKE. 1 S. Paul speaketh nothing of participation of merits.

AND we do you to vnderstand, brethren, the grace of God, that is giuen in the Churches of Macedonia,

2 That in much experience of tribulation they had aboundance of ioy, and their very deepe pouertie abounded vnto the riches of their simplicitie,

3 For according to their power (I giue them testimonie) and aboue their power they were willing,

4 With much exhortation requesting vs the grace and communication of the ministerie that is done toward the saincts.

5 And not as we hoped, but their owne selues they gaue, first to our Lord, ‡ then to vs by the will of God:

6 In so much that we desired Titus, that as he began, so also he would perfit in you this grace also.

7 But as in al things you abound in faith, and word, and knowledge, and al carefulnes, moreouer also in your charitie toward vs, that in this grace also you may abound.

8 I speake not as commaunding: but by the carefulnes of others, approuing also the good disposition of your charitie.

THE Epistle for S. Paul's Inn, 22. 9 For you know the grace of our Lord IESVS Christ, that for you he was made poore, whereas he was rich: that by his pouertie you might be rich.

10 And in this point I giue counsell: for this is profitable for you, which haue begonne not onely to doe, but also to be willing, from the yeere past:

11 But now performe ye it also in deed: that as yonr minde is prompt to be willing, so it may be also to perfourme, of that which you haue.

12 For if the will be prompt: it is accepted according to that which it hath, not according to that which it hath not.

13 For not that other should haue ease, and you tribulation: but by an equalitie.

14 Let in this present time your ‖ aboundance supplie their want: that their aboundance also may supply your want, that there be an equalitie, Exod. 16, 18. 15 As it is written: He that had much, abounded not: and he that had little, wanted not.

THE Epistle vpon S. Lukes day, Octob. 18. 16 And thankes be to God, that hath giuen the selfe same carefulnes for you in the hart of Titus, 17 For that he admitted in deed exhortation: but being more carefull, of his owne will he went vnto you.

18 We

MOreouer, we doe you to wit, brethren, of the grace of God, which was giuen in the Churches of Macedonia,

2 How that in much triall of afflictions their ioy abounded, and their deepe pouertie abounded into the riches of their liberalitie.

3 For to their powers (I beare them record) yea and beyond their powers, they were willing of themselues:

4 Praying vs with great instance, that we would receiue this grace and society of the ministerie which is toward the saincts.

5 And this they did not as we looked for: but gaue their owne selues first to the Lord, and after vnto vs by the will of God,

6 That we should desire Titus to accomplish the same grace among you also, euen as he had begunne.

7 Now therefore, as ye are plenteous in all things, in faith, and in word, and in knowledge, and in all feruentnesse, and in loue, which ye haue to vs: euen so, see that ye be plenteous in this grace also.

8 This say I not by commandement, † but because of the feruentnes of other, and prouing the vnfainednesse of your loue.

† Or, read, but through the feruentnesse of other, prouoking also the perfectnesse of your loue.

9 For ye know the grace of our Lord Iesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poore, that ye through his pouerty might be made rich.

10 And I giue counsell herein: for this is expedient for you, which haue begun not to doe onely, but also to will a yeere agoe, 11 Now therefore perfourme to doe it also: that as there appeared in you a redines to will, euen so there may appeare a readinesse to perfourme, of that which ye haue.

12 For if there be first a willing minde, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.

13 Truely, not that other be set at ease, and you burdened:

14 But of like condition now at this time your aboundance supplieth their want, that their aboundance also may supplie your want, that there may be equalitie:

15 As it is written, * He that had gathered much, had nothing ouer, and he that had gathered little, had no lacke. * Exod. 16, 18.

16 Thankes be vnto God, which put the same earnest care for you in the heart of Titus.

17 Because he accepted the exhortation: and being the more carefull, came of his owne accord vnto you.

18 We

18 We haue ſent alſo with him the brother, whoſe praiſe is in the Goſpell through al the Churches:

19 And not onely that, but alſo he was ordeined of the Churches felow of our peregrination, for this grace which is miniſtred of vs to the glory of our Lord, and our determined will:

20 Auoiding this, leſt any man might reprehend vs in this fulneſſe that is miniſtred of vs.

Rom.12,17. 21 For we prouide good things *not only before God, but alſo before men.

22 And we haue ſent with them our brother alſo, whom we haue prooued in many thinges often to be carefull: but now much more careful, for the great confidence in you.

23 Either for Titus which is my fellow and coadiutor towarde you, or our brethren Apoſtles of the churches, the glory of Chriſt.

24 The declaration therefore which is of your charitie and our glorying of you, declare ye towarde them in the face of the Churches.

18 We haue ſent with him that brother whoſe praiſe is in the Goſpell throughout al the Churches:

19 (And not that only, but he was alſo choſen of the Churches to be a fellow with vs in our iourney, concerning this †grace that is miniſtred by vs vnto the glory of the ſame Lord, and declaration of your ready minde.)

† Or, beneficence.

20 Eſchewing this, that any man ſhould rebuke vs in this plenteous diſtribution that is miniſtred by vs:

21 Making proviſion for honeſt things, not onely in the ſight of the Lord, but alſo in the ſight of men.

22 We haue ſent with them a brother of ours, whome we haue oftentimes prooued diligent in many things, but now much more diligent, for the great confidence † which I haue in you:

† Or, which he hath.

23 Whether any doe inquire of Titus, he is my fellow and helper concerning you: or of other which are our brethren, they are the meſſengers of the Churches, and the glory of Chriſt.

24 Wherefore, ſhew ye vnto them the proofe of your loue, and of our boaſting on your behalfe in the ſight of the Churches.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. VIII.

RHEM. 2 5 Then to vs.) The principall reſpect next after God, is to be had of our maiſters in religion, in al temporal and ſpirituall dueties.

FVLKE. 2 S. Paul neither excludeth nor ſetteth behind, the reſpect of the whole Church, nor of our Princes, nor of our parents. Although great duety is to be yeelded, to our maiſters, both temporall and ſpirituall. Yet are we not to preferre them in temporall duetie before our Prince or our parents, nor in any duetie before the whole Church. Duety to ſpirituall maiſters.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. VIII.

RHEM. 3 Abundance ſupply.) He meaneth that ſuch as abound in worldly riches, ſhould communicate for ſupply of other their brethrens neceſſities, whatſoeuer they may: that on the otherſide they whom they helpe in temporals: may impart to them againe ſome of their ſpirituall riches, as prayers, and other holy workes and graces, which is a happie change and entercourſe for the wealthie men, if they could ſee it. And this place prooueth plainely that the faſtings and ſatisfactorie deeds of one man, be auaileable to others, yea and that holy Saincts, or other vertuous perſons may in meaſure and proportion of other mens neceſſities and deſeruings, allotte vnto them, as well the ſupererogation of their ſpirituall workes, as theſe that abound in worldly goods, may giue almes of their ſuperfluities, to them which are in neceſſitie. Which enterchange and proportion of things the Apoſtle doth euidently ſet downe. Temporal benefites vpon ſpirituall perſons. One may ſatisfie and ſupererogate for an other.

FVLKE. 3 This place proueth not, that one may ſatisfie or ſupererogate for him ſelfe, much leſſe for any other or that there can be any communication of merits, neither can any ſuch thing be gathered out of the text, neither doe any of the ancient fathers conclude any ſuch thing out of the text, But that as euery one aboundeth in the gifts and graces of God, ſo he ſhould be willing and readie, to communicate them vnto other, and that God rewardeth this louing and charitable communication of his gifts, bringing al in the end, to an equalitie, though his gifts be diuers for this preſent, in that he will reward euery man according to his good wil, though euery mans abilitie be not equal, as he ſaith in the 12. verſe. And the equalitie of Manna was not made by mens ſuperogation, but by the wonderful worke of God, therefore here is no place for men, to allotte or ſell their merits ſpirituall, for gifts or rewardes temporall, which is the marke you ſhoote at. Chryſoſtome ſaith. Hom. 16. You floriſh in riches, they in life, and truſt in God, therefore giue you them of the riches in which you abound and they haue not, that you may receiue of the truſt according to which they be rich and you are poore. Theodoret ſaith, Your reward ſhall be very great, and giuing leſſer things, you ſhall receiue greater things, for you ſhal be partakers with them, of commendable patiens. And very conueniently he addeth the teſtimonie of Scripture. For in the gathering of Manna, the Lord ſheweth the ſame equalitie, for it did nothing more profit him which gathered more. For God being bountifull, ioyned a meaſure to his gift. Primaſius ſaith. Rich men be in this world, as an elme bearing vp a vine. By helpe of it, the vine bringeth foorth plentifull fruite. And by the fertiltie of the vine, the elme is ſeene full of fruite. So the ſeruants of God and poore in ſpirite, are as the vine, which are ſuſteyned with the wealth of rich men, and communicate that wherein they abound one to an other, and both come full to eternall life. To the ſame effect write S. Ambroſe, Photius, Oecumenius, Theophylact. Therefore here is no chopping and changing, of merits, or ſatisfactory works, but the holy communion of Saincts, which the ſpirit of God worketh in all the members of Chriſt. Superogation Communication of merits.

CHAP. IX.

RHEM. 1 He proceedeth exhorting them to the foreſaid contribution 3 to verifie his commending of them. 6 and to doe it liberally, that ſo they may merite the more, and God be the more praiſed.

FVLKE. 1 Great liberalitie ſhall be greatly rewarded, not of the merite of the worke, but of the grace of God, which crowneth (ſaith S. Auguſtine his gifts) not thy merits in Pſ. 101.

FOR concerning the ministerie that is done ‖ toward the saincts, it is superfluous for me to write vnto you.

2 For I know your prompt mind: for the which I glory of you to the Macedonians: That Achaia also is ready from the yere past, and your emulation hath prouoked verie many.

3 But I haue sent the brethren, that the thing which we glory of you, be not made voide in this behalfe, that (as I haue said) you may be ready.

4 Lest when the Macedonians shal come with me, and finde you vnready, we (that we say not, ye) may be ashamed [c] in this substance.

[c] That is, in this matter of almes Chrys. Theophyl.

5 Therefore I thought it necessarie to desire the brethren that they would come to you, and prepare this blessing before promised, to be ready so, as a blessing, ‖ nor as auarice.

THE Epistle for S. Laurence, Aug 10.

6 And this I say, he that soweth sparinglie, sparingly also shall reape: and he that soweth in blessing, of blessinges also shall reape.

7 Euerie one as he hath determined in his hart, not of sadnesse or of necessitie.

Ecl.35,11. 8 For God loueth a cheerefull giuer.

9 And God is able to make all grace abound in you: that in all things alwaies hauing al sufficiencie, you may abound vnto al

Ps.111,9. good workes. As it is written: He distributed, he gaue to the poore, ‡ his iustice remaineth for euer.

10 And he that ministreth seede to the sower, will giue bread also for to eate: & will multiplie your seede, and will augment the increases of the fruites of your iustice.

11 That being enriched in al things, you may abound vnto al simplicitie, which worketh by vs thankes giuing to God.

12 Because the ministerie of this office doth not onely supplie those things that the Saincts want, but aboundeth also by many thankes-giuing in our Lord.

13 By the proofe of this ministerie, glorifying God in the obedience of your confession vnto the Gospell of Christ, and in the simplicitie of communicating vnto them, and vnto al.

14 And in their praying for you, being desirous of you because of the excellent grace of God in you.

15 Thankes be to God for his vnspeakeable gift.

FOr of the ministring to the saincts, it is superfluous for me to write vnto you.

2 For I know the readinesse of your minde, whereof I boast on your behalfe vnto them of Macedonia, that Achaia was prepared a yere agoe: and ‖ your zeale hath prouoked many. ‖ Or, zeale in you.

3 Yet haue I sent the brethren, least our boasting of you should be in vaine in this behalfe, that (as I haue said) ye may be prepared.

4 Least haply if they of Macedonia come with me, and finde you vnprepared, we (I will not say you) should be ashamed in this boldnesse of boasting.

5 Therefore I thought it necessarie to exhort the brethren, that they would come before vnto you, and prepare your forepromised beneficence, that it might be ready as a beneficence, and not as an extortion.

6 This yet I say, he which soweth sparingly, shal reape sparingly: and he that soweth bountifully, shal reape bountifully.

7 * Euerie man according as he purposeth in his hart, so let him giue, not grudgingly, or of necessitie: * for God loueth a cheerefull giuer. Rom.12,8. Eccle.35,11.

8 God is able to make you plentifull in all grace, that ye in all things hauing alwaies sufficient vnto the vttermost, may be plentifull in euery good worke.

9 As it is written, * He hath dispersed abroad, he hath giuen to the poore, his righteousse remaineth for euer. Psa.112,9.

10 Moreouer I beseech him that ministreth seede vnto the sower, to minister bread also for foode, and to multiply your seede, and to encrease the fruits of your righteousnesse.

11 That in al things you may be made rich vnto all bountifulnesse, which causeth through vs thankes giuing vnto God.

12 For the administration of this seruice, not onely supplyeth the want of the saincts: but also is abundant by the thankes giuing of many vnto God.

13 (Whiles by the experiment of this ministration, they glorifie God for the obedience of your consenting to the Gospell of Christ, and for your liberall distribution to them, and to all men.)

14 And by their prayers for you, which ‖ long after you for the abundant grace of God in you. ‖ Or, are greatly affectioned ward you.

15 Thankes be vnto God, for his vnspeakeable gift.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. IX.

RHEM. 2 9 His iustice remaineth.) The fruite of almes is the encrease of grace in all iustice and good workes to life euerlasting: God giuing these things for reward and recompence of charitable workes, which therefore he called the seede or meritorious cause of these spirituall fruits.

FVLKE. 2 It is God which increaseth the fruits of iustice, as in the next verse, not of the merite of almes, but of his abundant grace and mercy, which to small and temporall gifts, rendreth infinite and eternall rewards.

ANNO-

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IX.

RHEM. 1 Toward the Saincles.) By the Apoſtles earneſt and often calling vpon the Corinthians to giue almes for releiuing the faithfull in diſtreſſe, the Paſtors of Gods Church may learne, that it ſpecially pertaineth to their office to be proctors for holy men in priſon, powertie, and all other neceſſitie, ſpecially when their want commeth for confeſſion of their faith. Proctors for Catholike priſoners.

RHEM. 5 Not as auarice.) The couetous man that parteth with his peny painfully and with ſorow as though he loſt a lim of his body, is noted, and cheerefull, ready, voluntarie, and large contribution is commended. Cheereful giuing.

RHEM. 3 6 Soweth ſparingly.) Almes is compared to ſeede, for as the ſeede throwen into the ground, though it ſeeme to be caſt away, yet is not loſt, but is laid vp in certaine hope of great increaſe: ſo that which men giue in almes, though it ſeeme to be caſt away and to periſh in reſpect of the giuer, yet in deede it is moſt fruitfull, the benefite thereof manyfoldly returning to him againe. Whereupon the Apoſtles concluſion is cleere, that according to the meaſure of the almes or ſeeding (which is more or leſſe in reſpect of the will and abilitie of the giuer) the encreaſe and abundance of harueſt, that is, of grace and glory ſhall enſue. See S. Auguſtine in Pſal. 49. circa med. & q. 4. ad Dulcitium. The greater almes, the greater merite and reward.

FVLKE. 3 The greater the almes is, that is giuen in faith, with a liberall minde, according to abilitie of the giuer, the greater ſhall be the reward, but not of merite, for when the reward ſhall come, ſaith S. Auguſtine, he will crowne his gifts, not thy merites. Pſ. 70. Con. 2.

RHEM. 12 Doth not onely ſupply.) When almes are giuen, ſpecialy to holy men, not onely the giuers obtaine great benefite thereby, and the wants of others be ſupplied, but God alſo by the receiuers continuall prayers and thankes giuing therefore, is exceedingly honored: ſo that charitie beſtowed in this ſort, is an acte of Gods worſhip and of religion. Almes redound to Gods honor.

9 But that I may not be thought as it were to terrifie you by Epiſtles.

10 For his Epiſtles in deed, ſay they, are ſore and vehement: but his bodily preſence weake, and his ſpeach contemptible.

11 Let him this thinke that is ſuch a one, that ſuch as we are in word by Epiſtles, abſent: ſuch alſo we are in deede, preſent.

12 For we dare not match or compare our ſelues with certain, that commend them ſelues: but we meaſure our ſelues in our ſelues,

I Paul my ſelfe beſeech you by the meekeneſſe and gentleneſſe of Chriſt: which in preſence am lowly among you: but am bold toward you being abſent.

2 I beſeech you, that I may not needе to be bolde when I am preſent, with that ſame boldneſſe, Wherewith I am ‖ ſuppoſed to haue beene bolde againſt ſome, which repute vs as though we walked according to the fleſh. ‖ Or, Where with I meane to be bold.

3 For walking in the fleſh, yet we doe not war according to the fleſh.

4 (For the weapons of our warfare are not carnall, but mightie through God, to the ouerthrowing of ſtrong holdes.)

5 Wherewith we ouerthrowe counſels, and euery high thing that is exalted againſt the knowledge of God, and bring into captiuitie all imagination to the obedience of Chriſt.

6 And hauing in a readineſſe wherewith to take vengeance on all diſobedience, when your obedience is fulfilled.

7 Looke ye on things after the vtter appearance? If any man truſt in him ſelfe that he is Chriſtes, let him conſider this againe of himſelfe, that as he is of Chriſt, euen ſo are we of Chriſt.

8 For though I ſhould boaſt ſomewhat more of our auctoritie, which the Lord hath giuen to vs for edification, and not for your deſtruction, I ſhould not be aſhamed.

9 Leaſt I ſhould ſeeme as it were to make you afraid by letters.

10 For the letters (ſaith he) are ſore and ſtrong: but his bodily preſence is weake, and his ſpeach nothing worth.

11 Let him that is ſuch a one, thinke on this wiſe, that as we are in word by letters when we are abſent, ſuch alſo are we in deede when we are preſent.

12 For we dare not number or compare our ſelues with certaine which praiſe them ſelues: neuertheleſſe, while they meaſure them ſelues with them ſelues, and compare them ſelues with selues, and compare our selues to our selues.

13 But we wil not glory aboue our measure: but according to the measure of the rule, which God hath measured to vs, a measure to reach euen vnto you.

14 For not, as though we reached not vnto you, doe we extend our selues beyond. For we are come as far as to you in the Gospell of Christ.

15 Not glorying aboue measure in other mens labors: but hauing ‘hope of your faith increasing, to be magnified in you according to our rule aboundantly.

16 Yea vnto those places that are beyond you, to euangelize: not in an other mans rule, to glory in those things that are prepared before.

17 But he that gloryeth, let him glory in our Lord.

18 For not he that commendeth himselfe, the same is approoued: but whom God commendeth.

themselues: they vnderstand not,

13 But we wil not boast aboue measure, but according to the measure of the rule which God hath distributed vnto vs, a measure to reach euen vnto you.

14 For we stretch not out our selues beyond measure, as though we reached not vnto you: For euen to you also haue we come with the Gospel of Christ.

15 Not boasting our selues out of measure in other mens labours: but hoping when your faith is encreased, to be magnified among you according to our measure aboundantly.

16 That I may preach the Gospell in those regions which are beyond you: and not glory of those things which by an other mans measure are prepared already.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. X.

RHEM. 4 Weapons.) He meaneth the ample spirituall and Apostolicall power giuen by Christ for the punishment of false Apostles, Heretikes, and rebelles to Gods Church, who are here noted specially by pride and insolence (which is the proper marke of such fellowes) to extoll themselues aboue the measure of the science of God, which consisteth in humble obedience to the faith and the preachers of the same. Punishing of Heretikes. Their pride.

RHEM. 1 6 To reuenge.) *You may see hereby that the spirituall power of Bishops is not onely in preaching the Gospel, and so by persuasion and exhortation onely (as some Heretikes hold) to remit or retaine sinnes, but that it hath authoritie to punish, iudge, and condemne Heretikes and other like rebelles: which power * one of the principall rebelles of this time being conuinced by the euidence of the place, acknowledgeth to be grounded vpon Christes worde.* Whatsoeuer you binde in earth, shal be bound in heauen: Mat.18.18. applying also the words spoken to Hieremie (c.1.10.) Behold I appoint thee ouer Nations and kingdomes, that thou plant plucke vp, build and destroy: to confirme and explicate the power Apostolike here alleaged by S. Paul. Mary they would gladly draw this power from the lawfull successors of the Apostles, to themselues, their ministers and consistories which are nothing else but the shops and Councels of sedition and al the conspiracies of this time, against the lawfull Princes of the world. The spirituall power of Bishops against Heretikes Caluin vpon this place. Heretical Consistories.

FVLKE. 1 Caluine neuer denied the lawfull auctoritie of the Church in punishment of heretikes, according to the Ecclesiastical censures. And they be the lawfull successors of the Apostles, which succeede them in doctrine, not they, that challenge their place in the Church, and condemne the Apostles doctrine of heresie. Your Seminaries, haue manifestly proued that to be true of you, whereof you slaunder our Consistories: namely to be the shops and Councels, of sedition and conspiracies: as the executions of Campion, Somerule, Parry, Throckmorton, Ballard, Babington, Sauage, &c. and other horrible traytors, sent out of those shops of treason and rebellion, to murther our most lawfull Soueraigne Lady Queene ELIZABETH, and to trouble the peace of her gouernment, doe make most manifest, the like examples, you are neuer able to shew, of any that came from our Consistories against any lawfull Prince, being of the contrary religion. Slander.

RHEM. 8 Vnto edification.) This great powers of the Churches censures, specially of Excommunication, as it was giuen for the good and saluation of the people, so it must not be vsed against the innocent: no nor yet vpon Heretikes or other offenders, but where and when it may by likelihood benefite either the parties, or the people, or may be executed without the hurt or perturbation of the whole Church, as oftentimes it cannot be, by reason of the multitude of offenders. Which caused the Apostle here to signifie that he would not vse his vttermost authoritie against the false Apostles which disturbed them, till them selues were in perfect obedience vnto him, lest by punishing the principall offenders, a greater disturbance and reuolt might fall among the people, if they were not before in perfect obedience. Ecclesiastical censure (namely Excommunication) when and where to be executed.

CHAP. XI.

He reasoneth the matter with the Corinthians, why they should prefer the false Apostles before him. 16 And because they giue them leaue to bragge and commend them selues, and to abuse them so miserably, he trusteth they will also giue him the hearing: 21 and so he begimneth, and first shewing him selfe in all Iudaicall respectes (wherein onely stood all their boasting) to be as they are, he addeth afterward such a long roll of his sufferings for Christ, as is incomparable.

The Apostles and their successors did despouse the people whom they conuerted, to Christ, in all puritie & Chastitie of truth, & wholy vnde filled and void of errour and heresie.

WOuld God you could beare some little of my folly: but doe ye also support me.

2 For I emulate you with the emulatiō of God. For I haue ‡despoused you to one man, to present you a chaste virgin vnto Christ.

3 But I feare lest, as the serpent seduced Eue by his subtiltie, so your sences may be corrupted,

Gen.3.4

WOuld to God yee could suffer a litle my foolishnesse, and in deede suffer me.

2 For I am ielous ouer you with godly iealousie: for I haue coupled you to one man, to present you a chast virgin vnto Christ.

corrupted, and fall ‖from the ſimplicitie that is in Chriſt.

4 For if he that ‡commeth, preach an other Chriſt whom we haue not preached, or you receiue an other ſpirite whom you haue not receiued: or an other Goſpel which you haue not receiued: you might wel ſuffer it.

5 For I ſuppoſe that I haue done nothing leſſe then the great Apoſtles.

6 For although ‖rude in ſpeach, yet not in knowledge, but in al things we are made manifeſt to you.

7 Or did I commit a ſinne, humbling my ſelfe, that you might be exalted? becauſe I euangelized vnto you the Goſpel of God gratis?

8 Other churches I ſpoyled, taking a ſtipend, for your miniſterie.

9 And when I was with you, and had neede, I was burdenous to none: for that which I wanted, the brethren ſupplied that came from Macedonia: and in all things I haue kept my ſelfe without burden to you, and wil keepe.

10 The truth of Chriſt is in me, that this glorying ſhal not be infringed toward me in the countries of Achaia.

11 Wherfore? becauſe I loue you not? God doth know.

12 But that which I doe, I will alſo doe, that I may cut away the occaſion of them that deſire occaſion: that, in that which they glorie, they may be found euen like vs.

13 For ſuch falſe apoſtles are ‡craftie workers, transfiguring themſelues into Apoſtles of Chriſt.

14 And no maruell: for Satan himſelfe transfigureth himſelf into an Angel of light.

15 It is no great matter, therefore if his miniſters be transfigured as the miniſters of iuſtice: whoſe ende ſhall be according to their workes.

16 Againe I ſay, (let no man thinke me to be fooliſh: otherwiſe take me as fooliſh, that I alſo may glory a litle,)

17 That which I ſpeake, I ſpeake not according to God, but as it were in fooliſhnes, in this ſubſtance of glorying.

18 Becauſe many glory according to the fleſh, I alſo wil glory.

19 For you do gladly ſuffer the fooliſh: whereas your ſelues are wiſe.

20 For you ſuffer if a man bring you into ſeruitude, if a man deuoure, if a man take, if a man be extolled, if a man ſtrike you on the face.

21 I ſpeake according to diſhonour, as though we had bene weake in this part. Wherein any man dare (I ſpeake foliſhly) I dare alſo.

22 * They are Hebrewes: and I. They are Iſraëlites: and I. They are the ſeed of Abraham; euen ſo your mindes ſhould be corrupted from the ſingleneſſe that is toward Chriſt.

4 For if he that commeth, preacheth another Ieſus, whom we haue not preached: or if ye receiue another ſpirite whom ye haue not receyued: either another Goſpel which ye haue not receined, you would well haue ſuffered him.

5 Verily, I ſuppoſe that I was not behind the chiefe Apoſtles.

6 But though I be rude in ſpeaking, yet not in knowledge: but in all things among you wee haue bene well knowen to the vttermoſt.

7 Haue I committed an offence becauſe I ſubmitted my ſelfe, that yee might bee exalted, becauſe I preached to you the Goſpel of God freely?

8 I robbed other Churches, taking wages of them to doe you ſeruice.

9 And when I was preſent with you, and had need, * I was chargeable to no man by my idleneſſe: for that which was lacking vnto mee, the brethren which came from Macedonia ſupplied: and in al things I haue kept my ſelfe not chargeable to you, and ſo will I keepe my ſelfe. 2.Cor.12.13.

10 The trueth of Chriſt is in me, that this boaſting ſhal not be ſhut vp againſt me in the regions of Achaia.

11 Wherefore? becauſe I loue not you? God knoweth.

12 But what I doe, that wil I doe, that I may cut away occaſion from them which deſire occaſion: that they might be found like vnto vs, in that wherein they glory.

13 For ſuch falſe apoſtles, are deceitfull workers, transformed into the Apoſtles of Chriſt.

14 And no maruaile: for Satan himſelfe is transformed into an angel of light.

15 Therfore it is no great thing if that his miniſters alſo be transformed as the miniſters of righteouſneſſe: whoſe ende ſhall be according to their workes.

16 I ſay againe, Let no man thinke that I am fooliſh: or elſe euen now take yee mee as a foole, that I alſo may boaſt my ſelfe a litle.

17 That I ſpeake, I ſpeake it not after the Lord, but as it were fooliſhly in this boldneſſe of boaſting.

18 Seeing that many glory after the fleſh, I will glory alſo.

19 For ye ſuffer fooles gladly, ſeeing ye your ſelues are wiſe.

20 For yee ſuffer, if a man bring you into bondage, if a man deuoure, if a man take, if a man exalt himſelfe, if a man ſmite you on the face.

21 I ſpeake concerning reproch, as though we had bene weake: Howbeit, wherein ſoeuer any man is bold (I ſpeake fooliſhly) I am bold alſo.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XI.

RHEM. 3 From the simplicitie.) People fall from their first fayth, virginitie, and simplicity in Christ, not by soden reuolt, but by little and little, in giuing eare to the subtil persuasion of the Serpent, speaking to them by the sweete mouthes and illurements of Heretikes, of which kind of seduction, he giueth Eue for an example, who was by her greedy desire of knowledge & the Diuels promis of the same, drawen from the native simplicitie and obedience to God. as at this day, promis and pretense of knowledge driueth many a poore soule from the sure, true, sincere, and onely beliefe of Gods Church. As Eue by the Serpent, so the people are seduced by Heretikes.

RHEM. 1 6 Rude in speach.) Hereby we see that the seditious and false teachers haue often the gift of eloquence whereby the simple be easily beguiled. Such were Core and Dathan, as Iosephus writeth Antiq. lib. 4. c. 2. for the same S. Augustine (lib. 5. Confes. c. 3. & 13.) calleth the Heretike Faustus Manichæus, Magnum laqueum Diaboli, A great snare of the Deuill, saying that he passed the glorious Doctor S. Ambrose in shew of wordes, but far inferior to him (without al comparison) in substance and matter. In which sort the Apostle here is glad to compare himselfe with the false Apostles, whom the Corinthians did folow and extoll farre aboue him by reason of their eloquence, graunting to them that gift, but chalanging to himselfe superioritie in knowledge, which al wise men preferre before vaine words. And it is the bane of our poore countrey, that the people now a dayes giue credit rather to new orators and foolish yonkers, for their sweete speaches: then to the glorious Doctors of Christes Church, for their singular knowledge and more graue eloquence. Heretikes some time eloquent, Knowledge better then gay words. Yong orators among Heretikes preferred before the ancient doctors.

FVLKE. 1 Thankes be to God that hath endued the ministers of his Church, not with vaine eloquence, but with sound learning, that they are able euen by testimony of the ancient doctors of the Church (beside the manifest auctoritie of the holy Scriptures) both to iustifie the doctrine which they teach, and to confute your heresies, in the most necessary pointes of difference betweene vs. Therefore this is but an hereticall bragge to chalenge the doctors to be yours, for two or three of the least of your errors, which are sparingly found in some of them, not in all, nor in the most ancient of them, nor in any so maintained, as they are holden by you: when in the greatest matters, and them so many, they are all, or most, expressly & directly as it were your professed enemies.

CHAP. XII.

He telleth of his incomparable visions, 5 but for humilitie liketh better to talke of his infirmities: 11 putting the fault in the Corinthians for that he is faine thus to rehearse his owne commendations. 13 Where agayne he reasoneth the matter with them like a father, why they should preferre those false Apostles before him. 20 And feareth least at his comming he shall be compelled to excommunicate many of them.

If

IF I muſt glory (it is not expedient in deed) but I wil come to the ‖ viſions and reuelations of our Lord.

2 I know a man in Chriſt aboue fourteene yeeres agoe (whether in the body, I know not: or out of the body, I know not: God doth know) ſuch a one ‡ rapt euen to the third heauen.

3 And I know ſuch a man (whether in the body, or out of the body, I know not: God doth know)

4 That he was rapt into Paradiſe: and heard ſecret wordes, which it is not lawful for a man to ſpeake.

5 For ſuch an one I wil glorie: but for my ſelfe I wil glorie nothing, ſauing in my infirmities.

6 For & if I wil glorie, I ſhal not be fooliſh: for I ſhal ſay truth. but I ſpare, leaſt any man ſhould eſteme me aboue that which he ſeeth in me, or heareth any thing of me.

7 And leaſt the greatnes of the reuelations might extoll me, there was giuen me a pricke of my fleſh, an angel of Satan, to buffet me.

8 For the which thing thrise I beſought our Lord, that it might depart from me:

9 And he ſayde to me, My grace ſufficeth thee, for power is perfited in infirmitie. Gladly therefore will I glorie in mine infirmitie, that the power of Chriſt may dwell in me.

10 For the which cauſe I pleaſe my ſelfe in infirmities, in contumelies, in neceſſities, in perſecutions, in diſtreſſes for Chriſt. for when I am weake, then am I mightie.

11 I am become fooliſh: you haue compelled me. For I ought to haue bene commended of you: for I haue bene nothing leſſe then they that are aboue meaſure Apoſtles: although I am nothing.

12 Yet the ſigns of my Apoſtleſhip haue bene done vpon you in al patience, ‖ in ſigns and wonders and mightie deeds.

13 For what is there that you haue had leſſe then the other churches: but that I my ſelf haue not burdened you? Pardon me this iniurie.

14 Behold, now the third time I am ready to come to you: and I wil not be burdenous vnto you. For I ſeeke not the things that are yours: but you. For neither ought the childrē lay vp treaſures for the parents, but the parents for the children.

15 But I moſt gladly wil beſtow, and wil my ſelfe moreouer be beſtowed for your ſoules: although louing you more, I am lōued leſſe.

16 But be it ſo: I haue not burdened you: but being craftie, I tooke you by guile.

17 Haue I circumuented you by any of them whom I ſent to you?

IT is not expedient doubtleſſe for me to glorie, I will come to viſions and reuelations of the Lord.

5 Of ſuch ‖ a man will I glory, yet of my ſelfe will I not glorie, but in mine infirmities.

7 And leaſt I ſhould be exalted out of meaſure through the abundance of the reuelations, there was giuen to me a pricke to the fleſh, the meſſenger of Satan to buffet mee, becauſe I ſhould not be exalted out of meaſure.

8 For this thing beſought I the Lord thrise, that it might depart from me.

9 And he ſaid vnto me, My grace is ſufficient for thee: for my ſtrength is made perfect in weakeneſſe. Moſt gladly therefore I will rather glorie in my infirmities, that the power of Chriſt might dwell in me.

‖ Againe. 19 Of olde thinke you that we excuse our selues to you? Before God, in Christ we speake: but all things (my dearest) for your edifying.

20 For I feare least perhaps when I come, I find you not such as I would: & I be found of you, such an one as you would not. least perhaps contentions, emulations, stomakings, dissensions, detractions, whisperings, swellings, seditions be among you.

21 Lest againe when I come, God humble me among you: & I mourne many of the that sinned before, and ‡ haue not done penance for the vncleannes & fornication and incontinencie that they haue committed.

18 I desired Titus, and with him I sent a brother: Did Titus defraud you of any thing? Haue we not walked in the same spirit? not in the same steps?

19 Againe, thinke you that we excuse our selues vnto you? We speake in Christ in the sight of God: but we doe all things dearely beloued for your edifying.

20 For I feare least when I come, I shall not find you such as I would, and that I shall be found vnto you such as ye would not: least there be debates, enuyings, wraths, strifes, backbitings, whisperings, swellings, and seditions:

21 And that when I come againe, my God bring me low among you, and I shall bewaile many of them which haue sinned alreadie, and haue not repented of the vncleannes, and fornication, and wantonnesse which they haue committed.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XII.

RHEM. 1 2 Rapt euen.) By this we may proue that it is neither impossible, incredible, nor vndecent, that is reported by the ancient fathers of some that haue bene rauished or rapt (whether in body or out of body God knoweth) and brought to see the state of the next life, as well of the saued as damned.

FVLKE. 1 But the report of such men as speake of their visions, must be examined by the word of God, for if they teach vs another Gospell, we must hold them accursed, Gal. 1. Deut. 13. Visions.

RHEM. 2 21 Haue not done.) Of the penance, which as S. Augustine saith (epist. 108.) is spoken here of doing great penance for heinous sinnes, as Pœnitentes did in the Primitiue Church. So that it is not only to repent or to amend their liues, as the Protestants translate it.

FVLKE. 2 To repent and amend their liues, is the same that S. Augustine speaketh of. But there be degrees of sorow in repentance, as there be degrees of offences. S. Augustine maketh three, One of them that repent before baptisme: the second of them that repent for heinous sinnes that deserue excommunication, as those named in this text and the third of repentance for daily transgressions, all which he termeth by the same word Agere pœnitentiam, to repent or to be sorowfull for sinne. To all which three kindes of repentance, our translation agreeth better then yours. Cauilling.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XII.

RHEM. 3 1 Visions.) S. Cyprian (ep. 69. nu. 4.) complaineth that the Aduersaries of Gods Church had Priests, giue no credite to visions, but their incredulitie is much more in our daies, that condemne all such reuelations, though they be reported and recorded for most certaine, of holy S. Gregory, S. Bede, or who els so euer. Yea they are so wicked in this case, that the vision which the holy author of the booke of Machabees calleth fide dignum, worthie of credite, is one cause why they denie the whole booke to be Canonicall: and as well might they for this vision deny al S. Paules Epistles, and for the like, the Actes of the Apostles, Acts 9. 10. 11. 12. 27: and the Gospel it selfe, Mat. 1, 20. 2, 13, 19. Visions haue no credite with heretikes. 2. Mac. 15, 11.

FVLKE. 3 Whosoeuer reporteth any vision tending to mainteine any false doctrine contrary to the scriptures, or to teach vs any other Gospell or doctrine of saluation, or any other church then that which is builded vpon the foundation of the Prophets and Apostles: we must be bolde to condemne them, and say as S. Augustine saith of the visions and miracles of the Donatists, De vnitate ecclesiæ cap. 16. Let them not say it is true, because Donatus or Pontius, or any other man hath done these or these miracles, or because men at the memories of our dead, doe pray and are heard, or because these or these things doe happen there, or because this our brother, or that our sister saw such a vision waking, or dreamed such a vision sleeping. Away with these fained miracles of lying men, or monsters of deceiuing spirits. For either these things are not true which are reported, or if heretikes haue any such miracles, we ought rather to take heede of them. But whether they hold the Church or no, let them shew none other wise but by the canonicall bookes of the holy scriptures. If I my selfe (saith Paule) or an angell from heauen should preach another gospell &c. Gal. 1. But if any vision be reported that tendeth to mainteine the trueth deliuered in the scriptures, we doe not condemne the author, or the booke for the visions sake. And therefore you say vntruely that for the visions sake reported by the Author of the second booke of Machabees, we refuse the whole booke to be canonicall, we haue other maner of reasons, which if you could confute, you would not forge this. Visions. The church hath to be known. Slander.

RHEM. 4. 11 Aboue measure Apostles.) Though al were in that they were Apostles, of one and the same order, yet we may see that some had maruelous great preeminence and priuilege aboue others in the same office: specially S. Peter and S. Iohn, whom S. Paul often calleth great Apostles, aboue measure or passing Apostles, the pillers, &c. 2. Cor. 11, 5. 12, 11. Gal. 2. 9. The Apostles some greater then other.

FVLKE. 4 You can see that some of the Apostles are greater then other, yet you can not see that S. Paule was equall with them that were greatest, and therefore Peter was not greatest of all, but had some fellowes euen in that preeminence wherein he excelled other, as in dignitie and authoritie of Apostleship all the rest were equall with him. Therfore Chrysostome saith vpon this text. Hom. 23. He doth not now compare himselfe with them, but euen with Peter and the rest. Peters preeminence.

RHEM. 5 12 In signes.) Miracles be necessarie, and be great signes of truth, when it is first newly taught. And therfore let al Catholike men hold fast that faith which was first preached and confirmed by miracles, as in England by S. Augustine, and in other nations by other holy Apostolike men. And let the Heretikes that preach extraordinarily, newly, and otherwise then we receiued at our first conuersion, shew their calling and doctrine by miracles, or els let them be taken for false Apostles as they be. We must flie to the faith planted by miracles.

FYLKE.5 Let all men be aduiſed what doctrine they holde, howſoeuer confirmed by miracles, if it be not confirmed by the word of God. As for the doctrine of Auguſtine we are neither certeine what miracles he did to confirme it, or if he did any, whether it was to confirme any of that corruption which he brought in. Certeine it is, the catholike Britans would not receiue him, with whom Chriſtian religion had continued in ſucceſſion ſince the Apoſtles time. As for the doctrine that we teach, ſeeing it is none other but the doctrine of Chriſt and his Apoſtles (as we proue manifeſtly by the holy ſcriptures) it is not needfull for vs to confirme by miracles, which hath ſo long ſince bene confirmed by all the miracles of Chriſt and his Apoſtles. And yet in the chiefe and moſt eſſentiall points of faith, we teach the ſame that Gregory and Auguſtine his legate taught, as appeareth by many euidences of ſtory and writings of Gregory, Bede, Aelfrike, and others. Miracles.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XIII.

5. Trie your ſelues.) The Heretikes argue hereupon, that euery man may know himſelf certainely to be in grace: where the Apoſtle ſpeaketh expreſly and onely of faith, the act whereof a man may know and feele to be in himſelf, becauſe it is an act of vnderſtanding, though he can not be aſſured that he hath his ſinnes remitted, and that he is in al 1 IM. 1 points in ſtate We may know that we haue faith, but not that we are in grace.

ſtate of grace and ſaluation: becauſe euery man that is of the Catholike faith, is not alwaies of good life and agreeable thereunto, nor the actes of our wil ſo ſubiect to vnderſtanding, that we can knowe certainely whether we be good or euill. See S. Auguſtine to.7. de perfect. iuſtitiæ c.15. Li. de Cor. & grat, c.13. & S. Thomas 1.2.q.112.art.5.

FVLKE. 1 Seeing you confeſſe that we may know certeinly that we haue faith, it is eaſie to proue that we may knowe that we are in grace, and aſſured of ſaluation. For by faith (S. Paule ſaith) we haue acceſſe vnto this grace, in which we ſtand, and glorie in the hope of the glorie of the ſonnes of God: which hope ſhall not deceiue vs. Rom. 5. 2. 5. Againe when the Apoſtle ſaith, we may know that Chriſt is in vs, how ſhould we not knowe that we are in the grace and fauour of God? For Chriſt is not in the reprobate that are out of the fauor of God, but in his elect, in whom after they be called, he dwelleth by faith. Eph. 3.17. If Chriſt therefore dwell in our heartes by faith, we are aſſured that our ſinnes are forgiuen vs for Chriſt his ſake, and therefore are aſſuredly in the ſtate of grace and ſaluation. Your reaſon of the contrarie is that euery one that is of the catholike faith, is not alwaies of good life agreeable thereunto. In deede euery one that outwardly profeſſeth the catholike faith, is not of good life agreeably, but he that beleeueth in heart confeſſeth with his mouth, and is of good life agreeably, though not voide of all ſinne. For a good life (ſaith S. Auguſtine.) is inſeparable from faith, which worketh by loue. Therefore the popiſh catholike faith, is not the apoſtolike catholike faith, which worketh by loue, and is vnſeparable from a good life. Yea it is it ſelfe a good life, as S. Auguſtine ſaith, De fide & oper. c.23. Your ſecond reaſon is that the actes of our will are not ſo ſubiect to vnderſtanding, that we can knowe certainely whether we be good or euill. O miſerable and damnable ſtate of papiſts, which haue no certeintie of ſaluation grounded vpon Gods promiſes apprehended by faith, but depende vpon the actes of their will, and their carnall vnderſtanding. Wherby they ſhew themſelues void of Gods ſpirit, which teſtifieth to our ſpirits that we are the ſonnes of God, if ſonnes then heires, heires in deede of God, and ioynt heires with Chriſt. Rom. 8. S. Auguſtine whom you quote, teacheth no ſuch doctrine. De perfect. hom. iuſtitiæ, he ſaith: It is ſinne when either there is not loue, which ought to be, or it is leſſe then it ought to be, whether this may be auoided by our will, or whether it cannot. For if it may, our preſent will doth it, or if it cannot, our will that is paſt hath done it. And yet it may be auoided, not when a proud will is praiſed, but when an humble will is helped. In the other place he ſheweth, that the number and ſaluation of the elect is certaine, yet no man in this mortalitie muſt preſume that he is of the numbet of the predeſtinate, except he abide in Chriſt, and bring forth the fruites of election, by the gift of perſeuerance, which is giuen to euery one of the elect. As for the auctoritie of Thomas Aquinas is not to be regarded, though ſometime he writeth not farre from the truth in this matter. To conclude, our certeintie dependeth not vpon our will or workes, but vpon the promiſe of God through faith, that Chriſt is in vs, and we in him, therefore we ſhall not miſſe of the performance of his promiſes.

Certeintie of ſaluation.

THE ARGVMENT OF THE EPISTLE OF S. PAVL TO THE GALATIANS.

THAT this Epiſtle may ſeeme to be the firſt that S. Paul wrote, was declared in the Argument of the Epiſtle to the Romans, notwithſtanding that in the ſecond chapter it is euident to haue bene written fourteene yeeres at the leaſt after his Converſion, and (as it is ſaid) from Epheſus, belike at that time of his being there, which is mentioned Act.18.

The occaſion of it were ſuch Falſe apoſtles, as we read of, Act.15. Et quidam deſcendentes, &c. And certaine comming downe from Iewrie, taught the brethren (that is the Chriſtian Gentiles at Antioche) that vnles you be circumciſed according to the manner of Moyſes, you cannot be ſaued. Such commers alſo to the Galatians (whom S. Paul had converted Act.16, as himſelfe mentioneth Gal.1. and 4.) did ſeduce them ſaying, that al the other Apoſtles to whom they ſhould rather harken, then to Paul (who came they knew not from whence) did vſe Circumciſion: yea and that Paul himſelfe, when he came among them, durſt do no other. And to winne them more eaſily, they did not lay on them the burden of the whole Law, but of Circumciſion only.

Againſt theſe deceiuers, S. Paul declareth, that he receiued his Apoſtleſhip and learned the Goſpel that he preacheth of Chriſt himſelf after his Reſurrection: and that the other Apoſtles (although he learned nothing of them) receiued him into their ſocietie, and allowed wel of his preaching to the Gentiles, though themſelues being Iewes, and liuing among the Iewes, had not yet left the ceremonies of the Law: howbeit they did not put in them any hope of iuſtification, but in Chriſt alone without them. He declareth moreouer, that the ſaid falſe Apoſtles belied him, in ſaying that he alſo preached Circumciſion ſometimes. Againe, that they themſelues in preaching no more but Circumciſion, did againſt the nature of Circumciſion, becauſe it is a profeſſion to obſerue the whole Law: finally, whatſoeuer they pretended, that in deed they did it onely to pleaſe the Iewes, of whom otherwiſe they ſhould be perſecuted.

So that in this Epiſtle he handleth the ſame matter, which in the Epiſtle to the Romans: but here leſſe exactly, and more briefly, becauſe the Galatians were very rude, and the Romanes contrariwiſe, repleti omni ſcientia (Rom.15.) repleniſhed with al knowledge.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 1 1 Neither by man) Though he were not firſt by mans election, nomination, or aſſignement, but by Gods owne ſpecial appointment, choſen to be an Apoſtle: yet by the like expreſſe ordinance of God he tooke orders or impoſition of hands of men, as is plaine. Act. 13. Let vs beware then of ſuch falſe Apoſtles, as now a daies intrude themſelues to the office of Miniſterie and preaching, neither called of God, nor rightly ordered of men.

S. Paul ſent to preach by ordinarie impoſition of hands.

FVLKE. 1 The text is heere plaine, that S. Paules calling was not by man, therefore that impoſition of hands, Act. 13. was not the giuing of holy orders, but the commending of his labors vnto God. Except you will ſay that he preached euer ſince his conuerſion, vntill he went from Antioch, without holy orders, which is a ſhamefull abſurditie. Yet they that intrude themſelues into the miniſterie without calling of God, and lawfull ordeining of men, are not excuſed by his example. Much leſſe, they that ſet vp a new ſacrificing Prieſthood, to deface the glorie of the eternall Prieſthood of Chriſt.

Lawfull calling.

RHEM. 2 8 Or an Angel.) Many worthie obſeruations are made in the fathers writings, of the earneſt admonition of the Apoſtle, and much may we gather of the text it ſelfe. firſt, that the credit of any man or Angel for what learning, eloquence, ſhew of grace or vertue ſoeuer, though he wrought miracles, ſhould not moue a Chriſtian man from that truth which he hath once receiued in the Catholike church: of which point Vincentius Lirinenſis excellently treateth. li. cont. prophan. hæreſ. Nouitates. Whereby we may ſee that it is great pitie and ſhame, that ſo many ſolow Luther and Caluin and ſuch other leud fellowes, into a new Goſpel, which are ſo farre from Apoſtles and Angels, that they are not any whit comparable with the old Heretikes in gifts of learning or eloquence, much leſſe in good life.

No ſhew of learning or vertue muſt moue vs from the faith.

FVLKE. 2 Luther and Caluine taught not a new Goſpell, but for the ſubſtance of their doctrine, they taught the ſame which S. Paul taught vnto the Galathians, and which is fully ſet downe in the holy Scriptures. For giftes of learning and eloquence, all the Popiſh Heretikes of Rhemes, are not worthy to beare their bookes after them, and yet they neither deſired nor deſerued credite by learning or eloquence, but only by demonſtration of truth out of the holy Scriptures. For good life though Heretikes haue inuented ſuch impudent ſlanders of them, as their forefathers did againſt Chriſt, and his Apoſtles, and the Arrians againſt Athanaſius, yet the teſtimonie of the Churches in which they liued, is ſufficient to teſtifie, that in compariſon of the beſt Popes, that haue bene theſe 500. yeeres, their life was Angel-like, and before men vnreproueable. Yet no more for their life, then for their learning, they were to be accepted, but onely for the truth which they taught plainly, out of the holy Scriptures, confirmed both with learning and holines of life.

Slander.

RHEM. 3. Tract. 98. in Ioan. Secondly S. Auguſtine noteth vpon the word, Beſide, that not al other teaching, or more preaching then the firſt, is forbidden, but ſuch as is contrary and diſagreeting to the rule of faith. The Apoſtle did not ſay, ſaith he, If any man euangelize to you more then you haue receiued, but, beſide that you receiued. for if he ſhould ſay that, he ſhould be preiudicial to himſelfe, who coueted to come to the Theſſalonians, that he might ſupplie that which was wanting to their faith. Now he that ſupplieth, addeth that which was lacking, taketh not away that which was, &c. By which we ſee how fraudulouſly and calumnioufly the Heretikes charge the Church with addition to the Scriptures.

Preaching contrary to the faith receiued is forbidden, not other preaching.

FVLKE. 3 Firſt the words are plaine, that not only a contrary Goſpel, but alſo an other Goſpel is condemned, & therefore al addition of Goſpels, to the only true Goſpel, is execrable both by this text, and by the curſe that God addeth to them, that adde vnto his word. Therefore he is void of common ſenſe, that vnderſtandeth not S. Auguſtine, to ſpeake of them which haue not receiued the Goſpel al at once, whoſe want muſt be ſupplied. But they that once haue receiued the goſpel fully, as it is taught in the holy ſcriptures, muſt receiue no addition, though it be not directly contrary vnto that which they haue receiued. Hereupon Chryſoſtom ſaith: That he might ſhew, that a very ſmal matter added amiſſe, doth corrupt the whole, he ſaith, the Goſpel is ſubuerted. Againe, Let them heare what Paul ſaith, that they had ſubuerted the Goſpel, which brought in but a very little new matters. Vincentius Lirinenſis vpon this text, concludeth, in theſe words: Adnunciare, &c. To declare or preach vnto Catholike Chriſtians any thing beſide that which they haue receiued, it was neuer lawfull, it ſhal neuer be lawful. And to accurſe them which teach any thing beſide that which hath once bin receiued, it was alwaies neceſſary, it is euery where neceſſary, it ſhalbe alwaies neceſſary. To the goſpel therfore, fully receiued frō the Apoſtles, according to the holy ſcriptures, nothing may be be added afterward. S. Cyprian also vseth this text, to the same end, saying: Seeing therfore, neither an Apostle, nor any angel frō heauen, can preach or teach otherwise, beside that which Christ once taught, & his apostles preached, I marvaile how this hath bin vsed, that cōtrary to the rule of the Gospel, & the apostle, in some places, water is offered in the Lords cup, which being alone, can not expresse the bloud of Christ. ep.63. Theodoret vpon this text, saith: Being incensed by remembrāce of contraries, & moued with iust indignation, he calleth euen him an enemy to piety, which goeth about to preach other things, and crieth out. But if we, &c, and in the end cōcludeth the Apostles purpose to be: That he might driue away al noueltie of men. Oecumenius vpon this text saith: Besids that, signifieth, although it be neuer so litle differing from that which he had preached. Finally, Chrysostom vpon this text, in Gal. Hom. 1. hath these words: He said not, if they preach contrary things, or if they ouerthrow the whole Gospel, but if they euangelize or preach, but a litle beside the Gospel, which you haue receiued, if they weaken it in any point, let them be accursed. And that he meaneth of the Gospel conteined in the Scriptures, his words declare vpon the same sentence repeated. Christ himselfe bringeth in Abraham, speaking in the parable, declaring that he will haue more credite to be giuen to the Scriptures, then if the dead should reuise againe. But Paule, (when I say Paule, I say Christ himselfe, for it was he which moued his minde,) preferreth the Scriptures before Angels, descending from heauen, and very rightly. For the Angels, be they neuer so great, are seruants and ministers. But all the Scriptures came vnto vs, not from seruants, but from the Lord of all. For this cause he saith, if any shall preach vnto you, beside that which we preach vnto you, &c. By this you may see how iustly, and agreeably to the ancient Fathers iudgement, we charge the Popish Church, with addition to the Scriptures.

RHEM. 4 Thirdly, as wel by the word euangelizamus (we euangelize) as the word accepistis (you haue receiued) we may note that the first truth, against which no second Gospelling or doctrine may be admitted, is not that onely which he wrote to the Galatians, or which is conteined either in his or any other of the Apostles or Euangelistes writings, but that which was by word of mouth also preached, taught, or deliuered them first, before he wrote to them. Therefore the aduersaries of the Church that measure the word of God or Gospel by the Scriptures onely, thinking them selues not to incurre S. Paules curse, except they teach directly against the written word, are foully beguiled. As therein also they shamefully erre, when they charge the Catholikes with adding to the Gospel, when they teach any thing that is not in expresse words written by the Apostles or Euangelistes, not marking that the Apostle in this Chapter, and els where, commonly calleth his and his fellowes whole preaching, the Gospel, be it written or vnwritten. The Gospel is not only in the written word of Scripture, but in vnwritten tradition also.

Fourthly, by the same wordes we se condemned al after preachings, later doctrines, new sectes and authors of the same: that only being true, which was first by the Apostles and Apostolike men as the lawful husbandmen of Christes field, sowed and planted in the Church: and that false, which was later and as it were ouersowen by the enemy. By which rule not onely Tertullian (de præscript. nu. 6. & 9.) but al other ancient Doctors, and specially S. Irenæus (li. 3. c. 2. 3. 4.) tried truth from falshod, and condemned old Heretikes, prouing Marcion, Valentine, Cerdon, Menander, and such like, false Apostles, because they came in with their noueltes long after the Church was setled in former truth. After preaching and ouersowing of noueltes, argueth false doctrine.

Fiftly, This curse or execration pronounced by the Apostle, toucheth not only the Galatians, or these of the Apostles time, that preached otherwise then they did, but it pertaineth to al times, preachers, and teachers, vnto the worldes end, and it conceerneth them (as Vincentius Lirinensis saith) that preach a new faith, or change that old faith which they receiued in the vnitie of the Catholike Church. To preach any thing to Christian Catholike men (saith he) besides that which they haue receiued, neuer was it lawful, neuer is it, nor neuer shal it be lawful. to say anathema to such. it hath been, and is, and shal be alwaies behooful. So S. Augustine by this place holdeth al accursed, that draw a Christian man from the societie of the whole Church, to make the seueral part of any one sect: that cal to the hidden conuenticles of Heretiks, from the open and knowen Church of Christ: that allure to the priuate, from the common: finally al that draw with chatting curiositie the children of the Catholike Church, by teaching any thing besides that they found in the Church. ep.48. Psal.103. Con.2.* mentioning also that a Donatist feined an Angel to haue admonished him to cal I is frende out of the Communion of the Catholike Church into his sect. and he saith, that if it had been an Angel in deede, yet should he not haue heard him. Lastly S. Hierom vseth this place, wherein the Apostle giueth the curse or anathema to al false teachers not once but twise, to proue that the zeale of Catholike men ought to be so great toward al Heretikes and their doctrines, that they should giue them the anathema, though they were neuer so deere vnto them. In which case, saith this holy Doctor, I would not spare mine owne parents. Ad Pammach. c. 3. cont Io. Hieros. The Apostles curse vpon al that teach new doctrine, & draw men from the Cath. Church. Zeale against heretikes.

FVLKE. 4 Wee acknowledge, that as well that which the Apostles preached, as that which they did write, is the Gospel. But we affirme, that they preached nothing for the Gospell, but that which was written in the Scriptures, of the olde Testament, Rom 1. 2. Act. 26 22. And afterward, was also written in the Scriptures of the new Testament. Therefore when wee teach neither vnctuary, nor beside the word written, we are sure to auoid the Apostles curse whereinto all Papists incurre, teaching both contrary, and beside the Scriptures, vnder cōlour of vnwritten traditions. But we know whatsoeuer the Apostles taught, is conteined in the Scriptures. For the Gospel which they preached (saith Irenæus) afterward by the wil of God, they deliuered in writing, to be the foundation and pillar of our faith, Lib. 3. Cap. 1. Tertullian against Hermogenes the Heretike, saith: Let him shew that his opinion is written, if it be not written, let him be afraid of that woe, which is appointed for them that adde or take away. Athanasius in the beginning of his booke against Idols, saith: The holy Scriptures inspired of God, are by them selues sufficient to teach the truth. Cyrillus in Ioan. lib. 12. cap. vltimo, hath these wordes: All things which our Lord did, are not written, but such things as they which did write, thought to be sufficient, as well for manners, as for doctrine, that glistering in right faith, and workes, and vertue, we might come to the kingdome of heauen, by our Lord Iesus Christ. Hierom in Agg. cap. 1. saith: Other things, which without the auctoritie and testimonie of the Scriptures, they inuent and faine of their owne accord, the sword of Gods word doth strike. Therefore, all after preaching, and sowing of noueltes, beside the holy Scriptures, is that which Tertullian, Irenæus, Vincentius, Augustine, and Hierom condemne, which ought to be accursed of all Christian Catholikes. The sufficiencie of the scriptures RHEM. 5 18. To see Peter.) In what estimation S. Peter was with this Apostle, it appeareth: seing for respect and honour of his person, and of duety as Tertullian de præscript saith (notwithstanding his great affaires Ecclesiastical) he went so farre to see him not in vulgar maner, but (as S. Chrysostom noteth the Greeke word to import) to behold him as men behold a thing or person of name, excellencie, and maiestie. for which cause, and to fil himself with the perfect vew of his behauiour, he abode with him fiftene daies. See S. Hierom ep. 103. ad Paulinum. to. 3. who maketh also a mysterie of the number of daies that he taried with S. Peter. See S. Ambrose in Comment. huius loci, and S. Chrysostome vpon this place, and ho. 87. in Ioan. B. Paul doth visite S. Peter of honour and reuerence toward him.

FVLKE. 5 That S. Paule doth visite Peter, of honour and reuerence to him, it shall easily be graunted, but that he ought any duety to him as Pope, and his great superior in auctority, you are neuer able to proue. That he came so farre of duetie, you alledge Tertullian de præscript, who saith: He came vp to Hierusalem to know Peter, of office and dueties and right veritie of the same faith and preaching. For both they would not haue marueiled, that of a persecuter, he was made a Preacher, if he had preached any thing contrary, neither would they haue magnified the Lord, because Paule Peters primacie.

Paule his aduersarie was come to them. Therefore they gaue him the right hand, in signe of concord and agreement, and ordeined betweene them, the distribution of the office or duety, not separation of the Gospell. Therefore his comming was about his office and auctoritie of preaching, not of duety vnto Peter as his superiour in auctoritie, who willingly yelded vnto him, the greatest and largest charge of preaching among the Gentiles. But he came to see Peter, as Chrysostome sayth: to behold him as men behold a thing, or person of name, excellencie, or maiestie. It is well he came not to kisse his foote, as Emperours doe to the Pope. But Chrysostoms words are these: He came to see him, as they are wont to speake, which goe to see great and noble cities, to know them. Where is the person of excellency and maiestie? But what writeth Chrysostome immediatly before, vpon this text? What can be more modest then this mind? After so great and so many good actes, when he had no neede at all of Peter, neither wanted his voice, but was equall in honour vnto him (for I will here say no more) yet he went vp vnto him, as to his greater and elder. Againe that blessed man went not to learne any thing of him, nor to receiue any correction, but onely to see him, and honour him with his presence. Hierom making a mysteric of the number of the daies, maketh not Peter Pope: and sayth in his Commentaries, that he went not to learne of him, but to giue honour to him, which was an Apostle before him, for he had no neede of great instruction, and therefore tarried but a short time with him. S. Ambrose sayth: It was meete that he should desire to see Peter, because he was first among the Apostles, to whom our Sauiour committed the charge of the Churches, not to learne any thing of him, who had already learned of that auctor, by whom Peter him selfe was instructed, but for affection of Apostleship, that Peter might know that the same licence was giuen to him, that he him selfe had receiued. Therefore when he came to him, he was lodged and abode with him 15 daies, as a fellow Apostle of the same mind and agreement. Chrysostom in Ioan. Hom 87. sayth, that Paule went to see him, because he was the mouth and chiefe of the Apostles. And yet as he sayth vpon this text, he was equall in honour with Peter, And vpon the next Chapter, he sayth: Paul was equal in dignitie with Peter the highest. Maximus doubteth not to call S. Paule often Summum apostolum, the high apostle oecon. cent. 1. 97. cent. 2. 7.

CHAP. II.

He telleth forth the storie begonne in the last chapter, and how he reprehended Peter, 15 and then specially vrgeth the ensample of the Christian Iewes, who sought vnto Christ for iustification, and that by warrant also of their Law it self, as also because otherwise Christs death had been needles.

THen after fourtene yeres I went vp againe to Hierusalem with Barnabas, taking Titus also with me.

2 And I went vp according to reuelation: and ‖ conferred with them the Gospel which I preach among the Gentiles, but apart with them that seemed to be something, least perhaps ‖ in vaine I should runne or had runne.

3 But neither Titus which was with me, whereas he was a Gentil, was compelled to be circumcised:

4 But because of the false brethren craftely brought in, which craftely came in to espie our libertie that we haue in Christ IESVS, that they might bring vs into seruitude.

5 To whom we yelded not subiection no not for an houre, that the truth of the Gospel may remaine with you.

6 But of them that seemed to be something, (what they were sometime, it is nothing to me. *God accepteth not the person of man) for to me, they that seemed to be something, ‖ added nothing.

Deut. 10. 17.

7 But contrariwise when they had seen, that to me was cõmitted the Gospel of the ‘prepuce, as ‖ to Peter of the circumcision.

* See the marginall Annotation Rom. 2. v. 25.

8 (For he that wrought in Peter to the Apostleship of the circumcision, wrought in me also among the Gentils)

9 And when they had knowen the grace that was giuen me, Iames and Cephas and Iohn, which seemed to be pillers, ‖ gaue to me and Barnabas the right handes of societie: that we vnto the Gentiles, and they vnto the circumcision:

10 Only that we should be mindeful of the poore: the which same thing also I was careful to doe.

11 And

THen fourteene yeeres after, I went vp againe to Hierusalem with Barnabas, and tooke Titus with me.

2 I went vp by reuelation, and I declared vnto them the Gospell which I preach among the Gentiles: but priuately with them which were esteemed the chiefe, least by any meanes I should runne, or had runne in vaine.

3 But neither Titus which was with mee, being a Greeke, was compelled to be circumcised:

4 And that because of incommers, being false brethren, which came in priuily to spie out our libertie which we haue in Christ Iesu, that they might bring vs into bondage.

5 To whome, no not for an † houre, we gaue place by subiection, that the trueth of the Gospell might continue with you.

† Or, moment

6 Of them which seemed to be somewhat (what they were in times passed it maketh no matter to me, God accepteth no mans person:) for they which seemed chiefe, added nothing to me.

Deut. 10. 17. Iob. 34. 19.

7 But contrariwise, when they sawe that the Gospell of the vncircumcision was committed vnto me, as the Gospell of the circumcision was committed vnto Peter:

8 (For he that was mightie in Peter to the Apostleship of the circumcision, the same was mightie in me toward the Gentiles:

9 When they perceiued the grace that was giuen vnto me, then Iames, Cephas, and Iohn, which seemed to be pillers, gaue to me and Barnabas the right handes of fellowship: that we should be Apostles vnto the heathen, and they vnto the circumcision.

10 Onely † that we shoulde remember the poore: wherein also I was diligent to doe the same.

† They admonished.

11 But

11 And when Cephas was come to Antioche, ‖ I resisted him ‘ in face, because he was ‖ reprehensible.

12 For before that certaine came from Iames, he did eate with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew and separated himself, fearing them that were of the circumcision.

13 And to his simulation consented the rest of the Iewes, so that Barnabas also was ledde of them into that simulation.

14 But when I saw that they walked not rightly to the veritie of the Gospel, I said to Cephas before them all: If thou being a Iewe, liuest Gentile-like and not Iudaically: how doest thou compel the Gentils to Iudaize.

15 We are by nature Iewes, and not of the Gentiles sinners.

Rom.3.19,20. 16 But knowing that * man is not iustified by the workes ‡ of the Law, but by the faith of IESVS Christ: we also beleeue in Christ IESVS, that we may be iustified by the faith of Christ, and not by the workes of the Law, for the which cause, by the workes of the Law no flesh shal be iustified.

17 But if seeking to be iustified in Christ, our selues also be found sinners: is Christ then a minister of sinne? God forbid.

18 For if I build the same things againe which I haue destroied, I make my selfe a preuaricatour.

19 For I by the Law, am dead to the Law, that I may liue to God: with Christ I am nailed to the crosse.

20 And I liue, now not I: but Christ liueth in me. And that that I liue now in the flesh, I liue in the faith of the sonne of God, who loued me, & deliuered him self for me.

21 I cast not away the grace of God. For if iustice be by the Law, then Christ died in vaine.

11 But when Peter was come to Antioch, I withstoode him to the face, because he was to be blamed.

12 For before that certaine came from Iames, he did eate with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew, and separated him selfe, fearing them which were of the circumcision.

13 And the other Iewes dissembled likewise with him: insomuch that Barnabas also was brought into their simulation.

14 But when I sawe that they went not the right way to the trueth of the Gospel, I said vnto Peter before them all, If thou being a Iewe, liuest after the maner of the Gentiles, and not as doe the Iewes: Why compellest thou the Gentiles to liue as doe the Iewes?

15 We which are Iewes by nature, and not sinners of the Gentiles,

16 Know that a man is not iustified by the deedes of the law, but by the faith of Iesus Christ: and we haue beleeued in Iesus Christ, that we might be iustified by the faith of Christ, and not by the deedes of the law, because by the deedes of the Lawe no flesh shall be iustified.

17 * If then while we seeke to be made righteous by Christ, we our selues also are found sinners: is therefore Christ the minister of sinne? God forbid. Rom.3,19.

18 For if I builde agayne the thinges which I destroied, then make I my selfe a trespasser.

19 For I, through the Lawe, am dead to the Lawe, that I might liue vnto God: I am crucified with Christ.

20 Neuertheless, I liue: yet now not I, but Christ liueth in me: and the life which I nowe liue in the flesh, I liue by the faith of the Sonne of God, which loued me, and gaue him selfe for me.

21 I reiect not the grace of God: For if righteousnesse come of the Law, then Christ is dead in vaine.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 1 11 In face.) That is, in presence, before them al, as Beza him self expoundeth it. Yet the English Bezites to the more disgracing of S. Peter, translate, to his face, No. Test. an. 1580.

FVLKE. 1 A vaine cauillation, your owne vulgar Latine is In faciem, To his face, that is not, behind his backe, but in his presence, and in the presence of other. Cauilling.

RHEM. 2 16 Of the law.) By this and by the discourse of this whole epistle, you may perceiue, that when iustification is attributed to faith, the workes of Charitie be not excluded, but the workes of Moyses law: that is, the ceremonies, sacrifices and sacraments thereof principally, and consequently al workes done meerely by nature and free wil, without the faith, grace, spirit, and aide of Christ.

FVLKE. 2 It is manifest, that iustification by faith without the workes of the Lawe, excludeth not onely ceremoniall workes, but all mortall workes, from being cause of iustification, but not the worke of charitie, from being the effects of iustification, and of a iustified man. Iustification by faith.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 3 2 Conferred with them.) Though S. Paul were taught his Gospel of God and not of man, and had an extraordinarie calling by Christ him self, yet by reuelation he was sent to Hierusalem to conferre the said Gospel which he preached, with his elders the ordinarie Apostles and Rulers of the Church, to put both his vocation and doctrine to their trial and approbation, and to ioyne in office, teaching, and societie or communion with them. For there is no extraordinarie or miraculous vocation, that can sever or separate the person so called, in doctrine or fellowship of Christian life and religion, from the ordinarie knowen societie of Gods people and Priestes. Therefore whosoeuer he be (vpon what pretence soeuer) that will not haue his calling and doctrine tried by the ordinarie Gouernors of Gods Church, or disdaineth to go vp to the principall place of our religion, to conferre with Peter and other pillers of the church, it is euident that he is a false teacher, a Schismatike, and S. Paul conferreth with S. Peter and the rest, for trial of his doctrine. The heretikes submit their doctrine to no trial of Bishops or Councels.

and an Heretike. By which rule you may trie al your new teachers of Luthers or Caluins schoole: who neuer did nor euer durst put their preaching to such conference or trial of holy Councel or Bishops, as they ought to do, and would do, if it were of God, as S. Paules was.

FVLKE. 3 S. Paul went not to put his doctrine and calling vnto the triall of others, for then he should haue done so at the first, for his doctrine and calling was of as high auctoritie as theirs, but he went to declare vnto other, vpon occasion of slanders, his consent and agreement with the rest of the Apostles. It is one thing to conferre (saith S. Hierom,) an other thing to learne. Among them that conferre, there is an equalitie, but of him that teacheth, and him that learneth, he is lesse that learneth. Therefore Paul went to conferre as with his equals, not that any triall or approbation of his calling or doctrine were necessarie, as if he had bene their inferior. But for them which haue not the like extraordinarie calling, and auctorising, as Paul had, it is necessarie for them, to submit their calling and doctrine, to the ordinarie gouernors of Gods Church. I say to the lawfull gouernors of Gods Church, not to Antichrist and the enimies of Gods Church, what place soeuer they vsurpe. As for going vp, to any principall place of our religion, we know none, but when a generall Councell is kept, neither is there any meanes to conferre with Peter and the Apostles, but by submitting our selues to their holy writings. As for Luther and Caluine, or they that ioine in doctrine with them, neuer refused to put their doctrine to such conference of lawfull Councell or holy Bishops as they ought to doe: but haue often desired that such a generall Councell, by consent of Christian Princes, might be gathered. But your quarrell against them, is because they will not, put their preaching in iudgement of your vnlawfull Chapter of Trent, where the Pope which is accused of heresie, should be the only iudge, which particular assemblie, for many other preiudices, the Popish Church of France also hath refused to acknowledge for a lawfull Councell.

Peters primacy. Lawfull calling. Conference with Peter. Slander.

RHEM. 4 2 In vaine.) Though S. Paul doubted not of the truth of the Gospel which he preached, knowing it to be of the holy Ghost: yet because other men could not, nor would not acknowledge so much, till it were allowed by such as were without al exception knowen to be Apostles and to haue the spirit of truth, to discerne whether the vocation, spirit, and Gospel of Paul were of God, he knew he should otherwise without conference with them, haue lost his labour, both for the time past and to come. He had not had (saith S. Hierom) securitie of preaching the Gospel, if it had not been approued by Peters sentence and the rest that were with him. Hiero. ep. 89. c. 2. See Tertul. li. 4. Cont. Marc. nu. 8. Therfore by reuelation he went to conferre with the Apostles at Hierusalem, that by them hauing his Apostleship and Gospel liked and approued, he might preach with more fruit. Wherein we see, this holy Apostle did not as the seditious proud Heretiks do now a daies, which refusing al mans attestation or approbation, wil be tried by Scriptures onely. As also we may learne that it is no such absurditie as the aduersaries would make it, to haue the Scriptures approued by the Churches testimonie. Seeing the Gospel which S. Paul preached (being of as much certaintie and of the same holy Ghost that the Scriptures be) was to be put in conference and examination of the Apostles, without all derogation of the truth, dignitie, or certainty of the same. And the cauilling of heretikes, that we make subiect Gods Oracles to mans censure, and the Scriptures to haue no more force then the Church is content to grant vnto them, is vaine and false. For, to beare witnesse or to giue euidence or attestation that the preaching or writing of such, is true and of the Holy Ghost, is not to make it true: no more then the Goldsmith or touchstone that trie and discerne which is true gold, make it good gold, but they giue euidence to man that so it is. And therefore that disputation also, whether the Scripture or the Church be of greater auctoritie, is superfluous: either giuing testimonie to the other, and both assured by the holy Ghost from al error: the Church yet being before the Scriptures, the spouse of Christ, and proper dwelling temple, or subiect of God & his graces: for the which Church the Scriptures were, and not the Church for the Scriptures. In which Church there is iudicial auctoritie by office and iurisdiction to determine of doubtfull questions touching the sense of the Scriptures and other controuersies in religion, and to punish disobedient persons. Of which iudiciall power the Scriptures be not capable, as neither the trueths and determination of the same can be so euident to men, nor so agreeable and fit for euery particular resolution, as diuersitie of times and persons requireth. Certaine is the truth, and great is the auctoritie of both: but in such diuers kindes, as they can not be well compared togither. The controuersie is much like as if a man touching the ruling a case in lawe or giuing sentence in a matter of question, should aske, whether the iudge, or the euidence of the parties, be of more auctoritie or credit, which were as frivolous a dispute, as it were a disordered part for any man to say, he would be tried by no other iudge but by his owne writings or euidences. With such triflers and seditious persons haue we to do now a daies in diuinitie, as were intollerable in any prophane science or facultie in the world.

The approbation of S. Pauls doctrine by the rest of the Apostles, was requisite to confute the slander of the false Apostles, which reported that he agreed not in doctrine with the other Apostles: not that all other men could not, or would not acknowledge that his doctrine was of the holy Ghost, till it were allowed by such as were without all exception knowen to be Apostles, or that without conference he knewe, he should haue lost his labor, both for the time past and to come: for then he should, and would haue sought approbation at the first, not haue preached so many yeeres without conference: not that Paul feared (saith Hierome vpon this text) lest by the space of 17. yeeres, he had preached a false Gospel among the Gentiles, but that he might declare to them that were Apostles before him, that he neither did nor had runne in vaine, as ignorant men thought. If he feared not &c. he had securitie of preaching the Gospel, before it was confirmed by the sentence of Peter, and the rest of the Apostles that were with him. You see therefore, that Hierom vpon deliberation in his Commentarie, writeth contrary to that he did write in heat of contention, against S. Augustine. That he went vp by reuelation it prooueth not, that hauing his Apostleship and Gospel liked and approoued by them, he might preach with more fruite: for he preached before with as great fruite, to the conuersion of many nations, but that to stop the mouths of the slanderers, and to confirme the weake, it was expedient, that he should haue the approbation of the rest of the Apostles, and their acknowledging of the Apostleship of the Gentiles, to be chiefly committed to him. Tertullian writeth against Marcion, which receiued but one Gospel of S. Luke, shewing that Paul (of whom S. Luke learned his Gospel) refused not to haue it confirmed by the testimonie and auctoritie of the ancient Apostles, and so should Marcion receiue the Gospel of Matthew and Iohn, as well as of Luke. What Heretikes those be that will be tried onely by the Scriptures, and not by men iudging according to the Scriptures, I know not: but sure I am, those men whom you specially maligne, are none such. An other matter you may gather out of this place, that it is no absurditie, to haue the Scriptures approued by the churches testimony, as the aduersaries make it. But we make no such absurditie, but that you should holde, that the auctoritie of the scriptures doth depend vpon the Churches approbation. For to giue testimonie vnto the truth, and to discerne truth from falsehoode, is no derogation to the dignitie or certaintie of truth. But when you affirme, that the Church might haue refused the Gospel of Matthew or Iohn, and taken the Gospel of Bartholmew or Nicodemus, this we affirme to be a foule absurditie. And when you say, that disputation whether the Scripture or the Church, be of greater auctoritie is superfluous: you seeme to graunt equall auctoritie to the Church with the scripture, which is to match the auctoritie of men, with the auctoritie of God. Therefore let vs consider your reasons. First you say, either giueth testimonie to other. This is a fond reason:

The auctoritie of Peter and the Church. Slander. Approbation of the Scriptures. Slander.

reason: for the lawyer may giue testimonie to the written law, and the written lawe giueth testimonie to him if he say true, but yet is of greater auctoritie then the lawyer: for the lawyer must obey the lawe, and the law written, will conuince the lawyer of error, if he giue a wrong testimonie. So the Church must obey the Scripture, which is able to conuince her of error (if she goe astray) the Scripture is not subiect to the Church, therefore of greater auctoritie. Further you say, they be both assured by the holy Ghost from all error. Of the scripture it is certeine: but that the Church is assured from error, it cannot be proued. For the Scriptures were needlesse, if the Church without them be assured from error. But the Church is no longer assured from error, then she followeth the word of God deliuered in the scriptures, which is the rule of truth. But by your correction that followeth: The Church yet being before the Scriptures, the spouse of Christ, and proper dwelling temple, or subiect of God and his graces, It seemeth you meane, that the Church in this respect should be of greater auctoritie then the scripture: wherin you commit a foule paralogisme or sophistication, by the scriptures, meaning the writing of them, and not the matter that is writtē, which is the word of God. For the word of God which is written in the scriptures, was doubtles before the Church was the spouse of Christ. For by the word of God, the Church was first gathered, to haue any being or excellencie that it hath. Your other argument is as absurd as this. The scriptures were for the Church, and not the Church for the Scriptures. Which is as good, as if a man would say, the Prince is for the people, and not the people for the Prince: therefore the people is of greater auctoritie then the Prince. Or thus, the lawe is made for people, and not people for the lawe, therefore the lawe is not aboue the people, neither are they subiect to it. Moreouer you say, in the Church there is iudiciall auctoritie by office and iurisdiction to determine of doubtfull questions, touching the sense of the scriptures, and other controuersies of religion, of which iudiciall power, the scriptures be not capable. I answere, there is no other iudiciall auctoritie in the Church, then in the common wealth, which is to determine controuersies according to the law, & the true meaning thereof: where in question of the sense of the law, the lawe makers minde is to be discussed by his words, and the circumstances and occasions of making the law. So the meaning of the scriptures, is to be taken onely out of the scriptures, so saith Clemens: You ought not to seeke a strange and foren sense without the scriptures, that you may confirme it by any meanes by the scriptures: but the sense of trueth you must take out of the scriptures themselues. Dist. 37. cap. Relatum. And that this is not so hard a matter to doe, S. Augustine testifieth, who saith, that nothing is almost gathered out of any obscure places of scripture, which is not found in other places to be vttered most plainely. And therefore the scripture hath authoritie to determine all controuersies of religion, though not speaking as men vpon the bench (for which cause some of you haue blasphemed the scriptures to be a dumbe iudge) yet the scripture speaketh sufficiently, to enforme the conscience of euery man that is desirous to heare the trueth, and seeke the resolution thereof out of the scriptures. Wherefore S. Paul doubteth not to say, when he had cited many testimonies of scripture, we know that what things the law saith, it speaketh to them that are vnder the law, Rom. 3. 19. The scriptures therefore in their kind, are capable of speach, and so of iudgement and iudiciall power: and the trueth and determination thereof, are as euident and particular, as is necessarie for any times or persons, so saith the Apostle. The whole scripture inspired of God, is profitable to teach, to reproue, to exhort, to rebuke, that the man of God may be perfect and prepared to all good workes. 2. Tim. 3. 16. yet the ministerie of man is necessarie by Gods ordinance, not of auctoritie aboue the scriptures, but subiect vnto them. The controuersie therefore is not like as you make it, in a case of lawe, whether the iudge or the euidence be of greater auctoritie: but whether the iudge or the law be of greater auctoritie. Where euery wise man will graunt that the law is of greater auctoritie, where vnto the iudge is to obey, and according to which to giue his sentence, or else by the law his erroneous sentence is to be reuersed. With such proud hypocrites haue we to doe, as will be iudges of the scriptures themselues, and not submit their iudgement to be tryed by the scriptures, whom no wise common wealth would tolerate, both because they arrogate iudgement without commission, and though they giue sentence against all iustice, yet by no law they will haue their iudgement to be examined.

RHEM. 5 6 Added nothing.) The Gospell and preaching of S. Paul was wholy of God, and therefore though it were put to the Churches probation, as gold is to the touch-stone: yet being found in all points pure, nothing could be altered or amended therein by the Apostles. Euen so the Scriptures which are in deed wholy of the holy Ghosts enditing, being put to the Churches triall, are found, proued, and testified vnto the world to be such, and not made true, altered, or amended by the same. Without which attestation of the Church, the holy Scriptures in themselues were alwaies true before: but not so knowen to be, to all Christians, nor they so bound to take them. And that is the meaning of the famous sentence of S. Augustine cont. epi. fund. c. 5. which troubleth the heretikes so much. I would not beleeue the Gospell (saith he) vnlesse the auctoritie of the Church moued me.

The Scriptures alwaies true in themselues, are so knowen to be by the Church.

FVLKE. 5 The Gospel and preaching of Paul, was not put to the churches probation (as you surmise) but if it had been, this verse proueth plainely, that the Church added no auctoritie to his Gospell and preaching. No more doth it to the scriptures, which it receiueth & acknowledgeth to be true. And although the auctoritie of the Church doe moue men which neuer heard of the scriptures, to giue credit vnto them: yet are men bound to take them for trueth, although the Church did not moue them, nor testifie of the scriptures, that they are the trueth. For men are bound to beleeue the word of God, because it is the word of God, and not because it is approoued of men to be the word of God. As Adam, Noe, and Abraham did beleeue the worde of God, and were bound to beleeue it, when there was no Church that could moue them to it. The Apostles beleeued the Gospell of our Sauiour Christ, before he wrought any miracle, because it was testified by the scriptures, Ioh. 1. 45. And Christ himselfe preached, saying: Repent & beleeue the Gospel, when there was no Church, whose auctority could make men to beleeue: yet were the Apostles bound to beleeue in Christ, and the Iewes to beleeue the Gospell, because it was the word of God. The scriptures therefore being the word of God, are of full and sufficient auctoritie of themselues, and the spirit of God which speaketh in them, is of sufficient auctoritie to procure credite vnto them, euen without the testimonie of men, and doth procure the Church it selfe to acknowledge them to be the true and undoubted word of God. And as the whole Church is bound to beleeue them, for the spirit of truth that speaketh in them, so is euery particular person and people bound to beleeue them, and take them for the truth, although they neuer heard that the Church doth approue them. Neuertheles the testimony of the Church in respect of mens infirmitie of iudgement, is requisite to induce men to giue credit to the scriptures, & is a good confirmation of mens faith, not as the auctoritie of men, but as the auctority of Gods spirit in men, consenting vnto the truth, and framing the obedience of men vnto the truth. Therefore that saying of S. Augustine maketh nothing against vs, nor troubleth vs one whit. For first Augustine speaketh not of himselfe, at such time as he was a Christian, but putting the case he were an infidel yet to be conuerted: as it is plaine both by the words going immediately before, and by the whole discourse. Secondly he saith not, vnles the auctority of the Church moued me, as though nothing else should moue him, but the Churches auctoritie: for his word is not Auctoritie of the Scriptures.

Moueret,

Mouеret, but Commouеret. But his ſaying is to this effect. I for my part would not beleeue the Goſpel, vnleſſe the auctoritie of the Church, with other things did moue me, or did alſo moue me. But when the queſtion was betweene him and the Donatiſtes, where the Church was, on his ſide or one theirs, then he fleeth not to that vnlearned petition of principle, (which yet is the whole bulwarke of papiſtrie) that the Catholike Church was on his ſide, but requireth the matter to be diſcuſſed, by the auctoritie of the ſcriptures. Let vs not heare (ſaith he) this ſay I, and this ſaieſt thou, but let vs heare, This ſaith the Lord. There are the bookes of the Lord, vnto whoſe auctoritie we doe both conſent, both beleeue, both ſerue. There let vs ſeeke the Church, there let vs diſcuſſe our cauſe. De vnitate Ec. cap. 3. and in the ſame chapter. I will not haue the holy Church to be demonſtrated or ſhewed forth by humane documents, but by diuine oracles. Againe, Therefore let vs ſeeke her in the holy Scriptures.

RHEM. 6 7 To Peter the circumciſion.) We may not thinke, as the Heretikes deceitfully teach, that the charge of the Apoſtles was ſo diſtincted, that none could preach or exerciſe iuriſdiction, but in thoſe ſeuerall places or towards thoſe peoples or prouinces only, whereunto by Gods appointment or their owne lot or election, they were ſpecially deſigned. For, euery Apoſtle might by Chriſts commiſſion (Mat. 28. Goe, and teach all nations) *vſe all ſpirituall function through the whole world, yet for the more particular regard and care of prouinces, and for peace and order ſake, ſome were appointed to one countrie, and ſome to another: as, of the other Apoſtles, we ſee in the Eccleſiaſticall hiſtories, and for S. Peter and S. Paul, it is plaine by this place and other, that to them as to the two chiefe and moſt renowmed Apoſtles, the Church of all nations was giuen, as deuided into two parts, that is, Iewes and Gentiles, the firſt and principall being S. Peters lot, that herein alſo he might reſemble our Sauiour, who was ſent namely * to the loſt ſheepe of Iſrael, and was properly *the miniſter of the circumciſion: the ſecond being S. Pauls, whom Chriſt choſe ſpecially to preach to the Gentiles: Not ſo for all that, that either he was limited to the Gentiles onely, (whom the Actes of the Apoſtles report in euery place, firſt to haue entred into the Synagogues and preached Chriſt to the Iewes, as he wrote alſo to the Hebrewes, and euer had ſpeciall regard and honour to them,) or Peter ſo bound to the Iewes onely, that he could not meddle with the Gentiles: ſeeing he was * the man choſen of God, by whom the Gentiles ſhould firſt beleeue, who firſt baptized them, and firſt gaue order concerning them. Therefore the treacherie of Caluine is intolerable, that vpon this diſtinction of the Apoſtles charge, would haue the ſimple ſuppoſe, that S. Peter could not be Biſhop of Rome (ſo might he barre S. Iohn from Epheſus alſo) nor deale among the Gentiles, as a thing againſt Gods ordinance and the appointment betweene him and S. Paul: as though thereby the one had bound himſelfe to the other, not to preach or meddle within his fellowes compaſſe. And which is further moſt ſeditious, he exhorteth all men to keepe faſt the foreſaid compact, and rather to haue reſpect to S. Pauls Apoſtleſhip, then to S. Peters: as though the preaching, auctoritie, and Apoſtleſhip of both were not alike true, and all of one holy Spirit, whether they preached to Iewes or Gentiles, as both did preach vnto both peoples, as is already proued, and at length, partly by the daily decay of the Iewiſh ſtate and their incredulitie, and partly for that in Chriſtianitie the diſtinction of Iewe and Gentile ceaſed after a ſeaſon: both went to the chiefe citie of the Gentiles, and there founded the Church common to the Hebrues and all nations, Peter firſt, and Paul afterward. And therefore Tertullian ſaith, de præſcript. nu. 14. O happie Church, to which the Apoſtles powred out all doctrine with their blood: Where Peter ſuffereth like to our Lords paſſion, where Paul is crowned with Iohn (Baptiſts) death.*

The Apoſtles commiſſion generall through the world, and yet peculiar to certaine prouinces.

Iewes and Gentiles ſpecially committed to the two principal Apoſtles. Mat. 15. Rom. 15.

Act. 10. & 15. v. 7. Calu. lib. 4. c. 6. nu. 15. Inſtit.

Neither Peter onely of the Iewes, nor Paul Apoſtle of the Gentiles only. Caluins foliſh reaſon that Peter was not B. of Rome, and his derogation from Peters Apoſtleſhip.

The Church founded at Rome by S. Peter and S. Paul.

FVLKE. 6 Firſt you ſclander vs (as you doe commonly) to teach that the Apoſtles charge was ſo diſtinct, that none could preach &c. but in their ſeuerall places, which by Gods appointment or their lot, for more particular regard of peace and orders ſake, were limited to euery one. For contrariwiſe we teach, that euery one of the Apoſtles had as large & generall auctority as the other, and that any of the Apoſtles by their commiſſion, might lawfully haue preached and exerciſed his Apoſtleſhip and iuriſdiction at Rome, as well as Peter and Paul. But after this diſtinction was made by God for cauſes before mentioned, it was not lawfull for the Apoſtles to leaue or forſake their ſpeciall charges, and to intrude themſelues one into anothers limites, which would haue bredde the contrary enormities to thoſe cauſes, for which their charges were diſtincted: namely, neglect of ſome prouinces, diſſenſion and confuſion. Therefore it was not lawfull for Peter, to whom by God was committed the chiefe Apoſtleſhip of the circumciſion, to forſake this charge, and to take vpon him the chiefe Apoſtleſhip of the Gentiles. And certaine it is, that Peter did neuer conſent to breake that order, which was here taken by him and the reſt of the Apoſtles, and Paul. Therefore though he came to Rome, and preached at Rome, and died at Rome: yet was he the chiefe Apoſtle of the circumciſion ſtill, and Paul the chiefe Apoſtle of the vncircumciſion or Gentiles. And therefore the Pope might more probably haue conueied his title of ſupremacie from Paul, then from Peter. And although the Papiſtes would now ſeeme craftely to deriue his auctoritie from both, yet holding their owne principles, that is vnpoſſible. For if Peter were not chiefe Apoſtle of the Church of the Gentiles (as the text is plaine that he was not) his ſucceſſor, admitting he had Peters whole auctoritie, (which none that is a wiſe man will graunt) cannot haue chiefe auctoritie ouer the Church of the Gentiles, becauſe Paul was beheaded at Rome. For if there muſt be but one head, and that was Peter, (as the papiſtes affirme) then can the Pope deriue none auctoritie from Paul. But let vs ſee how cleanely you can conuey the matter. Firſt you ſay, it is plaine by this place, that to S. Peter and S. Paul, as to the two chiefe and moſt renowmed Apoſtles, the Church of all nations, that is, of the Iewes and Gentiles was giuen. I will not ſtand vpon your termes, for in truth the Apoſtles were rather giuen to the Churches, then the Churches to them, Eph. 4. You ſpeake of them as though they were two great benefices, or Biſhoprickes. But we agree (which perhaps is your meaning) that they were made chiefe Apoſtles, the one ouer the Church of the Iewes, the other ouer the Church of the Gentiles. Secondly you ſay, the firſt and principall was S. Peters lot: we graunt this alſo in principalitie, and preeminence of order. Prouided alwaies, that Chriſt is as properly the light & ſaluation of the Gentiles, as he is the glory of his people Iſrael, and that he was the miniſter of circumciſion for the truth of God, to confirme the promiſes of the fathers, that the Gentles might glorifie God for his &c. And therefore S. Pauls lot (the prerogatiue of elderſhip excepted) was no leſſe, but much more glorious then S. Peters. But he was not ſo limited to the Gentiles onely, but that he might preach to the Iewes alſo, and ſo might Peter to the Gentiles, as either did. Whether S. Paul did write to the Hebrues, diuers old Doctors doubt: and whether S. Peter was the firſt that preached to the Gentiles, I haue ſomewhat ſaid vpon Act. 15. Certaine it is, that Paul at his firſt conuerſion, was ſent immediatly to the Gentiles Act. 26. 17. Gal. 1. 6. Yet this diſtinction remaineth firme, Peter was chiefe of the Church of the Iewes, & Paul was chiefe of the Church of the Gentiles. And therefore it is no treacherie, but a neceſſarie concluſion of Caluin, that Peter could not be chiefe of the Church of the Gentiles, except he went againſt Gods ordinance, & the appointment made betweene him & Paul. That he might not preach at Rome, nor deale among the Gentiles, Caluin doth not ſay, but that he might not ſo deale among the Gentiles, or occupy any ſuch ſeat at Rome, whereby he ſhould take vpon him to be the chiefe Apoſtle of the Gentiles, which prerogatiue by Gods ordinance, & his owne appointment, was decreed vnto Paul. You ſay, So he might barre S. Iohn from Epheſus alſo. I anſwere, what place ſo euer S. Iohn had at Epheſus, as I doubt not but he had an higher place,then the biſhop of that Church:ſo I wil be bold vpon the auctority of this text to affirme,that he was neither aboue Peter in Apoſtleſhip of the circumciſion, nor aboue Paul in the Apoſtleſhip of the Gentiles. But it is perilous ſedition in Caluine,to exhort all men to keepe faſt the foreſaid compact. Why ſo I pray you, was it not grounded vpon the ordinance of the holy Ghoſt? and teſtified vnto vs in the ſcriptures? Is it ſedition to keepe the ordinance of the holy Ghoſt? Or cannot your Popedome ſtand? vnles this compact decreed by the holy Ghoſt be broken? No verily, therefore you cry ſedition as Athalia, when ſhe was to be depoſed from her vſurped tyranny,cried treaſon,ſedition. But it is belike a worſe matter,that Caluin exhorteth all men rather to haue reſpect to S. Pauls Apoſtleſhip, then to S. Peters, as though the preaching auctority and Apoſtleſhip of both were not alike true,& al of one holy ſpirit, whether they preached to Iewes or Gentiles. In deed if Caluin ſhould make a difference of truth or ſpirit in the Apoſtles preaching,& the auctoritie of their doctrine,you might worthily charge him with more then ſedition,euen with hereſie & blaſphemy. But theſe be his words,by which he ſhall cleere himſelfe of all crimes,and make his impudent accuſers, if not aſhamed, yet worthy to be baſſulled of all honeſt minds,that loue truth and plaine dealing. I do not greatly regard whether Peter were Biſhop of Rome,ſeeing Paul doth teſtifie,that the Apoſtleſhip of Peter doth perteine peculiarly vnto the Iewes,and that his Apoſtleſhip perteineth to vs. Therfore that this ſociety which they bet weene themſelues couenanted,may be ratified with vs,yea rather that the ordinance of the holy Ghoſt may be counted firme with vs: it is conuenient, that we ſhould haue reſpect to the Apoſtleſhip of Paul rather then of Peter: for ſo the holy Ghoſt diuided the prouinces bet weene them, that he appointed Peter to the Iewes, and Paul to vs. Now therefore let the Papiſts ſeeke their primacie eiſe where, then in the word of God, where it is not found to be grounded. By theſe wordes it is manifeſt, that Caluine maketh no difference betweene the truth of the Apoſtles doctrine,or the authoritie of the holy ſpirit, by which they preached both to Iewes and Gentiles,but will haue vs that are Gentiles to keepe ſtedfaſt the difference of primacie, and diſtinction of prouinces, which the holy Ghoſt hath made, and to acknowledge Paul to be the chiefe Apoſtle of the Gentiles, and not Peter. Seeing therefore it is certaine, that Paul was once the chiefe Apoſtle of the Gentiles by Gods appointment, Peter had not chiefe auctoritie ouer all the Church by Chriſtes ſaying: Thou art Peter, and vpon this rocke I will build my Church &c. But let vs ſee how you will conuicie this primacie ouer the Church of the Gentiles from Paul to Peter. Firſt,you are not able to ſhew, that Paul was by the holy Ghoſt depriued of it, by whom he was inueſted in it. Secondly,you cannot ſhew that he did voluntarily reſigne it,and yet if you could,his reſignation were not yet good in lawe, except it were approued by Chriſt, of whom he had his inſtitution in it. Let vs ſee then what poore euidence you haue to bring it from Paul to Peter. You ſay,partly by the daily decay of the Iewiſh ſtate, and their incredulitie,and partly for that in Chriſtianitie the diſtinction of Iew and Gentile ceaſed after a ſeaſon,they went both to the chiefe citie of the Gentiles, and there founded the Church common to the Hebrewes, and all nations. Firſt, this decay of the Iewiſh ſtate,was not ſo long as Peter and Paul liued together, and ſpecially it was not before Paul came to Rome: for at ſuch time as Paul was apprehended at Hieruſalem,from whence he was ſhortly after caried to Rome,the Iewiſh ſtate was not decayed,as is manifeſt by the words of Iames to Paul, Act. 21.20. Thou ſeeſt(brother)how many ten thouſands there are of the Iewes that haue beleeued, and are all zealous of the law. This text doth alſo prooue,that the diſtinction of Iewes and Gentiles did not ceaſe at the ſame time, therefore there is no reaſon why Peter in that reſpect, ſhould found a Church common to both the Churches at Rome. Therefore theſe cauſes of S. Peters forſaking his charge and Apoſtleſhip ouer the Iewes,are falſe and forged,and ſo much the more apparantly,in that you confeſſe, that Peter founded the Church at Rome before Paul. And if the ſtories be true that write of his firſt comming, and ſitting there 25.yeeres: he founded the Church there, before this ordinance and compact was made, therefore vpon no ſuch pretenſed cauſe. And yet if all the Iewes, had beene dead, or reuolted from Chriſtian religion, it was not lawfull for him being left of the one Church, to vſurp primacie in the Church of the Gentiles, which was committed to another, except you could ſhew by what new commiſſion he was tranſlated into that primacie, and Paul depriued of it. The Church of Rome in deede was happie, that both the Apoſtles powred out there whole doctrine there, & confirmed the ſame with their blood: ſo was it happy that Iohn preached there in the daies of Domitian, when they both were dead, yet thereby the citie of Rome gayned not the ſupreme auctoritie ouer the Church, as the Emperour had ouer the world. And no man that is not mad will graunt, that S. Iohn being at Rome after that Peter was dead,was vnder the iuriſdiction of Linus,Clemens, Cletus or Anacletus, or whoſoeuer was Biſhop there in that time,for the ſtories doe not agree: but Iohn continued his Apoſtleſhip, and the auctoritie thereof ſo long as he liued, which was greater then any Biſhop that ſucceeded the Apoſtles, as it is plaine by the order of dignitie and degrees of the Church, ſet downe by the Apoſtle S. Paul 1.Cor.12.28. Where as by your vaine ſuppoſition of the Popes ſupremacie, Clemens, or ſome other Biſhop of Rome after S. Peter, was ſuperiour vnto S. Iohn. And as that aſſe, which counterfeited the Epiſtles of Clemens to Iames the Apoſtle ſuppoſeth, giuing him charge alſo of ſuch weightie matters, namely of ſhaking the clothes of the Lords table, out of the holy veſtrie, and of keeping the Sacrament from miſe doung, and rottenneſſe Epi.2.ad Iacob. that euery wiſe man which readeth him, may thinke the auctor of the Epiſtle, was more worthy to haue his eares nayled to the pillorie, then to take vpon him to teach one of the three pillars of the Church, who had learned of Chriſt himſelfe, and had ſo long gouerned the Church of Ieruſalem before Clemens was a Chriſtian. Finally, Rome was not the chiefe citie of the Chriſtian Gentiles by Gods election, as Ieruſalem was of the Iewes,but by tyranny and vniuſt oppreſſion of other nations,as Babylon was ſometimes in the Eaſt. Rome.

REM. 7 9 Gaue the right hands of ſocietie.) There is and alwaies ought to be, a common fellowſhip and fraternitie of all Paſtors and Preachers of the Church. Into which ſocietie whoſoeuer entreth not,but ſtandeth in Schiſme & ſeparation from Peter and the chiefe Apoſtolike Paſtors, what pretence ſo euer he hath, or whence ſo euer he challengeth auctoritie, he is a Wolfe, and no true Paſtor. Which vnion and communion together was ſo neceſſarie euen in S. Pauls caſe, that notwithſtanding his ſpeciall calling of God, yet the Holy Ghoſt cauſed him to goe vp to his elder Apoſtles, to bee receiued into their fellowſhip or brotherhoode. for it is to be noted, that SS. Peter, Iames, and Iohn were not ſent to S. Paul, to ioyne with him or to be tried for their doctrine and calling, by him: but contrariwiſe he was ſent to them as to the chiefe and knowen ordinarie Apoſtles. They therefore gaue Paule their hands, that is to ſay, tooke him into their ſocietie, and not he them. And S. Hieromes rule concerning this, ſhall be found true to the worldes ende, ſpeaking of S. Peter ſucceſſor: He that gathereth not with thee, ſcattereth. Epiſt.57. *And in an other place for the ſame cauſe he calleth Rome,*tutiſſimum Communionis portum, the moſt ſafe and ſure hauen of communion or ſocietie. Ep.16.cap.3. And whereas the Heretikes by this alſo would preue that Peter had no preeminence aboue Paul being his fellow Apoſtle, it is ridiculous. As though all of one fellowſhip or brotherhood be alwaies equall, or as though there were not order and gouernment, ſuperioritie and inferioritie, in euerie ſocietie well appointed. And they might perceiue by this whole paſſage, that Peter was the ſpeciall and in more ſingular ſort, the Apoſtle of the Iewes, though Iames and Iohn were alſo: as S. Paul

All Catholike preachers and Paſtors muſt communicate with Peter and his ſucceſſors.

The Heretikes ridiculous argument againſt Peters preeminence.

S.Paul is also called in more singular sort the Apostle and doctor of the Gentiles then S.Barnabas, and yet they were both alike taken here into this societie, as they were both at once and alike segregated into this ministerie, and ordered together Act. 13. It is a poore reason then to say or thinke, S.Peter not to be aboue S.Barnabas neither, because of this societie and fellowship vnto which he was received together with S.Paul.

FVLKE.7 All Catholike pastors must communicate not only with Peter, but also with euerie one of the true Apostles of Christ in all necessarie points of faith and doctrine, or else they be no shepheards but wolues. They must also communicate with all the lawful successors of the Apostles, as wel as with Peters successours: Successours I meane in faith and doctrine, not in place onely. And in this vnion and communion was S. Paul 17. yeeres (as Hierom noted) before he came vp at this time to Hierusalem, vnlesse you will say he was all that 17. yeeres no Pastor but a wolfe. He came not therefore now first to be ioyned vnto them, not to be tried for his doctrine and calling, but by this brotherly meeting to stoppe the mouthes of slanderers, and to confirme the faith of the weake in his doctrine, that it was agreeable to the doctrine of all the Apostles. That S.Paule was sent to them, and not they to him, it was both in respect of their Seniorite, and for that they were the greater number there remayning at that time at Hierusalem, not that they were his superiors, or better knowen to the Gentiles to be ordinary Apostles. And the giuing of hands of fellowship, was a mutuall acceptation of the one and the other, and no signe of superioritie in them aboue Paul. Neither was this the first time that they tooke him into their fellowship, but long before, namely when he came first to Hierusalem, Acts.9.27. And in the contents of that Chapter you confesse as much your selues, which now it seemeth you haue forgotten. S.Hieroms rule is not of euery one that sitteth in Peters Chaire, which is not a successour of S.Peters doctrine. For S.Hierom (as I haue often said) would not haue gathered with Liberius, whom he confesseth to haue subscribed to heresie, nor with Marcellinus sacrificing to idoles, nor with Honorius condemned for heresie in the Councell of Constantinople the 6. nor with other heretical bishops of Rome. Neither doth he for that cause call Rome the most sure hauen of Communion, absolutely, but saith, That certaine Priests of Alexandria, & their Pope or bishop Athanasius, & one Peter declining the persecutiõ of the Arian heresie, fled to Rome as vnto the most sure hauen of their Cõmunion. Because in no Church (with whom they had fellowship) they could be so safe from the persecution of the Arians at that time, as at Rome, while Rome was vnder Constans a Catholike Emperour, and Iulius a Catholike bishop gouerned the Church there. But soone after when Constantius obteined the Empire of the Citie of Rome, and Liberius by him was first banished and after restored and Felix banished at that time (as Damasius writeth) There was exceeding great persecution of the Cleargie at Rome, so that many Priests and Clearkes were slaine within the Church, and that for sixe yeeres while Liberius reigned with the Arians, there could no Catholike Priest or Clearke be suffered to enter either into the Church, or into the common Bathes. If Athanasius at that time had come to Rome, hee should not haue found so sure an hauen there, as he did before. For neither was Rome then of his communion, when the Emperour, the Bishop, and such as occupied the place of the Cleargie were Arians, neither was any place of his communion (for that season) a more dangerous rocke to his safetie and the rest that were with him, then Rome. Therefore this saying of Hierom is both falsly & vnlearnedly peruerted from his true meaning, to set vp your Idole of Rome. But you note a ridiculous argument of the heretikes, that would proue Peter to haue no preeminence aboue Paul, being his fellow Apostle. You would be glad we had none other Arguments: although we do not argue of the fellowship onely, which yet argueth an equalitie in auctoritie, though there were other preeminences of Peter and of Paul: yet had Peter no auctoritie ouer Paul, nor Paul ouer Peter. No nor ouer Barnabas, for then he would haue ouer ruled him in the case of their contention, that made them to part companie, Act.15. And Barnabas would haue obeyed. But all Primacie and preeminence doth not argue superioritie in power and auctoritie. And Chrysostome vpon this place saith. Now he hath shewed himselfe equall in honor with the rest, he compareth not himselfe with the rest, but with the highest, declaring that each of them had obteined equall dignitie. S.Ambrose saith, He nameth only Peter, & compareth him with himselfe, because Peter receiued the Primacie to found the Church, and he also in equall maner or measure was elected to haue the primacie, in founding the churches of the Gentiles, yet so, that Peter might preach to the Gentiles if cause were, and Paul to the Iewes. For it is found that ech did both, but yet full auctoritie is knowen to be giuen to Peter in preaching among the Iewes, and the auctoritie of Paul is found perfect in preaching among the Gentiles, whereupon in faith and truth he calleth himselfe the Master of the Gentiles. And after a few words vpon the verie words of this verse, he saith, He saith that the gift which he receiued of God, to be worthy to haue the primacy in preaching to the Gentiles, as Peter had in preaching to the circumcision, was approued euen by those Apostles) which were more noble among the rest, whom for their stedfastnes he calleth Pillars, which were alwaies with our Lord in secret matters, and were worthy to see his glory in the Mount. And as he giueth fellowes to Peter, (notable men among the Apostles, so also he adioyneth Barnabas to himselfe, which by diuine iudgement was ioyned to him, yet he challengeth the grace of primacie granted by God to himselfe alone, like as it was granted to Peter alone among the Apostles, so that the Apostles of the circumcision did giue the right hands to the Apostles of the Gentiles, to declare the concord of their societie, that either of both knowing that they had obtayned the spirit of perfection of the Lord in dispensation of the Gospell, might shew that in nothing they had need the one of the other. Oecumenius vpon this place saith, Consider now how he maketh himselfe equall to Peter, for this was needfull, that he might be thought worthy of credite among the Galathians. Primasius saith in the person of Paul, Non illi, &c. I am not inferiour to him, for we are both ordeined of one into one Ministery, that I should preach to the Gentiles, as Peter to the Iewes. These ancient fathers testifie for vs, of the equalitie of the two principall Apostles Peter and Paul.

RHEM. 8 11 Resisted him.) Wicked Porphyrie (as Hierom writeth) chargeth S.Paul of enuie and malepart boldnes, and S. Peter of errour. Præm. Comment. in Galat. Euen so the like impious sonnes of Cham, for this, and for other things, gladly charge S.Peter, as though he had cõmitted the greatest crimes in the world. for it is the property of Heretiks and ill men, to be glad to see the Saincts reprehended & their faults discouered, as we may learne in the writings of S. Augustine against Faustus the Manichee, who gathered out all the acts of the holy Patriarchs, that might seeme to the people to be worthy of blame. Whom the said holy Doctor defendeth at large against him as both he, & before him S.Cyprian, find here vpon this Apostles reprehension, much matter of praising both their vertues: S.Paules great zeale, and S. Peters wonderful humilitie: that the one in the cause of God would not spare his superior, and that the other, in that excellent dignitie, would not take it in il part, nor by allegation of his Supremacie disdaine or refuse to be controuled by his iunior. which of the two they count the greater grace and more to be imitated. For neither Peter (saith S.Cyprian) whom our Lord chose the first & vpon whom he built the Church, when Paul disputed with him of circumcision, chalenged insolently or arrogantly tooke any thing to himselfe, saying that he had the Primacie, and therefore the latter Disciples ought rather to obey him. ep.71.ad Quintum.nu.2. And S.August. ep.19.c.2.in fine. That (saith he) which was done of Paul profitably by the libertie of charitie, the same Peter tooke in good part by holy and benigne godlines of humilitie, and so he gaue vnto posteritie a more rare and holy example, if at any time perhaps they did amisse, to be content to be corrected cted of their iuniors, then Paul, for to be bold and confident: yea the inferiors to resist their betters for defending the truth of the Gospel, brotherly charitie alwaies preserued. By which notable speaches of the doctors we may also see, how friuolously the Heretikes argue hereupon, that S. Peter could not be Superior, to S. Paul, being so reprehended of him: whereas the Fathers make it an example to the Superiors, to beare with humilitie the correption or controlement euen of their inferiors. Namely by this example S. Augustine li. 2. de bapt. c. 1.) excellently declareth, that B Martyr S. Cyprian, who walked away touching the rebaptizing of them that were christened of Heretikes, could not, nor would not haue been offended to be admonished & reformed in that point by his fellowes or inferiors, much lesse by a whole Councel. We haue learned, saith he, that Peter the Apostle, in whom the Primacie of the Apostles by excellent grace is so preeminēt, when he did otherwise concerning circumcision then the truth required, was correpted of Paul the later Apostle. I thinke (without any reproch vnto him) Cyprian the Bishop may be compared to Peter the Apostle. howbeit I ought rather to feare lest I be iniurious to Peter. for who knoweth not that the principalitie of Apostleship is to be preferred before any dignity of Bishop whatsoeuer? but if the grace of the Chaires or Sees differ, yet the glorie of the Martyrs is one. And who is so dull that cannot see, that the inferior, though not by office and iurisdiction, yet by the law of brotherly loue and fraternall correption, may reprehend his superior? Did euer any man wonder that a good Priest or any vertuous person should tell the Pope, or any other great Prelate or greatest Prince in earth, their faults? Popes may be reprehended, and are iustly admonished of their faults, and ought to take it in good part, and so they do & euer haue done, when it commeth of zeale and loue, as of S. Paul, Irenæus, Cyprian, Hierom, Augustine, Bernard: but of Simon Magus, Nouatus, Iulian, Wicleffe, Luther, Caluin, Beza, that do it of malice, and raile no lesse at their vertues then their vices, of such (I say) Gods Prelats must not be taught nor corrected, though they must patiently take it, as our Sauiour did the like reproches of the malicious Iewes, and as Dauid did the malediction of Semei. 2. Reg. 16.

The heretikes maliciously digate from S. Peter.

Paules reprehension of Peter cheth vs the zeale of the and humilitie the other.

It proueth nothing against Peters superiorite, that he was reprehended.

The superior may be reprehended or admonished of the inferior.

Heretikes reprehension of Catholike Bishops is rather railing.

FVLKE. 8 With wicked Porphyrie and Faustus the Manichee we haue nothing to doe, neither doe we gladly charge Peter (as you do falsly slander vs) any further then the Scripture chargeth him to the glory of God. But to the matter in controuersie, (you say) we argue against the superioritie of S. Peter, because he was reprehended by S. Paul: which is false, for vpon the onely reprehending of him we doe not so argue. But the fathers (you say) make it an example to the superiors, to beare with humilitie the correption and controlement of their inferiors. As Cyprian Ep. 71. Verely the example may extend euen to superiors, to beare a iust reprehension of their inferiors. But Cyprian doth not so gather: for he saith that Peter did not challenge or take vpon him any thing as superior to Paul, which he could not haue done, but in time and senioritie onely. And further he saith, that Peter hereby giueth vs a document of concord and patience, that we should not stubbornly loue our owne things, but such things as are suggested vnto vs, sometimes by our brethren and companions profitably and wholsomly (if they be true and lawfull,) we should compt them our owne. That you translate in S. Augustine. The inferiors to resist their betters, his wordes are, Minores maioribus, The yonger to resist the elder, As he saith before, A posterioribus corrigi quam Paulo, To be corrected of their inniors, then Paul: So that his words argue no superioritie of Peter, but in time and senioritie. No more do they in the other place, where Paul is called the latter Apostle, that is, Iunior in time, yet might be (as he was) equall in auctoritie, as Cyprian saith, All the Apostles were with Peter, de simplicitate Prælatorum. That superiors may in some sort be reprehended of their inferiors, it is no question. But where you say, The Pope may be reproued, and ought to take it in good part as it proceedeth of zeale, and loue, and patiently, whence soeuer it come: I will set downe what is found in your Canon law, that men may see how well you agree, and consider whether the Pope will be ordered by that, rather then by your sentence. Part. 1. dist. 4. Cap. Si. Papa, Thus we read: If the Pope be found negligent of his owne and his brethrens saluation, vnprofitable and remisse in his works, and also holding his peace of goodnes, which doth more hurt him and all men: neuertheless he leadeth with him innumerable people by heapes to the chiefe slaue of hell, with whom he shall be beaten with many stripes for euer: No mortall man doth here presume to reproue his faults, because he himselfe being to iudge all men, is to be iudged of no man, except he be found erring from the faith. And in the Extrauagant, De concession. Prebend. Titul. 4. cap. 2. ad apostolatus, in the glosse, Where is shewed, that the Pope may doe that which to all other is forbidden, it is written. Nec est qui audeat, &c. Neither is there any that may be bold to say, My Lord, or, Syr why do you so? And in the Margent, No man may be bold to say to the Pope, Domine cur ita facis, Syr, why do you so?

Slander. Peters error.

Superioritie of Peter.

RHEM. 9 11 Reprehensible.) The Heretiks hereof againe inferre, that Peter then did erre in faith, and therefore the Popes may faile therein also. To which we answere, that howsoeuer other Popes may erre in their priuate teachings or writings, whereof we haue treated before in the Annotation vpon these words, That thy faith faile not: it is certaine that S. Peter did not here faile in faith, nor erre in doctrine or knowledge. for it was conuersationis non prædicationis vitium, as Tertullian saith. de præscript. nu. 7. It was a default in conuersation, life, or regiment, which may be committed of any man, be he neuer so holy, and not in doctrine. S. Augustine and whosoeuer make most of it, thinke no otherwise of it. But S. Hierom and * many other holy fathers deeme it to haue beene no fault at all, nor any other thing then S. Paul himselfe did vpon the like occasion: and that this whole combate was a set thing agreed vpon betweene them. It is a schole point much debated betwixt S Hierom and S. Augustine ep 9. 11. 19. apud August.

S. Peters errour was not in faith, but in conuersation or behauior. Luc. 22. 32. * See S. Chrysost. Theophyl. &c.

FVLKE. 9 S. Paul testifieth, it was an error against the truth of the Gospell, therefore not a default in life and conuersation only. It was an error of ignorance, not in fact onely, for he did not counterfect for any worldly respect, but because he was vntruly perswaded that it was not only lawfull, but also expedient for him so to do. Whereby Barnabas also was brought to be partaker of their simulation, till they both were corrected and better instructed by S. Paul. Erasmus in his Epistle to the Cardinall of Loraine, set before his translation of Chrysostome vpon this Epistle saith: That S. Augustine chargeth S. Peter with superstitious simulation, yea with a peruerse desire of laying the burden of the Law, vpon the shoulders of the Gentiles. And that the articles of your good Masters (the diuines of Paris,) do attribute vnto Peter error in faith. Therefore not Protestants onely, but Papists also do inferre of this place, that Peter erred in faith: It were good for you therefore to decide the question among your selues, before you take the matter so hotly against vs.

CHAP. III.

HEM. 1 By their owne conuersion at the first, 6 and by the example of Abraham, and promise made to him, he sheweth that the way to obtaine the benediction, is to seeke vnto God by faith in Christ. 10 Seeing also that the Law curseth euery one that hath not euermore kept the Lawe. 15 And, that the Law was not giuen to alter Gods testament, 19 but to conuince the Iewes of sinne, 23 and so to be their pædagogue or leader vnto Christ, 25 and then to cease.

RHEM. 1 S. Paul saith not, That the Lawe doeth cease after we be brought to Christ, but that we are not now vnder the Lawe, as vnder a Scholemaster.

O Sensles Galatians, who hath ‡ bewitched you, not to obey the truth, before whose eies IESVS Christ was proscribed, being crucified among you?

2 This only I would learne of you, By the workes of the Law, did you receiue the Spirit, or by the hearing of the faith?

3 Are you so foolish, that whereas you began with the spirit, now you will be consummate with the flesh?

4 Haue you suffered so great things without cause? if yet without cause.

5 He therefore that giueth you the Spirit and worketh miracles among you: by the works of the Law, or by the hearing of the faith doeth he it?

Gen.15,6. Ro.4,3. 6 As, Abraham beleeued God, and it was reputed to him vnto iustice.

7 Know ye therefore that they that are ‡ of faith, the same are the children of Abraham.

8 And the Scripture foreseeing that God iustifieth the Gentiles by faith, shewed vnto Abraham before, That in thee shall all nations be blessed.

Gen.12,3. 9 Therefore they that are of faith, shall be blessed with the faithfull Abraham.

10 For whosoeuer are of the workes of the Lawe, are vnder curse. For it is written: Deu.27,26. ‖ Cursed be euery one that abideth not in all things that be written in the booke of the Law to do them.

11 But that in the Law no man is iustified with God, it is manifest, because The iust Abac.2. Ro.1. ‖ liueth by faith.

Leu.18. 12 But the Law is not by faith: but, He that doth those things shall liue in them.

13 Christ hath redeemed vs from the curse of the Lawe, being made a curse for vs (because it is written, Cursed is euery one that Deu.21. hangeth one a tree.)

14 That on the Gentiles the blessing of Abraham might be made in Christ IESVS: that we may receiue the promise of the Spirite by faith.

The Epistle vpon the 13. Sunday after Pentecost. 15 Brethren (I speake according to man) yet a mans testament being confirmed no man despiseth, or further disposeth.

Gen.22,18. 16 To Abraham were the promises said, and to his seed. He saith not, And to seedes, as in many: but as in one, And to thy seed, which is Christ.

17 And this I say, the testament being confirmed of God, the Law which was made after foure hundred and thirtie yeeres, maketh not void to frustrate the promise.

18 For if the inheritance be of the Law, now not of promise. But God gaue it to Abraham by promise.

19 Why was the Law then? It was put for transgressions, vntill the seede came to whom he had promised: ordeined by Angels

O Foolish Galathians, who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth: to whom Iesus Christ was before described before the eies, and among you crucified?

2 This onely would I learne of you, whether ye receiued the spirit by the deeds of the lawe, or by the hearing of the faith?

3 Are ye such fooles, that after ye haue begunne in the spirite, ye woulde now ende in the flesh?

4 Haue ye suffered so great things in vaine? If it be yet in vaine.

5 He therefore that ministreth to you the spirit, and worketh myracles among you, doth he it through the deeds of the Lawe, or by hearing of the faith?

Gen.15,6. rom.4,3. iames 2,23. † Or, imputed. 6 Euen as Abraham beleeued God, and it was †ascribed to him for righteousnes.*

7 Know ye therefore, that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham.

8 For the Scripture seeing aforehande that God would iustifie the Heathen through faith, shewed beforehand glad tidings vnto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed.* Gen.22,3. ecclꝛ.44.20.

9 So then, they which be of faith, are blessed with the faithfull Abraham.

*10 For as many as are of the deedes of the Law, are vnder the curse: for it is written, Cursed is euery one that continueth not in all things which are written in the booke of the Law, to doe them. Deut.27.26.

*11 But that no man is iustified by the Law in the sight of God, it is euident: for the iust shal liue by faith. Abac.2,4. rom.1.17.

*12 And the law is not of faith: but the man that doth them, shall liue in them. Leuit.18,5.

*13 Christ hath redeemed vs from the curse of the lawe, being made a curse for vs: For it is written, * Cursed is euery one that hangeth on tree:* Deut.21.23.

14 That the blessing of Abraham might come one the Gentiles through Iesus Christ, that wee might receiue the promise of the spirite thorough faith.

*15 Brethren, I speak after the maner of men, though it be but a mans testament, yet if it be alowed, no man reiecteth it, or addeth thereto. Heb.9.17.

*16 To Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, To the seeds, as of many: but, To thy seed, as of one, which is Christ. Gen.17.7.

17 This I say, that the lawe which began afterward beyond foure hundred and thirtie yeres, doeth not disanul the testament that was confirmed afore of God vnto Christward, to make the promise of none effect.

18 For if the inheritance be of the law, then not nowe of promise. But God gaue the inheritance vnto Abraham by promise.

19 Wherefore then serueth the law? It †was added because of trāsgressions, til the seed should come to whom the promise was made: and it was † The Law gels in the hand of a mediatour.

20 And a mediatour is not of one: but God is one.

21 Was the Law then against the promises of God? God forbid. For if there had beene a Law giuen that could iustifie, vndoubtedly iustice should be of the Law.

Ro.3.9.11,32. 22 But the Scripture * hath concluded al things vnder sinne: that the promise by the faith of IESVS Christ might be giuen to them that beleeue.

23 But before the faith came, vnder the Law we were kept shut vp, vnto that faith which was to be reuealed.

24 Therefore the Law was our Pedagogue in Christ: that we may be iustified by faith.

25 But when the faith came, now we are not vnder a pædagogue.

26 For you are al the children of God by faith in Christ IESVS.

27 For as many of you as are baptized in Christ, ‖ haue put on Christ.

28 There is not Iewe nor Greeke, there is not bond nor free, there is not male nor female. For all you are one in Christ IESVS.

29 And if you be Christes, then are you the seede of Abraham, heires according to promise.

ordeined by Angels in the hand of a mediatour.

20 A mediatour is not a mediatour of one, but God is one.

21 Is the Law then against the promise of God? God forbid. For if there had beene a Law giuen which could haue giuen life, then no doubt righteousnes should haue beene by the Law.

22 * But the Scripture hath concluded all vnder sinne, that the promise by the faith of Iesus Christ should be giuen vnto them that beleeue. Rom.3.4.

23 But before faith came, we were kept vnder the law, and were shut vp vnto the faith which should afterward be reuealed.

24 * Wherefore the Lawe was our scholemaster vnto Christ, that we should be iustified by faith. Rom.10.4.

25 But after that faith is come, we are no longer vnder a scholemaster.

26 For yee are all the children of God by faith in Christ Iesus.

27 * For † all yee that are baptized, haue put on Christ. Rom.6.3.

† Some reade, all ye that are baptized into Christ, haue put on Christ.

28 There is no Iewe, neither Greeke, there is neither bonde, nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Iesus.

29 If ye be Christes, then are ye Abrahams seede, and heires according to the promise.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. III.

REM. 2 1 Bewitched you.) For any people or person to forsake the faith of their first Apostles and Conuersion at the voice of a few nouellaries, seemeth to wise men a very bewitching and senseles brutishnes. Such is the case of our poore Countrie, Germanie, and others.

PTIL. 2 If any people or person haue beene rightly instructed by the Apostles of Christ, it is senseleese brutishneese to forsake their faith which they first receiued. But if any people or person haue beene at the first peruerted, rather then conuerted by false Apostles and hetetikes vnto hereſie, as many haue beene, both people and persons, it is wisedome to forsake their faith, which is either wholy false, or corrupt in any part, and to learne the truth of the Apostles of Christ, as they haue set downe in their writings. So haue England and Germanie done. First faith and instruction.

HEM. 3 7 Of faith, the same.) This faith whereby Abraham was iustified, and his children the Gentiles beleeuing in Christ, implieth al Christian vertues, of which the first is faith, the ground and foundation of al the rest, and therefore here and elsewhere often named of the Apostle.

YKE. 3 The true iustifying faith is the roote of all vertues, and they doe doubtleese follow it, but they goe neither before it, nor with it to iustification, therefore be not included in faith, but follow faith. Iustifying faith.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. III.

HEM. 4 10 Cursed be.) By this place the Heretikes would proue that no man is iust truely before God, all being guiltie of damnation and Gods curse, because they keepe not euery iote of the Law, where in deede the Apostle meaneth not such as offend venially (as it is plaine by the place of Deuteronomie whence he reciteth this text) but onely such as commit great and damnable crimes, and so by greeuous and mortall transgressions wholy breake Gods preceps, and thereby incurre the curse of the Law, from which the said Law could not deliuer them of it selfe, nor by any other meanes, but by the faith, and grace of CHRIST IESVS. Notwithstanding veniall sinnes, men are truely iust, and may keepe the commandements.

YKE. 4 The Apostle knew not your distinction of veniall sinnes, and the text of the Law doth vtterly ouerthrow it which is generall of all transgressions of the Law, great or small. Neither can any be gathered, by the place of Deuteronomie, as you most impudently affirme, hauing nothing but a bold lye, to oppose against so manifest light of truth. For after Moses hath rehearsed the particular curses, against a great number of heynous crymes, he concludeth with the generall curse against all transgressions of the Law, whatsoeuer. And how should the Apostle prooue his purpose, that whosoeuer are of the workes of the Law, are vnder the curse, by this text of Deuteronomie, if onely such as commit great and heynous crimes, were subiect to this curse. For there are many Turkes, that commit not those heynous crymes, that are expressed in the particular curses. Therefore whosoeuer keepeth not euery iote of the Law, is guiltie of Gods curse, by this sentence. And this is the iudgement of all the ancient fathers vpon this text. Sinnes veniall and mortall. All sinnes accursed.

Chrysostome saith.) That no man is iustified by the Law, it is cleere. For all haue sinned, and are subiect to the curse, here is no exception of such as sinne venially. Theodoret sayth. The Lawe commaundeth that all things be fulfilled, which are said in it, & those which by any meanes transgresse it, submitteth vnto curses, S. Ambrose saith, This is written in Deuteronomie, because if a man should omit any thing of the Law, he should be counted accursed, and the commaundements were so great, that it is impossible they should be kept. S. Hierom saith. That no man can fulfill the Law, None keepeth the Law perfectly.

and doe all things that are commanded, the Apostle testifieth else where. For that which was impossible of the law, in that it was made weake by the flesh, God sending his Sonne in the similitude of sinfull flesh, condemned sinne of sinne, in the flesh, which if it be true, it may be obiected vnto vs: Then Moses and Esaie, and the rest of the Prophetes, which were vnder the workes of the Law, are vnder the curse, which thing he will not be afraide to confesse, which hath redde the Apostle, saying: That Christ hath redeemed vs from the curse of the Law being made a curse for vs, and to answere, that euerie one of the Saincts for his time, was made a curse to the people. Primasius saith. Because the custome of sinning, hath so preuailed, that no man doth keepe the law, and therefore not vndeseruedly are subiect to the curse, which afterward he expoundeth that euery man doth incurre whosoeuer shall not keepe all the commaundements of the law vnto the end. Oecumenius saith. Because no man fulfilleth the lawe, they are all cursed, as they which haue departed from the lawe, and taken the curse vnto themselues. The same in effect, hath Theophylact. Of which sayings, you see it is manifestly inferred, as also of the plaine text, that no man by workes is truly iust, before God, all being guiltie of damnation and Gods curse, and iustified onely by Christ through faith.

RHEM. 5 11 Liueth by faith.) It is neither the Heretikes speciall presumption and confidence, nor the faith of Diuels, nor faith without workes which is dead in him selfe as S. Iames saith, that can giue life to the iust, for that which is dead, can not be the cause of life, but it is the Catholike faith, as S. Augustine writeth, which worketh by charitie (according to the Apostles owne explication of this whole passage) by which the iust liueth. Li. 3. c. 5. cont. duas ep. Pelag. See the Annotations vpon the same words. Rom. 1. Not only faith

FVLKE. 5 It is a liuely faith, and a faith working by charitie, whereby the iust liueth, yet he liueth not by workes but by faith. See Rom. 1. sect. 8. Faith and workes.

RHEM. 6 27 Haue put on Christ.) Here the aduersaries might haue seene, if they were not blinded by contentious striuing against Gods Church, that when Iustification is attributed to faith without mention of good works or other Christian vertues and Sacraments, it is not meant to exclude any of the same from the working of iustice or saluation, for here we learne that by the Sacrament of Baptisme also we put on Christ, which is to put on faith, hope, charitie, and all Christian iustice. By the same we proue also that the Sacraments of the new law giue grace, for that the receiuers thereof put on Christ. And the Aduersaries euasion, that it is faith which worketh in the Sacrament, and not the Sacrament it selfe, is plainelie false: Baptisme giuing grace and faith it selfe to the infant that had none before. Baptisme giueth grace and iustification not faith only.

FVLKE. 6 Iustification is manifestly ascribed to faith without workes, whereby all workes are excluded, and not onely not mentioned, in the act of iustification, yet not excluded from folowing faith, to declare that we are iustified. And in this place the Apostle reasoneth, from the signe to the thing signified, to proue that by faith in Christ, we are the Children of God, because Baptisme representing our putting on of Christ as a garment, to couer our vnworthines, is a seale of iustification by faith, to all that are baptized, as circumcision was to all that were circumcised, and namely to Abraham, who was iustified before he was circumcised, and that to declare, that circumcision was no cause, but a testimony of his iustification. As also Cornelius, and they that were with him, had their hearts puryfied by faith, and receiued the holy Ghost, before they were baptized. Whereby God testified, that Baptisme giueth not grace of the worke wrought, but is a seale of grace & iustice of faith, and regeneration by Gods spirit. And where you say, that baptisme giueth faith to the infant, that had none before, you may aswell say, that it giueth faith to many that haue none after. But how are you able to proue, that baptisme giueth faith to an infant? when faith commeth by hearing (Rom. 8.) which infants cannot doe. And if you meane of some other kinde of faith, then that which commeth by hearing, how say you that baptisme giueth faith to the infant that had none before? when before you baptize him, you examine him whether he beleeue all the articles of faith, and the infant by his Godfathers answereth. Credo, I doe beleeue. Whether contentious arguing against Gods Church, hath made you forgetfull of your doctrine, and forme of minustring the Sacrament of Baptisme, let all indifferent men iudge. Iustification by faith.

CHAP. IIII.

That the Law was fit for the time of nonage: but being now come to full age, to desire such seruitude is absurd specially for Gentils. 12 And that he writeth this not of any displeasure, but to tell them the truth, remembring how passingly they honoured him when he was present, and exhorting them therefore not to harken to the false Apostles in his absence. 21 By the allegory also of Abrahams two sonnes, shewing, that the children of the Iewes Synagogue shall not inherite, but we who are the children of the free woman: that is, of the Cath. Church of Christ.

THE Epistle vpon twelfth eue.

AND I say, as long as the heire is a litle one, he differeth nothing from a seruant, although he be lord of al.

2 But is vnder tutors and gouernours vntill the time limited of the fathers.

3 So we also, when we were little ones were ‖ seruing vnder the elementes ‡ of the world.

‡ That is, the rudiments of religion, wherin the carnall Iewes were trained vp: or the corporal creatures, wherein their manifold sacrifices, sacraments, and rites did consist.

4 But when the fulnesse of time came, God sent his sonne made of a woman, made vnder the Law.

5 That he might redeeme them that were vnder the Law, that we might receiue the adoption of sonnes.

6 And because you are sonnes, * God hath sent the Spirit of his sonne into your harts crying: Abba, Father. Ro. 8, 15.

7 Therefore now he is not a seruant, but a sonne. And if a sonne, an heire also by God.

8 But

AND I say, That the heire as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a seruant, though he be Lord of all.

2 But is vnder tutors and gouernours: vntill the time appointed of the father.

3 Euen so we, when we were children, were in bondage vnder the rudiments of the world.

5 To redeeme them that were vnder the lawe, * that we might receiue the adoption of children. Ro. 8. 15.

6 Because ye are sonnes, God hath sent forth the spirit of his sonne into your hearts, crying Abba father.

7 Wherefore thou art no more a seruant, but a sonne: if thou be a sonne, thou art also an heire of God, through Christ.

8 Notwith-

8 But then in deede not knowing God, you serued them that by nature are not Gods.

9 But now when you haue knowen God or rather are knowen of God: how turne you againe to the ‖ weake and poore elements, which you will serue againe?

10 ‖ You obserue daies, and monethes, and times, and yeeres.

11 I feare you, lest perhaps I haue laboured in vaine among you.

12 Be ye as I, because I also am as you: brethren, I beseech you, you haue hurt me nothing.

13 And you know that by infirmitie of the flesh I euangelized to you heretofore.

14 And your tentation in my flesh you despised not, neither reiected, but ‡ as an Angell of God you receiued me, as Christ IESVS.

15 Where is then your blessednes? for I giue you testimony that if it could be done, you would haue plucked out your eies and haue giuen them to me.

16 Am I then become your enemie, telling you the truth?

17 They emulate you not well: but they would exclude you, that you might emulate them.

18 But do you emulate the good in good alwaies: and not onely when I am present with you.

19 My litle children, whom I trauaile with al again, vntil Christ be formed in you.

20 And I would be with you now and chaunge my voice: because I am confounded in you.

21 Tel me you that wil be vnder the law, haue you not read the Law?

22 For it written that * Abraham had two sonnes: one of the bond-woman, and one of the free-woman.

23 But he that of the bond-woman, was borne according to the flesh: and he that of the free-woman, by the promisse.

24 Which things are said ‖ by an allegorie. For these are the two testamentes. The one from mount Sina, gendring vnto bondage: which is Agar, 25 (For Sina is a mountaine in Arabia, which ‘ hath affinitie to that which now is Hierusalem) and serueth with her Children.

26 But that Hierusalem which is aboue, is free: which is our mother.

27 For it is written: Reioyce thou barren, that beareſt not: breake forth and cry, that trauaileſt not: because many are the children of the desolate, more then of her that hath a husband.

28 But * we brethren, according to Isaac, are the children of promisse.

29 But

8 Notwithstanding, when ye know not God, ye did seruice vnto them which by nature are no Gods.

9 But now after that ye haue knowen God: yea rather are knowen of God, how turne yee againe vnto the weake and beggerly ‖ rudiments, whereunto againe ye desire a fresh to be in bondage.

‖ Or, elements.

10 Ye obserue daies and monethes, and times, and yeeres.

11 I am in feare of you, least I haue bestowed on you labour in vaine.

12 Brethren, I beseech you, be as I am, for I am as ye are: Ye haue not iniured me at all.

13 Ye know how through infirmitie of the flesh, I preached the Gospell vnto you at the first:

14 And my temptation which was in my flesh yee despised not, neither abhorred: but receiued me as an Angell of God, euen as Christ Iesus.

15 What is then your felicitie? for I beare recorde, that if it had beene possible, yee would haue plucked out your owne eyes, and haue giuen them to me.

16 Am I therefore become your enemie, because I tell you the trueth?

17 They are iealous ouer you amisse: Yea, they intende to exclude you, that yee should be feruent to themward.

18 It is good alwaies to be zelous in a good thing, and not onely when I am present with you.

19 My litle children of whom I trauaile in birth againe, vntill Christ be fashioned in you.

20 But I desire to be present with you now, and to change my voice: for I stand in doubt of you.

21 Tell me, ye that desire to be vnder the law, doe ye not heare the law?

22 *For it is written that Abraham had two sonnes: * the one by a bondmaid, * the other by a free woman.*

Gen.16.15. Gen.21.1.

23 But he which was of the bonde woman, was borne after the flesh: but he which was of the free woman was borne by promise.

24 Which things are spoken by an allegorie: for these are two testamentes: the one from the mount Sina, which gendreth vnto bondage, which is Agar.

25 For ‖ Agar is the mount Sina in Arabia, and † bordereth vpon the citie which is now called Hierusalem, and is in bondage with her children.

‖ Or, read, for Sina is a mount in Arabia.
† Or answereth to Hierusalem that is now.

26 *But * Hierusalem which is aboue, is free, which is the mother of vs all.*

Esay 45.2.

27 *For it is written, * Reioyce thou barren that beareſt no children, breake forth and crie, thou that trauaileſt not: for the desolate hath many moe children then she which hath an husbande.*

Esay 54.1.

28 *But brethren, we are * after Isaac the children of the promise.*

‡ This mutuall persecution, is a figure also of the Church iustly persecuting Heretikes, & contrariwise of Heretikes (which be the children of the bondwoman) vniustly persecuting the Catholike Church. Aug. ep. 48. Es.54,1. Ro.9,8. Gen.21,10.

29 But ‡ as then he that was borne according to the flesh, persecuted him that was after the spirit: so now also.

30 But what saith the Scripture? Cast out the bond-woman and her sonne, for the sonne of the bond-woman shall not be heire with the sonne of the free-woman.

31 Therefore brethren we are not the children of the bond-woman, but of the free: by the freedome wherewith Christ hath made vs free.

29 But as then he that was borne after the flesh, persecuted him that was borne after the spirit: euen so is it now.

30 *Neuertheless, what saith the Scripture? * Put away the bond-woman and her sonne: for the sonne of the bond-woman shall in no wise be heire with the sonne of the free woman.* Gen.21.10.

31 So then brethren, we are not children of the bondwoman, but of the free.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 1

3 Seruing. There can be no externall worship of God nor association of men in religion, either true or false, without the vse of corporall things or elements. The Heathen so vsed the creatures of elements that they serued them as their gods. The Iewes of whom the Apostle here speaketh, serued not the creatures them selues which they occupied in their ceremonies, but they serued the onely true God vnder the elements: that is to say, being seruilely clogged, yoked, kept occupied and in awe, with innumerable fleshly, grosse, and combersome offices about creatures. The Christians neither serue elements, as the one, nor be kept in seruile thraldome thereby, as the other: but occupie onely a few exceeding easie, sweete, seemely and significant, for an agreeable exercise both of body and minde. Whereof S. Augustine saith thus, li. 3. c. 9. de doct. Christ. Some fewe for many, most easie to be done, most honorable for signification, and most cleane and pure to be obserued and kept, hath our Lord him selfe and the Apostolicall discipline deliuered. And li. de ver. relig. c. 17. Of the wisdome of God it selfe mans nature being taken, whereby we were called into libertie, a few Sacraments most holesome were appointed and instituted, which might containe the societie of Christian people, that is, of the free multitude vnder one God. And againe, cont. Faust. li. 19. c. 13. The Sacraments are changed, they are made easier, fewer, holsommer, happier. the same he hath in the 118. epistle c. 1. and many other places besides. By which you may see, it is not all one to vse elements, visible Sacraments or ceremonies, and to serue them as the Pagans doe, or to serue vnder them as the Iewes did, wherewith the Heretikes calumniously charge the Christians. And as touching the small number, facilitie, efficacie and signification, wherein the said holy father putteth the special difference: who seeth not that for so many busie sacrifices, we haue but one: for Sacraments well neere infinite, but seuen: all so easie, so full of grace, so significant, as can be possible, as of euery one in their seuerall places is proued.

Externall worship of God by vse of creatures necessarie: and how the Heathen Iewes, and Christians differ in the same. The vse of externall elements in the Sacraments.

Our Sacraments few and easie in respect of the Iewes.

FVLKE, 1

The Papists in like maner, as the heathen and Iewes, serue vnder the elements of the world, and serue those that by nature are no Gods: As the Iewes, they not onely obserue daies and times, but also are clogged with an infinite number of ceremoniall obseruations, as of hallowed fier, water, bread, ashes, oyle, waxe, flowers, branches, garments, cley, spittle, salte, incense, balme, chalices, paxes, pixes, alters, corporals, superalters, alterclothes, ringes, swordes, crownes, miters, belles, churches and churchyardes, with many more then I can rehearse, vnder which they are more slauishly (then the Iewes vnder the law,) yoked and occupied, with innumerable fleshly, grosse, and combersome offices about them. Secondly, as the Gentils, they serue them that by nature are no Gods, not onely Angels and Saincts, and the counterfect reliques of them, but Idols of them. Where you can not escape, by your vaine and vnlearned distinction, of Latria and Doulia, for the Apostle vseth the word ἐδουλεύσατε, you haue serued, them that are no Gods by nature, shewing that all religious seruice or Doulia of such as by nature are no Gods, is heathenish Idolatrie or seruice abhominable. Therefore the sayings of S. Augustine pertaine nothing vnto you. And where you say, for so many sacrifices of the Iewes, you haue but one, meaning your sacrifice of the masse, to omitte that you haue no auctoritie of Gods word for that one, what compt you those oblations of candles, and other things to your images of Christ, and Saincts? haue you any grosse conceipt, that they haue neede or vse of such things? or are they sacrifices and oblations, to honor God and the Saincts with them, as the heathens vsed many like? I omitte, that your Canonistes, doe holde, that tythes are still offered to God, as oblations, euen as they were in the Iewish law. Rebuff. de decimis. Therefore you haue more sacrifices then one.

Ceremonies superfluous and superstitious.

RHEM. 2

Here, let the good Readers take heede of a double deceite vsed by the Aduersaries about S. Augustines places alleadged, first, in that they say he made but two Sacraments, which is vntrue, for, although treating of the difference betweene the Iewish Sacraments & ours, he namely giueth example in Baptisme & the Eucharist (as sometimes also for example he nameth but one) yet he hath no word nor signe at all that there should be no more, but contrariwise in the foresaid epistle 118. he insinuateth, that besides those two, there be other of the same sort in the Scriptures. Yea, with water and bread, which be the elements of the two foresaid Sacraments, he expresly nameth oile also (li. 2. cont. lit. Petil. c. 104.) the element or matter of the Sacrament of confirmation: which in the same place he maketh to be a Sacrament as Baptisme is. So doth he affirme of the Sacrament of Orders li. 1. de bapt. c. 1. and also of Matrimony li. de bono coniug. c. 24. of Penance likewise, he speaketh as of Baptisme which he calleth Reconciliation, li. 1. de adult. coniug. c. 28. Lastly, by the booke de visitatione infirmorum in S. Augustine, li. 2. c. 4. by Prosper de prædictionibus p. 2 c. 29. S. Innocentius ad Eugubinum to 1. Conc. ep. ad Eugub. c. 8. S. Syril li. 2. in Leuiticum, and S. Chrysostom li. 3. de Sacerdotio, * Extreme vnction is proued to be a Sacrament. It is false then that the Heretikes affirme of S Augustine, by whose doctrine it is plaine, that though the elements or Sacraments of the new law be but few and very few in comparison of those in the old law, yet there be no fewer then seuen specified by him. Which number of seuen the holy Councels of Florence and Trent doe expresly define to haue beene instituted by Christ, against these late Heretikes. See more of these Sacraments in their places. Act. 8. 1. Tim. 4. Ia. 20 Ia. 5. Ephes. 5.

S. Augustine falsely alleaged of the Heretikes for two Sacraments only. Ep. 118. c. 1. & in Ps. 103. cont. The other Sacraments proued out of S. Augustine. * Aug. ser. 31 de temp. & de rectitud. Cathol. conuersat.

We vse no deceipte about S. Augustines places, but conclude plainely vpon his own words, Ep. 118. where he saith, that our Lord Iesus hath ioyned together the societie of the new people, with Sacraments, in number the fewest, in obseruation the easiest, in signification the most excellent, such as is Baptisme, consecrated in the name of the Trinity, and the communication of his body and blood, and if any other be conteined in the canonicall Scripture. Of these words we gather that S. Augustine knew but two Sacraments of this kinde. First because he saith they are fewest in number, for two is the lest number. Secondly because he saith, he hath ioyned or bound together, the societie of the new people, by these, for these are sufficient for that purpose, and neceffary for all men that liue to yeeres of discretion, to receiue if they can. So are not matrimony and ordination, and therefore not to be numbred with these. Repentance, although it be neceffary for all, yet hath it no outward element, which is necessary to make a Sacrament. Confirmation with oile hath no testimony in the Scriptures, nor extreme oile to be a perpetuall Sacrament or seale ſeale of ſpirituall grace, which was vſed onely for a temporall Sacrament of bodily healing Ia. 5. Therefore by S. Auguſtines ſaying, there are but two Sacraments, in that ſenſe, that Baptiſme and the Lords Supper are called Sacraments. But yon reply, that he inſinuateth, that there be other beſide theſe two, of the ſame ſort in the Scriptures. I anſwere he doth not inſinuate any ſuch thing, but teſtifieth, that theſe two onely be found in the Scriptures. Yet not willing to ſtriue, if any man can finde Quid aliud, any other Sacraments in the Scriptures, whereas if he had knowen fiue beſide theſe two Sacraments, in ſuch ſort as they are, he would haue ſaid, and the reſt, or the other fiue, which are conteined in the Scriptures, but now he ſaith (if any one other) not acknowledging him ſelfe any other, but if any other may be found in the Scriptures, he thinketh it is not paſt one. But contra Pet. lib. 2. c. 104. he nameth oyle alſo, I graunt, but there he ſpeaketh of the oyle and anoynting that was vſed in Baptiſme, which of the Donatiſts was called the Sacrament of Chriſme, by Auguſtine in the kinde of viſible ſignes holy, as Baptiſme it ſelfe: and not of another Sacrament of confirmation, which elſe where, he affirmeth to be nothing but prayer with impoſition of hands. De bap. contr. Don. li. 3. cap. 16. In Pſal. 103. he ſaith. The gift of the Sacraments in Baptiſme, in the euchariſt, in the reſt of the holy Sacraments what is the gift. In which words he acknowledgeth more holy Sacraments, but not in ſuch ſort, as baptiſme and the eucharift are. In the ſame Pſalme, where he ſaith, the Sacraments are hid from the Paganes, he nameth onely the Sacrament of Baptiſme and the Sacrament of the eucharift.

Matrimony and ordination were not ſo hidden from them. Therefore though he name Matrimony, orders, chriſme, or any other thing Sacraments, as he doth many other things beſide, it followeth not, that they are ſacraments as baptiſme & the eucharift. But as for penance, he calleth it not a ſacrament but only he ſaith. The ſame cauſe is of reconciliation, which is of Baptiſme, if perhaps daunger of ending his life doe preuent the penitent. For our mother the Church ought not to be willing, that euen they ſhould depart out of this life, without the pledge of their peace: meaning the Sacrament of the communion, which is the pledge of their reconciliation. Now where you quote the booke De viſitatione infirmorum, for extreme vnction, Eraſmus telleth you, It is the ſpeach of a brabler, neither learned nor eloquent, and moſt impudently intituled to Auguſtine. Of the ſame mould De Serm. 215. De tempore, and the treatiſe De rectitud. Cath. Conuerſ. Yet doth not the auctor call extreme vnction a Sacrament, but promiſeth health of body, as well as of ſoule by it. Proſper ſpeaketh not of extreme vnction, but alluding to the widow, which gaue part of her meale and oyle to Helias ſaith. So the ſoule is ſatisfied with her Lord departing in bodie, louing him that chaſtiſeth, keepeth the faith of mariage bed with chaſt loue, being defended with the ſacrament of meale, and the vnction of oyle, ſurely waiting for the acceptable raigne, when her Lord ſhall ſay vnto her: O good ſeruant, &c. which words if you could haue conſtrued aright, I marueile how you ſhould haue applied to extreme vnction. But belike you would haue tranſlated, Corpore abſcedente Domino, the body departing to the Lord, whereas it is manifeſt to him that obſerueth the diſcourſe of Proſper, he meaneth to ſhew how the ſoule is a widow: namely by the Lordes departure in body, beſide, that the Latine tongue will abide no ſuch conſtruction, as you would make, and the reſt that followeth, doth not agree to him that is a dying and departing out of the world. Therefore either by the myſterie of meale, and the vnction of oyle, he meaneth the ſpiritual foode of the ſoule, or if he meane by the one, the Sacrament of the bread of life, by the other he meaneth the oyle vſed in baptiſme, yet calleth he it not a Sacrament, but diſtinguiſheth it from a Sacrament. Innocentius by his anſwere to the Biſhop of Eugubium, ſheweth, that this ceremony of vnction in ſickneſſe, was not vniuerſally receiued, nor thought neceſſary, neither was it well knowen of whom it ſhould be miniſtred. Therefore Innocentius of that place of S. Iames ſayeth, That it might be vnderſtood of the faithfull that are ſicke, which may be annoynted with the holy oyle of Chriſme, which being once made by the Biſhop, it is lawfull not onely for Prieſts, but alſo for all Chriſtians, to uſe it in annoyntiug, in their or their friends neceſſitie. But this ſeemeth to be ſuperfluouſly added, that you ſhould doubt, that to be lawfull to a Biſhop, which without doubt is lawfull to Prieſts. For it is therefore ſaid of Prieſtes, becauſe the Biſhops being hindered by other buſineſſe, cannot goe to all ſicke perſons. But if the Biſhop can, and thinke it meete to viſite any man, he may both bleſſe him, and touch him with Chriſme without any doubting, ſeeing it pertaineth to him to make the Chriſme. But vpon penitents it cannot be powred, becauſe it is a kinde of Sacrament. Firſt wee ſee, that by the Biſhop of Romes iudgement, not onely the Biſhop or Prieſt, but euery Chriſtian may miniſter this ceremony of vnction, contrarie to your new doctrine, whereby you make it proper onely to Prieſts. Secondly, he doth not affirme, that it is neceſſarie for all Chriſtians before they die in extremitie of ſickneſſe, but may be vſed of the faithfull that are ſicke, though not extremely: For in extremitie of ſickeneſſe, euen penitents are admitted to the Sacrament of the communion. Thirdly, where he ſaith, it is a kind of Sacrament, he meaneth by Sacrament, a holy ceremonie of the Church, except you will make an eight Sacrament of that leuen which cap. 5. he ſaith, being made by the Biſhop, was ſent on the Lordes day to the Prieſts of euery Church within the Citie of Rome which I thinke (ſaith he) ought not to be done in the out pariſhes, becauſe the Sacraments are not to be caried farre of, You ſee he calleth a conſecrated leuen, which they ſent about at that time for a ſigne of their fellowſhip, a Sacrament. Therefore Innocentius (though a Biſhop of Rome) is no patrone of your Sacrament of extreme vnction, as you meane and hold it to be a Sacrament. Cyrillus or Origen ſpeaketh not a worde of the Sacrament of extreme vnction, but ſaith, This text of Iames is fulfilled in the ſeuenth hard and laborious kind of remiſſion of ſinnes by repentance, when the ſinner waſheth his bed with teares, and teares are made bread vnto him, day and night, when he is not aſhamed to declare his ſinne, vnto the Lords Prieſt, and to ſeeke medicine, according to him that ſayeth, I ſaid I will pronounce againſt my ſelfe mine vniuſtice, and thou haſt remitted the impietie of my hart. In whom alſo that is fulfilled which the Apoſtle Iames ſayeth: If any man be ſicke or weake, &c. You ſee he meaneth onely of prayers made by the Prieſtes, to obtaine remiſſion of ſinnes for him that is a publike penitent. Chryſoſtome alſo gathereth out of it, the Prieſtes duetie, to pray for the people, and power to remitte ſinnes, but the Sacrament of extreme vnction, he doth not mention, nor yet the ceremony of annoynting with oyle. Rabanus Maurus, which liued Anno 855. knew but foure: Baptiſme, Chriſme, the Body, and the Blood of Chriſt: which in effect are but three. De inſtit. Cler. lib. 1. c. 31. Iſidorus orig. lib. 6. cap. De officijs. Sunt autem Sacramenta, Baptiſma, & Chriſma, Corpus, & Sanguis Chriſti. Per Baptiſ. & Chriſm. vnum Sacramentum videtur intelligi: De impoſit. man. ſeorſim tract. Paſchaſius de Corpore & Sang. Sunt autem Sacramenta Chriſti in Eccleſia, Baptiſmus & Chriſma, Corpus quoque Domini, & Sanguis. As for the yeſterday Councels of Florens and Trent, came too late to make Sacraments fifteene hundred yeeres after Chriſt. That Auguſtine extendeth the name of Sacrament, to more then ſeuen, I haue ſhewed in Math. 1. ſect. 2.

REM. 3 The other forgerie of the Aduerſaries concerning the elements or ceremonies, is, that S. Auguſtine (epiſt. 119. cap. 19.) ſhould affirme, that the Church and Chriſtian people in his daies (whereupon they inferre that it is ſo much more now) were ſo loden with obſeruation of vnprofitable ceremonies, that they were in as great ſeruilitie and ſubiection to ſuch things as the Iewes. He ſaith ſo in deede of ſome particular preſumptions, inuentions, and vſages of certaine perſons, as that some made it a heinous matter to touch the ground with their bare feete wil in their owne Octaues, and such like vanities, whereby some simple folkes might be infected, which this holy Doctor specially misliked, and wisheth, such things (as they may without scandall) to be taken away. But that he wrote or meant so of any ceremonie that the Church vseth, either appointed by Scripture or Councel, or custome of the Catholike Church, himselfe denieth it in expresse termes in the same place, and in sundry other: where he alloweth all the holy ceremonies done in the ministration of the Sacraments: and elsewhere. Whereby it is cleere, that the Churches most comely orders and significant rites pertaine nowise to the yoke of the olde lawe, much lesse to the superstition of Gentilitie, as Heretikes affirme: but to the sweete yoke of Christ and light burden of his law, to order, decencie, and instruction of the faithfull, in all libertie, loue, faith, grace, and spirit.

FVLKE. 3 You say, we forge that S. Augustine should say, that the Church and Christians in his daies, were loden with obseruation of vnprofitable ceremonies, that they were in as great seruilitie to such things, as the Iewes. Whether we forge this, let his own words testifie: That which is instituted beside custome, that it should be as it were an obseruation of a Sacrament, I cannot allow, although I dare not freely disallow many such things, for auoyding offence of certaine, either holy or troublesome persons. But this grieueth me very much, many most wholesome precepts that are in the holy Scriptures, are lesse regarded, and all things are so full of many presumptions, that he is more grieuously reproued which with in his Octaues hath touched the earth with his bare foote, then he which hath buried his minde in drunkennesse. Therefore all such things as are neither conteyned in the auctorities of holy Scriptures, nor found to haue beene decreed in the Councels of Bishops, nor are confirmed by the custome of the whole Church, but are varied innumerably after the diuers maners of diuers places, so that fearse or neuer there can be found out the causes which men in the institution of them followed, when they may conueniently, I thinke without all doubt, they are to be cut of. For although neither this can be found, how they be against the faith, yet they oppresse with seruile burthens the religion it selfe, which the mercie of God, would haue to be free in most few and most manifest celebrations of Sacraments, so that the condition of the Iewes, is more tollerable, who although they acknowledged not the time of their libertie, yet they are subiect to the burdens of the law, not to the presumptions of men. Doth not Augustine say, as much as you report vs to say, and more also? And may we not iustly inferre that the state of the Papists is much worse now, wherein are infinite vaine ceremonies, beside the vile opinion of merite by vsing such things? But let vs see how you would shift of the matter, you say, He speaketh of some particular presumptions and vsage of certaine persons, but he saith, All things are full of so many presumptions, and that the multitude of them though they were not directly against the faith, did oppresse religion it selfe with seruile burthens, what say you to that? they are contrary to the freedom which the mercy of God hath giuen to religion. The state of the Iewes is more tollerable, being subiect to ceremonies of Gods institution, then of Christians, subiect to humane presumptions. Some of them were obserued as Sacraments, which were none: There was more grieuous punishment for transgressing mans ordinances (as among Papists for eating flesh on good Friday, then for swearing or being drunke on the Lords day) then for breach of Gods commandements. To all these things you say nothing. But he neither writ nor meant (you say) of any ceremony either appointed by Scripture, Councel or custome of the Catholike Church. It is true. But are all popish ceremonies such? if all such were remoued (according as August. iudgeth they ought to be) which you obserue, neither appointed by the holy Scriptures nor decreed in councels general (for prouincial councels neuer had auctoritiy to ordeine ceremonies, but for their owne prouinces) nor are confirmed by the custome of the whole Church, I say, if all such popish ceremonies, were taken away, you should leaue a very small number behind. You say, S. Augustine in other places, alloweth all the holy ceremonies done in the ministration of the Sacraments, and else where. You must tell vs where, and what ceremonies he doth allow, and we shall shape you an answere. In the meane time his iudgement vttered in this place, doth condemne the multitude of your popish rites to be seruile burdens, worse then the Iewes, and so you serue vnder the elements of the world, worse then euer the Iewes did.

The ancient Church loden with vnprofitable ceremonies.

RHEM. 4 9 Weake and poore.) Whether he meane of the creatures which the Gentils serued (as it may seeme by the words before of serning straunge gods) so the elements were most base and beggerly: or of the Iudaical ceremonies and sacraments (as most expound it) euen so also their elements were weake and poore in themselues, not giuing life, saluation and remission of sinnes, nor being instruments or vessels of grace, as the 7. Sacraments of the new law be.

FVLKE. 4 You must first proue your number of seuen Sacraments, before you can make so many instruments of grace. Another point is to proue, That Sacraments are vessels of grace, as though the fauour of God were caried in them. Instruments or seales to confirme our faith in the grace of God, we ackdowledge them to be. Thirdly, if none but Sacraments are exempt from being the weake and beggerly elements of the world, what is all other popish trash of holy bread, holy water, salt, spittle, fire, waxe, bowes, &c.

Sacraments.

RHEM. 5 10 You obserue daies.) That which S. Paul speaketh against the Idolatricall obseruation of daies, monethes, and times, dedicated by the Heathen to their false gods, and to wicked men or spirites, as to Iupiter, Mercurie, Ianus, Iuno, Diana, and such like, or against the superstitions differences of daies, fatall, fortunate or dismol, and other obseruations of times for good lucke or ill lucke in mans actions, gathered either by particular fansie, or popular obseruation, or curious and vnlawfull artes, or (lastly) of the Iudaicall festiuities that were then ended and abrogated, vnto which notwithstanding certaine Christian Iewes would haue reduced the Galatians against the Apostles doctrine: all that (I say) doe the Heretikes of our time falsly and deceitfully interprete against the Christian holydaies, and the sanctification and necessary keeping of the same. Which is not onely contrary to the Fathers exposition, but against the very Scriptures, and the practise of the Apostles and the whole Church. Aug. cont. Adimant. c. 16. Ep. 118. c. 7. And the antiquitie of the feasts of Christs Natiuitie, Epiphanie, and Ascension is such, that they can be referred to no other origine, but the Apostles institution: who (as S. Clement testifieth li. 8. const. Apost. c. 39.) gaue order for celebrating their fellow Apostles, S. Steuens, and other Martyrs daies after their death: and much more no doubt did they giue order for Christs festiuities. According to which, the Church hath kept not onely his, but S. Steuens and the B. Innocents, euen on the same daies they be now solemnly kept, and his B. Mothers, and other Saincts, (as the Aduersaries themselues confesse) aboue 1300. yeeres, as appeareth in the barbarous combates betweene Westphalus the Lutheran, and Caluin, and by the writings betwixt the Puritans and Protestants.*

Denys giueth so great testimonie) being assured she is departed at the least · except they either hate her, or thinke her worthy of lesse remembrance then any other*

Saincts,

Sainct, her selfe prophecying the contrary of al Catholike generations, that they should blesse her. And in deed the Assumption is her proper day, as also the feast of her Natiuities the other of the Purification and the Annunciation, which they keepe in England, being not so peculiar to her, but belonging rather to Christes Presentation in the Temple, and his Conception. To conclude, we may see in S. Cyprian, ep. 34. Origen ho. 3. in diuers. Tertullian de cor. mil. S. Gregory Nazianzene De amore pauperum. the councel of Gangres, yea and in the councel of Nicene it self, giuing order for Easter and the certaine celebrating thereof, that Christian festiuities be holy, ancient, and to be obserued on prescript dayes and times, and that this is not Iudaical obseruation of dayes, as Arrius taught, for which he was condemned of heresie, as S. Epiphanius witnesseth. But of holydayes S. Augustine sheweth both the reason and his liking in these memorable wordes. First for the feastes belonging to our Lord, thus: We dedicate and consecrate the memorie of Gods benefites with solemnities, feastes, and certaine appointed dayes, least by tract of times there might creepe in ingratefull and vnkind obliuion. Of the festiuities of Martyrs, thus: Christian people celebrate the memories of Martyrs with religious solemnitie, both to moue themselues to imitation of them, and that they may be partakers of their merites, and be holpen with their prayers. Cont. Faust. li. 20. c. 21. And of all Saincts dayes, thus: Keepe yee and celebrate with sobriety the Natiuities of Saincts, that we may imitate them which haue gone before vs, and they may rejoice of vs which pray for vs. In Ps. 88. Conc. 2. in fine.

FYLKE. 5 When your obseruation of dayes is as ful of superstition & idolatry, as those of the Gentiles or Iewes, we do not falsly or deceiptfully interpret the Apostles saying, against your popish obseruation of holydayes, which here also you affirme to be necessary. For that the Lordes day, testified in the scriptures ought to be kept, and that other dayes also may be kept by the Churches ordinaunce for the assembly of Christians to the exercise of religion, we acknowledge. But that any are necessary more then be of the holy ghostes appoynting in the Scriptures, we deny. S. Augustine contra Adimant. speaking of the obseruation of the Lordes day, Easter, and other Christian festiuities of daies, saith: Because we vnderstand whereto they appertaine, we obserue not the times, but those things that are signified by those times. Where is then the holy time of Lent, the good and holy time of this or that feast? S. Hierom likewise vpon this text, defending the Christian solemnities from Iudaisme, sayeth: Least the vnordered and vnappointed gathering together of the people, should diminish the faith of Christ, for this cause certayne dayes are appointed, that we should all meete together in one place. Not that this day in which we come together, is Celebrior, more noble or holy, but that on what day soeuer we must come together, greater ioy might arise by sight one of another. You see Hierom maketh none other end of obseruing such dayes then we doe, denying the celebritie, much more the sanctification of such dayes. Touching the antiquitie of the feastes of the Natiuitie, Epiphanie and Ascension of Christ, there is no credit to be giuen to that bastard booke of Clemens constitutions, although we acknowledge those festiuities haue bene obserued of auncient time; whereof see the notes, Math. 2. sect. 5. where also the places of Origen, hom. 3. in diuers. And Augustine ep. 18. are discussed, and see also, Act. 2. sect. 7. That any contention should arise, for keeping or not keeping of such feasts, it is a fault in our time, but yet such a fault as was very auncient, as appeareth by the contentions of Victor and the bishops of the East, for the celebration of Easter, and pursued with more bitternesse by Victor bishop of Rome, then by any of our time, for he presumed to excommunicate as heretikes all such as would not keepe Easter after his maner. Euseb. lib. 5. cap. 25. We acknowledge it was a very auncient custome of the Church, to celebrate the memories of Martyrs, as the Church of Smyrna doth write in their epistle. Euseb. li. 4. c. 32. For the remembrance of them that haue fought before vs, and for the exercise and preparation of them that shall fight hereafter. But your popish maner of celebration is nothing like, either in the forme or the end, for you keepe your holydayes, as the Iewes did the feast of the Calfe. Where of it is written, The people sate downe to eate and drinke, And rose vp againe to play. In your Churches you solemnize them with idolatrous worshipping of the creatures, and their images: out of the churches with banketting, reuelling and idlenesse. So that the people by your festiuities of Martyrs, are not taught what true martyrdome is, not prepared to suffer for Christ, but rather to become epicures, whose belly is their God, and glory in their shame, when they see the solemnities of Saincts kept with all worldly pompe, and shew of pleasant things in the Church, and all carnall delights abroad.

Popish holy dayes.

Concerning the Assumption of the virgin Mary and her festiuities, I haue answered sufficiently, Act. 1 sect. 7. In abrogating and reteining of feastes, our Church hath vsed that libertie which Christians haue in obseruation of dayes. But your vrging of a feast of her departure, as a thing necessarie, declareth that you doe seruilely like Iewes, and not freely as Christians obserue dayes and times. You gather of our not obseruing of her Assumption, that either we hate her, or els thinke her worthy of lesse remembraunce, then any other Saincte: As though we were bound to shew our loue toward her, by keeping a festiuall day, or as though there were none other way to keape the remembraunce of her then by holydayes. Our Sauiour Christ hath taught vs to keepe the remembraunce of Mary Magdalene by preaching the Gospell, Math. 26. 13. And we are well assured, that we cannot testifie our loue vnto her better, nor honour her more, then in ascribing all honour of our redemption and saluation, to her sonne our Lord Iesus Christ. But it is a weightie argument why we shoulde haue one holyday more for her, then we haue, because she prophecieth the contrarie of all Catholike generations that they should blesse her. If there be no way to blesse her, or to celebrate her blessednesse, but by some new found Lady day, then her prophecie failed of the effect, for many hundred yeeres after she vttered the same. For she saith ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν, euen from this present time hence forward all generations shall call me blessed. At lest the feast of her natiuitie should haue bene kept holy then presently, and so forth during her life. But Durand testifieth, That this feast of old time was not celebrated, vntill a certaine religious man for many yeeres together, heard the angels, as this night, solemnizing it in heauen, to whom when he enquired the cause, it was reuealed, that the angels did reioyce, because the blessed virgin was borne as that night, which the apostolike Pope did approue to be authentical, and commanded the feast to be celebrated, that in solemnizing it, we might be conformable to the court of heauen. Also in the second lesson read in your church in the feast of her natiuitie, it is said, That after other her more ancient solemnities, the deuotion of the faithfull was not content till it had added this present solemnitie of her natiuitie. By this text you see, this feast is none of the ancient feasts, and also that the other solemnities of her purification and annunciation are her festiuities also. But seeing this feast was but of late instituted, and her assumption was not heard of in the Church for many hundred yeeres after her death, all catholike generations blessed her otherwise, then by keeping these holy dayes, or els her prophecie could not be true. By Cyprian ep. 34. we learne how the ancient feasts of martyrs were celebrated. We offer sacrifice for them (saith he) alwaies, as you remember, so often as we celebrate the passions and daies of the martyrs by yeerely commemoration. Thele sacrifices were praise and thanksgiuing to God, the commemoration for example to men.

To conclude, we learne by many testimonies of the auncient fathers, how Christian solemnities may bee kept, that they be not Iewish or heathenish obseruations, as when they are free from superstition, idolatrie, or opinion of holinesse in the times, & when they be kept freely as things indifferent, wherein the Church may vse her libertie, to appoint or abrogate what is best for edification, and not be seruilely bound to keepe them of necessitie, as you defend that they are. The saying of S. Augustine contra Faust. lib. 20. cap. 21, if you had set it downe at large, and rightly translated it, would not haue made so great shew for you, as you imagine. The Christian people (saieth he) doth celebrate together the memories of the Martyrs, with religious solemnitie, both to stirre them vp to imitation, and that they may be adioined to their merites, and holped with their prayers: yet so that we set vp aultars to none of the martyrs, but to the God of the martyrs himselfe. For which of the prelates standing in the places of their holy bodies, said at any time, we offer to thee O Peter, or O Paule, or O Cyprian? but that which is offered, is offered to God which hath crowned the martyrs, at their memories whom he hath crowned: that by admonition of the very places, greater affection may arise, to kindle loue both towards them whom we may follow, and him by whose aide we may be able to follow them. Therefore we worship the martyrs with that worship of loue and societie, wherewith holy men of God are worshipped also in this life, whose heart we perceiue to be ready to such sufferings for the trueth of the Gospell.

Now let all indifferent men iudge, whether you worship the sainctes departed on their festiual daies, as they did in S. Augustines time, whether with the same kinde of worship wherewith godly men liuing may bee worshipped, with the onely difference of greater deuotion, and more securely, because they are past all daunger, which also he addeth. That you translate of partaking their merites, S. Augustine meaneth of being ioyned to them in woorthinesse, by imitation of their vertues, not by communication of merites. For the word merite oftentimes he vseth for the dignitie or woorthinesse of any person, and he saieth not Communices meritis, but Consocieris meritis: which signifieth not communication of merites, but association or adioyning, or to be made fellow in merites. Christ doth communicate his merites to vs, and we are partakers of his merites. But he doth not consociate vs to his merites, which were to make vs fellowes in merites with him. That he saieth of sainctes departed praying for vs, because we finde it not in Scripture, we leaue it in doubt. But seeing praier is a sacrifice due onely to God, as the sacrifice of praise, (which in the same chapter he confesseth to bee a part of the worship due onely to God, out of the fiftie Psalme) we may conclude out of his wordes, that our prayers are not to bee offered to sainctes, although some seede of that superstition was sowed in his time.

Prayer to Saincts.

RHEM. 6 *And as is sayd of prescript dayes of feastes, so the like is to bee sayd of fastes, which els where we haue shewed to be of the Apostles ordinance. And so also of the Ecclesiastitall diuision of the yeere into Aduent, Septuagesime, &c. the weeke into so many Ferits, the day into Houres of praiers, as the Prime, the Third, the Sixth, the None, &c. Whereof see * S. Ciprian, who deriueth these things by the Scriptures from the Apostles also, and counteth these things which the wicked Heretikes reproue, to be full of mysterie. Like vnto this also is it, that the holy Scriptures were so disposed of, and deuided, that certaine peeces (as is alwayes obserued and practised vntill this day) should be read at one time, and others at other times and seasons, throughout the yeere, according to the diuersitie of our Lordes actions and benefites, or the Saincts stories then recorded. Which the Puritans Caluinists also condemne of superstition, desiring to bring in hellish horror and all disorder. See com. Carthag. 3. c. 47. & pag. 288. of this booke.*

FVLKE. 6 Concerning prescript dayes of fasting, and of Aduent, and Canonicall houres, &c. we haue answered elsewhere. In Matth. 15. sect. 3. Act. 13. sect. 5. Act. 10. sect. 6.

Reading of the Scriptures according to the vse of the yeere.

Deuiding of the Scripture to be read at certaine times, is a thing indifferent, and hath bene diuersly vsed. And although some more contentiously then aduisedly, haue inueighed against such diuision as the Church of England vseth, yet they meant not thereby to bring in hellish horror, and all disorder. For those churches, which vsing their libertie, keepe no such diuision of reading, yet haue all things, done decently, and according to an order.

RHEM. 7 24 By an allegorie.) Here we learne that the holy Scriptures haue beside the litteral sense, a deeper spiritual and more principal meaning: which is not only to be taken of the holy wordes, but of the very facts and persons reported: both the speaches and the actions being significatiue ouer and about the latter. Which pregnancie of manifold senses if S. Paul had not signified himselfe in certaine places, the Heretikes had bene lesse wicked and presumptuous in condemning the holy fathers allegorical expositions almost wholy: who now shew themselues to be mere brutish and carnal men, hauing no sense nor feeling of the profunditie of the Scriptures, which our holy fathers the Doctors of Gods Church saw.

The Scriptures haue an allegoricall sense beside the litterall.

FVLKE. 7 We learne that Abrahams house being the Church, was a figure or paterne of the Church to come, and that all notable mutations therein doe prefigure or set forth, the like in the whole Church that followed. But we doe not learne to draw the Scriptures from the sense of the wordes which you call the literall sense, to any allegoricall interpretation, which is fained and counterfected in mans braine, and hath no ground of the spirit of God, whereby Origen fell into heresies, and diuers ancient fathers, handled not the Scriptures according to the sense of the holy ghost. But that the Apostle in this place vsing the terme of allegory, meaneth no such descanting vpon the Scripture, as you call a deeper and spirituall, and more principall meaning, diuers of the ancient fathers also doe beare witnesse. First Chrysostome vpon this place saieth: A figure he calleth vnproperly an allegory. But this is the meaning of that he saieth. This history declareth not onely that which appeareth, but also setteth forth higher matters. Theodoret vpon this place sayth: The diuine Apostle hath sayd these things are sayd by allegory, meaning that they are otherwise vnderstood, for he hath not taken away the story, but teacheth what things are prefigured in the story.

Allegoricall interpretation.

S. Ambrose saith: Isaac was borne to be a figure of Christ. Therefore he saith, these things are said by allegorie, because the persons of Ismael and Isaack by one thing signifie another. Photius saith: They are spoken allegorically, that is, the natiuities of these two sonnes were figures of two testaments. These prefigurations differ much from allegoricall interpretation. And if we should admit that the Apostle, who was certeine of the sense of the Holy ghost, did make an allegoricall interpretation, yet is it not lawfull for euery man which hath no such assurance to make allegories of the holy Scripture, where he hath no ground of the words to yeeld any such sense. Neither is it sufficient, that nothing but truth be gathered out of them, which is els where plainly set forth: for it is not lawfull to conclude euery truth out of any text of scripture, where the Holy ghost meaneth not to teach any such matter. How vaine a thing therefore those allegories are, the varietie of them gathered by diuers men out of the same text, doth declare, seeing they haue no foundation in the word, but only in the braine of the inuenter. And it is as easie a matter to interpret Virgils Aeneades, or Ouids Metaphorphosis allegoricallie as the scriptures, and to applie all things in them to truth and spirituall vnderstanding. Which if it be an abuse of the prophane writings of those Poets, to draw their sayings to a farre other meaning then euer they had, how much more is it in like maner an abuse of the holy sayings of the Prophets, of Christ, and his Apostles?

RHEM. 31 Freedom.) He meaneth the libertie and discharge from the old ceremonies, sacraments, and the whole bondage of the law, and from the seruitude of sinne, and the Diuel, to such as obey him: but not libertie to do what euery man list, or to

CHAP. V.

Againſt the lie of the falſe Apoſtles, he proteſteth his mind of Circumciſion. 13 and teſtificth, that they are called to libertie. But yet leſt any miſconſter Chriſtian libertie, he telleth them that they ſhal not inherite the kingdom, vnles they abſtaine from the workes of the fleſh, which are al mortal ſinnes: and do the fruitful works of the Spirit, fulfilling al the commandements of the Law by Charitie.

3 And I teſtifie againe to euery man circumciding him ſelf, that he is a detter to doe the whole Law.

4 You are euacuated from Chriſt, that are iuſtified in the Law: you are fallen from grace.

5 For we in ſpirit, by faith, expect the hope of iuſtice.

Gal.6.15. 6 For in Chriſt IESVS *neither circumciſion auaileth ought, nor prepuce: but ‖faith that worketh by charitie.

15 But if you bite and eate one an other: take heede you be not conſumed one of an other.

16 And I ſay, walke in the ſpirit, and the luſtes of the fleſh you ſhal not accompliſh.

17 For the fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit: and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh. for theſe are aduerſaries one to an other: ‡that not what things ſoeuer ‖ you wil, theſe you doe.

4 Chriſt is become but vaine to you, as many of you as are iuſtified by the law, are fallen from grace.

5 For we through the ſpirit, waite for the hope of righteouſneſſe by faith.

6 For in Ieſus Chriſt, neither is circumciſion any thing worth, neither yet vncircumciſion: but faith, which worketh by loue.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. V.

RHEM. 1 17 That not what things) Here men thinke (saith S. Augustine) the Apostle denieth that we haue free libertie of wil: not vnderstanding that this is said to them, if they wil not hold fast the grace of faith conceiued, by which only they can walke in the spirit, and not accomplish the concupiscences of the flesh. in c. 5. Gal.

FVLKE. 1 Euen by this saying you may see he denyeth the will of man to be free from thraldome of sinne, before it be enlarged by grace: yet is it alwayes free from constraint or compulsion. These men therefore are they that say when they haue committed any heinous crimes: I am vnwilling to doe it, I am constrained, I am compelled, I am ouercome, I doe that I will not, as the Apostle saith. &c. Bede ex August. ser. De verbis Apostoli vpon this text. So he saith: There be men vnthankefull to grace, which ascribe much to poore and wounded nature. It is true, man when he was created, receiued great strength of free will, but by sinning he lost it. De verb. Apost. ser. 2. Beside this the text is plaine against the freedome of our will captiue vnto sinne. Freewil.

RHEM. 2 21 ᶜ Such things.) S. Augustine sheweth hereby that not onely infidelitie is a damnable sinne.

FVLKE. 2 All other sinnes follow of infidelitie, as vertues doe of faith. And all sinnes of their owne nature are damnable, euen those which are committed by them that haue faith: yet if they haue true faith, there is no condemnation to them that are in Christ, which walke not after the flesh, but after the spirit, that is, which are they in whom sinne doth not reigne, not they that are void of sinne, as Augustine doth interpret. All sinne is damnable of it selfe.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. V.

RHEM. 3 6 Faith.) This is the faith working by charitie, which S. Paul meaneth els where, when he saith that faith doth iustifie. And note wel that by these termes circumcision and prepuce not auailable to iustification, it is plaine that in other places he meaneth the workes of Circumcision and Prepuce (that is, of the Iewes and the Gentils) without faith, which auaile not, but faith working by charitie: as who should say, faith and good workes not workes without faith.

Againe note here, that if the Protestants would pretend conference of places to be the best or only way to explicate hard speaches of the holy Scriptures, had folowed but their owne rule, this one text would haue interpreted and cleared vnto them al other whereby iustice and saluation might seeme to be attributed to faith alone: the Apostle here so expresly setting downe, the faith which he commendeth so much before, not to be alone, but with charitie: not to be idle, but to be working by Charitie: as S. Augustine noteth. de fid. & op. c. 14. Further the good reader must obserue, that whereas the Protestants some of them confesse, that Charitie and good workes be ioyned and requisite also, and that they exclude them not, but commend them highly, yet so that the said Charitie or good workes are no part of our iustice or any cause of iustification, but as fruites and effects of faith onely, which they say doth all, yea though the other be present: this false glosse also is reproued euidently by this place, which teach vs cleane contrarie: to witte, that faith hath her whole actiuitie and operation toward iustice and saluation, of charitie, and not contrariwise: without which it can not haue any act meritorious or agreeable to God for our saluation. for which cause S. Augustine saith, li. 15. de Trin. c. 18. Fidem non facit vtilem nisi charitas. nothing maketh faith profitable but charitie. But the Heretikes answer, that where the Apostle saith, faith worketh by charitie, he maketh charitie to be the instrument only of faith in wel working, and therfore the inferior cause at the least. but this also is easily refuted by the Apostles plaine testimonie, affirming that charitie is * the greater vertue, and that if a man had al faith and lacked charitie, he were worth nothing. And againe, * that Charitie is the perfection and accomplishment of the Law (as faith is not) which can not agree to the instrument all or inferior cause. And therfore when it is said that faith worketh by charity, it is not as by an instrument, but as the body worketh by the soule, the matter by the forme, without which they haue no actiuitie. Whereupon the Schooles call Charitie, the forme or life of faith, that is to say, the force, actiuitie, and operatiue qualitie thereof, in respect of merite and iustice. Which S. Iames doth plainely insinuate, when he maketh faith without Charitie, to be as a dead corps without soule or life, and therfore without profitable operation. c. 2. v. 26. Iustification by faith only, disproued by conference of Scriptures. How the Protestants admit charitie and good works to iustification. Charitie is more principal then faith in iustification. 1. Cor. 13. Rom. 13. 1. Tim. 1. How faith worketh by charitie.

FVLKE. 3 In the margent you promise vs that iustification by faith onely is disprooued by conference of scriptures. First you say it is a working faith that doth iustifie, and we neuer said otherwise. Secondly, you say the works of circumcision and prepuce that is of Iewes and Gentiles, without faith auaile not: we say as much, but yet faith iustifieth without the workes of Iewes or Gentiles, ergo onely faith doth iustifie. But faith which worketh by charitie, not which is idle or dead. This is (say you) as who should say faith and good workes, not workes without faith. But we answer, whosoeuer should so say, should say contrarie to the Apostle, which saith a man is iustified by faith without works, and therefore not by works and faith, but by faith onely, without the merit of works. For onely faith excludeth nothing but the merit of works. This conference therefore doth nothing derogate from the truth of iustification by faith onely, for we neuer meant any other faith but a true, a liuely, a working faith, whereby onely a man is iustified. Therefore S. Ambrose saith vpon this text: Neither vncircumcision auaileth any thing, nor circumcision, but only faith in loue is needfull vnto iustification. And Augustine De fide & operibus reasoneth manifestly Iustification by faith only.

manifestly against them that thought to be iustified by a dead faith, which is void of good workes. For euen in the same place he saith of good works: Sequuntur iustificatum non præcedunt iustificandum, They follow him that is iustified, they go not before him that is to be iustified. Wherupon it followeth inuincibly, that they be no cause of iustification, for the cause goeth before the effect: but they be the effect of iustification, which followeth it as the cause. But against this (you say) it is proued by this place, that faith hath her whole actiuitie and operation toward iustice & saluation, of charitie, and not contrariwise: without which it cannot haue any act meritorious, or agreeable to God for our saluation. For act meritorious it needeth not, seeing we are not iustified by the merit of faith, but by the merit of Christ apprehended by faith. And it is most agreeable to God, who iustifieth the vngodly freely, and saueth by his grace, to iustifie vs by the only instrument of faith: whereby the whole glorie of our saluation is ascribed to grace, as the Apostle saith: By grace you are saued, not of works, Eph. 2. Charitie by which faith worketh therefore, declareth faith to be liuing and not dead, as the fruit declareth the tree to be liuing and a good tree, but thereof it followeth not that faith hath no effect peculiar to her, in which charitie doth not concurre, though it be not separated from faith. And your selues acknowledge the first iustification (which we acknowledge to be the onely iustification before God to saluation) to be of meere grace without works, therefore by faith onely, where is then the actiuitie of charitie whereof you speake? And that which S. Augustine saith in the place cited, is of bare knowledge, such as is in deuils, not of iustification. For it followeth immediately: Faith may be without charitie, but it can not profit. Therefore the Apostle Paule saith: In Christ Iesus neither circumcision nor vncircumcision auaileth any thing, but faith which worketh by loue: So distinguishing it from that faith by which deuils doe beleeue and tremble. You see plainly of what faith he speaketh, which is not profitable, being void of charitie. And where you feare least we will make charitie the instrument onely of faith in well working and so the inferior cause, we make not charitie a dead instrument, but the first effect of faith next our iustification, whereof proceedeth all obedience of loue to our neighbour. That the Apostle saith charitie is the greater, it is in respect of larger continuance, not in respect of iustification. That which he saith of all faith without charitie, he meaneth of faith by which miracles may be done, not of iustifying faith. That charitie is the perfection of the law, it is true: but no man hath perfect charitie, therefore no man performeth the law. And where you say faith is not the perfection of the law, S. Augustine saith, faith obteineth that which the law commandeth. De natura & gratia. cap. 16. Againe it may be rightly said, that all the commandements of God perteine to faith onely, if not a dead faith be vnderstood, but that liuing faith which worketh by loue. De fide & operibus. cap. 22. But faith (you say) worketh by charitie, as the bodie by the soule, the matter by the forme. This is an vnproper working, for the matter is passible, and the forme actiue, the soule rather worketh by the body, then the body by the soule. But that charitie is the forme or life of faith, you say S. Iames doth plainely insinuate, when he maketh faith without charitie to be as a dead corps without life. I answer, S. Iames by that example sheweth, that a dead and fruitlesse faith is nothing worth: and that as by actions of life, a body is knowen to liue: so by works, which is an act or effect of faith, faith is knowen to be liuing and not dead. But that charitie is the forme or life of faith, you can not proue out of his words, or the whole discourse of that chapter.

RHEM. 4 13 Libertie an occasion.) They abuse the libertie of the Gospel to the aduantage of their flesh, that vnder pretense thereof, shake of their obedience to the lawes of man, to the decrees of the Church and Councels, that will liue and beleeue as they list, and not be taught by their Superiors, but fornicate with euery Sect-maister that teacheth pleasant and licentious things: and al this vnder pretense of spirit, libertie, and freedom of the Gospel. Such must learne that al heresies, schismes, and rebellions against the Church and their lawful Prelates, be counted here among the workes of the flesh. See S. Augustine de fid. & op. c. 24. 25. True libertie, not carnal & fleshly.

FULKE. 4 Carnall libertie is doubtlesse condemned, but S. Augustine doth not charge them with carnall libertie, which refuse to be taught by such superiours, as will not teach them out of the word of God: for such be sect maisters, and no lawfull superiours. But while you seeme to restraine all men from licentiousnesse, you would haue libertie to teach what you list, and to enforce men to receiue it, or els charge them with fleshly and carnall libertie. What is carnal libertie.

CHAP. VI.

If any do sinne, the rest that do the workes of the Holy Ghost, must not therfore take pride in them selues, but rather make humilitie of it, partly by fearing their owne fall, partly by looking straitly to their owne works. 6 He exhorteth earnestly to good works, assuring them that they shal reape none other then here they sow. 11 With his owne hand he writeth, telling them, the true cause why those false Apostles preach circumcision, to be only to please the Iewes: 17 and a plaine argument that he preacheth it not, to be this, that he is persecuted of the Iewes.

BRETHREN, and if a man be preoccupated in any fault, you that are spiritual, instruct such an one in the spirit of lenitie, considering thine owne self, lest thou also be tempted.

2 Beare ye one an others burdens: and so you shal fulfil the law of Christ.

3 For if any man esteeme him self to be something, whereas he is nothing, he seduceth him self.

4 But let euery one proue his owne worke, and so in himself only shal he haue the glorie, and not in an other.

5 For euery one shal beare his own burden.

6 And let * him that is catechized in the word, communicate to him that catechizeth him, in al his goods.

7 Be

Brethren, if a man be preuented in any fault, ye which are spirituall, restore such a one in the spirit of meeknesse, considering thy selfe least thou also be tempted.

2 Beare ye one anothers burden, and so fulfill the law of Christ.

3 For if any man seeme to himselfe that he is somewhat, when he is nothing, the same deceiueth himselfe in his owne fantasie.

4 But let euery man proone his owne worke: and then shall he haue reioycing onely in his owne selfe, and not in another.

*5 * For euery man shall beare his owne burden.* 1. Cor. 3. 8.

6 Let him that is taught in the worde, minister vnto him that teacheth him, in all good things.

7 Be

7 Be not deceiued, God is not mocked.
8 For what things a man shal sow, those also shal he reape. For he that soweth in his flesh, of the flesh also shal reape corruption. but he that soweth in the spirit, of the spirit shal reape life euerlasting.
2.Thes.3,13. 9 And * doing good, let vs not faile. For in due time we shal ‡ reape not failing.
10 Therfore whiles we haue time, let vs worke good to al, but ‖ especially to the domesticals of the faith.
11 See with what maner of letters I haue written to you with mine owne hand.
12 Whosoeuer wil please in the flesh, they force you to be circumcised, only that they may not suffer the persecution of the crosse of Christ.
13 For neither they that are circumcised, do keepe the Law: but they wil haue you to be circumcised, that they may glorie in your flesh.
THE Epistle for S.Francis, Octob.4. 14 But ‡ God forbid that I should glorie, sauing in the crosse of our Lord IESVS Christ: by whom the world is crucified to me, and I to the world.
15 For in Christ IESVS neither circumcision auaileth ought, nor prepuce, but ‖ a new creature.
16 And whosoeuer shall folow this rule, peace vpon them, and mercie, and vpon the Israël of God.
17 From hencefurth let no man be troublesome to me. for I beare the markes of our Lord IESVS in my body.
18 The grace of our Lord IESVS Christ be with your spirit brethren. Amen.

7 Be not deceiued, God is not mocked: for whatsoeuer a man soweth, that shall hee also reape.
8 For he that soweth in his flesh, shall of the flesh reape corruption: but he that soweth into the spirit, shall of the spirit reape life euerlasting.
9 Let vs not be wearie in well doing: for in due season we shall reape, if we faint not.
10 While we haue therefore time, let vs doe good vnto all men, specially vnto them which are of the houshold of faith.
11 Ye see how large a letter I haue written vnto you with mine owne hand.
12 As many as desire with outward appearance to please ‖ carnally, the same constraine you to be circumcised: onely lest they should suffer persecution for the crosse of Christ. ‖ Or, in the flesh.
13 For they themselues which are circumcised, keepe not the law: but desire to haue you circumcised, that they might glorie in your flesh.
14 God forbid that I should glorie, but in the crosse of our Lord Iesus Christ: wherby the world is crucified vnto me, and I vnto the world.
15 For in Christ Iesu neither circumcision auaileth any thing, nor vncircumcision, but a new creature.
16 And as many as walke according to this rule, peace be on them, and mercie, and vpon the Israel that is of God.
17 From henceforth let no man put me to businesse: for I beare in my body the markes of the Lord Iesus.
18 Brethren, the grace of our Lorde Iesus Christ be with your spirite, Amen.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. VI.

RHEM. 1 9 Reape not.) The workes of mercie be the seede of life euerlasting, and the proper cause thereof, and not faith only.
FVLKE. 1 Faith, by which only we are iustified, is the roote, whereon those seedes doe grow, which by Gods merciful promise, not by the merite of the workes, are made the seede of eternall life.
RHEM. 2 14 God forbid.) Christ (saith S. Augustine) chose a kinde of death, to hang on the Crosse and to fixe or fasten the same crosse in the foreheads of the faithful, that the Christian may say, God forbid that I should glorie sauing in the crosse of our Lord IESVS CHRIST. Expos. in Euang. Io. tract. 43.
FVLKE. 2 You falsefie S. Augustine. For his word is in cordibus, not in frontibus, he hath fastened his crosse in the hearts of the faithfull. For they only can say, God forbid that I should glorie but in the crosse of Christ, in whose harts the crosse of Christ is fastned by faith, which can not be fastened on mens foreheads, and many haue it signed in their foreheads, that haue it not fastned in their hearts by faith. The crosse of Christ.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. VI.

RHEM. 3 6. Communicate.) The great duety and respect that we ought to haue to such as preach or teach vs the Cath. faith, and not in regard only of their paines taken with vs, and wel-deseruing of vs by their doctrine: but that we may be partakers of their merites, we ought specially to do good to such, or (as the Apostle speaketh) communicate with them in al our temporal goods, that we may be partakers of their Spiritual. See S. Augustine li.2. Euang. quæst. q.8. Duetie to our spiritual teachers.
FVLKE. 3 The forme of words which S. Augustine vseth, doth declare, that he taketh not merite in that sense you speake of. He would not say, they shall giue into your bosome, but because they shall merit to receiue an heauenly reward, by the merites of them to whom they shall giue but a cuppe of colde water. He sayth not, other men shall bestowe part of their merites vnto them, but they shall merite by other mens merites, that is, God shall reward by occasion of them, to whom they shall giue a cup of colde water. For admit he be an Hypocrite, to whome almes is bestowed in the name of a Disciple, or a iust man, or a Prophet, shall not the giuer in faith and simplicitie, haue as great a reward, as if he were a true Prophet, iust man, or Disciple? yes verely. Therefore the reward dependeth not in participation of other mens merites, but only vpon Gods promise. What Augustine thought of merites, he hath best expressed in those bookes, which we wrote against the Pelagians, where he sheweth plentifully, that we are saued by grace, without merites; and of the reward of good workes, he sayth often, that God crowneth vs, because he crowneth in vs his giftes, not our merites. In Ps.69. & Ps.70. Con.2. Communicating of merites.
RHEM. 10 Especially.) In giuing almes, though we may do wel in helping al that are in necessitie, as farre as we can, yet we are more bound to succor Christians, then Iewes or Infidels: & Catholikes, then Heretikes. See S. Hierom q.1. ad Hedibiam. In almes we to preferre Iustice an herent qua in vs.
RHEM. 4 15 A new creature.) Note wel that the Apostle calleth that here a new creature, which in the last chapter he termed, faith working by charitie, and (1.*Cor.*7,19.) the obseruation of the commaundements of God. Whereby we may

may learne that vnder the name of faith is conteined the whole reformation of our soules and our new creation in good workes, and also that Christian iustice is a very qualitie, condition and state of vertue and grace resident in vs, and not a phantastical apprehension of Christes iustice onely imputed to vs. Lastly, that the faith which iustifieth, ioined with the other vertues, is properly the formal cause, and not the efficient or instrumentall cause of iustification, that is to say, these vertues put together, being the effect of Gods grace, be our new creature and our iustice in Christ.

Faith with the other vertues is the formal cause of iustification.

FVLKE. 4 You might as well say, note here, that whatsoeuer S. Paule hath written in this whole Epistle, of iustification by faith without the workes of the Lawe, he ouerthroweth it all in the ende and conclusion. But we must confesse, that in the 5. Chapter, he speaketh of faith, as the cause of our iustification, here of workes and obedience, the fruits of faith, and end of our iustification. For none of your conclusions can be gathered out of the text, in any lawfull forme of argument. There is in deed in the iustified, a new creature of iustice inherent, but they are thereby declared iust, not made iust. But where you denie faith to be the instrumentall cause of our iustification, you go against the doctrine of your owne Doctors. For Thomas Aquinas confesseth, that we are iustified by faith instrumentally, or as by an instrumentall cause. And what can apprehend or receiue the grace and mercie of God, by which we are saued, but faith, the roote and beginning of al vertues? To denie faith therefore to be the instrument of our iustification, is to deny that we haue receiued the grace of iustification. And seeing God iustifieth the vngodly man, that beleeueth in him, Rom. 4. 5 no vertue inherent can be of the forme or essence of iustification. For an vngodly man hath no vertue inherent in him, and good workes are not the forme, but the end of our iustification, Eph. 2. 9. 10. Neither doth faith iustifie merite iustification, but God reputeth faith without merite of workes, vnto iustice, Rom. 4. And that faith doth not merite in the cause of iustification, S. Augustine prooueth effectually Ep. 106. and ad Simp. lib. 1. Qu. 2. The formal cause of our iustification therefore, is the promise of the Gospell, which is the seede of immortalitie, Eph. 2, 20. 1. Pet. 1, 23. and the materiall cause is the iustice of Christ, imputed through faith, 2. Co. 5, 21. 1. Cor. 1, 30.

THE ARGVMENT OF THE EPISTLE OF S. PAVL TO THE EPHESIANS.

OF S. Paules first commyng to Ephesus, & short abode there, we read Act. 18. And immediately Act. 19. of his returning thither according to his promise, what time he abode there 3. moneths, speaking to the Iewes in the Synagogue. Act. 19. v. 8. and afterward apart from them (because they were obstinate) 2. yeres in a certaine schoole, so that al that dwelt in Asia, heard the word of our Lord, Iewes & Gentiles. Act. 19. v. 10 The whole time himself calleth 3. yeres, in his exhortation at Miletū to the clergy at Ephesus. Act. 20. v. 31.

After al this he writeth in this Epistle vnto them from Rome (as it is said) being then prisoner and in chaines. and that as it seemeth not the first time of his being in bonds there, whereof we read Act. 28: but the second time, whereof we reade in the Ecclesiastical Stories afterward: because he saith in this Epistle c. 6. v. 21. Tychicus wil certifie you of al things, whom I haue sent to you. Of whom againe in the 2. to Tim. c. 4. v. 12. he saith. Tychicus I haue sent to Ephesus. And the said 2. Epistle to Timothee (no doubt) was written very little before his death: for in it thus he saith: I am euen now to be sacrificed, and the time of my resolution is at hand. 2. Tim. 4. 6.

Eph. 3. v. 1. & 4. v. 1. Eph. 6. v. 20.

*In the three first chapters, he commendeth vnto them the grace of God, in calling of the Gentiles no lesse then the Iewes, and making one blessed Church of both. Wherein his intention is to moue them to perseuere (for otherwise they shoulde be passing vngratefull) and specially not to be moued with his trouble, who was their Apostle: knowing (belike) that * it would be a great tentation vnto them, if they should heare soone after, that he were executed, therefore also arming them in the end of the Epistle, as it were in complete harnesse.*

* See Act. 20, v. 25. 32.

In the other three chapters he exhorteth them to good life, in al points, and al states, as it becommeth Christians: and afore al other things, that they be most studious to continue in the vnitie of the Church, and obedience of the Pastors thereof, whom Christ hath giuen to continue and to be our stay against al Heretikes, from his Ascention, euen to the ful building vp of his Church in the end of the world.

CHAP. I.

He magnifieth the grace of Gods eternal predestination and temporal vocation, 11 both of the Iewes, 13 and also of the Ephesians being Gentiles. 13 For whose excellent faith and charitie he reioyceth, and continually praieth for their increase, that they may see more cleerely the greatnes both of the inheritance in heauen, and also of Gods might which helpeth them thereunto: 20 an example of which might they may behold in the supereminent exalting of Christ.

Moral. li. 32. c. 18. *Therefore good Reader, make no account of * Caluins and others infidelitie, which blaspemously blame and condemne the holy Doctors diligence in this point, of curiositie and impietie. The whole endeuour of these heretikes is, to bring all into doubt, and to corrupt euery article of our religion.* Nine orders of Angels. Cal. vpon this place.

FVLKE. 4 Caluines wordes are these: As of the diuersitie of the names, we gather, that there be diuers orders: so to enquire of them ouer subtilly, and to define their number, and to appoint their degrees, is a point not only of foolish curiositie, but also of vngodly and dangerous rashnes. Caluine meaneth to enquire, define, or appoint more subtilly, then the worde of God hath reuealed, is both vaine curiositie, and impious temeritie. What infidelitie or blasphemie is conteined in this saying! If the diligence of the holy Doctors, haue concluded any thing certeinly out of the worde of God, Caluine speaketh not one word against them. Caluine neuer purposed, or endeuoured, to bring any article of religion in doubt: but would haue all articles of religion grounded vpon the word of God, that they might be vndoubted. Slanders.

RHEM. 5 Apoc. 19. 12. 22. 25. 22 Head.) It maketh a high proofe among the Protestants, that no man can be head of the Church, because it is a calling and dignitie proper to Christ. But in truth by as good reason there should be no king nor Lord, because, He is king & Lord. neither should there be Bishop or Pastor, because he is the Bishop & Pastor of our soules: nor Pontifex nor Apostle, for by these titles S. Paul termeth him. Heb. 3. none should be piller, foundation, rocke, light, or master of the Church or truth, because Christ is properly al these. And yet our new doctors (though they be exceeding seditious and would for the aduantage of their sect be gladly ridde of kings and al other Superiors temporall, if they feared not the sworde more then God, and would finde as good Scriptures to be deliuered of them, as they now finde to discharge themselues of obedience to Popes:) yet (I say) they will not denie al the former titles and dignities (notwithstanding Christes soueraine right in the same) to be giuen and communicated to the Princes and Magistrates of the earth both spiritual and temporal, though Christ in a more diuine, ample, absolute, excellent, and transcendent sort, haue all these things attributed or appropriated to himselfe. So then, though he be the head of the Church, and the onely head in such soueraine and principal manner, as no earthly man or mere creature euer is or can be, and is ioined to the Church in a more excellent sort of coniunction, then any king is to his subiects or Countrie, or any Pope or Prelate to the Church whereof he is gouernour, euen so farre that it is called his body Mystical: life, motion, spirit, grace issuing downe from him to it and the members of the same, as from the head to the naturall body. though in this sort (we say) no man can be head but Christ, nor the Church be body to any but to Christ: yet the Pope may be the ministerial head, that is to say, the cheefe Gouernour, Pastor, and Prelate of the same, and may be his Vicar or Vicegerent in the regiment of that part which is in earth. as S. Hierom calleth Damasus the Pope, Summum Sacerdotem, the cheefe and highest Priest: and the Apostle saith of this ministerial head. The head cannot say to the feete, you are not necessary for me. For therein also is a great difference betweene Christ and euery mortal Prelate, that (as the Apostle here saith) he is head of the whole Church, meaning of the triumphant (and of al Angels also though in other sort) no lesse then of the Church militant. So Peter was not, nor any Pope, nor any man can be. where you must obserue, that for this soueraine preeminence of Christ in this case, the Church is not called the body mystical of any Gouernour, Peter, Paul, or what Prelate or Pope so euer. As christ is king, and yet men are kings also: so Christ is head of the Church, and yet man may be head thereof also. Christ is head of his Church in a far more excellent sort, then any man can be. Hiero. ep. 123. 1. Cor. 12. 21.

FVLKE. 5 Ioel. 2. 19. That which is proper to Christ, is not communicable to any creature: to be head of his body, is proper to Christ: therfore it agreeth not to any creature, to be head of Christs body, which is his Church, in that sense that Christ is head thereof. Neither is any man, King, Lord, Bishop, Pastor, Pontifex, Apostle, piller, foundation, rocke, light, or master of the Church, or truth, as Christ is properly al these. For that which is proper to Christ is not common to any other. Earthly kings, & earthly Lords, be so Kings & Lords, as they be his subiects, & seruants, Lieutenants, & Deputies, so I say of Bishops & Pastors. The high Priests office he hath himselfe, without any Deputie, & executeth it in his owne person, in that he offred him selfe the only sacrifice of our redemption once for all, & being entred into the holiest place, appeareth in the presence of God for vs, to make perpetuall intercession for vs. Heb. 9. 24. &c. As he was immediate Apostle from God his father, so he hath giuen and sent Apostles from himself. The Apostles are pillers & foundations, rockes of stones, but yet so, that Christ is the onely corner stone, onely maine foundation, & stedfast rocke, that beareth vp the whole building. Christ is the only true light, which lighteneth euery man that commeth into this world: & Iohn Baptist, though a light, yet was not that light, nor any Apostle or other messenger, which is but as a candle, or a starre taking his light of the Sunne. Christ is the only master of the Church, and truth, forbidding vs to call or acknowledge, any other master or auctor of truth, though he haue many Vshers vnder him, that teach the Church in that truth, which they haue learned of him. So Christ is the only head of the Church, as you confesse in such sort, as no earthly man, or meere creature can be. Now it may be doubted, whether you take the Pope, to be a meere creature, because some of your Canonists haue said vnto him, Nec Deus es, nec homo, quasi neuter es inter vtrumq;, Thou art neither Christ the onely head of the whole Church.

neither God, nor man, thou art as it were a Neuter betweene both. As also, that some of you haue called him Dominus Deus noster Papa, Our Lord God the Pope, And some haue denied that he is a man, as the See of Peter is subiect vnto him. Clemens in præmio in gloss. Extrauag. de verb. signi, Cap. cum inter. in glossa edit. Paris. 1513. Decret. sext. de electione. Fundamenta. in gloss. But to take you at the best, because you say, no Pope is so head of the Church, as Christ is the head of his mystical body, It remaineth, that if you wil haue him head any way, you must shew by whom he is so constituted, and made head, as S. Paul saith, that Christ is by God. The Pope you say, is ministerial head of the Church, and yet you say, the Church can be body to none, but vnto Christ, whereof it followeth, that none can properly be head of the Church, but Christ. For euery head is head of some body, and no body but a monster hath two heads. For though euery king may be called head of the Church of his dominion, which is a body distinct from the whole Church, as euery seueral parish is, and the Gouernour thereof may in some sense be called head thereof, yet of the whole Church, being one body consisting of al the members, there can be but one head, that is Christ. You answer, he is head, but of that part onely which is on earth. Then is he not head of the Catholike & vniuersal Church, by your owne confession, neither hath he any thing to doe in Purgatory. But that he is head of the militant Church, what proofe haue you out of the Scriptures? You answer, the Apostle said of this ministerial head, The head can not say to the feete, you are not necessary for me. You durst not for shame note thus much vpon that text, lest your very special friends should note your impudency, yea you haue noted vpon the 15 verse, that Christ is the head of that spiritual body, which is resembled to our naturall body. Therefore this is but a voluntary, new, & absurd exposition, contrary to the manifest meaning of the Apostle. If you will say, our principal head may iustly say, he hath no neede of his feete or lowest members, it is vtterly false: for as he is head of his mysticall body, he cannot spare any one of his lowest members, but euery one is required to his perfection and fulnesse, as you haue noted your selfe vpon this verse. When scripture faileth, you flee to Hieromes auctoritie, who maketh nothing for you, in calling Damasus highest priest, seeing that he confesseth els where, that the poore Bishop of Eugubium, is of the same worthines and priesthood, which the great Bishop of Rome, and that all Bishops are alike, the Apostles successors, Epi. Enagrio. Wherefore seeing you conclude, that the Church is not called the mysticall body of the Pope, it is lawfull for vs to inferre, that the Pope is not head of the mysticall body of Christ, but onely Christ himselfe.

CHAP. II.

16 And may reconcile both in one body to God by the crosse, killing the enmities in him selfe.

17 And comming he euangelized peace to you that were farre of, and peace to them that were nigh.

18 For * by him we haue accesse both in one Spirit to the Father.

19 Nowe then you are not strangers and forreiners: but you are ‘ citizens of the saincts, and the domesticals of God, 13 But nowe in Christ Iesus, ye which sometime were farre off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 1 9 Not of workes.) It is said, not of workes as thine, of thy selfe being vnto thee, but as those in which God hath made, formed, and created thee Aug. de gr. & lib. arbit. c. 8. & seq.

FVLKE. 1 S. Augustine meaneth none otherwise, but that good workes are necessarie, and that faith voide of good workes, doth not suffice, as he sheweth also in Psal. 144. vpon this text. What then doe we not worke wel? yes we worke: But how? God working in vs, because by faith we giue place in our heart to him, which worketh good in vs, and by vs: Therefore heare whence thou workest good: for we are his worke Created &c. Chrysostome vpon this place saith in Eph. hom. 4. He hath not refused men that haue workes, but he hath saued them being destitute of workes by grace, that no man might haue whereof to glorie. And then lest hearing that it is not of workes, but all is prepared and finished by faith, thou shouldest become idle: see what he addeth: for we are his worke &c. Of grace not of workes.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 2 8 By grace you are saued through faith,) Our first iustification is of Gods grace, and not of our deseruings: because none of all our actions that were before our iustification, could merite vr iustly procure the grace of iustification. Againe, he saith, through faith: for that faith is the beginning, foundation, and roote of all Iustification, and the first of all other vertues, without which it is impossible to please God. Our first iustification of meere grace, and faith the foundation thereof.

FVLKE. 2 This iustification of meere grace by faith onely, without workes, is that, by which we are saued, as the text is plaine, and all the auncient fathers consent: for this newe deuise of the first and second iustification, was vnknowen to them. So saith S. Paul. Whom God hath iustified, he hath glorified, Rom. 8. 30. Theodoret saith: The grace of God hath vouchsafed vs of these good things, we haue brought onely faith. Againe. We beleeued not of our owne accord, but being called, we came to him, and when we were come, he required not puritie and innocencie of life, but accepting faith onely, he forgaue vs our sinnes. One iustification by faith onely vnto saluation.

RHEM. 3 20 Built vpon the foundation.) Note against the Heretikes that thinke it dishonorable to Christ, to attribute his titles or callings to mortall men, that the faithful (though builded first, principally, and properly vpon Christ) yet are said here to be built also vpon the Apostles and Prophets. Why may not the Church then be builded vpon Peter? The Church builded vpon Christ, & yet vpon the Apostles also.

FVLKE. 3 Where the Apostles and Prophets are called the foundation, Christ himselfe hath his proper place to be the corner stone. We denie not, that the Church is builded vpon Peter, as one of the foundation stones, but that vpon Peter onely, as the maine foundation which is Christ alone, we denie that the Church is builded. 1. Cor. 3. 11. Peters Prerogatiue.

5 Which mysterie in other ages was not opened vnto the sonnes of men, as it is now reuealed vnto his holy Apostles and Prophets by the spirite:

9 And bring to light to all men what the fellowship of the mysterie is, which from the beginning of the worlde hath beene hid in God, which made all things through Iesus Christ:

10 To the intent that nowe vnto the rulers and powers in heauenly things might be knowen by the Church, the very manifolde wisedome of God,

11 According to the eternall purpose which he wrought in Christ Iesus our Lord:

14 For this cause I bowe my knees vnto the father of our Lord Iesus Christ,

17 That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith: that yee being rooted and grounded in loue, RHEM. 1 9 Inferiour parts.) He meaneth specially of his descending to Hell.

FVLKE. 1 His descending doth not signifie any passing from place to place, but teacheth the greatnes of his dispensation, that when he was most high, he abased himselfe so much, and endured so great abasement. Theodoret vpon this text, In this sense he descended to hell.

RHEM. 2 23 Be renued.) The Apostle teacheth vs not to apprehend Christs iustice by faith onely, but to be renued in our selues truely, and to put on vs the new man formed and created in iustice and holines of truth. By the which, free will also is proued to be in vs, to worke with God, or to consent vnto him in our sanctification.

FVLKE. 2 We beleeue as the Apostle teacheth, that we must be renued in the spirit of our minde, and put on the new man, &c. But this renouation is onely begunne in this life, and not perfected vntill we be made perfectly iust and holy after this life. And therefore the Apostle teacheth vs, to apprehend the iustice of Christ onely, that we may be iustified vnto saluation in this life, 2.*Cor.*5.21. Neither doth this place proue that our will doth worke with God before God doe alter our will, and of vnwilling to holines and righteousnes, by his Spirit maketh vs willing: for of our selues we are not apt to thinke any thing, 2.*Cor.*3.5. ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 3 5 One faith.) As rebellion is the bane of ciuil Commonweaithes and kingdomes, and peace and concord the preseruation of the same; so is Schisme, diuision, and diuersitie of faiths or fellowship in the seruice of God, the calamitie of the church: and peace, vnitie, vniformitie, the speciall blessing of God therein. and in the Church aboue all Commonwealths, because it is in all points a Monarchie tending euery way to vnitie. but one God, but one Christ, but one Church, but one hope, one faith, one baptisme, one head, one body. Whereof S. Cyprian li. de vnit. Ec. nu. 3. saith thus: One Church the holy Ghost in the person of our Lord designeth and saith, One is my doue. This vnitie of the Church, he that holdeth not, doth he thinke he holdeth the faith? He that withstandeth and resisteth the Church, he that forsaketh Peters chaire vpon which the Church was built, doth he trust that he is in the Church? When the blessed Apostle S. Paul also sheweth this Sacrament of vnitie, saying, One body and one spirit, &c. Which vnitie we Bishops specially that rule in the Church, ought to hold fast and maintaine, that we may proue the Bishoply function also it selfe to be one and vndiuided, &c. And againe, There is one God, and one Christ, and one Church, and one Chaire, by our Lordes voice founded vpon Peter. An other altar to be set vp, or a new Priesthod to be made, besides one altar, and one Priesthod, is impossible. Whosoeuer gathereth els where, scattereth. It is adulterous, it is impious, it is sacrilegious, whatsoeuer is instituted by mans furie to the breach of Gods diuine disposition. Get ye far from the contagion of such men, and flee from their speaches as a canker and pestilence, our Lord hauing præmonished and warned before hand, They are blind, leaders of the blind, &c. Whereby we learne that this vnitie of the Church commended so much vnto vs, consisteth in the mutual fellowship of all Bishops with the See of Peter. S. Hilarie also (li. ad Constantium Augustum) thus applieth this same place of the Apostle against the Arians, as we may do against the Caluinists. Perilous and miserable it is, saith he, that there are now so many faithes as willes, and so many doctrines as maners, whiles either faithes are so written as we wil, or as we wil, so are vnderstood: and whereas according to one God, and one Lord, and one baptisme, there is also one faith, we fall away from that which is the onely faith, and whiles moe faithes be made, they beginne to come to that, that there is none at all.

Vnitie of the Cath. Church.

Ep. 40. Schisme detestable.

Among heretikes as many faithes as wiles.

FULKE. 3 In the former saying of S. Cyprian: these words, He that forsaketh Peters chaire, vpon which the Church was builit, are none of Cyprians wordes in the ancient bookes of Cyprian written and printed, but lately foysted in by Pammelius. Likewise in the second testimonie, where Cyprian hath super Petram, vpon the rocke, Pammelius hath turned it into Petrum, vpon Peter. Such patcherie will serue well, to make Poperie seeme ancient among the ignorant, but it is grosse paltrie in the iudgement of all that be wise and learned. Therefore your conclusion, that the vnitie of the Church consisteth in fellowship with Peters Chaire, is builded vpon meere forgery and foysting. And if those sayings were true, we might as truely say, that the Pope holdeth not Peters Chaire, that holdeth not Peters faith. The saying of Hilarie maketh nothing against Caluine, nor them that consent in doctrine with him, which acknowledge but one faith as one God.

Falsifying of the old doctors.

RHEM. 4 11 Some Apostles.) Many functions that were euen in the Apostles time, are not here named: which must be noted against the Aduersaries that cal here for Popes, as though the names of Bishops, Priests, or Deacons were not as well left out as Popes: whom yet they cannot deny to haue beene in vse in S. Pauls daies. And therefore they haue no more reason, out of this place to dispute against the Pope, then against the rest of the Ecclesiastical functions. Neither is it necessare to reduce such as be not specified here, to these here named: though in deede both other Bishops and Prelates and specially Popes may be conteined vnder the names of Apostles, Doctors, and Pastors. Certes the roome and dignitie of the Pope is a very continuall Apostleship, and S. Bernard calleth it Apostolatum. Bernard. ad Eugen. li. 34. c. 4. &c. in fine.

The heretikes foolish negatiue argument against the Pope, answered.

The Popes office is called an Apostleship.

FULKE. 4 The Apostle nameth all functions necessarie for the planting and continuance of doctrine, and the vnitie of the Church in the truth, among which the Pope is none, therefore he hath no function for certeintie and vnitie of truth, as is pretended. The functions perteining to the externall gouernment of the Church are not here named, but onely such as perteine vnto doctrine, where the Apostle should haue left out the principall of all, if the Popes supremacie were so necessarie for continuance of vnitie in truth, as you affirme. The functions of Bishops, elders and deacons, (as they respect the external gouernment and policie of the Church,) are els where named generally and particularly: but in respect of the office of teaching, they are conteined vnder pastours and teachers: But the Pope who is neither sent of Christ, neither teacheth nor feedeth, how should he be an Apostle, pastour or teacher? But for his feeding and teaching you will not greatly striue: for his Apostleship you can finde nothing in the Scripture, nor in the ancient fathers for a thousand yeeres after Christ, and therefore it beganne belike in Bernards time, who as he being carried away with the errour of his age, ascribeth too much to the Bishop of Rome, so he ment not to make him an Apostle, as those that were sent immediatly of Christ, and not of men nor by men: of whom S. Paul speaketh in this place: who had also an office distinct from all other. Therefore seeing the Pope hath neither sending from Christ, nor executeth the office of an Apostle, we may say to him as Tertullian said to Marcion the heretike: If thou be a Prophet, foreshew sometime. If thou be an Apostle, preach euerie where. If thou be an Apostolike man, agree in doctrine with the Apostles.

The Pope not necessarie for vnitie and certainty of trueth.

RHEM. 5 13 Vntil we meete.) The Church of God shal neuer lacke these spiritual functions, or such as be answerable to them, according to the time and state of the Church, till the worldes end. Whereby you may proue, the Catholike Church, that is to say, that visible company of Christians which hath euer had, and by good records can proue they haue had, a continuall ordinarie succession of Bishops, Pastors, and Doctors, to be the onely true Church: and these other good fellowes that for many worlds or ages together can not shew that they had any one Bishop, or ordinarie yea or extraordinarie officer for them and their sect, to be an adulterous Hereticall generation. And this place of the Apostle assuring to the true Church a perpetuall visible continuance of Pastors and Apostles or their successors, warranted the holy fathers to trie all Heretikes by the most famous succession of the Popes of Rome. So did S. Irenæus, li. 3. c. 3. Tertullian, in præscript. Optatus, li. 2. cont. Parm. S. Augustine, in ps. cont. part. Donat. & cont. ep. Manich. c. 4. & ep. 165. Epiph. hær 27. and others.

Continuall succession of Bishops, an euident argument of the true visible Church.

The fathers refuted heretikes by the succession of the Bishops of FULKE. 5 The Church of Christ hath neuer wanted pastors and teachers, for her continuance in the trueth of the doctrine of saluation, nor euer shall want them. Wherefore that Church which can proue by the holy Scriptures, that she holdeth the doctrine of the Gospell conteined in the same, neede not be carefull to know the names of the persons, and of the places where such pastors and teachers haue liued. But the doctrine proued to be true, doeth argue that it hath alwaies had such continuance and succession, as God promiseth to true doctrine. Contrariwise, the succession of persons and places, proueth not the continuance of truth. And therefore you make a foolish and vnlearned Argument, when you say: The Catholike Church, that is to say, that visible company of Christians, which hath euer had, and by good record can proue they euer haue had, a continuall ordinary succession of Bishops, pastors and doctors, is the onely true Church. For first, it shall not be granted vnto you, that the Catholike church is alwaies a visible companie as you meane visible, to be alwaies in sight, euen of the wicked world. Secondly, the Popish Church hath no succession from the Apostles, for many hundred yeeres after Christ. For they

they can not be ſaid to ſucceed them, whoſe doctrine they renounce. Thirdly, that ſucceſſion which they ſhew is not of paſtors and teachers, but of wolues and other dumbe dogs, or teachers of lies & fables. Fourthly, if it were graunted that they haue ſucceſſion, which haue continuance of the names of Biſhops, &c. in ſuch places as the Apoſtles haue taught, without conſent in doctrine with them: The Greeke Churches and other Churches of the East, (all which they accompt, and ſome are in deed heretikes) haue as ordinarie ſucceſſion, and as good records to ſhew from the Apoſtles, & euen from Peter, as you haue of your Popes from Peter. If this ſucceſſion proue not them to be the true Church, no more doth it proue you. If truth of doctrine be neceſſary to proue a true Church, the Scriptures are ſufficient to proue a true Church, with lawfull ſucceſſion alſo. Where you ſay, for many ages, we cannot ſhew that we haue had any one biſhop, it is falſe: for all the true biſhops of the Primitiue Church for ſix hundreth yeeres & more after Chriſt, in all neceſſarie points of doctrine agree with vs, and therefore were anceſtors of our Church. In the later times alſo (for euery age we can name diuers paſtors and teachers,) euen in the moſt darke times, and vnder the greateſt tyranny of Antichriſt: by whom the true doctrine and Church of God haue beene continued, (though obſcurely as the Moone in the wane or Eclipſe) euen vntill our daies. In which God hauing openly reueiled the wickednes of Antichriſt, the Church of Chriſt is againe reſtored into the light and ſight of the world, and daily preuaileth againſt the blind broode of Antichriſt. The ſucceſſion of the biſhops of Rome, and other paſtors and teachers from the Apoſtles, was alledged by the ancient fathers againſt thoſe heretikes which taught new doctrine, which neither the Apoſtles nor their ſucceſſors heard of in the Church, before the ſeuerall ariſing of thoſe heretikes. But ſeeing the Papiſts are neuer able to proue, that we diſſent in doctrine from the word of God, nor from the moſt ancient fathers of the Primitiue Church, (as we proue that they doe) the Argument of ſucceſſion vſed by the ancient fathers, maketh directly againſt them, and nothing in the world againſt vs. One example ſhall ſerue in ſtead of many. Gregory biſhop of Rome teſtifieth, that none of his predeceſſors did euer vſe that prophane name of ſingularitie, to be vniuerſall biſhop, (which yet his ſucceſſors haue vſurped) therefore haue declared that they were the very Antichriſts according to Gregories prophecie, and auctors of a new hereſie neuer before receiued in the Church for ſixe hundreth yeeres after Chriſt. Gregor. lib. 4. Ep. 32. & 36.

RHEM. 6 14 With euery wind.) The ſpeciall vſe of the ſpirituall Gouernours is, to keepe vs in vnitie and conſtancie of the Catholike faith, that we be not caried away with the blaſt or wind of euery hereſie. Which is a very proper note of ſectes and new doctrines that trouble the infirme weaklings of the Church, by certaine ſeaſons of diuerſe ages: as ſometimes the Arians, then the Manichees, an other time the Neſtorians, then the Lutherans, Caluiniſts, and ſuch like: who at diuers times in diuers places haue blowen diuers blaſts of falſe doctrine.

FVLKE. 6 The Paſtors and teachers doe not preſerue vnitie in truth, but by teaching the word of truth, which ſeeing Luther and Caluine in all points neceſſarie to ſaluation did teach, they are not to be numbred among heretikes, but in ſtead of their names, the Papiſts being placed, will make your note ſound and Catholike.

Augustine, vpon the confession which thou hast made, knowledging me to be Christ the sonne of the liuing God, I will build my congregation or Church.* By which it is manifest, that the translator vnderstood congregation which expresseth the Greeke worde better then Church, to be all one with Church. And he rather vsed the worde Congregation, then Church, to auoide ambiguitie, because this worde Church, is commonly taken for the house of the assembly of Christians, and that the people might know, that the Church, is a gathering together of all the members into one body, which in the name of Church, doth not appeere. But after the people were taught, to distinguish of the word Church, and to vnderstand it for the mysticall body of Christ, the later translations vsed that terme: not that the other was any corruption, or the later any correction, but to declare, that both is one. But of this matter, more at large in my defence against Greg. Martyn Cap.5.

RHEM. 25 Sauiour of his body.) None hath saluation or benefite by Christ, that is not of his body the Church. And what Church that is, S. Augustine expresseth in these words. The Catholike Church onely is the body of Christ, whereof he is head, out of this body the holy Ghost quickneth no man. And a little after, He that will haue the Spirit, let him beware he remaine not out of the CHVRCH, let him beware he enter not into it feinedly. August. ep.50. ad Bonifacium comitem in fine.

The CHVRCH neuer erreth.

FVLKE. 3 A lewde slander, for we neuer taught, that the Catholike Church can fall from Christ, by error, idolatry, or false worship, although great multitudes, and particular churches, (such as the Church of Rome is,) may fall from him: and the best Church may erre, yet not so, that she can fall from him. And if it be a note of the true Church, (as you say) to be alwaies obedient to Christs words, and commandements. It is certaine the Church of Rome, cannot be the true Church of Christ, which so long hath disobeyed the word and commandement of Christ, in so many things. Namely in worshipping of images, in maintaining traditions of men contrary to his word, in robbing the people of the one halfe of the sacrament, in forbidding the people to search the scriptures, in forbidding meates and mariage, in vsing an vnknowen tongue in common prayers and ministring sacraments, in vsurping a sacrificing priesthood, in peruerting the vse of his supper vnto a sacrifice propitiatorie, which is contumelious to his death: and in many other.

RHEM. 4 29 As Christ the Church.) It is an vnspeakable dignitie of the CHVRCH, which the Apostle expresseth often els where, but specially in this whole passage, to be that creature onely for which Christ effectually suffered, to be washed and embrued with water and blood issuing out of his holy side, to be nourished with his owne body (for so doth S. Irenæus expound li.5. in principio) to be his members: to be so ioyned vnto him as the body and members of the same flesh, bone, & substance to the head, to be loued and cherished of him as wife of husband, yea to be his wife and most deere spouse, taken and formed (as S. Augustine often saith) out of his owne side vpon the Crosse, as Eue our first father Adams spouse was made of his ribbe.* In Psal.126. & in Psal.127. & tract.9. in Ioan. & tract 120. In respect of which great dignitie and excellencie, the same holy father affirmeth the CHVRCH to be the principall creature, and therefore named in the Creede next after the Holy Ghost, and he proueth against the Macedonians, the Holy Ghost to be God, because he is named before the Church in the confession of our faith. Of which incomparable excellencie of the Church, so beloued of Christ and so inseparably ioyned in mariage with him, if the Heretikes of our time had any sense or consideration, they would neither thinke their contemptible company or cõgregation to be the glorious spouse of our Lord, nor teach that the church may erre, that is to say, may be diuorced from her spouse for Idolatry, superstition, Heresie, or other abominations: Whereupon one of these absurdities would ensue, that either Christ may sometimes be without a Church and spouse in earth (as he was all the while there were no Caluinists, if their Church be the spouse of Christ) or els if the Catholike Church onely is and hath beene his wife, and the same hath such errors as the Heretikes falsly pretend, that his wife so deere and so praised here, is notwithstanding a very whore. Which horrible absurdities proue and conuince to any man of common sense, both that the Catholike Church alwaies is, and that it teacheth truth alwaies, and to honour God truely and sincerely alwaies: whatsoeuer the adulterous generation of Heretikes thinke or blaspheme.

*Aug. li. de Symb. ad Catechu. 9.

The Church is the principal creature.

The Church can not erre.

Absurdities that follow, if the Church may erre.

FVLKE. 4 The manifold dignitie of the Church (God be praised) we know, and do acknowledge better then you. And how contemptible soeuer our congregation seeme to be in the eies of the prowde whore of Babylon: wee know, it is the glorious spouse of Christ, not clothed in golde, purple, perles, precious stones, as the strompet of Rome Apo.17. but which the spiritual light of the sunne with a crowne of 12. starres hauing the moone vnder her feete &c. Apoc.12. Neither do we teach, as you impudently doe slander vs, that the Church may erre, that is to say, may be diuorced from her spouse, for Idolatry, superstition, heresie or other abominations. But that company which is fallen into Idolatry, heresie & grosse abhominations (as the Romish rable) is fallen from Christ to Antichrist. But the true heauenly Ierusalem, which is the mother of vs all, although while she is a stranger, on the earth she hath her imperfections and spottes, that she may euer acknowledge, by whose grace she standeth, and therefore in some points may erre, and be deceiued, by infirmitie of her members, who are all and euery one, subiect both to error and sinne while they liue in this pilgrimage. Yet is she, and euery true member of her body, preserued by speciall grace of Christ her spouse, that she cannot fall cleane away from him, into any damnable error, idolatry, or abomination. Whereby neither of both your surmised absurdities, doth follow, that either Christ may be without a spouse or Church on earth, neither may the Catholike Church haue such errors, that remayning his wife, she should be notwithstanding a very whore. The Church of Iuda, in the time of the raigne of diuers Kings, did offer sacrifices in the high places, yet onely to the Lord,

The Church erre & yet be spouse of Ch

Lord, which was an error, but not so great that it made a diuorce of the Church from Christ, or that it made the Church of Iuda, a very whore 2.Reg.12. & cap.14.& 15. &c. Therefore the Catholike Church, alwaies is and hath beene, and teacheth all truth necessary to saluation, therefore to honor God truely and sincerely, as touching the substance of Gods honor, though in the exterior forme and maner thereof, and some other opinions, not being of the necessitie of saluation, she may be sometime deceiued. The feast of the Paschall Lambe, which was one of the principall sacrifices and Sacraments of the Church of Israell, perteyning to the worship of God, was not kept so precisely according to the word of God, and the institution thereof, from the daies of the Iudges, in the time of all the best Kings. as it was in the 18. yeere of the raigne of Iosias 2.Reg.23.22. Likewise the feast of tabernacles, had not beene so solemnly kept, from the daies of Iosue, as it was after the captiuitie Nehem.8.18. By which it is manifest, that the Church in the meane time, erred some what from the true externall forme of Gods worship, yet not in the substance thereof, and therefore continued still the spouse of Christ, and onely true Church of God.

RHEM. 5 32 This is a great Sacrament.) Mariage a great Sacrament of Christ and his Church prefigured in the first parentes. Adam (saith S. Augustine tract. 15. in Io.) who was a forme or figure of him that was to come, yea rather God in him, gaue vs a great token of a Sacrament. For both he deserued sleeping to take a wife, and of his ribbe his wife was made unto him: because of Christ sleeping on the Crosse the Church was to be made out of his side, In an other place he maketh Matrimonie a Sacrament of Christ and his Church: in that, that as the maried man must forsake father and mother, and cleaue unto his wife, so Christ as it were left his father, exinanitting himselfe by his incarnation, and left the Sinagogue his mother, and ioyned himselfe to the Church Li.12. c. 8. cont. Faustum. In diuers other places he maketh it also a Sacrament, specially in that it is an inseparable band betwixt two, and that can neuer be dissolued but by death: signifying Christs perpetuall and indissoluble coniunction with the Church his one onely spouse de Gen. ad lit. li 9. c. 7. Cont. Pelag. de pec. orig. li. 2. c. 34. De fid. & op. c. 7. De bono coniug. c. 7. & 18. And in an other place, The good of Mariage (saith he) among the people of God is in the holines of a Sacrament. De bono coniug. li c. 24. MATRIMONY a sacrament.

Who would haue thought such misteries and Sacraments to be in Mariage, that the ioyning of man and wife together should represent so great a mysterie, if the Apostle him selfe, and after him this holy father and others, had not noted it? or who can marueile that the holy Church taketh this to be a Sacrament, and to giue grace of sanctification to the parties maried, that they may liue together in mutuall fidelitie, bring vp their children in faith and feare of God, and possesse their vessell (as the Apostle speaketh) in sanctification and honour, and not in passion of lust and ignominie, as the Heathen doe which know not God, and as our brutish new Maisters seeme to doe that commend mariage aboue all things so far as it feedeth their concupiscences, but for grace, Sacrament, mysterie, or sanctification thereby, they care no more then the Heathen or brute beastes do? And thus we gather that Matrimonie is a Sacrament, and not of the Greeke word Mysterie onely, as Caluin falsely saith, not of the Latin word Sacrament, both which we know haue of their nature a more generall signification, and that in the Scriptures also: but whereas these names are here giuen to Matrimonie by the Apostle, and are not giuen in the Scriptures to Baptisme and the Eucharist, let them tell vs why they also apply these words from their generall signification to signifie specially and peculiarly those two Sacraments neuer so named expresly in Scripture, and doe not likewise follow the Catholike Church in calling Matrimony by the same name, which is here so called of the Apostle, specially whereas the signification in it, is as great as in any other of the Sacraments, and rather greater. The grace giuen by this sacrament. 1.Thes.4. The Protchadits fleshly estimation of mariage. μυστηριον. Sacramentum.

FYLER 5 The Apostle saith, the spirituall coniunction of Christ and his Church, is a great mysterie, as Chrysostome, Theodoret, and Hierom. Gaudentius Brixianus ep. ad Germin. Mysterium hoc grande est: Ego autem dico in Christo & Ecclesia. Eucherius in Gen. lib. 7. c. 22. & lib. 2. c. 22. Prosper Aquit. de prom. & prad. per. c. 1. Remigius in Psal. 15. Albinus in Psal. 37. Cassianus de incar. Dom. lib. 5. Paschasius de Corpore & Sang. cap. 7. doe vnderstand it: but admit it be so as Augustine and some other of the ancient fathers take it that Matrimony is a great mysterie, of the coniunction of Christ and his Church, yet it followeth not, that Matrimony is a Sacrament, as Baptisme and the Lords Supper be called Sacraments, or that it is a Sacrament of the new Testament, seeing matrimony was instituted in Paradise, before the fall of man. But where you say, we haue none, but a fleshly estimation of mariage, and that we acknowledge no grace, mysterie or sanctification thereby, more then brute beastes, it is a vile and malicious slander. For we acknowledge Matrimony, to be an holy and pure institution of God, honorable in all men, yea euen in the Ministers of his word and Sacraments, according to the expresse doctrine of the holy Ghost, and necessary for some men, and that God giueth grace and sanctification thereby, to his faithfull, to liue in holines and purenes, from filthy pollution of the flesh. And as for mysterie, we acknowledge, not one, but many mysteries in matrimony: as Hierom, and Nazianzene, (as Hierom witnesseth) did acknowledge. Yet seeing the whole dispensation of our saluation, is testified by the Sacraments of our regeneration, and of our spirituall nourishment, whereby we are assured, that we are both borne of God and fedde by him to be his children for euer: we know no more visible signes, of those inuisible graces, instituted by our Sauiour Christ in the new Testament, but Baptisme and the Lords Supper. But you that make so great a sacrament of matrimony, what grace, mysterie, and sanctification you acknowledge thereby, you declare by your antichristian prohibiting of so gratious and holy institution, to them to whom the dispensation of the holy word and mysteries of God is committed. Yea euen to them, for whom, in respect of their infirmitie it is necessarie, and that contrarie to the doctrine of the holy Ghost, who alloweth a Bishop, Priest, and Deacon to be the husband of one wife. Notwithstanding: you professe with blasphemous mouthes, that the sacred order of Priesthoode is profaned, yea you say profaned and made meere laycall, and popular, by mariage. These be the wordes of Gregory Martin, who did set them forth by consent of your whole trayterous and hereticall Seminary of Rhemes in the 15. Chapter, sect. 11. of his lewde booke intituled A discouery &c. And where as you complaine that Caluine doth falsely say, that you gather matrimony to be a sacrament of the Greeke or Latin words onely, which is Mystery or Sacrament, which you know, to haue of there nature a more generall signification. Your owne arguments doe verefie his saying: for you can finde no more of it, but that it is an holy and great mysterie. Yet is not euery holy and great mysterie, a Sacrament of the new Testament, as Baptisme and the Eucharist are. The master of the sentence confesseth, that the sacrament of matrimonie, was instituted before sinne lib. 4. dist. 26. therefore it is no sacrament of the new Testament. And what other argument hath Peter Lumbarde, the Maister of your diuinitie, to proue that Matrimony is a Sacrament, but onely the name of Sacramentum, vsed in this place? But we must tell you, why we call Baptisme and the Lords Supper, which are neuer so named expressely in the Scripture, by the name of mysteries: or Sacraments. You would haue it thought, onely vpon the popish Churches auctoritie. But we haue the auctoritie of the word of God, expressely, beside the testimonie of the Church, calling those holy seales, by those names. S. Paul calleth the Ministers of Christ the dispensers of the mysteries of God 1. Cor.4.1. Therefore these holy seales, being a Mariage no Sacrament of the new Testamen-speciall charge of there dispensation, are in Scripture expressely called mysteries, which is the Greeke of Sacraments: saiing that the word Sacramentum in Latin, hath some other significations, that the Greeke word mysterie hath not. But why doe we not call Matrimony by the same name? Verely in Greeke or Latin we make no doubt, to call Matrimony so. But seeing the English word Sacrament by vse of English speach, is restreyned, and taken onely for outward seales of Gods grace vnto our salvation, we forbeare to call Matrimonie so, commonly, although for names and termes, so the simple might keepe the difference and distinction of things, we make no great accompt, to vse them or leaue them.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. VI.

RHEM. 1 14 Clothed with.) If a man could not be truly iust or haue iustice in him selfe, how could he be clothed with iustice?

FVLKE. 1 A man may be clothed with the iustice of Christ, which is without him, and be partaker therof by faith, through the communication of Gods spirit. And the terme of clothing doth import a matter without the body, rather then within. Yet the Apostle not so curious in termes, and respecting the workes of iustice that are outward speaketh in deede of an inward vertue of iustice, which is in the regenerate by Gods grace, and whereby they are truely iust, but not perfectly, in Gods sight, and therefore are not iustified thereby, to abide his iudgement, but by the onely iustice of Christ imputed to them by faith, which is most perfect iustice, and able to endure the seueritie of Gods iudgement.

RHEM. 2 23 Charitie.) S. Augustine noteth in sundry places vpon this same text, that faith without charitie serueth not to saluation. lib. 50. hom. 7.

FVLKE. 2 And we haue noted vpon the like texts many times and now we say, that faith voide of good works, is a dead faith, and an vnprofitable faith, a diuelish faith, and not auaileable to iustification or saluation, yet by a true liuely Christian faith onely that worketh by loue, we are iustified vnto saluation.

THE ARGVMENT OF THE EPISTLE OF S. PAVL TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

HOW S. Paul was called by a vision into Macedonia, we read Act. 16. and how he came to Philippi being the first Citie thereof, and of his preaching, myracles, and suffering there. And againe, Act. 19. Paul purposed in the spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to goe to Hierusalem, saying: After I haue been there, I must see Rome also. Which purpose hee executed Act. 20. taking his leaue at Ephesus. And being afterward come into Achaia, he had counsell to returne through Macedonia, and so at length from Philippi he began his nauigation toward Hierusalem, & from Hierusalem being caried prisoner to Rome (Act 28.) he wrote from thence this Epistle to the Philippians: or rather in his second reprehension, about 10. yeeres after the first.

*In it he confirmeth them (as he did * the Ephesians also about the same time) against the tentation that they might haue in hearing that he were executed, therefore he first saith:* And I will haue you know brethren, that the things about me, are come to the more furtherance of the Gospel: so that my bands were made manifest in Christ in al the Court &c. Secondly he signifieth that his desire is, to be dissolued and to be with Christ. but yet (least they should be discomforted) that he hopeth to come againe to them. Whereof notwithstanding, that he hath yet no certainetie, he signifieth in saying: I hope to send Timothee vnto you, immediatly as I shal see the things that concerne me. Thirdly therefore he prepareth them against the worst, saying, I hope to come againe to you: but and if I be immolated vpon the sacrifice and seruice of your faith, I reioyce and congratulate with you all, and the selfe same thing doe you also reioyce and congratulate with me.

Eph. 3. Phil. 1. v. 12. 23. 26. Phil. 2. v. 23. 24. 17.

Moreouer he partly warneth them (as he had done before) of those Iudaicall False-apostles who preached circumcision and Moyses law to the Christian Gentils: partly he exhorteth them to suffer persecution, to liue well, and specially to humble themselues one to another, rather then by any pride to breake the peace and vnitie of the Church.

CHAP. I.

Having signified that he vseth to thanke God for their vertue, 9 and also to pray for their encrease: 12 he certifieth them (for their confirmation and comfort) what good was come through his trouble at Rome, 24 and that he doubteth not (though he rather desire martyrdome) but to come againe vnto them, 27 exhorting them to liue as they ought to doe, 28 and namely not to shrinke for persecution.

6 Trusting this same thing, that he which hath begun in you a good worke, will perfect it vnto the day of Christ IESVS.

7 As it is reason for me, this to thinke for al you, for that I haue you in hart, and in my bands, and in the defence, and the confirmation of the Gospel, al you to be partakers of my ioy.

9 And this I pray, that your charitie may more and more abound in knowledge and in al vnderstanding:

10 That you may approoue the better things, that you may be sincere and without offence vnto the day of Christ.

11 Repleniſhed with the fruite of iustice by IESVS Christ, vnto the glory and praise of God.

12 And I will haue you know brethren, that the things about me are come to the more furtherance of the Gospel:

13 So that my bandes were made manifest in Christ in al the court, and in al the rest,

14 That many of our brethren in our Lord, hauing confidence in my bands, were bold more aboundantly without feare to speake the word of God.

17 And some of contention preach Christ not sincerely: supposing that they raise affliction to my bands.

RHEM. 1 2 Bishops and Deacons.) *Wicleffe and other Heretikes would proue by this that Priests are not here named, and for that there could not be many Bishops of this one towne, that there is no difference betwixt a Bishop and a Priest, which was the old heresie of Aerius, of which matter, * in other places: for this present it is ynough to know that in the Apostles time there were not obserued alwaies proper distinct names of either function, as they were quickly afterward, though they were alwaies diuers degrees and distinct functions.* See S. 23 This man therfore I hope to send vnto you, immediatly as I shall see the things that concerne me.

24 And I trust in our Lord that my selfe also shall come to you quickly.

25 But I haue thought it necessarie to send to you Epaphroditus my brother & coadiutor and fellow souldiar, but your apostle and minister of my necessitie.

26 Because in deede he had a desire toward you al: and was pensife, for that you had heard that he was sicke.

27 For in deed he was sick euen to death: but God had mercy on him: and not onely on him, but on me also, lest I should haue sorow vpon sorow.

28 Therfore I sent him the more spedily: that seeing him, you may reioyce againe, & I may be without sorow.

29 Receiue him therfore with al ioy in our Lord: and such intreate with honour.

30 Because for the worke of Christ, he came to the point of death: yelding his life, that he might fulfil that which on your part wanted toward my seruice.

24 But I trust in the Lord, that I also my selfe shall come shortly.

25 But I supposed it necessary, to send to you Epaphroditus my brother and companion in labour, and felow souldier, but your Apostle, and the minister of my need.

26 For he longed after you all, and was full of heauinesse, because that ye had heard that he had bene sicke.

27 And no doubt hee was sicke nigh vnto death, but God had mercy on him: and not on him onely, but on me also: least I should haue sorow upon sorow.

28 I sent him therefore the more diligently, that when ye see him againe, ye may reioyce, and that I may be the lesse sorowfull.

29 Receiue him therfore in the Lord with all gladnesse, and make much of such:

30 Because for the worke of Christ hee was nigh vnto death, not regarding his life, to fulfill your lacke of seruice toward me.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 1 9 For the which.) Caluin doth so abhor the name of merite in Christian men toward their owne saluation, that he wickedly and vnlearnedly denieth Christ him selfe to haue deserued or merited any thing for him selfe: though these wordes (which he shamefully writeth from the proper and plaine sense, to signifie a sequele and not a cause of his exaltation) and diuers other in holy write, proue that he merited for him selfe according to all learned mens iudgement. As Apoc. 5. The lamb that was slaine, is worthy to receiue power and Diuinitie. And Heb. 2. We see IESVS for the passion of death, crowned with glory and honor. See S. Augustine vpon these words of the Psalme 109. propterea exaltabit caput.

Caluins blasphemie against Christs owne merits

FVLKE. 1 Caluin, as zealous of the glorie of God, to whom onely our saluation is to be ascribed, abhorreth the name of merit in any man toward his owne saluation, but not in that respect, but for other good causes denieth that Christ did merit any thing for himselfe by his death, but altogether for vs. His reasons are these. first this opinion that Christ did merit for himselfe, obscureth the grace of Christ, while men imagine that he came for any other cause then for our saluation: and that he had greater respect of himselfe then of vs, which is contrarie to the whole scope of Scripture, which teacheth that he gaue himselfe for vs, not to merite for himselfe. Secondly, of this opinion it foloweth, that a man may merit diuine honor, and the throne of God himselfe, which is blasphemous: therefore Christ hath this exaltation, as due vnto his diuine nature, as he saith in his prayer, Iohn. 17. 5. Glorifie me O Father, with that glory which I had with thee before the world was made, and not merited by his passion. And the exaltation which the Apostle speaketh of in this text, is that which God challengeth as proper to himselfe, Es. 45. 22. Therefore it is the glorie due to our Sauiour Christes diuinitie, and not merited by his suffering in his humanitie. And so is this text expounded at large by Gaudentius an ancient Bishop of Brixia, who liued in S. Ambrose his time. Epist. ad Paulum Diac. But this you say is contrarie to all learned mens iudgement, and Caluin vnlearnedly denyeth it. As though onely Papists were all learned men, and whatsoeuer sauoureth not of their slanar, were vnlearnedly spoken. By which the vntollerable pride of this Antichristian generation is discouered, that whereas they are for the most part, but Semidocti, scarse halfe learned in comparison of sound learned men in deede, and who so is, or euer was the best learned among them, may finde many peeres among vs for learning: yet euerie brabler amongst them will bragge of all learning and all learned men, and all is vnlearned or vnlearnedly vttered, that they in their proude and scornefull conceits, will not allow for learning. And that we may haue a taste of their great learning, they allege for proofe that Christ did merit, that saying. Apoc. 5. The lambe that was slaine, is worthy to receiue power and diuinitie: so that by popish learning, and learned conclusion of Papists, it followeth that the lambe of God obteined his diuinitie by merit, and not by nature, which learning were verie good for that ancient learned heretike Arius. But Heb. 2. we read also, that we see Iesus for the passion of death crowned with glory and honor. But the true construction of the text is, we see Iesus which by the passion of death was made a litle lesse then the angels, crowned with glory and honor. Therefore he that was in the forme of God and thought it no robbery to be equall with God, gained no honor and glory in this exaltation, but receiued that which for euer was due to his eternall & diuine nature, though he did for a time humble himselfe in his humanity, and became obedient to the most shamefull and cursed death of the crosse. S. Augustine in the place you quote, saith neuer a word to proue that Christ merited either his diuinitie or diuine honor by his death, but only reciteth this text, where the coniunction signifieth not a cause, but a consequence, as Caluin both truely and learnedly doth affirme.

Merit of Christ.

RHEM. 2 10 Name of IESVS.) By the like wickednes they charge the faithful people for capping or kneeling when they heare the name of IESVS, as though they worshipped not our Lord God therin, but the syllables or letters or other material elements whereof the word written or spoken consisteth, and al this, by sophistications to draw the people from due honour and deuotion toward CHRIST IESVS, which is Satans drift by putting scruples into poore simple mens mindes about his Sacraments, his Saincts, his crosse, his name, his image, and such like, to abolish al true religion out of the world, and to make them plaine Atheists.

The protestants will haue no reuerence done at the name of IESVS.

Atheists. But the Church knoweth Satans cogitations, and therfore by the Scriptures and reason, warranteth and teacheth al her children to do reuerence when so euer IESVS is named, because Catholikes do not honour these things nor count them holy, for their matter, colour, sound, and syllables, but for the respect and relation they haue to our Sauiour, bringing vs to the remembrance and apprehension of Christ, by sight, hearing, or vse of the same signes, els why make we not reuerence at the name of Iesus the sonne of Sirach, as wel as of IESVS CHRIST? And it is a pitiful case to see these prophane subtilties of Heretikes to take place in religion, which were ridiculous in al other trade of life. When we heare our Prince or Soueraine named, we may without these scruples doe obeisance, but towardes Christ it must be superstitious. How Catholikes honour the name of IESVS, and other things pertaining to him.

FVLKE. 2 First it is certeine that the bowing of the knee at the sound of the name of Iesus, as it is vsed in popery, is not commanded nor prophecied in this place. But it perteineth to the subiection of al creatures to the iudgement of Christ, when not onely Turks and Iewes, which now yeeld no honour to Iesus, but euen the diuels themselues shall be constreined to acknowledge that he is their iudge. Secondly, the capping or kneeling at the name of Iesus, is of it selfe an indifferent thing, & therfore may be vsed superstitiously as in popery, where the people stoope at the sound of the name when it is read, not vnderstanding either what it meaneth, or what is read concerning him. Also in sitting and not veiling at the name of Christ, Emanuel, God the father, the sonne, and the Holy ghost, and bowing only at the name of Iesus. It may be vsed also well, when the minde is free from superstition, in signe of reuerence to his maiestie, and as in a matter wherein Christian libertie ought to haue place. And due reuerence may be yelded to our sauiour, without any such outward ceremony of capping or kneeling. But popish worshipping of the sacrament, as God of the saincts with religious worshipping and seruice of Christes image and crosse, euen with Latria which you call worship due to God. These worshippings which are meere heathenish and idolatrous, are vnfitly compared with bowing at the name of Iesus. And yet you complaine, that to remoue such impietie, is to abolish all true religion out of the world, & to make men plaine Atheists. The same was the complaint of the Pagans against the Christians. But to worship God only, according to the prescript of his holy word, is true religion, and to teach men to worship contrary therunto, it maketh men either idolaters, or altogether Atheists. And where you say, the Popish church doth not honor those things, nor count them holy, for their matter, colour, sound &c. but for respect, & relation they haue to our sauiour &c. It is too short a cloake to couer your idolatry. For the same was the persuasion of the Israelites in their golden calfe, which they did not honor for the matter, colour, fashion, but for the relation it had to God that brought them out of the land of Egypt. Exod 32.4.5. The like had the Israelites of Ieroboams calues. 1.Reg.12.20. And S. Augustine telleth that the Gentils in his time, had the like excuse for their idolatry. I worship not that stone or that image that is without sense, for your Prophet could not know that it hath eyes and seeth not, and I be ignorant that this image hath no soule, nor seeth with his eyes, nor heareth with his eares. Therfore I do not worship that: but I adore that I see, & serue him whom I see not, who is that? the inuisible diuine power which is president of that image. After this maner, while they giue a reason of their images, they seeme eloquent to them selues, because they worship not idols, and worship diuels. They answer, we worship not euil spirits, but the angels (as you call them) doe we worship euen the powers or vertues of the great God, & ministers of the great God I would you would worship them, you should easily learne of them not to worship them. In Ps. 96. Therfore it is not sufficient to say, such things bring vs to the remembrance and apprehension of Christ, by sight, hearing, and vse of the same signes. For we must doe in religion and Gods seruice, not that seemeth good to vs, but that only which he commandeth. Deut.4.2 c.12.32. For otherwise, by such respects and relations, remembrances and apprehensions, all idolatry and false worshipping may be defended. Superstition. False worshipping. Worshipping of images.

RHEM. 3 12 With feare and trembling.) Against the vaine presumption of Heretikes that make men secure of their predestination and saluation, he willeth the Philippians to worke their saluation with feare & trembling, according to that other Scripture, Blessed is the man that alwaies is fearful. Prouerb.28.v.14. Vaine securitie of saluation.

FVLKE. 3 We teach no vaine presumption to make men secure of their predestination and saluation, but we protest that the elect are predestinate vnto goood works, which if they doe not bring forth after they be called, they cannot be saued, neither are they predestinated to life eternall. And yet we teach men to beleeue assuredly, that God will performe his promise made vnto all that truely beleeue in him, that they shalbe saued. And this confidence doth well agree with the feare of God, and in deed, can be in none but in them that feare and loue God. Slander. Certeintie of saluation.

RHEM. 4 13 Worketh in you.) Of this thus saith S. Augustine, Not because the Apostle saith, it is God that worketh in you both to wil and worke, must we thinke he taketh away our free will. For if it were so, then would he not a litle before haue willed them to worke their owne saluation with feare and trembling. For when they be commaunded to worke, their free will is called vpon: but, with trembling and feare, is added, lest by attributing their wel working to them selues, they might be proud of their good deeds as though they were of them selues. August. de gratia & lib. arbit. c.9. S. Augustine answereth the obiection against free will.

FVLKE. 4 S. Augustine teacheth plentifully, that mans free will is seruile, captiue, lost, vntill by grace it beginne to be inlarged and restored: yet is mans will free from constraint, and so meaneth S. Augustine whensoeuer he acknowledgeth man to haue free will. And in this place very plainely he sheweth that men haue no power of will to worke well by their will, but only of God who worketh in them. Freewill.

RHEM. 17 The sacrifice.) The obedience of faith and martyrdom be so acceptable actes to God, when they be voluntarily referred to his honour, that by a metaphore they be called sacrifice and pleasant hostes to God. Martyrdom.

CHAP. III.

He warneth them of the False-apostles, 4 shewing that him selfe had much more to bragge of in Iudaisme then they: but that he maketh price of nothing but only of Christ, and of Christian iustice, and of suffering with him (12 wherein yet he acknowledgeth his imperfection) 17 exhorting them to beare Christes Crosse with him, and not to imitate those belly gods.

RHEM. 2 17 Of me brethren.) It is a goodly thing when the Paſtor may ſo ſay to his flocke. Neither is it any derogation to Chriſt, that the people ſhould imitate their Apoſtles life and doctrine, & other holy men, S. Auguſtine, S. Benedict. S. Dominike, S. Francis.

FVLKE. 2 It is a great derogation to Chriſt, when people ſhall follow the religion of Auguſtine, the religion of Benedict, the religion of Dominike, the religion of Francis, and one ſhall ſay that I am of Auguſtine, I of Dominike, I of Francis, and I of Ieſus. 1. Cor. 1. Sect.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. III.

RHEM. 3 9 My iuſtice.) Diuers Lutherans in their tranſlations do ſhamfully mangle this ſentence by tranſpoſing the wordes, and falſe pointing of the partes thereof, to make it haue this ſenſe, that the Apoſtle would haue no iuſtice of his owne, but onely that iuſtice, which is in Chriſt. Which is a falſe and heretical ſenſe of the wordes, and not meant by S. Paul: who calleth that a mans owne iuſtice, which he chalengeth by the workes of the Law or natnre without the grace of Chriſt: & that Gods iuſtice (as S. Auguſtine expoundeth this place) not which is in God, or by which God is iuſt, but that which is in man from God and by his gift. li. 3. cont. 2. ep. Pelag. c. 7. de Sp. & lit. c. 9. The obiection againſt inherent iuſtice, anſwered. Magdeburg. cent. 1. l. 2. c. 4. pag. 222.

FVLKE. 3 You miſreport S. Auguſtine, for although he ſay the iuſtice of God is ſo called, not whereby he is iuſt, but wherewith he maketh vs iuſt, or which is of God, he ſaith not that this iuſtice wherewith we are iuſtified by faith, is in man, But contrariwiſe he ſaith expreſly, it is the iuſtice of God, not our iuſtice, in him, not in vs. De verbis apoſtoli ſer. 6. Againe, Chriſt was made ſinne, that we might be made iuſtice, not our iuſtice, but Gods iuſtice, neither in vs, but in him, as he declared ſinne not to be his, but ours, not placed in him, but in vs, by the ſimilitude of ſinfull fleſh, in which he was crucified. Enchir. c. 41. See more the conſent of the auncient fathers. 2. Cor. 5. ſect. 4. Iuſtice inherent.

RHEM. 4 12 Not that now.) No man in this life can attaine to abſolute perfectnes either of iuſtice or of that knowledge which ſhal be in heauen: but yet there is alſo an other perfectnes, ſuch as according to this ſtate a man may reach vnto, which in reſpect of the perfection in glorie, is ſmal, but in reſpect of other leſſer degrees of mans iuſtice and knowledge in this life, may be called perfectnes. And in this ſenſe the Apoſtle in the next ſentence calleth himſelf and others perfect, though in reſpect of the abſolute perfectnes in heauen, he ſaith here, he is not yet perfect nor hath yet attained thereunto. Double perfection: here, and in the life to come.

FVLKE. 4 That perfection which the apoſtle aſcribeth to himſelfe and others in this life, is of knowledge, not of iuſtice. For although all knowledge that men can attaine vnto in this life, is vnperfect in reſpect of the knowledge we ſhall haue after this life: yet it may well be called perfect, when it is of all that God hath reuealed in his word. So it cannot be ſaid of that iuſtice which is in vs, in any reſpect. For although Sodome was called iuſt in reſpect of Ieruſalem, yet no man can ſay that Sodome was perfect in iuſtice, becauſe Ieruſalem was more vniuſt. None perfectly iuſt.

RHEM. 5 15 Otherwiſe minded. When Catholike men now a daies charge Heretikes with their horrible diuiſions, diſſenſions, combates, contentions, and diuerſities among them ſelues, as the Catholikes of al other ages did chalenge their Aduerſaries moſt truely and iuſtly for the ſame, (both becauſe where the Spirit of God is not, nor any order or obedience to Superiors, there can be no peace nor vnitie, and ſpecially for that it is, as S. Auguſtine ſaith (li. de agone Chriſt. c. 29.) the iuſt iudgement of God that they which ſeeke nothing els but to diuide the Church of Chriſt, ſhould them ſelues be miſerably diuided among them ſelues) therfore (I ſay) when men charge the Proteſtants with theſe things, they flee for their defence to this, that the old Fathers were not al of one iudgement in euery point of religion: that S. Cyprian ſtood againſt others, that S. Auguſtine and S. Hierom wrote earneſtly in a certaine matter one againſt an other, that our Dominicans and Franciſcans, our Thomiſts and Scotiſts be not al of one opinion in diuers matters, and therfore diuiſions and contentions ſhould not be ſo preiudicial to the Zuinglians and Lutherans, as men make it. Thus they defend them ſelues: but ridiculouſly and againſt the rule of S. Paule here, acknowledging that in this imperfection of mens ſcience in this life, euery one can not be free from al error, or thinke the ſame that an other thinketh: whereupon may riſe differences of vnderſtanding, opinion, and iudgement, in certaine hard matters which God hath not reuealed or the Church determined, and therfore that ſuch diuerſitie is tolerable and agreeable to our humane condition and the ſtate of the way that we be in: alwaies prouided, that the controuerſie be ſuch and in ſuch things as be not againſt the ſet knowen rule of faith, as he here ſpeaketh, and ſuch as breake not mutual ſocietie, fellowſhip, and communion in praier, ſeruice, Sacraments, and other offices of life and religion, for ſuch diuiſions and differences come neuer but of Schiſme or Hereſie, and ſuch are among the Heretikes, not onely in reſpect of vs Catholikes, but among them ſelues: as they know that be acquainted with the writings of Luther againſt Zuinglius, or Weſtphalus againſt Caluin, or the Puritanes againſt the Proteſtants, not only charging one another with Hereſie, Idolatrie, Superſtition, and Atheiſme, but alſo condemning ech others ceremonies or maner of adminiſtrations, til it come to excommunication, and baniſhment. yea ſometimes burning one of an other. Thus did not S. Cyprian, S. Auguſtine, S. Hierom, the Dominicans, Franciſcans, Thomiſts, Scotiſts, who al agree in one rule of faith, al of one communion, al moſt deere one to an other in the ſame, al (thankes be to God) come to one holy Maſſe, and receiue the ſame Sacraments, and obey one head throughout al the world. S. Auguſtine li. 2. de bapt. c. 5. ſhal make vp this matter with this notable ſentence: We are men (ſaith he) and therefore to thinke ſomewhat otherwiſe then the thing is, is an humane tentation: but by louing our owne ſentence too much, or by enuying our betters, to procede vnto the ſacrilege of diuiding the mutual ſocietie and of making ſchiſme or hereſie, is diueliſh preſumption: in nothing to haue other opinion then the truth is, that is Angelicall perfection. And a litle after, If you be any otherwiſe minded, this God wil reueale: but to them onely (ſaith he) that walke in the way of peace, and that ſtray aſide into no diuiſion or ſeparation. Which ſaying would God al our deere countrie men would marke, and come into the Church, where onely, God reuealeth truth. The hereſies foliſh defence of their diſſentions and diuiſions among them ſelues. The difference betweene the diſagreeing of auncient fathers or other Catholikes, and the Heretikes diſſentions among them ſelues. The ſpiteful writings of Heretikes, one Sect againſt an other. A notable place of S. Auguſtine.

FVLKE. 5 We defend not our diſſentions, but confeſſe that it is altogether a fault, that there is any diſſention among vs: yet we truely ſay, that notwithſtanding our diſſenſions, we agree in the principall articles of faith neceſſarie to ſaluation, as the Church in the Apoſtles time, and other Catholike fathers did, notwithſtanding their diſſention. And as you ſay, the Papiſtes doe, notwithſtanding the diſſentions betweene your Dominicanes and Franciſcanes, Thomiſtes and Scotiſtes, Canoniſtes and Diuines. You acknowledge therefore, that there may be diſſentions, but with a double prouiſo. Firſt that the controuerſies be ſuch, and in ſuch things, as be Diſſentions.

by rule against these knowne rule of faith: such is the difference betweene Luther and Zuinglius, Westphalus and Caluine. They both acknowledge the eating of Christes flesh, to be necessarie, but after what maner it is present to be eaten in the Sacrament by faith, they differ. They that contend about ceremonies, and externall forme of gouernment in the Church, doe fully agree in all pointes of the doctrine of faith, necessarie to saluation. These contentions therefore for these matters, are not vnlike, the one of them, to the dissention betweene S. Cyprian and Cornelius, the Bishops of Africa and of the East taking part with Cyprian, and other of the West with Cornelius, which was about the rebaptizing of them, that had been baptized by Heretikes: The other to the contention of Victor Bishop of Rome, against the Bishops of the East, about the celebration of Easter, or of Epiphanius and Chrysostome about gouernment and discipline of the Church. Your second proviso is, that the controuersie be such, as breake not the mutuall bond of fellowship, and communion in prayer, seruice, Sacraments, and other offices of life and religion. So you say, it is not in our controuersies, for one chargeth another with heresie, Idolatrie, &c. and also condemneth others ceremonies, maner of administration, till it come to excommunication and banishment. Yea sometimes burning one of an other. In deede such moderation as you speake of, ought to be kept in all such differences, but it hath not alwaies been so, among them that were true Catholikes, neither among Papistes themselues. And although the contentions among vs, haue been more bitterly pursued then was meete, especially of Luther and his part, yet those with whom we agree, haue kept and alwaies doe, for the most part keepe, that moderation and Christian loue, which ought to be obserued in such cases, according to the Apostles rule in this text. And that any haue proceeded to burning one of another, for these differences you are not able to proue by one example. For there hath none been burned, but for such heresies, as you your selues would confesse to be worthy of death, as Arians, Anabaptistes, Libertines, and such like. But that this moderation hath not beene kept betweene the auncient Fathers in their controuersies, is manifest by the example of Victor, who did excommunicate all the Bishops of the East, which were not of his opinion. And they more moderate then he, commaunded him to be quiet, and keepe peace, Euseb. lib. 5. cap. 25. Stephanus also Bishop of Rome, excommunicated Cyprian and the Bishops of Africa, yea Cyprian (though he were more charitable then Stephanus) spared not angerly to inueigh against Stephanus, August. cont. Donat. lib. 5. cap. 23. & 25. Slander.

It is reported that Epiphanius and Chrysostome, were so bitter in their contention, that the one did banne the other, Hist. Tripart. lib. 10. cap. 12. But all these were but sport and play, in comparison of the cruel hatred betweene the Guelphes & Gibelines, betweene the Popes, and Popes themselues, when they were two or three at once. What excommunications, condemnations of heresie, Idolatrie, Atheisme, what cruell murthering, by burning, drowning, sacking, mangling one of the others bodies, when they came within their clawes, not sparing their dead carcases for rancor and hatred against their persons: your owne stories are full of the examples, passing all that is read in prophane stories, of the Barbarous Scythians, or other Heathenish nations. What burned the Dominicke Friers of Berna, but hatred of the Franciscanes? For counterfecting of visions, and miracles, was not so deintie a matter among Friers in that time, but that (as Tullie writeth, of the Romish southsayers,) a man might haue marueiled, if so often as they met, they laughed not one vpon another, to remember, how with their fained monsters, they mocked the world. Your contentions therefore, haue been greater then ours, of greater matters, as of the head of your Church, which you say is necessarie for the preseruation of the whole body, and more cruelly pursued then euer any had been among vs: although some haue greatly broken the bonds of charitie, and fallen into open schisme, as there hath been alwaies such in the best times.

FYLKE. 1 The Apostle reioyceth not of other mens merites, that maketh so small accompt of his owne, that he esteemed all his owne iustice, as dong, that he might enioy the iustice of God, which is by faith in Christes merites only. Merite.

8 For the rest brethren, what things so euer be true, whatsoeuer honest, whatsoeuer iust, whatsoeuer holy, whatsoeuer amiable, whatsoeuer of good fame, if there be any vertue, if any praise of discipline, these things thinke vpon.

9 Which you haue both learned, and receiued, and heard, & seen in me: these things doe ye, and the God of peace shal be with you.

10 And I reioyced in our Lord exceedingly, that once at the length you haue *reflorished to care for me, as you did also care: but you were occupied.

15 And you also know O Philippians, that in the beginning of the Gospel, when I departed from Macedonia, no church communicated vnto me in the account of gift and ‡receite, but you only:

16 For vnto Thessalonica also, once and twise you sent to my vse.

17 Not that I seeke the gift, but I seeke the fruite abounding in your account.

18 But I haue al things, and abound: I was filled after I receiued of Epaphroditus the things that you sent, an odour of sweetenes, an acceptable host, pleasing God.

22 The brethren that are with me, salute you. Al the saincts salute you: but especially they that are of Cæsars house.

23 The grace of our Lord IESVS Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

8 Furthermore, brethren, whatsoeuer things are true, whatsoeuer things are honest, whatsoeuer things are iust, whatsoeuer things are pure, whatsoeuer things pertaine to loue, whatsoeuer things are of honest report: if there be any vertue, and if there be † any praise, thinke on these things:

9 Which ye haue both learned, and receiued, and heard, and seene in me, those things doe: and the God of peace shall be with you.

10 But I reioyce in the Lord greatly, that now at the last ye are reuiued againe to care for me, in that wherein ye were also careful, but ye lacked opportunitie.

11 I speake not because of necessitie: for I haue learned, in whatsoeuer estate I am, therewith to be content.

12 I know how to be lowe, and I know how to exceede: euery where and in all things I am instructed both to be full, and to be hungry, both to haue plentie, and to suffer neede.

13 I can doe all things through Christ, which strengtheneth me.

14 Notwithstanding, ye haue well done, that ye did communicate to my affliction.

15 Ye Philippians know also, that in the beginning of the Gospell, when I departed from Macedonia, no Church communicated to me, as concerning giuing and receiuing, but yee onely.

16 For euen in Thessalonica ye sent once, and againe, vnto my necessitie.

17 Not that I desire a gift: but I desire fruite abounding to your accompt.

18 But I haue receiued all, and haue plenty: I was euen filled after that I had receiued of Epaphroditus the things which were sent from you, an odour of a sweete smell, a sacrifice acceptable, pleasant to God.

19 My God shall supply all your neede through his riches in glorye, in Christ Iesus.

20 Vnto God and our Father be glory for euermore.

21 Salute all the Saincts in Christ Iesus: The brethren which are with me, greete you.

22 All the Saincts salute you, most of all they that are of Cæsars houshold.

3 Clement, and the.) This Clement was afterward the 4. Pope of Rome from S. Peter, as S. Hierom writeth according to the common supputation.

Hierom confesseth, that some of the Latines say, he was next to Peter, whereby Linus and Anacletus are excluded. Damasus maketh Clemens the next successor of Peter. Linus and Cletus but Peters suffraganes, while he liued himselfe, and placeth Anacletus after Clemens, whom Hierom placeth before. Irenæus placeth next to Peter Linus, Anacletus, Clemens, and next to Clemens, Euaristus. Tertullian saith, Clemens was next after Peter, and ordeined by him. Optatus and Augustine say, Linus succeeded to Peter, Clemens to Linus, Anacletus to Clemens, and to Anacletus Euaristus. Epiphanius maketh Peter and Paul both Bishops of Rome, then Linus, Cletus, Clemens, Euaristus. By this diuersitie you see, what certaintie there is of the succession from Peter, whereof the Papistes make such bragges. Succession RHEM. 3 1 My ioy.) He calleth them his ioy and crowne, for that he expected the crowne of euerlasting life as a reward of his labours towards them. Whereby we may learne also, that besides the essentiall glorie which shal be in the vision and fruition of God, there is other manifold felicitie incident in respect of creatures. The reward of Preachers.

FVLKE. 3 S. Paul looked for the reward of his labours of Gods grace, and not of the merite of his labours.

RHEM. 4 3 Sincere companion.) The English Bibles with one consent interprete the Greeke words faithful yokefellow, perhaps to signifie (as some would haue it) that the Apostle here speaketh to his wife: but they must vnderstand that their Maisters Caluin and Beza mislike that exposition, and * *al the Greeke fathers almost much more reiect it, and it is against S. FVLKE. 4 The word yokefellow, is as precisely agreeable to the Greeke, as can be. And Clemens Alexandrinus hereof gathereth, that S. Paul had a wife, which he left by her consent, at Philippi. Yet we acknowledge it cannot be proued by this text. Why then should our translation be suspicious, when it is as consonant to the originall, as is possible. Cauilling.

RHEM. 18 Acceptable.) How acceptable almes are before God, we see here: namely when it is giuen for religion to deuout persons for a recompense of spiritual benefites. for so it putteth on the condition of an oblation or sacrifice offered to God, and is most acceptable and sweete in his sight. Almes giuen religiously.

THE ARGVMENT OF THE EPISTLE OF S. PAVL TO THE COLOSSIANS.

RHEM. 1 THE Epistle to the Colossians is not only in sense, but almost in words also, al one with the Epistle to the Ephesians, & was sent also by the same messenger Tychicus. c. 4. v. 7. and in it he maketh like mention of his bands and sufferings. c. 1. v. 24. and c. 4. v. 3. 18. And therefore no doubt it was written at Rome at the same time, to wit, in his last apprehension, yet before he knew of his martyrdom.

This difference there is, that he had himself preached to the Ephesians, but with the Colossians he had neuer bene, as he signifieth c. 2. v. 1. Therfore although in matters of exhortation he be here briefer then to the Ephesians, yet in matters of doctrine he is longer. And generally he assureth them, that to be the truth, which their apostle Epaphras had taught them, but namely he giueth them warning both of the Iudaical false-apostles, who sought to corrupt them with some ceremonies of Moyses law: and also of the Platonike Philosophers, who reiected Christ (who is indeed the head of the Church and Mediator to bring vs to God) and in steed of him, brought in certaine Angels, as more excellent then he; whom they termed, Minores dij, teaching the people to sacrifice vnto them (calling that humilitie) that they might bring them to the great God. With which falsehod the heresie of Simon Magus a long time deceiued many, as we read in Epiph. her. 21.

Against such therefore S. Paul telleth the Colossians, that Christ is the Creator of al the Angels, God in person, the head of the Church, the principal in al respects: that he is the Redeemer, Mediator, and Pacifier betweene God and men, and therefore by him we must go to God, so that whether we pray our selues, or desire any other on earth or in heauen to pray for vs, al must be done as the Cath. Church in euery Collect doth) Per Christum Dominum nostrum, that is, through Christ our Lord, or per Do. nostrum Iesum Christum filium tuum, qui tecum viuit & regnat, &c. Whereby the Church professeth continually against such seduction, both the Mediatorship, and the Godhead of Christ.

FVLKE. 1 Seeing S. Paul passed twise through Phrygia, where this citie of the Colossians stood Act. 16. 6. and 18, 23. It is not vnlike, that he planted the Church there. And that he had bene there it seemeth by his Epistle to Philemon, inscribed also to Archippus the minister of the Church of Colossa, as it is manifest in the last chapter of this Epistle. But hereof I wil not contend. Neither is Epaphras any where in the scripture, called an Apostle, although it is not vnlike, he was an Euangelist, & of some is thought to be the same that is called also Epaphroditus. The false apostles called the intercession of Angels humilitie, as you doe in effect, when you say, that men must not presume to come to God or Christ, but as they come to an earthly prince by Mediatours or Intercessors. Neither doth S. Paul teach them, that it is lawfull to desire any other in heauen, to pray for them, with per Christum Dominum nostrum in the end, as you vse in the Popish Church, but contrariwise, he teacheth, that there is no Mediator of intercession in heauen, but only Christ. But how wel you obserue your conclusion, per Christum Dominum nostrum, I haue declared In Ioan. 16. sect. 3. Christ our onely Mediator.

THE EPISTLE OF PAVL TO THE COLOSSIANS.

CHAP. I.

Saying, that he thanked God for their excellent faith and charitie, and continually praieth for their encrease, he doth withal giue witnes to the preaching of their Apostle Epaphras, and extolleth the grace of God in bringing them to Christ, who is cheefe aboue all, and peacemaker by his bloud. This is the Gospel not of Epaphras alone, but of the vniuersal Church, and of Paul himselfe who also suffereth for it.

PAVL an Apostle of Iesus Christ, by the wil of God, and Timotheus the brother,

2 To the saincts & faithful brethren in Christ, which are at Colossa, grace be vnto you, & peace from God our father, & our Lord Iesus Christ.

3 Grace to you and peace from God our Father & our Lord IESVS Christ. We giue thanks to God and the Father of our Lord IESVS Christ alwaies for you, praying:

4 Hearing your faith in Christ IESVS, and the loue which you haue toward all the saincts,

6 That is come to you, as also ‡ in the whole world it is, and fructifieth, and groweth, euen as in you, since that day that you heard and knew the grace of God in truth,

9 Therefore ᵇ we also from the day that we heard it, cease not praying for you and desiring, that you may be filled with the knowledge of his wil, in all wisedome, and spiritual vnderstanding:

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 1 6 In the whole world.) He ſheweth that the Church and Chriſts Goſpel ſhould daily grow and be ſpred at length through the whole world. which can not ſtand with the Heretikes opinion of the decay thereof ſo quickely after Chriſts time, nor agree by any meanes to their obſcure conuenticles. See S. Auguſt. ep. 80. in fine.

FVLKE. 1 We hold no opinion that the Church euer did, or ſhall euer decay, though many haue fallen from it, and the meetings of the Chriſtians, were as obſcure in times of perſecution before Conſtantine, as they haue been ſince the tyrannie of Antichriſt vſurped the temple of God. Neither ſaith Auguſtine any thing to the contrarie, Ep. 80. But in Pſal. 10. he ſaith expreſly, that the Church is oftentimes obſcure, as the moone in the wane or eccliſpe. Slander.

FVLKE. 3 How can you conclude out of the text, that we are made worthy otherwiſe then by acceptation and imputation of Chriſtes iuſtice? Yea what can be more contrarie to the text, then that you ſay, we deſerue our ſaluation condignely, when he ſaith expreſly, wee haue it through redemption of Chriſt, and remiſſion of our ſinnes by him, who hath reconciled all things to him, by the blood of his croſſe. ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 4 24 Doe accompliſh that wanteth.) As Chriſt the head and his body make one perſon myſticall and one ful Chriſt, the Church being therefore his plenitude, fulneſſe, or complement Epheſ. 1. *ſo the paſſions of the head and the afflictions of the body and members make one complete maſſe of paſſions. With ſuch difference for all that, betweene the one ſort and the other, as the preeminence of the head (and ſpecially ſuch a head) aboue the body, requireth and giueth. And not onely thoſe paſſions which he ſuffered in himſelfe, which were fully ended in his death, and were in themſelues fully ſufficient for the redemption of the world and remiſſion of all ſinnes, but all thoſe which his body and members ſuffer, are his alſo, & of him they receiue the condition, qualitie, and force to be meritorious and ſatisfactorie. for though there be no inſufficiencie in the action or paſſions of Chriſt the head, yet his wiſedome, will and iuſtice requireth and ordaineth, * that his body and members ſhould be fellowes of his paſſions, as they looke to be fellowes of his glorie: that ſo ſuffring with him and by his example, they may applie to themſelues and other the generall medicine of Chriſtes merites and ſatisfactions, as it is effectually alſo applied to vs by Sacraments, Sacrifice, and other waies alſo: the one ſort being no more iniurious to Chriſts death then the other, notwithſtanding the vaine clamours of the Proteſtants, that would vnder preſence of Chriſtes paſſion, take away the valure of all* There is no want in Chriſts paſſions which he ſuffered in him ſelfe as head: but there is want in thoſe paſſions of Chriſt which he daily ſuffereth in his body the Church, and the members thereof.

good deedes. Hereupon it is plaine nowe, that this accomplishment of the wants of Christes passions, which the Apostle and other Sainctes make vp in the flesh, is not meant but of the penall and satisfactorie workes of Christ in his members, euerie good man adding continually (and specially Martyrs) somewhat to accomplish the full measure thereof: and these be the plenitude of his passions and satisfactions, as the Church is the plenitude of his person: and therefore these also through the communion of Sainctes and the societie that is not onely betweene the head and the body, but also betweene one member and an other, are not onely satisfactorie and many waies profitable for the sufferers themselues, but also for other their fellow-members in Christ. for though one member can not merite for an other properly, yet may one beare the burden and discharge the debt of an other, both by the Lawe of God and nature. and it was a ridiculous heresie of Wicleffe to denie the same. Yea (as we see here) the passions of Sainctes are alwaies suffered for the common good of the whole body, and sometimes withall by the sufferers special intention they are applicable to special persons one or many: as here the Apostle ioyeth in his passions for the Colossians, in an other place his afflictions be for the saluation of the Corinthians, sometimes he wisheth to be Anathema, that is according to Origens exposition (in lib. nu. hom. 10. & 24.) a sacrifice for the Iewes, and he often speaketh of his death as of a libation, host, or offering, as the fathers doe of all Martyrs passions. All which dedicated and sanctified in Christs blood and sacrifice, make the plenitude of his passion, and haue a forcible crie, intercession, and satisfaction for the Church and the particular necessitie thereof. In which, as some doe abound in good workes and satisfaction (as S. Paul, who reckeneth vp his afflictions and glorieth in them 2. Cor. 11: and Iob, who auoucheth that his penalties farre surmounted his sinnes: and our Ladie much more, who neuer sinned, and yet suffered so great dolours) so other some doe want, and are to be holpen by the abundance of their fellow-members.

How Christes merites are applied to vs without any iniurie to his death.

The workes of one may satisfie for an other.

2. Cor. 1, 6. Rom. 9. 3. Phil. 2. 2. Tim. 4. Iob 6.

Which entercourse of spirituall offices and the recompense of the wants of one part by the store of the other, is the ground of the old libels of Indulgence whereof is treated before out of S. Cyprian (See the Annotations 2. Cor. 2. v. 10.) and of all indulgences and pardons, which the Church daily dispenseth with great iustice and mercie, by their hands in whom Christ hath put the word of our reconcilement, to whom he hath committed the keies to keepe and vse, his sheepe to feede, his mysteries and all his goodes to dispense, his power to binde and loose, his commission to remit and reteine, and the stewardship of his familie to giue euery one their meate and sustenance in due season.

The ground of indulgences or pardons.

FVLKE. 4 Christ suffereth in his members, by which suffering they are made conformable vnto Christ their head: and through their patience, helpe to confirme the faith one of an other. So the Apostles suffering was for the glorie of God, and the confirmation of the Church in faith of the Gospel which he had taught. But that the sufferings of any man are meritorious or satisfactorie, either for himselfe or others, it is horrible blasphemie against the merite and satisfaction of Christes death, which wanteth nothing in himselfe to merite and satisfie for all his members. S Paul Rom. 8. 17. whom you quote, speaketh of conformitie vnto Christ by suffering, not of merite or satisfaction. Nor yet Leo ser. 19. De passione. Wherefore this blasphemie of merites and satisfaction by suffering, standeth vpon your owne credite, without any testimonie of Scriptures and Doctors. The Sacraments are appointed by Christ, to confirme our faith in the merites of Christ, not to applie the merites of Christ by them vnto vs, as by the worke wrought. Which opinion also, is iniurious to the passion of Christ: and therefore you shall neuer stoppe our clamours against it, and against the merite and satisfaction of mens sufferings, except you can doe it by the word of God. And whereas you say, that vnder pretence of Christes passion, we take away the valure of all good workes, it is false. For we acknowledge, that by the merite of his passion, our workes are accepted and rewarded, though we ioyne them not in valure with the workes of Christ, to merite or satisfie for sinne. Therefore, hauing brought no manner of proofe before, but your bare worde, you make an impudent conclusion thereof, that it is plaine, that the sufferings of Christes members are satisfactorie both for the sufferers, and for others. Let vs heare then how you answere the obiections, that are brought against your blasphemous beggerly principle. For you say, though one member can not merite for an other properly, yet one may beare the burthen, and discharge the debt of an other. To take your grant, if one by his suffering cannot merite for another, then ones suffering is not meritorious for an other in deede, neither properly or improperly, though you seeme to conclude a sophisticall distinction in that worde properly. But howe vnproperly may he merite by bearing an others burthen? For who will graunt, that one can beare the burthen, or pay the debt of an other mans sinnes? seeing the Scripture saith, the soule that sinneth, euen that shall die. Eze. 18. 20. And euery one shall beare his owne burthen, Gal. 6. 5. No man can redeeme his brother, or giue a price to God for him, Psal. 49. 8. You see therefore howe agreeable it is to the Lawe of God, and nature, that one man shoulde beare an others burthen, and satisfie to God for his sinnes: though one of charitie may beare an others burthen, and helpe him in his life. And howe ridiculous Wickleffe was to denie the same: but the olde prouerbe is founde true, a foole laugheth, when there is nothing to be laughed at. But you rise vpon vs lustely, and say, We see heere, that passions of the Sainctes are alwaies suffered for the common good of the whole body. What then? Ergo they be meritorious and satisfactorie for the whole Church. This conclusion is not more worthy of laughing, then hissing. And sometime by the speciall intention of the sufferer, they are applicable to special persons one or many. What then? Ergo they bee meritorious and satisfactorie: what asse euer brayed such conclusions? But S. Paul wisheth to be Anathema for the Iewes, that is, a sacrifice, according to Origen, and he speaketh of his death as of a libation, host or offering, so do the fathers of the passions of Martyrs. What of this? Ergo S. Pauls death might haue been a sacrifice propitiatorie for the Iewes, and so it was, at least for others meritorious, and satisfactorie for their sinnes? Yet being dedicated and sanctified in Christs blood, they haue a forcible crie, intercession, and satisfaction for the Church, and the perticuler necessitie of the same. Verily you must make new logike, and create new reason, before these conclusions can folow of your antecedent or premisses. Yet you goe forward with them, and say, that some doe abound in such satisfactions, to the helpe of them that lacke them. First S. Paul, which reckoneth vp his afflictions, and glorieth in them, 2. Cor. 11. In deede he saith, he will glorie in his infirmities, in which the grace of God worketh most effectually: but of merite and satisfaction, not a worde, nor a sillable. The second example of Iob, who auoucheth (as you say) that his penaltie farre exceeded his sinnes, But that is false: for although he vttered sometimes wordes of impatience, yet in that 6. Chapter he hath no such saying: but according to your corrupt translation. Whereas the trueth is, he complaineth that his sorowes were greater, then he could expresse, not greater then his sinnes had deserued. For although he might iustly defend his innocencie against his friends, which charged him with hypocrisie, yet when he commeth into the presence of God, he layeth his hand on his mouth, and will not excuse himselfe: yea he confesseth, that he is not able to answere to one of a thousand, that God might lay to his charge Iob. 9. 2. 3. 39. 37. Your third example is our Lady which neuer sinned, yet suffered so great dolors. While you pretend to honour her, you doe most horrible iniurie, both to Christ, and her. For if she neuer sinned, howe can the Scripture be true. All haue sinned, and are destitute of the glory of God. Rom. 3. 23. And if she neuer sinned, how can she reioice in God her Sauiour? Howe can she be one of Christes people, who was called Iesus, because he shoulde saue his people from their their sinnes? Math.1. This therefore being the ground of your indulgences, is most miserable and blasphemous beggerie, whereof I haue written more at large vpon 2. Cor. 2. Now that we haue seene, you haue nothing out of the ancient fathers for you: let vs see what there is in them against you. First Chrysostome vpon this text, hom. 4. saith. You are not reconciled to God by vs, but by Christ, although we doe these things. S. Ambrose saith. He confesseth that he reioyceth in tribulations which he suffered, because he seeth their profite in the faith of the beleeuers. Againe. He declared in the beginning, how great, and how infinite the omnipotencie of Christ is, that he might teach, that their hope is to be reposed onely in him. Theodoret saith. He knew that life was procured by his suffering: for he said, he fulfilled those afflictiones of Christ, which are wanting, as he which fulfilled that which was remaining, and sustained afflictions for them. And this was that which remained, that he might preach to the Gentiles, and shew the liberall procurer of health vnto them. Finally, there is not one of the ancient fathers, that gathereth any merite or satisfaction of mens sufferings out of this text.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 1 8 By Philosophie.) Philosophie and al humane science, so long as they be subiect and obedient to Christ, (as they be in the Schooles of Christian Catholike men) be not forbidden, but are greatly commended and be very profitable in the Church of God. Otherwise where secular learning is made the rule of religion and commaundeth faith, there it is pernicious and the cause of all heresie and infidelitie. for the which, S. Hierom and before him Tertullian call Philosophers, the Patriarkes of Heretikes, and declare that al the old heresies rose onely by too much admiring of prophane Philosophie. Hierom. ad Ctesiph. cont. Pelag. c. 1. Tertul. de præscr. & cont. Hermog. & cont. Marcio li. 5. And so do these new sects no doubt in many things. for, other arguments haue they none against the presence of Christ in the B. Sacrament but such as they borrow of Aristotle and his like, concerning quantitie, accidents, place, position, dimensions, senses, sight, taste, and other straites of reason, to which they bring Christes mysteries. Al Philosophical arguments therefore against any article of our faith be here condemned as deceitfull, and are called also here, the tradition of men, and the elements of the world. The better to resist which fallacies and traditions of heathen men, the Schoole learning is necessarie, which keepeth Philosophie in awe, and order of fauth, and vseth the same to withstand the Philosophical and sophistical deceits of Heretikes and Heathen. So the great Philosophers S. Denys, S. Augustine, Clemens Alexandrinus, Iustine, Lactantius and the rest, vsed the same to the great honour of God and benefite of the Church. So came S. Cyprian, S. Ambrose, S. Hierom, and the Greeke fathers, furnished with all secular learning vnto the studie of Diuinitie, whereof see S. Hierom ep. 84. ad Magnum Oratorem.

RHEM. 2 16 In meate.) *The Protestants wilfully or ignorantly applie al these kindes of forbearing meates, to the Christian fastes: but it is by the circumstance of the text plaine (as S. Not against Christian fastes or feasts, such as yours are not: for your abstinence from flesh is no fast, but a superstitious change of meates according to the tradition of men, vpon a vaine pretence, that flesh was cursed of God and not fish, as Durand confesseth lib. 6. cap. de ieiunijs. The Apostles doctrine therefore being generall, is not onely against the Iewes, but against any superstition that is like vnto theirs. Of your feastes Iudaically and seruilly obserued, I haue written in Gal. 4. Sect. 5.

FVLKE. 3 You take great paines to litle purpoſe, for what Religion of Angels ſoeuer it be, ſuch as the heathen vſed, ſuch as Simon Magus inuented, ſuch as ſome Iewes obſerued, or ſuch as you Papiſts vſe, all religion of Angels is forbidden: yea all ſuperſtition or will worſhip, which is not after the preſcript of Gods word. We doe not therefore abuſe this place againſt your ſuperſtitious honouring and inuocating of Angels. S. Auguſtine ſaith, If you would rightly worſhip the Angels, you ſhould learne of them not to worſhip them. In Pſ. 96. The ſame father among hereſies, recites a ſect called Angelici, which were inclined to the worſhip of Angels *ad Quod vult Deum. Auguſtine ſaith: If we ſhould make a temple of timber and ſtones, to any holy and moſt excellent Angel, ſhould we not be accurſed from the truth of Chriſt, & from the Church of God becauſe we ſhou'd giue that ſeruice to a creature which is due onely to God? Contra Maximin. lib. 1 Titul. 11. What is it then for Papiſts to builde and hallow Churches vnto the honour of S. Michael, and S. Gabriel? But the Scriptures (you ſay) record ſo often, that the Angels do offer our prayers vp to God, and to haue bene lawfully reuerenced of the Patriarks as Gods Miniſters. The proofe of this is conteined in 4. Quotations. The firſt, Ioſue 5. 14. where Ioſue falleth downe and worſhippeth no Angel, but the Lord God himſelfe, our Sauiour Chriſt, the Prince of the Lords armie (that is of all Angels) appearing to him in the ſhape of a man, as it is plaine by the text. The next is Tob. 12. 12. which is no Canonicall Scripture, nor agreeable vnto it: for the Scripture alwaies maketh Chriſt our onely Mediatour, by whom our prayers and all other ſpirituall ſacrifices are offered to God. 1. Pet. 2. 5. Heb. 13. 15. The third text. Gen. 48. 16. The Angel which deliuered me, &c. By whom Iacob meaneth the Angel of the Couenant, which is Chriſt, & no creature, Mal. 3. 1. For no creature but God himſelfe deliuered him from al euil. And S. paul calleth the Angel which led the people of Iſrael, Chriſt. 1. Cor. 10. 9. And although he ſhould meane the miniſtery of an Angel, yet his praier to God, and not to the Angel, that he would protect thoſe children by his Angel, as he had done Iacob himſelfe. The laſt. 1. Tim. 5. 21. where the Apoſtle doth charge Timothie in the preſence of God, & of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, & the elect Angels, to obſerue theſe things. Out of which words, I cannot imagine how you would gather your concluſion, that Sainctes do offer our praiers, & haue bene reuerenced of the Patriarks. S. Paul calleth God and our Sauiour Chriſt, and his holy Angels to be witneſſes of this his weightie charge. And Moſes calleth heauen and earth to witnes that he hath ſet before them life and death. Deut. 30. 19. May we hereof conclude, that heauen and earth did offer his prayers, or that he did yeeld any religious worſhip to heauen and earth? As for due reuerence which is of loue, not of ſeruice, there is no doubt but all the Sainctes of God doe yeeld vnto them. And ſo ſaith S. Auguſtine of the Angels: We honour them with charitie, not with ſeruice. Neither do we build temples vnto them: for they wil not be ſo honored of vs, becauſe they know that we when we are good, are the temples of the higheſt God. Therfore it is rightly written, that a man was forbidden by an Angel to worſhip him, & bidden to worſhip God only, vnder whom he alſo was a fellow ſeruant with him. De vera relig. c. 55. The texts are euident. Apoc. c. 19. 10. & 22. 8. Where the Angel denieth to be worſhipped of S. Iohn, who was not ſo ignorãt to worſhip him as God, but thought ſome religious worſhip was due to him, as to a meſſenger of God. But that Angels may be prayed vnto, and can helpe and heare vs, you ſende vs firſt to Hierom. in cap. 10. Daniel. where is neuer a word to proue that Angels may be prayed vnto. Only Hierom (beſide the text and beſide the trueth) ſaith in the perſon of the Angel, that he did offer Daniels prayers: but that he was to be prayed vnto, there is no worde. That the Angels may know our prayers when it pleaſeth God, & be miniſters of his helpe vnto vs, it is no queſtion. We acknowledge they are appointed for our gard and defence, according to Gods pleaſure. The Angel in that Chapter of Daniel, was ready at the firſt praiers of Daniel, but the Prince of Perſia withſtoode him 21. daies. Whereby he declareth, that his meſſage was delaied for that time, and for what benefite of the Church. Where, leſt you ſhould build too much vpon S. Hieroms auctoritie for offering of our prayers by the Angel, He vnderſtãdeth the Prince of Perſia to be an Angel, & ſo maketh a reſiſtãce of one Angel againſt another, which is a groſſe abſurditie. Your next proofe is out of S. Ambroſe in. Pſ. 118. ſer. 1. Where there is no word to proue, that Angels may be prayed vnto. Onely he ſheweth, that Angels are preſent in all places to be witneſſes of our actions, and to protect and defend Gods children as it pleaſeth him to ſend them. The third is S. Auguſtine De ciuit. lib. 10. c. 12. Where he ſaith, that God doth none otherwiſe heare them that call vpon him, then he ſeeth that they will call vpon him, For euen when his Angels do heare he heareth them, as in a true temple not made with hands. His meaning is (as it is plaine by the diſcourſe of the Chapter) that God hath no neede of the miniſterie of Angels, to haue our prayers preſented to him by them: but when they do heare our prayers made to him, he in the Angels themſelues heareth them. Wherefore here is nothing to proue, that we may pray to Angels, becauſe the Angels ſometimes heare vs pray to God. The laſt is Bede in Cant. lib. 4. c. 24. Where there is no word of praying to Angels, nor of any reuerence giuen to them. Onely he ſaith, out of Appolonius, that the miniſteries of Angels doe neuer decline from their power and office, but alwaies remaine as high as Palme trees: And out of Iulianus he ſaith, The companies of his Sainctes both of men and of Angels, do ſerue his Godhead, and doe celebrate the honour of the King with continuall praiſe. I will conclude therefore with S. RHEM. 1 8 By Philosophie.) Philosophie and al humane science, so long as they be subiect and obedient to Christ, (as they be in the Schooles of Christian Catholike men) be not forbidden, but are greatly commended and be very profitable in the Church of God. Otherwise where secular learning is made the rule of religion and commaundeth faith, there it is pernicious and the cause of all heresie and infidelitie. for the which, S. Hierom and before him Tertullian call Philosophers, the Patriarkes of Heretikes, and declare that al the old heresies rose onely by too much admiring of prophane Philosophie. Hierom. ad Ctesiph. cont. Pelag. c. 1. Tertul. de præscr. & cont. Hermog. & cont. Marcio li. 5. And so do these new sects no doubt in many things. for, other arguments haue they none against the presence of Christ in the B. Sacrament but such as they borrow of Aristotle and his like, concerning quantitie, accidents, place, position, dimensions, senses, sight, taste, and other straites of reason, to which they bring Christes mysteries. Al Philosophical arguments therefore against any article of our faith be here condemned as deceitful, and are called also here, the tradition of men, and the elements of the world. The better to resist which fallacies and traditions of heathen men, the Schoole learning is necessarie, which keepeth Philosophie in awe, and order of faith, and vseth the same to withstand the Philosophical and sophistical deceits of Heretikes and Heathen. So the great Philosophers S. Denys, S. Augustine, Clemens Alexandrinus, Iustine, Lactantius and the rest, vsed the same to the great honour of God and benefite of the Church. So came S. Cyprian, S. Ambrose, S. Hierom, and the Greeke fathers, furnished with all secular learning vnto the studie of Diuinitie, whereof see S. Hierom ep. 84. ad Magnum Oratorem.

RHEM. 2 16 In meate.) The Protestants wilfully or ignorantly applie al these kindes of forbearing meates, to the Christian fastes: but it is by the circumstance of the text plaine (as S. Augustine also teacheth) that the Iudaical obseruation and distinction of certaine cleane and vncleane meates is forbidden to the Colossians, who were in danger to be seduced by certaine Iewes, vnder pretence of holinesse to keepe the Law touching meates and festiuities and other like, which the Apostle sheweth were onely shadowes of things to come: which things are come, and therefore the said shadowes to cease. Where he nameth the Sabboths and feastes of the new moone, that no man needeth to doubt but that he speaketh onely of the Iewish daies and kindes of fastes and feastes, and not of Christian holidaies or fasting daies at all.

FVLKE. 2 When Popish choice of meates and daies is more superstitious & burdenous, then the Iudaical difference of meates and daies, we doe rightly apply this and such like places against them. Not against Christian fastes or feasts, such as yours are not: for your abstinence from flesh is no fast, but a superstitious change of meates according to the tradition of men, vpon a vaine pretence, that flesh was cursed of God and not fish, as Durand confesseth lib. 6. cap. de ieiunijs. The Apostles doctrine therefore being generall, is not onely against the Iewes, but against any superstition that is like vnto theirs. Of your feastes Iudaically and seruilly obserued, I haue written in Gal. 4. Sect. 5.

I anſwere, the Greeke word will beare our tranſlation, and we doe auoide the terme of traditions, to diſtinguiſh the ordinances and doctrine deliuered by the Apoſtles, from the traditions of men which our Sauiour Chriſt condemneth, Math. 15. — Slander. Cauilling. Traditions of men.

RHEM. 5 21 Touch not.) *The Heretiks (as before and alwaies) very vainly alleage this againſt the Catholike faſtings: when it is moſt cleere that the Apoſtles reprehendeth the foreſaid falſe teachers that thought to make the Chriſtians ſubiect to the obſeruation of the ceremonies of the old Law, of not eating hogges, conies, hares fleſh, and ſuch like, not to touch a dead corps nor any place where a woman in her flowers had ſitten, and other infinite doctrines of touching, taſting, waſhing, eating, and the reſt, either commaunded to the old people by God, or (as many things were) voluntarily taken vp by them ſelues, ſometime cleane gainſt Gods ordinance, and often friuoulous and ſuperſtitious. Which ſort as Chriſt in the Goſpel, ſo here S. Paul calleth the precepts and doctrines of men, and ſuperſtition, and (as the Greeke word ſignifieth) voluntarie worſhip, that is inuented by Heretikes of their owne head without the warrant of Chriſt in the Scriptures, or the holy Ghoſt in the Church, or any lawful authoritie of ſuch whom Chriſt commandeth vs to obey. Againſt ſuch Sect-Maiſters therefore as would haue yoked the faithfull againe with the Iewiſh or Heretical factes of Simon Magus and the like, S. Paul ſpeaketh, and not of the Churches faſtes or doctrines. — Scripture abuſed againſt the Churches faſtes. * ἐθελοθρησκεία.

FVLKE. 5 This maketh not againſt your prohibitions of touching of meates and handling of Chalices and ſuch like: Why ſo? Becauſe you be no heretikes. Nay, but becauſe you haue ſuch precepts & doctrines of men, contrarie to Scriptures: you declare your ſelues to be as great heretikes as theſe men, againſt whom the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, and to hold either the ſame or the like hereſies. You ſay, ſuperſtition or voluntarie worſhip is that, which is inuented by heretiks of their owne head, without the warrant of Chriſt in the Scriptures. Herein we agree with you, & ſuch is all Popiſh ſuperſtition. But you come in with an Or, that it hath the warrant of the holy Ghoſt in the Church: Verily the Church hath no auctoritie of the holy Ghoſt, to decree contrarie to the Scriptures, to make Religion in touching and taſting, which the Scripture ſaith to be free. Neither are we commanded to obey any man, but ſo farre forth as his doctrine and decrees are warrantable by the holy Scriptures. For neither the Church nor any perſon therein, hath power to command or forbid the vſe of any creature for Religions ſake. But if any company of men do take vpon them to ſet vp a new Religion or worſhip, in whole or in part, which hath not the warrant of Chriſt in the Scriptures, we ſee by this place it is alſo contrary to the Scriptures, therefore that company ſhew themſelues not to be of the Church of Chriſt, but of Antichriſt, and he that commaundeth the contrary to this text, vſurpeth Gods auctoritie as Antichriſt, hauing no commiſſion from God, or our Sauiour Chriſt. — Popiſh heretiks. Vſe of creatures.

RHEM. 6 23 Hauing a ſhew.) Againe the Heretikes of our time obiect, that theſe foreſaid falſe teachers pretended holines, wiſedome, and chaſtiſement of their bodies (for ſo S. Paul ſaith) by forbidding certaine meates according to the Iewes obſeruation, euen as the Catholikes do. It is true they did ſo, and ſo do moſt vices imitate vertues. for if chaſtiſing of mens bodies and repreſſing their concupiſcences and luſtes were not godly, and if abſtinence from ſome meats were not laudably and profitably vſed in the Church for the ſame purpoſe, no Heretikes (to induce the aboliſhed obſeruations and differences of meates of the Iewes, or the condemnation of certaine meates and creatures as abominable according to others) would haue falſely pretended the chaſtiſement of their fleſh, or made other ſhew of wiſedome and pietie, to found their vnlawfull Heretical or Iudaical ſuperſtition concerning the ſame. The Catholike Church and her children, by the example of Chriſt, S. Iohn Baptiſt, the Apoſtles and other bleſſed men, do that lawfully, godly, religiouſly, and ſincerely indeede to the end aforeſaid, which theſe falſe Apoſtles only pretended to do. So S. Paul did chaſtiſe his body in deede, by watching, faſting, and many other afflictions, and that was lawful and was true wiſedom and pietie indeede. The foreſaid Heretikes not ſo, but to induce the Coloſſians to Iudaiſme and other abominable errors, did but pretend theſe things in hypocriſie. — The hypocritical abſtinence of old Heretikes, maketh nothing againſt true and ſincerere faſting, but commendeth it. 1. Cor. 9. 27. 2. Cor. 11. 27.

FVLKE. 6 It hath beene often ſaid, your abſtinence from fleſh and eating of fiſh, with drinking of wine, and eating of al maner of fruits and ſpices, is no Chriſtian faſt: but an hypocriticall counterfecting. Secondly, your abſtinence from fleſh and allowing fiſh, for more holines, (becauſe the waters were not curſed, when all fleſh was curſed,) is the very doctrine of diuels. Thirdly, your very faſting and puniſhing of your carkaſſes, not for chaſtiſement to bring them in ſubiection to the ſpirit, but by your arrogant opinion of merite, to preferre ſuch bodily exerciſes euen before faith of the heart, and true contrition of the ſoule, and other fruites of Gods ſpirit, is as vile hypocriſie and hereſie, as euer was in the ancient heretikes. And therefore you can neuer ſhift your ſelues from the condemnation of this text, except you leaue your wicked hereſies. — Popiſh faſting. Eph. 5. 2.

3 Auarice which is the seruice of Idols.) Here is a marueilous impudent and foolish corruption in the vulgar English Bible printed the yeere 1577. and (as it seemeth) most auctorised. Where for their error against the Images of Christ and his Saincts, and to make image and idol, al one: the translator, for that which the Apostle saith in Greeke, Couetousnes is idolatrie, maketh him to say in English, Couetousnes is worshipping of images, as also Ephes.5,4. he translateth thus, The couetous person is a worshipper of images: for that which the Apostle saith, The couetous man is an idolater, meaning spiritual idolatrie, because he maketh money his God. In which sense to call this spirituall idolatrie, worshipping of images, is to ridiculous, and must needs proceed of blinde heresie. Heretical and foolish translation.

FVLKE. 2

A marueilous impudent and foolish corruption, to make image and idol all one. A great corruption I promise you to expresse a Greeke word, by a Latin or English word. For that εἰδώλων signifieth an image, not onely all the new Dictionaries do testifie, but also the ancient Greeke Lexicons of Hesychius, and Phauorinus, and so is the word vsed by Plato, Homer, and all other ancient writers. But if there be so great difference between idols and images, why do you translate out of your Latin, which is Seruitus simulachrorum, the seruice of images, contrary to your Latin, calling it the seruice of idols? If you will stand in argument with vs, that Simulachrum signifieth the same, that εἰδώλων doth in Greeke and not that εἰκων: first the vse of all learned auctors in the Latin tongue, is against you, and namely Tullie, the father of Latin eloquens, which oftentimes vseth the word Simulachrum, for the same that is otherwise called Imago, or Effigies. One or two examples, I will bring for many, Pro Archia, he saith Statuæ & imagines non animũ simulachra sunt sed corporum. Standing images, & other images, are not similitudes or images of the minds, but of the bodies. Against Verres, he nameth Effigies simulachrumque Mithridatis. The shape and image of Mithridates. Lactantius an eloquent Christian, calleth men, viuentia Dei simulachra, the liuing images of God: where you must translate, the liuing idols of God: if this your translation be true. Perionius a Popish fryer in Dionysius, de cæles. Hierar. lib.1.c.1. for the Greeke word εἰκων translateth Simulachra, which if you should vnderstand for an idol, would make a madde meaning of Dionysius. But of this worde Simulachrum, and of our translation, I haue answered more at large in my defence against Greg. Martyn cap.1. sect.5. & cap.3 through out all the sections. Why spirituall idolatrie, may not be called spirituall worshipping of images, I greatly marueile, though it seeme to you neuer so ridiculous. For their is spirituall worship, as well as bodily and spirituall images, as well as bodily images, though you laugh till your splene ake. But yours is the blinde heresie, which worshippeth them that haue eies and see not, and by the iudgement of God and the prophets execration, are become like vnto those whom you worship, that is hauing eies and see not, for who is so blinde, as he that will not see? Images and Idols.

RHEM. 3.

9 Doing on the new.) By this and the whole discourse of this chapter conteining an exhortation to good life, and to put on the habite of the new man with all vertues: we may see, our iustice in Christ to be a very qualitie and forme inherent in our soule, adorning the same, and not an imputation onely of Christes righteousnes, or a hiding onely of our sinnes and wickednes, which the Heretikes falsely affirme to remaine in vs after baptisme and alwaies during life. See S. Augustine, de pec. mer. & remiss. li.2. c.7. & cont. Iulian li.6.c.7. Iustice an inherent qualitie in vs.

FVLKE. 3

We know there is in the regenerate, a qualitie inherent of iustice inchoated and vnperfect, by which we are not iustified before God, but onely by the iustice of Christ imputed to vs through faith: whereby our sinnes are hidde, and couered from the sight of Gods iustice. Yet so, that they are forgiuen and remoued from vs, as farre as the East is from the west: and not remaine still in vs (as you falsely say, we affirme) after baptisme, although corruption of our nature which is of originall sinne, doth remaine in vs during our naturall life. And our renouation is begunne in regeneration, not perfected vntill after this life. And that doth Augustine expresly affirme, In the first place, whether you send vs. For not from that houre, in which euery man was baptized, all his old infirmitie is consumed, but renouation beginneth of the remission of all sinnes. And the same argument he holdeth, against Iulianus the Pelagian as appeereth by these his words. Although in baptisme be performed full remission of sinnes, yet there hath remained where in we might profit to a better wrestling, to be watchfully and continually exercised, against the troopes of euill desires, rebelling within vs, for which it is said, euen to them that are baptized, Mortifie your members which are vpon the earth &c. Iustice inherent. THE ARGVMENT OF THE FIRST EPISTLE OF S. PAVL TO THE THESSALONIANS.

HOW S.Paul with Silas (or Siluanus) and Timothee according to a vision calling him out of Asia, into Macedonia, came to Philippi being the first citie thereof, we read Act.16. And how againe from Philippi, after scourging and imprisoning there, he came to Thessalonica being the head citie of that countrie, we read Act. 17. where after three weekes preaching, the Iewes stirred the citie against them, and pursued them also to Berea: so that Paul was conueied from thence to Athens, where he expected the comming of Silas and Timothee from the foresaid Berea in Macedonia, but receiued them (as we haue Act.18.) at Corinth in Achaia.

Hauing therefore left the Thessalonians in such persecution, and being carefull to know how they did in it, he was desirous to returne vnto them, as he signifieth in the 2. chapter of this Epistle v. 17. (But as he there addeth) Satan hindered vs, therefore tarying himselfe at Athens, he sendeth Timothee vnto them, at whose returne vnderstanding their constancie, he is much comforted, as he declareth c.3. So then they are all three together at the writing of this Epistle, as also we haue in the title of it: Paul and Siluanus and Timothee to the Church of the Thessalonians. And therefore it seemeth to haue beene written at Corinth, not at Athens: because after the sending of Timothee to Thessalonica, they metте not at Athens againe, but at Corinth.

The first three chapters of it are, to confirme and comfort them against the tentations of those persecutions. The other two are of exhortation, to liue according to his precepts, namely in sanctification of their bodies, and not in fornication: to loue one an other: to comfort one an other about their friends departed, with the doctrine of the Resurrection, and with continuall preparation to die: the laietie to obey, and the Cleargie to be diligent in euery point of their office.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 2 6 Followers of vs.) S. Paul is bold to commend them for imitation of him, yea and to ioyne him selfe in that point with Christ, to be their paterne to walke after. Where without curiositie he nameth himselfe first, and our Lord afterward, because he was a more neere and ready obiect then Christ, who was not nor could not be followed but through the preaching and conuersation of the Apostle, who was in their sight or hearing. And this imitation of some holy man or other, hath made so many Religious men of diuers orders and rules, all tending to the better imitation of Christ our Lord. See the like words of the Apostle, 1. Cor. 11. 1. and Philippi. 3, 17. Religious persons imitation of diuers holy men is the imitation of Christ him selfe.

FVLKE. 2 S. Paul requireth, that men be no otherwise followers of him, then he is of Christ. 1. Cor. 11. 1. But by following him learne to follow Christ. Neither doth he set vp for this purpose, a new order, rule or religion of Paulianes as you do of Franciscanes, Dominicanes &c. but exhorteth al Christians together, to this kinde of imitations, where as your sectes and new religions, do make diuisions among Christians. Againe how can such diuersitie of sectes among you, bring men to the imitation of Christ, which was but one? wherefore your Popish religions, haue a vaine pretence to follow Christ by folowing a mans rule, when they leaue the rule of Christ, which is expressed in his holy word, and is common to all Christians.

CHAP. II.

He calleth euen them selues to witnes, that his preaching vnto them was as he said, in most commendable maner. 13 And againe on the othar side he thanketh God for their maner of receiuing it: that is, with all ioy, notwithstanding the persecution of their owne citizens.

FOr your selues know, brethren, our entrance, vnto you, that it was not vaine:

2 But [c] hauing suffred before and * been abused with contumelies (as you know) at Philippi, we had confidence in our God, to speake vnto you the Gospel of God in much carefulnes.

3 For our exhortation was not of error, nor of vncleanesse, nor in deceite:

4 But as we were approued of God that the Gospel should be committed to vs, so we speake: not as pleasing men, but God, who proueth our harts.

5 For neither haue we been at any time in the word of adulation, as you know: nor in occasion of auarice, God is witnes:

6 Nor seeking glory of men, neither of you, nor of others.

7 Whereas we might haue been a burden to you, as the Apostles of Christ: but we became ‖ children in the middes of you, as if a nurce should cherish her children:

8 So hauing a desire to you, we would gladly deliuer vnto you not only the Gospel of God, but also our owne soules: because you are become most deere vnto vs.

9 For you are mindful, brethren, of * our labour and toile. day and night working, lest we should charge any of you, we preached among you the Gospel of God.

10 You are witnesses and God, how holily and iustly and without blame, we haue been to you that did beleeue.

11 As you know in what maner we desiring & comforting you, haue adiured euery one

[c] horrible example for Catholic preachers, and perswasion to immortalitie, when in the middes of persecutions and reproches they preach sincerely to please God and not men. Act. 16, 19. 23.

‖ milde,

* 20. 34. Cor. 4, 12. Thes. 3, 8.

For ye your selues, brethren, know our entrance in vnto you, that it was not in vaine.

2 * But euen after that we had suffered before, and were shamefully entreated as yee know at Philippi, wee were bolde in our God, to speake vnto you the Gospel of God, in much striuing. Act. 16. 22.

3 For our exhortation was not of deceite, neither of vncleanesse, neither in guile:

4 But as we were alowed of God to be put in credite with the Gospell, euen so we speake, not as pleasing men, but God, which tryeth our harts.

5 For neither at any time vsed we flattering words, as ye know, neither cloke of couetousnesse, God is record.

6 Neither sought we praise of men, neither of you, nor yet of others.

7 When we might haue beene in ‖ authoritie, as the Apostles of Christ, but were tender among you, euen as a nurse cherisheth her children. ‖ Or, a burden.

8 So, being tenderly affected toward you, our good will was to haue dealt vnto you, not the Gospel of God onely, but also our owne soules: because ye were deare vnto vs.

9 *For yee remember, brethren, our labour and trauaile: * for we labouring night and day, because we would not be chargeable vnto any of you, preached vnto you the Gospell of God.* Acts 20. 34. 2. Thes. 3. 8.

10 Ye are witnesses, and God also, how holily, and iustly, and vnblameably, we behaued our selues among you that beleeue.

11 And yee know how that as a father his one of you, (as a father his children) that you would walke woorthy of God, who hath called you into his kingdome and glory.

12 Therefore we also giue thankes to God without intermission: because that when you had receiued of vs the word of the hearing of God, you receiued it not as the word of men, but (as it is indeed) ‖ the word of God who worketh in you that haue beleeued.

13 For you, brethren, are become followers of the Churches of God that be in Iewrie, in Christ IESVS: for you also haue suffered the same things of your owne lineage, as they also of the Iewes, 14 Who both killed our Lord IESVS, and the Prophets, and haue persecuted vs, and please not God, and are aduersaries to all men.

15 Prohibiting vs to speake to the Gentils that they may be saued, to make vp their sinnes alwaies. for the wrath of God is come vpon them euen to the end.

* ἀπορφανισθέντες. 16 But we, brethren, * depriued of you for a short time, in sight, not in hart: haue hastened the more abundantly to see your face with much desire.

17 For we would haue come to you, I Paul certes, once and againe: but Satan hath hindered vs.

18 For what is our hope, or ioy, or crowne of glorie? ‡ Are not you before our Lord IESVS Christ in his comming.

19 For you are our glory and ioy.

children, so we haue exhorted, comforted, and besought euery one of you, 12 That yee would walke woorthy of God, * who hath called you vnto his kingdome and glory. Eph.4.1.

13 For this cause thanke we God also without ceassing, because when ye had receiued the word of God which ye heard of vs, ye receiued it not as the word of men (but as it is in deed) the word of God, which effectuously worketh also in you that beleeue,

14 For ye, brethren, became followers of the Churches of God, which in Iurie are in Christ Iesus: for yee also haue suffered like things of your countreymen, as they haue of the Iewes:

15 Who both killed the Lord Iesus, and their owne Prophets, and haue persecuted vs: and God they please not, and are contrarie to all men:

16 And hinder vs to speake to the Gentiles, that they might be saued, to fulfill their sinnes alway, For the wrath of God is come on them to the vttermost.

17 Forasmuch, brethren, as we are kept from you for a short season, in person, not in hart, * we enforced the more to see you personally with great desire. Rom.1.11.

18 And therefore we would haue come vnto you (euen I Paul) once and againe: but Satan hindered vs.

19 For what is our hope, or ioy, or crowne of reioycing? Are not ye it in the presence of our Lord Iesus Christ at his comming?

20 Yea, ye are our glory and ioy.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 1 18 Are not you before.) If the Apostle without iniurie to God, in right good sense call his scholers the Thessalonians, his hope, ioy, glory: why blaspheme the Protestants the Cath. Church and her children for terming our B. Lady or other Saincts, their hope, for the speciall confidence they haue in their prayers?

FVLKE. 1 A poore shift of descant to excuse your blasphemous confidence in the merite of creatures. S. Paul calleth the Thessalonians his hope, ioy, and crowne, &c. because he hopeth to haue ioy and reward for his labor, bestowed in their conuersion, according to the promise of God. Shew the like promise if you can, for saluation to be obtained by the merites of Saincts prayers, or else you cannot without blasphemie, in any sense, call creatures your hope, and much lesse haue speciall confidence in their prayers. Againe, the Apostle speaketh this, in respect of his loue toward them, therefore Theodoret saith: Because he likened himselfe to a mother which cherisheth her children, he also imitateth the words of mothers, which are wont to call their yoong children, their hope, their ioy, and such like. Chrysostome saith: Doe you not acknowledge these to be the wordes of women, which being inflamed with loue, speake after this maner to their yong children? Ambrose saith: The perfection of the scholers, is the ioy and crowne of the master. Merits.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 2 12 The word of God.) The Aduersaries will haue no word of God but that which is written and contained in the Scripture: but here they might learne that all Paules preaching before he wrote to them, was the very word of God. They might also learne that whatsoeuer the lawfull Apostles, Pastors and Priests of Gods Church preach in the vnitie of the same Church, is to be taken for Gods owne word, and ought not to be reputed of them for doctrines of men or Pharisaical traditions, as they falsly call canons, precepts, and decrees of holy Church. Not onely the written word is the word of God.

FVLKE. 2 Since God caused the Scripture first to be written, there is no doctrine to be counted the word of God, but that which is contained in the Scripture. And so were all the preachings of S. Paul contained in the Scriptures of the Law and the Prophets, before he did put any word of them in writing, as he testifieth: Act. 26. 22. And whatsoeuer the lawfull Apostles, Pastours and Priests of God doe preach in the vnitie of the Church, is no otherwise to be taken for Gods own word, but as it is consonant and agreeable vnto the holy Scriptures, and for the substance of doctrine, contained in them. Else are they no better then the doctrines and traditions of men. Sufficiencie of the Scripture.

Because he could not come himselfe as he desired, he sent Timothee. 6 At whose returne now vnderstanding that they stand still stedfast, notwithstanding all those persecutions, he reioyceth exceedingly: 10 praying that he may see them againe, 12 and for their increase in charitie.

FOr the which cause forbearing no longer, it pleased vs to remaine at Athens, alone.

2 And we sent Timothee our brother, and the minister of God in the Gospell of Christ to confirme you and exhort you for your faith,

3 That no man be moued in these tribulations, for your selues know, that we are appointed to this.

4 For euen when we were with you, we foretold you that we should suffer tribulations, as also it is come to passe, and you know.

5 Therefore I also forbearing no longer, sent to know your faith: lest perhaps he that tempteth, hath tempted you, and our labor be made vaine.

Act.18.5. 6 But now * Timothee comming vnto vs from you, and reporting to vs your faith and charitie, and that you haue a good remembrance of vs alwaies, desiring to see vs, as we also you:

5 For this cause when I could no longer forbeare, I sent him to know your faith, lest by some meanes the tempter had tempted you, and our labour had beene vaine.

6 But now lately when Timotheus came from you vnto vs, and brought vs good tidings of your faith and charitie, and how that ye haue good remembrance of vs alwaies, desiring greatly to see vs, as we also to see you:

7 Therefore, brethren, we were comforted ouer you, in all our aduersitie and necessitie, because of your faith:

8 For now we liue, if yee stand fast in the Lord.

9 For what thankes can we recompense to God againe for you, for all the ioy wherewith we ioy for your sakes before our God,

*10 * Praying night and day exceedingly to see you personally, and to repaire the wantings of your faith?* Rom.1.10.

11 Now God himselfe, and our Father, and our Lord Iesus Christ, guide our way vnto you.

12 And the Lord increase you, and make you abound in charitie one toward another, and toward all men, euen as we also toward you:

THE Epistle vpon the seconde Sunday in Lent.

FOr the rest therfore, brethren, we desire and beseech you in our Lord IESVS, that as you haue receiued of vs how you ought to walke, and to please God, as also you doe walke, that you abound more.

2 For you know what precepts I haue giuen to you by our Lord IESVS.

3 For this is the will of God, your sanctification: that ye abstaine from fornication,

4 That euery one may know to possesse his vessell in sanctification and honour:

5 Not in the passion of lust, as also the Gentiles that know not God,

6 And that no man ouergoe, nor circumuent his brother in businesse: because our Lord is reuenger of all these things, as we haue foretold you, and haue testified.

7 For God hath not called vs into vncleanesse: but into sanctification.

8 Therfore he that despiseth these things, despiseth ‖ not man but God, who also hath giuen his holy Spirit in vs.

9 But concerning the charity of the 'fraternitie, we haue no need to write to you:

For * your selues haue learned of God to loue one an other.

10 Yea and you doe it toward al the brethren in al Macedonia. But we desire you brethren, that you ‡abound more:

11 And that you employ your indeuor to be quiet, and that you doe your owne busines, and worke with your owne hands, as we haue commanded you:

12 And that you walke honestly toward them that are without: and need nothing of any mans.

THE Epistle in a Masse for the dead vpon the day of the buriall or deposition.

13 And we will not haue you ignorant, brethren, concerning them that ‖sleepe, that you be not sorowful, as also others that haue no hope.

14 For if we beleeue that IESVS died and rose againe, so also God them that haue slept by IESVS wil bring with him.

15 For this we say to you in the word of our Lord, *that ‡we which liue, which are remaining in the aduent of our Lord, shall not preuent them that haue slept.

16 For our Lord himselfe in commaundement and in the voyce of an * Archangel and in the trumpet of God wil descend from heauen: and the dead that are in Christ, shall rise againe first.

17 Then we that liue, that are left, with al shal be taken vp with them in the cloudes to meete Christ, into the aire, and so alwaies we shal be with our Lord.

18 Therefore comfort ye one another in these words.

'e All Catholike Christians make one fraternitie or brotherhood. Io.13,34.15,17. Heb.13,1.

‡ He speaketh in the person of those that shall be aliue when our Sauior returneth to iudgement. Mat.24,31. 1.Cor.15,52.

FVrthermore we beseech you brethren, and exhort you by the Lord Iesus, that ye increase more and more, as ye haue receiued of vs, how ye ought to walke and to please God.

2 For yee know what commaundements we gaue you by the Lord Iesus.

*3 For this is the will of God euen your † holinesse, * that ye should abstaine from fornication:* † Or, sanctification. Rom.12.1. eph.5.27.

4 That euery one of you should know how to possesse his vessel in holinesse and honour:

5 Not in the lust of concupiscence, euen as the Gentiles which know not God.

*6 * That no man oppresse and defraude his brother in any matter, beeause that the Lord is the auenger of all such, as we also haue forewarned you, and testified.* 1.Cor.6.8.

*7 For God hath not called vs vnto vncleannesse, but vnto holinesse. 1.Cor.1.2.

8 He therefore that despiseth, despiseth not man, but God, who hath also giuen to vs his holy spirit.

*9 * But as touching brotherly loue, ye neede not that I write vnto you: for yee are taught of God to loue one another.* Iohn13.34. 1.Iohn1.8.

10 Yea, and that thing verily ye do vnto all the brethren, which are in all Macedonia: but we beseech you brethren, that yee increase more and more:

11 And that ye studie to be quiet, and to doe your owne businesse, and to worke with your owne hands, as we commanded you:

12 That yee may walke honestly toward them that are without, and that yee may haue lacke of nothing.

13 But I would not haue you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which sleepe, that yee sorow not, euen as other which haue no hope.

14 For if we beleeue that Iesus died, and rose againe, euen so them also which sleepe by Iesus, will God bring with him.

*15 For this we say vnto you in the word of the Lord: that we which * liue, which remaine vnto the comming of the Lord, shall not preuent them which sleepe.* 1.Cor.15.51.

*16 *For the Lord himselfe shal descend from heauen in a shoute, and in the voyce of the Archangel, * and in the trumpe of God: and the dead in Christ shal rise first.* Matt.24.31. 1.Cor.15.52.

17 Then we which liue, which remaine, shall be caught vp together with them in the cloudes, to meete the Lord in the ayre: and so shall we euer be with the Lord.

18 Wherefore, comfort your selues one another in these words.

11 Abound more.) Christian men ought to proceede and profit continually in good works and iustification. In that iustification wherein they are declared to be iust which is by good works, they ought to proceede Iustification and and increase: but in iustification by faith, they cannot proceede, because they are perfectly iust by the righteousnesse of Christ. For he which hath beleeued, is as iust as he that hath fulfilled the whole lawe, He that beleeueth in Christ hath the perfection of the law. Ambrose in 10. ad Rom. by faith and works.

RHEM. 2 8 Not man but God.) He that despiseth the Churches or her lawfull Pastors precept, offendeth no lesse then if he contemned Gods expresse commandements. For they be of the holy Ghost, and are not to be counted among the commandements of men onely. The precepts of the Church.

FVLKE. 2 The commandements of God vttered by man, are to be receiued not as the commandements of man but of God. For S. Paul speaketh of the expresse commandements of God. All other precepts of the Church, or our pastours, are to be receiued, if they be agreeable to the word of God, and not otherwise. For otherwise they be not of the holy Ghost, but of men onely. Precepts of men.

RHEM. 13 Sleepe.) Some Heretikes peruersly inferred of this that the soules did sleepe till the day of iudgement: where it is meant of the bodies onely.

CHAP. V.

To talke of the time of the Resurrection is not necessarie, but to prepare our selues against that time so sodaine and so terrible to the vnprepared. 12 He beseecheth the laietie to be obedient, 14 and the Clergie to be vigilant, with many short precepts moe.

AND of the times and moments, brethren, you neede not that we write to you.

2 For your selues know perfectly that the day of our Lord shal so come, as a *thiefe in the night.

3 For when they shal say, peace and securitie: then shal sodaine destruction come vpon them, as the paines to her that is with childe, and they shal not escape.

4 But you brethren are not in darkenesse: that the same day may as a theefe ouertake you.

5 For al you are the children of light, and children of the day: we are not of the night nor of darknesse.

6 Therefore let vs not sleepe as also others: but let vs watch and be sober.

7 For they that sleepe, sleepe in the night: and they that be drunke, be drunke in the night.

8 But we that are of the day, are sober, *hauing on the breast-plate of faith & ‡charitie, and a helmet, the hope of saluation.

9 For God hath not appointed vs vnto wrath, but vnto the purchasing of saluation by our Lord IESVS Christ,

10 Who died for vs: that whether we watch, or sleepe, we may liue together with him.

11 For the which cause comfort one an other: & edifie one an other, as also you doe.

12 And we beseech you brethren, that you wil know them that labour among you, and that gouerne you in our Lord, and admonish you:

13 That you haue them more aboundantly in charitie for their worke. haue peace with them.

14 And we beseech you brethren admonish the vnquiet, comfort the weake-minded, beare vp the weake, be patient to al.

15 See that *none render euil for euil to any man: but alwaies that which is good pursue towards eche other, and towards al.

Mat.24.44. 1.Pet.3.10. Apoc.3.3. 16.15.

Esa.59.17. ephes.6.17.

BVt of the times and seasons, brethren, ye haue no neede that I write vnto you.

2 *For yee your selues know perfectly that the day of the Lord so commeth, euen as a thiefe in the night. Math.24.44. 2.pet.3.10. apoc.3.3.

3 For when they shall say peace and safetie: then sodainely destruction commeth vpon them, as sorow vpon a woman with childe, and they shal not escape in any wise.

4 But ye, brethren, are not in darkenesse, least that day should ouertake you as a theefe.

5 Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, neither of darkenesse.

6 Therefore let vs not sleepe, as doe other: but let vs watch, and be sober.

7 For they that sleepe, sleepe in the night: and they that be drunken, are drunken in the night.

8 But let vs which are of the day, be sober, *putting on the brestplate of faith and charitie, and a helmet, the hope of saluation. Esai.59.17. ephes.6.17.

9 For God hath not appointed vs to wrath? but to obteine saluation by our Lord Iesus Christ,

10 Which died for vs, that whether we wake or sleepe, we should liue together with him.

11 Wherefore comfort your selues together, and edifie euery one another, euen as ye doe.

12 And we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labour among you, and haue the ouersight of you in the Lorde, and admonish you:

13 That ye haue them in high reputation, in loue for their worke: and be at peace among your selues.

14 We exhort you, brethren, warne them that are vnruly, comfort the feeble minded, lift vp the weake, be patient toward all men.

15 *See that none recompence euill for euill vnto any man: but euer follow that which is good, both among your selues, and to all men. Math.5.44.

16 Alwaies reioyce.
17 ‘Pray *without intermission.
18 In al things giue thanks. for this is the wil of God in Christ IESVS in al you.
19 The Spirit extinguish not.
20 Prophesies despise not.
21 But ‖ proue al thinges: holde that which is good.
22 From al appearance of euil refraine your selues.
23 And the God of peace him selfe sanctifie you in al things: that your whole spirit, and soule and body without blame may be preserued in the comming of our Lord IESVS Christ.
24 He is faithfull, that hath called you, who also wil doe it.
25 Brethren pray for vs.
26 Salute al the brethren in a holy kisse.
27 I adiure you by our Lord that this Epistle be read to al the holy brethren.
28 The grace of our Lord IESVS Christ be with you. Amen.

17  Pray continually.* Luke 18.1.
18 In all things giue thanks: For this is the will of God in Christ Iesus toward you.
19 Quench not the spirit.
20 Despise not prophecyings.
21 Examine al things: hold fast that which is good.
22 Abstaine from all apparance of euill.
23 And the very God of peace sanctifie you throughout, And I pray God that your whole spirit, and soule, and body, may be preserued blameles in the comming of our Lord Iesus Christ.
24  Faithfull is he which called you, which will also doe it.* 1.Cor.1.9.
25 Brethren, pray for vs.
26 Greet all the brethren in an holy kisse.
27 I charge you in the Lord, that this Epistle be red vnto all the holy brethren.
28 The grace of our Lord Iesus Christ be with you. Amen.

The first Epistle vnto the Thessalonians written from Athens.

‘ To desire eternall life of him that onely can giue it, is to pray without intermission: but because that desire is often by worldly cares cooled, certaine houres and times of vocal prayer were appointed. See S. Aug. ep. 121. ad Propam. Luc. 18, 1.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. V.

RHEM. 1 8 Charitie.) A Christian mans whole armour is not faith onely, but all the three vertues here named.
FVLKE. 1 Yet a Christian mans iustification before God is by faith onely, and not by works.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. V.

RHEM. 2 10 But proue.) Though we may not extinguish the spirit, nor contemne the prophets, yet we must beware we be not deceiued by giuing to light credite to euery one that vaunteth himselfe of the spirit, as Arch-heretikes euer did, we must trie them by the doctrine of the Apostles and the Spirit of the Catholike Church, which can not beguile vs. Not rashly to credite euery spirit.

FVLKE. 2 The spirit of the true Catholike Church, is the spirit whereby the Scriptures were inspired. Therefore by the Scriptures we shall trie whether they boast truely of the spirit. For all Heretikes challenge the Catholike Church as well as the spirit, but by the Scriptures they are confounded. Therefore S. Ambrose saith vpon this text: What things soeuer doe agree to the sayings of the Apostles, and of our Lord himselfe, those things are to be accompted well said, or blessed, & to be receiued, but from those things which are seene to be contrarie to faith we must absteine. Heretikes.

THE ARGVMENT OF THE SECOND EPISTLE OF S. PAVL TO THE THESSALONIANS.

RHEM. 1 THE second to the Thessalonians hath in the title as the first: Paul and Siluanus and Timothee, &c. And therefore it seemeth to haue beene written in the same place, to witte, at Corinth, where they remained * a yeere and sixe monethes, and straight vpon their answere to the first Epistle. * Act. 18. v. 11.

*First he thanketh God for their increase and perseuerance (comforting them againe in those persecutions) and prayeth for their accomplishment. Secondly he assureth them, that the day of Iudgement is not at hand, putting them in remembrance what he tolde them thereof by word of mouth, when he was present (as therefore he biddeth them afterward * to hold his Traditions vnwritten, no lesse then the written,) to witte, that all these persecutions and heresies, raised then, and afterward against the Catholike Church, were but the mysterie of Antichrist, and not Antichrist himselfe, but that there should come at length a plaine Apostasie, & then (the whole forerunning mystery being once perfitly wrought) should folow the reuelation of Antichrist him selfe in person (as after all the mysteries of the old Testament, Christ IESVS our Lord came himselfe in the fulnesse of time.) And then at length after all this, the day of Iudgement and second comming of Christ shall be at hand, and not before, whatsoeuer pretense of vision, or of some speach of mine (saith S Paul) any make to deduce you withal, or of my former Epistle, or any other. For which cause also, in the ende of this Epistle, he biddeth them so know his hand, which is a signe in euery Epistle.* * c. 2. v. 15.

Lastly he requesteth their prayers, and requireth them to keepe his commaundements and Traditions, namely that the poore which are able, get their owne liuing with working, as he also gaue them example, though he were not bound thereto.

S. Paul

FVLKE. 1 S. Paule speaketh of no vnwritten traditions. For these that he speaketh of, though they were not written in his Epistles to the Thessalonians, yet they were written in other Epistles, or in the Gospels, or at least in the law and the prophets. As that commandement or tradition which he mentioneth c. 3. that the poore ought to labour for their liuing if they be able to worke: is the commandement of God, Thou shalt not steale: for they that eat not their owne bread doe steale their liuing. Vnwritten traditions.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAVL TO THE THESSALONIANS.

CHAP. I.

RHEM. 1 He thanketh God for their increase in faith & charitie, and constancie in persecution (assuring them that they merit thereby the kingdom of God, as their persecutors do damnation:) 11 and also praieth for their accomplishment.

FVLKE. 1 The Apostle doth neuer assure men to merit the kingdome of God by constancie in persecution, but onely to looke for it assuredly vpon the certeinty of Gods promises, which are grounded vpon his grace and mercy in Christ, not vpon our merit. Merit.

The Translation of Rhemes.

PAVL and Siluanus and Timothee: to the church of the Thessalonians in God our Father and our Lorde IESVS Christ.

2 Grace to you and peace from God our Father and our Lord IESVS Christ.

3 We ought to giue thankes alwaies to God for you brethren, so as meet is, because your faith increaseth excedingly, & the charitie of euery one of you aboundeth towards eche other:

4 So that we our selues also glorie in you in the churches of God, for your patience, & faith in al your persecutions and tribulations, which you sustaine

5 For an example of the iust iudgement of God, that ‡ you may be ᶜ counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for the which also you suffer.

6 If yet it be iust with God to repay tribulation, to them that vexe you:

7 And to you that are vexed, rest with vs in the reuelation of our Lord IESVS from heauen with the Angels of his power,

8 In flame of fire, giuing reuenge to them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord IESVS Christ.

9 Who shal suffer eternal paines in destruction, from the face of our Lord & from the glorie of his power:

10 When he shal come to be ‡ glorified in his saincts, & to be made maruelous in al them that haue beleeued, because our testimonie concerning you was credited in that day.

11 Wherin also we pray alwaies for you, that our God ᶜ make you worthie of his vocation, and accomplish al the good pleasure of his goodnesse and the worke of faith in power, 12 That the name of our Lord IESVS Christ may be glorified in you, and you in him, according to the grace of our God, and of our Lord IESVS Christ.

5 Which is a token of the righteous iudgement of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdome of God, for which ye also suffer.

6 For it is a righteous thing with God, to recompence tribulation to them that trouble you:

7 And to you which are troubled, rest with vs, in the reuelation of the Lord Iesus from heauen, with the angels of his power,

8 In flaming fier, rendring vengeance vnto them that know not God, and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Iesus Christ.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 1 5 You may be.) Note that by constant and patient suffering of afflictions for Christs men are made worthie (so the Greeke signifieth, as the Aduersaries them selues translate v. 11.) of the crowne or kingdome of heauen, and so do merite and deserue the same. See Anno Luc. 20. 35. And the Apostle here saith that it is Gods iustice no lesse to repay glorie to the afflicted, then to render punishment to them that afflict, because of their contrarie deserts or merits.

FVLKE. 1 The Greeke word signifieth to be compted worthy, which is of Gods free acceptation by grace, and not of the merit of our constancie. And wheras you say, we haue so translated it our selues, I confesse it is an imperfection in our translations, for it should be, that our God would vouchsafe you, or count you worthie, as in this place. But because the making worthie is referred to God, our translators were not so carefull of the terme, seeing it might be vnderstood, that God by his grace maketh vs worthy in his accompt. Neuertheless, howsoeuer our translators haue gone awry in that vers. 11, you haue falsely translated your owne Latine text, which is dignetur, that our God would vouchsafe or accept as worthie. For you are neuer able to proue that dignari signifieth to make worthy, as you haue wilfully corrupted the text, to make it serue your heresie. And wheras the apostle saith further, it is Gods iustice to repay glory to the afflicted, it is not for the merits of the affliction, but for the performance of his promise.

RHEM. 2 10 Glorified in his saincts.) Christ shal be glorified in his Saincts, that is, by the great and vnspeakable honour and exaltation of them he shal be honoured, as now he is: the honour which the Church doth to them, not diminishing Christs glorie (as the Aduersaries foolishly pretend) but exceedingly augmenting the same.

FVLKE. 2 A wise comparison, to shew that Christ is glorified, where he is spoiled of the glory of his office of Mediator and Aduocate, which by you is communicated to saincts. And when his saincts are worshipped like idols with superstition after your owne inuention, and not according to the holy scriptures.

CHAP. II.

RHEM. 1 He requireth them, in no case to thinke that Domesday is at hand, 3 repeating vnto them, that there must before come first a reuolt, secondly the reuelation also of Antichrist him self in person, and that Antichrist shal not permit any God to be worshipped but onely him self: that also with his lying wonders he shal winne to him the incredulous Iewes. But Christ shal come then immediatly in maiestie, and destroy him and his. 13 Therfore he thanketh God for the faith of the Thessalonians, 15 and biddeth them sticke to his Traditions both written and vnwritten, and praieth God to confirme them.

FVLKE. 1 There is nothing in this chapter to proue that Antichrist shall not permit any God to be worshipped But only himselfe. The Apostle saith no more but that he shall exalt himselfe aboue all that is called God or worshipped, which he shall doe vnder colour and pretence of the seruice of God and Christ, els could he neuer preuaile to deceiue any Christians. Neither is there any thing to proue that he shall deceiue the incredulous Iewes only or principally, but rather those that professe Christian religion in word, which they doe not beleeue in heart. Neither is it said, or can it be proued, that Christ shall come immediatly after the reuelation of Antichrist, but contrariwise it is said, that Christ shall consume him with the spirit of his mouth, (which is his holy word) and vtterly abolish him with his glorious presence. Finally, he biddeth them not sticke to any traditions of doctrine not written in the scripture, but to such as he had deliuered both by preaching and writing, who preached no doctrine but that which is, and then was conteined in the holie scriptures. Traditions vnwritten.

The Epistle in the Ember Saturday of Aduent.

FVLKE. 4 S. Augustine did read refuga, which signifieth a reuolter, which error of his translation, caused him to thinke the defection and the reuelation of Antichrist, to be all one: although the defection perteine to the reuelation of Antichrist, as you say rightly. But this apostasie (say you) by the iudgement in a maner of all auncient writers, is the generall forsaking and fall of the Romane Empire. In deede most of the ancient Fathers did iudge, that the Romane Empire should first be decaied, before Antichrist were reuealed, and that agreeth most aptly with the reuelation of the Pope to be Antichrist, who was not reuealed, before the See of the Empire was remoued from the citie of Rome, whereby it ceased to be the Empire of Rome, and also was decaied and deuided into many parts, as Tertullian sayth: who shal be taken away but the Romane state? whose departing being dispersed into ten kings, shall bring in Antichrist: By ten, according to the custom of the Scripture, are ment many. And so was there many kingdoms made of the Romane Empire, before the Pope openly vsurped Antichristian tyranny. Yet not all the ancient Fathers, nor all whom you cite, doe so vnderstand this reuolt. For Chrysostom vpon this text, Hom. 3. sayth, what is that he calleth here defection? He calleth Antichrist him selfe the defection, as he which should destroy and cary away very many. In so much (sayth he) that if it were possible, euen the elect should be offended. You see Chrysostom calleth Antichrist the defection, in respect of the great multitude that he shall carry away from Christ. That you quote Hom. 4. is vpon an other text, of him that shal be taken away, namely, the Romane Empire, agreeing with that which Tertullian said. S. Hierom in deed sayth, the defection to be from the Romane Empire, and so doth S. Ambrose. But S. Augustine (as I sayd before) reading in steed of apostasie or defection, refuga, which is an Apostata or reuolter, doth expound it of Antichrist him self, saying: He calleth him a reuolter, namely, from the Lord God: which if it may be rightly said of all the vngodly, how much more of him? That which he saith after, of taking away the Romane Empire, perteineth to the 7. verse. Theodoret also vpon this place, saith: The defection he calleth Antichrist him selfe, giuing him a name of the thing it selfe. For his endeuour is to bring from the trueth, and to cause men to reuolt. Primasius hath diuers interpretations. The first is, The departing (sayth he) is a forsaking of the trueth. Oecumenius sayth: He calleth the defection Antichrist him selfe, because he shall seperate many from Christ, or els he sayth, the apostasie or defection is a seperation from God. The same in effect hath Theophylact. 9. Basil. ep. 60. Iudgeth that the heresy of the Arrians was the beginning of this apostasie. Therefore you see, diuerse of the auncient Fathers vnderstand this reuolt to be from Christ, from God, from the trueth. Then was it no such presumption in Caluine, to refuse the one sort, whome without contempt he calleth learned and witty, and to receiue the other, whom he iudged to interpret more agreeably to the trueth. For whereas you say, he refuseth the other, because their exposition agreeth not with his blasphemous fiction, that the Pope should be Antichrist: In deede, that his opinion, is blasphemous against your Lord God the Pope, but against the God of heauen, and his Sonne Iesus Christ, it is not, nor any fiction, but a true interpretation. And although the word Apostasie, doe rather signifie a defection from Christ, then from the Romane Empire, yet euen that defection from the Romane Empire, agreeth as fitly as is possible, with this exposition, that the Pope is Antichrist. For the Pope was not openly reuealed to be Antichrist, before the Romane Empire was forsaken, and deuided into many kingdomes, all subiect to the Pope. This apostasie therefore is rightly interpreted, to be a wicked reuolting from God, of the greatest multitude of men: and is called of Caluine a certaine generall defection of the visible Church, which being hardly builded, was by the tyrannie and subtiltie of Antichrist ouerthrowen, as an house with a sodeine tempest, and lay long in the ruines. Yet the spirituall house of Christ, the Church of his elect, euen among those ruines, were marueilously preserued by his grace, and neuer perished out of the world. Which (as Caluin doth oftentimes affirme) so is it not contrary to the generall apostasie or defection, here spoken of. For this reuolt is but of hypocrites, which falsely professed the trueth, and in their life and doctrine denied the power thereof, who seeme to be the Church, and are not. Neither doeth Caluine, Wickleffe, or Luther, &c. vse any collusion of wordes, to hide the matter, but plainely speake, that you may vnderstand them if you list, when they say: The true Church of Christ is perpetuall, and yet there was a certaine generall apostasie of the visible Church, that is, of the greatest multitude of men which seemed to be the church by outward profession, but wanting faith, was not the true Church of Christ, and therfore being seduced with error, reuolted vnto Antichrist. That you speake of their varietie and contrariety in this matter, is but a fitte of your ordinarie railing without reason, or argument to proue your saying.

Apostasie.

RHEM. 5 But concerning this errour and falshood of the Churches defection or reuolt, it is refuted sufficiently by S. Augustin against the Donatistes in many places. Where he proueth that the Church shal not faile to the worldes end, no not in the time of Antichrist: affirming them to deny Christ, and to robbe him of his glorie and inheritance bought with his bloud, which teach that the Church may faile or perish. Li de vnit. Ec c.11.13. De ciuit li 20. c.8. In Psal. 85. ad illud, Tu solus Deus magnus Ps. 70. Conc. 2. & Psal 60. De vtil. cred. c.8. S. Hierom refuteth the same wicked Heresie in the * Luciferians, proouing against them, that they make God subiect to the Diuel, and a poore miserable Christ, that imagine the Church his body may either perish or be driuen to any corner of the world, both of them answer to the Heretikes arguments grounded on Scriptures falsely vnderstood, which were to long here to rehearse. It is ynough for the Christian reader to know, that it is an old deceite and excuse of al Heretikes and Schismatikes, for defence of their forsaking Gods Church, that the Church is perished, or remaineth hidden, or in them selues only and in those places where they and their folowers dwel: to know also, that this is reproued by the holy Doctors of the Primitiue Church, and that it is against Christes honour, power, prouidence, and promis.

There can be no apostasie of the visible Church from God.

* Dialog. adu. Luciferi. c.8.

FVLKE. 5 We hold no defection or reuolt of the true Church, but of that which seemed to be the church and was not, while it had nothing of Christianitie, but an outward profession in name and ceremonies. For we acknowledge that the true Church, though obscure, and as it were driuen into the wildernes by the tyranny of Antichrist, yet still continued dispersed ouer the world, to be the glorious spouse of Christ, no lesse in his accompt when it was persecuted, then when it enioyed peace and tranquilitie. Neither doth S. Augustine refute this opinion, but the heresie of the Donatistes, which sayd, that the Church was perished out of all the world, except onely from from Africa where they were: Which opinion of theirs, your popiſh hereſy reſembleth, affirming that the Church is periſhed out of all the world, except Europa only, where your Pope doth ſitte and beare rule. Contrariwiſe, we hold with S. Auguſtine, that God hath the Church of his elect, in all parts of the world, whereſoeuer the ſubſtance of Chriſtian faith vnto ſaluation is truely taught, though it be not free from all ſpot of errours, or whereſoeuer there are but two or three gathered together in Chriſtes name, though it be in Rome, vnder the moſt cruell perſecution of Antichriſt. Finally, we acknowledge with S. Auguſtine, that the true Church ſhall not faile to the worldes ende: that it did not faile in the tyme of Antichriſt, nor was driuen into any corner of the world: but was, is, and ſhall be alwayes diſperſed in many nations. Yea this apoſtaſie of many, which ſeemed to be members of the Church, is acknowledged by S. Auguſtine him ſelfe, and many other ancient Fathers, as I haue ſhewed in the ſection next before. And euen in theſe places that you quote, De vnitate Eccleſiæ, where he confuteth the Donatiſtes, that ſayd, the Church was periſhed out of all the world, and remained only in Africa, he acknowledgeth the paucitie of the godly, in reſpect of the wicked, Cap. 12. ſaying: We doe not ſo ſay, that the Church is ſpred ouer the whole world, that onely good men are in the Sacraments of the Church, and not alſo euill men, and thoſe alſo many more, that in compariſon of them, the good are but fewe, whereas by them ſelues they make a great number, and Cap. 13. The ſaying of Chriſt, ſhall the Sonne of man finde faith? which the Donatiſtes wreſted to proue the Apoſtaſie of the whole world, he confeſſeth to be meant of the great abundance of the wicked, and fewnes of the good, becauſe iniquitie ſhall abound, and charitie ſhall waxe colde. Likewiſe De Ciuitate Lib. 20. Cap. 8. where he ſayth, that the Church which is predeſtinated and elected before the conſtitution of the world, ſhall not be ſeduced when the Diuell is looſed. In which time of Antichriſt, he ſayth alſo, it is to be beleeued, that there ſhall not want at that time, either they which may fall from the Church, or which may come to the Church. Againe he ſayth, that as firſt the Church was multiplied of al nations, according to the Prophecies: So it is to be confeſſed, that the charitie of many doth wax cold, when iniquitie aboundeth, alſo that many ſhall giue place to the vniuerſall and greateſt perſecutions, and ſubtilties of the deuill, when he ſhall be looſed. In the reſt of the places quoted, there is nothing els, but that the Church hath not periſhed out of all the world, and remained in Africa alone, that Chriſtians ſhall continue to the ende of the world, that the Church of Chriſt which is Chriſtes inheritance, ſhall neuer haue an ende. All which may well ſtand with the Apoſtaſie or generall defection of the viſible Church, or that which ſeemed to be the Church, here prophecied from the faith of Chriſt S. Hierom againſt the Luciferians, ſaith: that Chriſt ſhould be to poore, if either he had no Church, or if he had his Church only in Sardinia. If Sathan poſſeſſe Britaine, Fraunce, the Eaſt, the people of India, the barbarous nations, and the whole world at once, how are the trophees of the Croſſe, brought to a corner of all the earth? Forſooth the mightie aduerſarie hath graunted to Chriſt, Spaine, and the Celtiberians, which are pale coloured men, and diſdained to poſſeſſe the prouince of the Aethiopians. This he ſayd againſt thoſe Heretikes, which ſayd: all the world was the diuels, and of the Church was made a ſtewes. This maketh nothing againſt vs, which certeinly beleeue the Gatholike Church, though we ſee it not with our bodily eies, nor limit it to any one place, or any few places. But that the Church ſhould neuer be hidden, nor the true members driuen into corners, to auoid the perſecution of Antichriſt: nor that there ſhould be no reuolt of the viſible Church, from the faith of Chriſt to the fables of Antichriſt, you can neuer proue out of this ſaying.

REM. 6 If the Aduerſaries had ſaid that this reuolt which the Apoſtle foretelleth ſhal come before the worlds end, is meant of great numbers of Heretikes and Apoſtataes reuolting fom the Church, they had ſaid truth of themſelues and ſuch others, whom S. Iohn calleth Antichriſtes. And it is very like (be it ſpoken vnder the correction of Gods Church and all learned Catholikes) that this great defection and reuolt ſhal not be onely from the Romane empire, but ſpecially from the Romane Church, and withal frō moſt points of Chriſtian religion. not that the Catholike Chriſtians, either in the time of Antichriſt or before, ſhal refuſe to obey the ſame, but for that neere the time of Antichriſt & the conſummation of the world, there is like to be a great reuolt of kingdomes, peoples, and Prouinces from the open external obedience and communion thereof. Which reuolt hauing beene begun and continued by Heretikes of diuers ages, reſiſting and hating the Seate of Peter (which they called Cathedram peſtilentiæ, the chaire of peſtilence, * In S. Auguſtines daies) becauſe it is Chriſtes fort erected againſt hel gates and al Heretikes, and being now wonderfully increaſed by theſe of our daies the next precurſors of Antichriſt as it may ſeeme, ſhal be fully atchieued a little before the end of the world by Antichriſt himſelfe. though euen then alſo, when for the fewe daies of Antichriſtes reigne the external ſtate of the Romane Church and publike intercourſe of the faithfull with the ſame may ceaſe, yet the due honour and obedience of the Chriſtians towards it, and communion in hart with it, and practiſe thereof in ſecret, and open confeſſing thereof if occaſion require, ſhall not ceaſe, no more then it doth now in the Chriſtians of Cypres and other places where open entercourſe is forbidden.

1. Io. 2. v. 18. It is very like, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of a great apoſtaſie from the See of Rome, and from moſt articles of the Catho. faith.

Iacomb. Indic. pa.

PVLK. 6 So great is your deſire to charge vs with this Apoſtaſie, that you ouerthrow all that you ſaid before, denying the reuolt of the viſible Church. For ſo you may be compted the true Church, and we the Heretikes and Antichriſtes, you are content to graunt, that the greater reuolt of kingdomes, people, and prouinces from the Church, ſhall be fully atchieued by Antichriſt, which is that generall defection and ruine of the viſible Church, which we ſpeake of, notwithſtanding that true Chriſtians, when publike entercourſe of the faithfull with the Church ſhall ceaſe, ſhall yet continue in obedience of the Church. So that for the point of Apoſtaſie or defection, we are agreed. Let vs ſee then whether this Apoſtaſie may ſo agree to you, as it can not be applied to vs. Which if it may be, then out of doubt you are the Church of Antichriſt, and not we. Apoſtaſie.

To decide this controuerſie, who is better then S. Paule, who here prophecieth of the Apoſtaſie? The ſame Apoſtle 1. Tim. 4. giueth ſuch euident notes of this Apoſtaſie, as agree properly vnto you, but not in any wiſe come neere vnto vs. For after he had ſet forth that great myſterie of religion or pietie, conſiſting in the doctrine of Chriſt, which is, God ſhewed in the fleſh, iuſtified in the ſpirite, ſeene of the Angels, preached among the Gentiles, beleeued in the world, and taken vp in glory, which ſhould alwaies remaine in the true Church, which is the piller and ground of truth: he addeth, that the ſpirit ſpeaketh not obſcurely, but euidently & plainly, that in the later time, ſome ſhall reuolt from the faith, placing the chiefe religion and pietie in abſtinence from mariage and meates, and therefore forbidding both, ſpeaking lyes in hypocriſie, but attending to ſpirits of error and doctrines of deuils. By which place, being an euident reuelation of Gods ſpirite, it is manifeſt, that this reuolt from true religion, is diſcerned by hypocriticall abſtinence and forbidding of mariage and meates, which you cannot deny to be done of you, to ſome men at all times, and to all men at ſome times, as you will haue the times and perſons to be counted more holy and religious, that obſerue your prohibitions. Theſe therefore being giuen as euident notes, to know who be they that reuolt from the faith, from the Church, and from Chriſt, being found in you, do argue inuincibly, that you are the defection, you are the Apoſtaſie, you are the reuolters, and not we, in whom no ſuch thing can be proued. But by the way, you would bring vs into great enuie, for calling Peters chaire, the chaire of peſtilence, as the Donatiſtes did. It is ſhame to lie vpon the Deuill, Peters chaire.

nill, for the Donatistes did not so call Peters chaire onely, but all the Apostolike chaires in the world. And therefore S. Augustine answereth: If all men throughout the world, were such as thou doest most falsely charge them, what hath the chaire of the Church of Rome done vnto thee, in which Peter sate, and in which at this day Anastasius doeth sitte? or of the Church of Ierusalem in which Iames sate, and in which Iohn now sitteth, with whom we are knitte in the Catholike vnitie, and from whom you haue with wicked rage seperated your selues? Why doest thou call the Apostolike chaire, the chaire of pestilence? If for the men, whom thou thinkest to speake the law, and not to doe it, did our Lord Iesus Christ, for the Pharizees of whom he sayd, they say and doe not, any iniurie to the chaire in which they sate? By this place it appeareth, that the Donatistes bare not malice onely against the chaire of Peter, but against all other Apostolike chaires, when they could not deny, but that they which sate in them taught the doctrine of the Apostles. By which it appeareth also, who sit in the Apostolike chaires, namely, they that teach the doctrine of the Apostles, as the Pharizees sitting in the chaire of Moses. Not they that either sleepe where the Apostles sometime taught, and much lesse they, that teach things contrary to the doctrine of the Apostles.

RHEM. 7 This is certaine and wonderfull in all wise mens eies, and must needes be of Gods prouidence, and a singular prerogatiue, that this Seate of Peter standeth, when al other Apostolike Sees be gone: that it stood there for certaine ages together with the secular seate of the Empire: that the Popes stood without wealth, power, or humane defense, the Emperours knowing, witting, and seeking to destroy them, and putting to the sword aboue thirtie of them one after an other, yea and being as much afraid of them as if they had been æmuli imperij, Competitors of their Empire, as S. Cyprian noteth (epist. 52. ad Antonianum. num. 3.) of S. Cornelius Pope in his daies, and Decius then Emperour: againe, that the Emperours afterward yelded vp the citie vnto them, continuing for al that in the Emperial dignitie stil: that the successors of those that persecuted them, laid downe their crownes before their Seate and sepulcres, honouring the very memories and Relikes of the poore men whom their predecessors killed: that now wel neere these 1600 yeres this Seate standeth as at the beginning in continual miserie, so now of long time for the most part in prosperitie: without al mutation in effect, as no other kingdom or State in the world hath done, euery one of them in the said space being manifoldly altered. It standeth (we say) al this while (to vse S. Augustines words de vtil. cred. c. 17.) Frustra circumlatrantibus hæreticis, the Heretikes in vayne barking about it, not the first Heathen Emperours, not the Gothes and Vandals, not the Turke, not any sackes or massakers by Alaricus, Gensericus, Attila, Borbon, and others, not the emulation of secular Princes, were they kings or Emperours, not the Popes owne diuisions among them selues and manifold difficulties and dangers in their elections, not the great vices which haue been noted in some of their persons, not al these nor any other endeuour of scandal could yet preuaile against the See of Rome, nor is euer like to preuaile til the end of the world draw neere, at which time this reuolt (here spoken of by the Apostle) may be in such sort as is sayd before, and more shal be sayd in the Annotations next following. The wonderfull prouidence of God in preserning the See of Rome more then all other States, notwithstanding manifold dangers and scandals.

FVLKE. 7 First, you affirme falsely, that Peters See standeth still at Rome, when all other Apostolike Sees be gone. For euen to this day, the See of Antioche standeth, and hath a Patriarke. Likewise the See of Alexandria, which Gregorie doubteth not to call S. Peters See. Also the See of S. Andrew at Constantinople, hath neuer lacked Successours, euen vnto this day. There is still a See and Church at Ephesus, continued euer since the Apostles, Paule and Iohn. What should I speake of the Churches of India, and Aethiopia, planted by the Apostles, and continued by succession of Bishops, euen vntill this daye? That the first Bishops of Rome, were true successors of the Apostle, in teaching the substance of Christian faith truely, and suffering martyrdome for the same, it is no commendation of them which succeeded in place after, being in life and doctrine contrary vnto the same. Where you say, the heathen Emperors were as fraid of them, as if they had been competitors of the Empire, it is false, neither doth Cyprian so say. But that the tyrant did more patiently heare of a Competitor of the Empire, to be set vp against him, then of a Priest of God to be appointed, after he had slaine his Predecessor: his malice therefore was greater, though his feare were none at all. Or as Pammelius doth read and vnderstand it. Cornelius did more patiently tolerate the Prince that was then his enemy, then Nouatianus the priest that was his enemy or Competitor. That the Emperours did yeeld vp the citie of Rome to the Pope, it can not be proued by any lawfull records, but that the Pope vsurped dominion of the citie, after the Emperours had lost the possession of Italy, the stories doe testifie. And albeit, the Emperours as well of Greece, as of Germany, reteined the name and title of the Emperours of Rome, yet were they not in deed Emperours of Rome, when they possessed not the citie of Rome, and therefore were more truly called the Emperours of Constantinople, the Emperours of Almaine, then of Rome where neither of them both had dominion or obedience. So the tyrannie of the Pope, came in place of the Romane Empire. That the Christians honoured the memories of the Apostles, whom the Heathen tyrants had slaine, it pertaineth nothing to the dignitie of the Pope, that holdeth not the Apostles doctrine and humilitie: but that the later Kings and Emperours, which were become the hornes of the beast, submitted their crownes and scepters not onely to such Idols, as the Pope made of Martyrs, but also to the very feete of that sinnefull man, it declareth him plainly, to be the successor, neither of Christ, nor of Peter, nor of the holy Martyres the Bishops of Rome, but to be the king of pride, that exalteth him selfe aboue all Princes, that are set vp by Gods ordinance, and so aboue God him selfe. That the Popedome hath continued eight or nine hundreth yeeres, in worldly pompe and dignitie, it agreeth also with the prophecies of the tyrannie of Antichrist, whereas the Church of Christ doeth more florish in spirituall glorie, though it be in aduersitie, then in prosperitie and worldly dignitie. Where as you challenge 1600. yeeres of continuance, you must strike of almost 700. yeeres of that accompt. For Gregorie that more then 600. yeeres after Christ, prophecied constantly of the reuelation of Antichrist to be at hand testifieth, that none of his predecessours vsurped that prophane, proude, sacrilegious, and Antichristian name of vniuersall Bishop, whereby Antichrist beganne openly to be reuealed, lib. 4. Epist. 30. & 38. &c. And it was more then 300. yeeres after, that Satan being let loose (Apocalyps 20.) the efficacie of error did throughly preuaile, to the aduancement of Antichrist in his highest pride and wickednesse, when Siluester the 2. by the deuill himselfe, was set vp in that seate of Antichrist Anno Christi 1000. as is testified by stories euen of Papistes them selues, Benno Cardinalis. Petrus Præmonst. Platina, Hermanus Shedel &c. That which S. Augustine saith of standing sure: notwithstanding the barking of Heretikes about it, is the Catholike Church, and not the See of Rome: and yet all former heresies haue made a way for the kingdome of Antichrist. The first heathen Emperours could not preuaile againe against the Church of Christ, and therefore the Church of Rome continued in their greatest persecutions: but the Gothes, Vandales, Turkes, Alaricus, Gensericus, Attila, and other that wasted the Romane Empire, prepared an entrance to the reuelation of Antichrist; who as (Chrysostome and other auncient writers sayth) inuaded the Romane Empire, after it was ouerthrowen and layd waste, by these barbarous enemies. As for other Kings and Princes, that liued since the manifestation of Antichrist, haue serued as vassals to mainteyne his vsurped tyrannie, howsoeuer they had emulation amongst them selues: yea their mutuall warres and diuisions haue greatly augmented his tyrannicall dominion. And although the pride, crueltie, filthinesse Peters See at Rome.

filthineſſe, and all other vices of the Popes, haue beene greater and more notorious, then of any heathen tyrants: yet their tyrannie by the iuſt iudgement of God, for the puniſhment of the contemners of his Goſpell, hath continued to this day. And to put you in more comfort, Antichriſt ſhall in ſome ſort continue, euen vntill the comming of our Sauiour Chriſt to iudgement. And hereof it is, that ſome of you haue beene bold to affirme, that although the See of Rome ſhoulde bee vtterly ouerthrowne (as you haue iuſt cauſe to feare the accompliſhment of the prophecies of the vtter deſtruction of the whore of Babylon) yet the Pope ſhall be Biſhop of Rome, and Peters ſucceſſor, though he remoue his Seate to Calecute. Where if he forget to bring his triple crowne with him, he may borow that which the idol of the deuill there worſhipped doth weare, not much differing in faſhion from his.

RHEM. 8 3 The man of ſinne.) There were many euen in the Apoſtles (as we ſee by the 4. Chapter of S. Johns firſt Epiſtle and in the writings of the auncient fathers) that were forerunners of Antichriſt, and for impugning Chriſts trueth and Church were called Antichriſts, whether they did it by force and open perſecution, as Nero and others either heathen or heretical Emperors did, or by falſe teaching & other deceites, as the Heretikes of all ages, in which common & vulgar acception S. Hierom ſaith, all belonged to Antichriſt that were not of the communion of Damaſus then Pope of Rome. Hier. ep. 57. ad Damaſ. and in an other place, all that haue newe names after the peculiar calling of Heretikes, as Arians, Donatiſtes (and as we ſay now, Caluiniſts, Zuinglians, &c. al ſuch (ſaith he) be Antichriſtes. Dial. cont. The heathen Emperours were many, Turkes be many, Heretikes haue been and now are many, therefore they cannot be that one great Antichriſt which here is ſpoken of, and which by the article alwaies added in the Greeke, is ſignified to be one ſpeciall and ſingular man: as his peculiar and direct oppoſition to Chriſtes perſon in the 5. chapter of S. Johns Goſpel v. 43. the inſinuation of the particular ſtocke and tribe whereof he ſhould be borne, to wit, of the Iewes (for of them he ſhall be receiued as their Meſſias* Io. 5. v. 43.) and of the tribe of Dan. Iren. li. 5. Many Antichriſts, as forerunners of the great Antichriſt.

The great Antichriſt ſhall be one ſpeciall and notorious man.

FVLKE. 8 The ſcripture calleth not forren perſecutors Antichriſts, though they be enimies of Chriſt, but ſuch as went out from vs being none of vs 1. Ioh. 2. 19. as al heretikes & falſe teachers: yet not euery heretike is that great antichriſt, but he which aboue al other, doth moſt impugne Chriſt, & preuaile moſt, to the ſeducing of the wicked vnto their deſtruction. And this great Antichriſt, to diſcharge the Pope of being the ſame, you affirme to bee one ſpecial and ſingular man, and not one ſtate, kingdome, and ſucceſſion of men therein, as the Papacie is, wherby the tyrannie of Antichriſt is vpholden & continued, euen vntil the comming of Chriſt. Let vs ſee then vpon what ground this your affirmation ſtandeth, which being ouerthrowne, we ſhal plainely proue out of the ſcriptures, that the great Antichriſt is not one ſingular man, but a whole ſtate or kingdome of men, continuing vnder one head by ſucceſſion, wherunto alſo we will ioyne the teſtimonie of the moſt ancient and beſt approued writers of the primitiue Church. Firſt you ſay, the heathen Emperors, Turkes, and Heretikes were manie, therefore they could not be this one great Antichriſt. Although for Heathens and Turkes, your concluſion is true, yet it followeth not of your argument, which taketh that for proofe, which is the whole matter in queſtion. The heathen perſecutors & Turkes, are altogither without the Church: Antichriſt muſt ſit in the viſible church of God. Other heretiks (as you confeſſe) are but limmes & members of that body of impietie, whereof the great antichriſt is the head or chiefe. But it is a maine reaſon, that by the article alwaies added in Greeke, is ſignified one ſpecial and ſingular man. But this is ſo falſe, that yong children which haue ſcarce taſted of the Greeke tong, are able to diſproue it by infinit examples Luk 4. 4. ὁ ἄνθρωπος. Man ſhal not liue by bread only, Mar. 2. 27. The Sabboth was made διὰ τὸν ἄνθρωπον, καὶ ὁ ἄνθρωπος for man, & not man for the Sabboth, 2. Tim. 3. 17. That the mā of God ὁ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἄνθρωπος may be perfect. Mat. 12. 35. ὁ ἀγαθὸς ἄνθρωπος, ὁ πονηρὸς ἄνθρωπος a good man, an euil man. 1. Ioh. 2. 18. in one verſe ὁ ἀντίχειτος & ἀντίχειτοι πολλοὶ, Antichriſt, & many Antichriſts, Mat. 5. 25. ὁ ἀντίδικος the aduerſary Ioh. 10. 10. ὁ κλέπτης, the theefe, ver, 12. ὁ μισθώτος, the hireling. Your next reaſon is, the direct and peculiar oppoſition of Antichriſt vnto Chriſts perſon. Ioh. 5. 43. and that he ſhal be receiued of the Iewes as their Meſſias: but no ſuch thing can be proued of that text, as I haue ſhewed in the proper place. Thirdly, the tribe of Dan, from whence he ſhalbe borne. Gen. 49. 17. but that is a weake coniecture, & cannot be proued out of the text. For helpe therefore you alledge the teſtimonies of the fathers. Firſt Irenæus li. 5. who coniecteureth out of Hieremie 8. 16. that Antichriſt ſhould come from the tribe of Dan, where the Prophet ſpeaketh of the comming of Nebuchadnezer, by the citie called Dan, as euen S. Hierome doth expound the place. An other coniecture is, that the tribe of Dan is not numbred in the Apocalyps, with them that are ſaued Apocalyps 7. The cauſe is manifeſt, for that the tribe of Leui, ſupplieth the twelth place, which in the accompt of the Church was not to be omitted. But hereof we may not inferre, that none of the tribe of Dan were ſaued, and much leſſe, that Antichriſt ſhoulde be borne of this tribe. Irenæus therefore doeth not ground vpon this coniecture, but ſheweth immediately howe wee are to iudge both of his, and other auncient fathers coniectures, concerning Antichriſt, namely, as the euent ſhal approoue them. Therefore (ſaith hee) it is more certaine, and without danger, to tarie vntill the fulfilling of the prophecie, then to ſuſpect and gueſſe of any names. Next to Irenæus you place Hierome in Daniel 11. who ſaieth not, that Antichriſt ſhoulde bee of the tribe of Dan, but that Chriſtian interpreters, did expound that place of Daniel of Antichriſt, which is to ariſe of a ſmall nation, that is, of the people of the Iewes, and ſhall be ſo baſe and contemptible, that Princely honour ſhall not bee giuen vnto him, but by craft and ſubtiltie, hee ſhall obteyne principalitie, ſo that the armes of the warlike people of Rome, ſhall be ouercome and broken by him. And this hee ſhall doe, becauſe hee ſhall counterfect, that he is the captaine or chiefe of the couenant, that is, of the Lawe and teſtament of God. There is nothing in this ſaying, which may not be applied to the Pope who (as all that profeſſe Chriſtianitie) proceeded firſt from the Iewes, after by craft and hypocriſie, ſubuerted the Romane Empire, and inuaded the tyrannie. For Hierome ſaieth not, that Antichriſt ſhall bee borne of the tribe of Dan, or bee a Iewe by nation, but that hee is to ariſe of the contemptible nation of the Iewes. S. Auguſtins ſaieth no more, but that it was thought, Antichriſt ſhould ariſe of the tribe of Dan. Therefore this ſurmiſe hath no ground in the Scriptures, and but a faint coniecture of the auncient fathers. The note of Antichriſtes name, Apocalyps the 13. 18. being the number of the beaſt, doeth plainely prooue, that Antichriſt is no ſingular man: for the beaſt ſignifieth by all interpreters, in a maner, the Romane

Antichriſt no one ſingular man.

Empire, in which Antichrist succeedeth the Heathen, and Hereticall persecutors. And the number of his name is conteyned in λατεινος. The Latine man, not onely because hee sitteth at Rome, the chiefe Citie of the Latine Empire, but because his tyrannie is chiefe in the Latine Church, and enforceth the publike exercise of Religion to bee in Latine: yea generally hee hath brought all ciuill contractes of buying and selling into the Latine tongue. And this was thought verie like to bee the name of Antichrist by Irenæus, almost 1400. yeeres agoe: for among other names that hee mentioneth, hee saith, Sed & Lateinos, &c. But euen the name Lateinos hath the number of 666. And it is verie like to bee the true name: for that which is most truelie a kingdome, hath that name, for they are Latines which nowe reigne. You see plainely by the iudgement of Irenæus, that it is not necessarie to vnderstande this text, or any in the Scripture so, that Antichrist must bee one singular man, but rather one kingdome, of which euerie King or chiefe Ruler, is Antichrist. The time of his reuelation is not appointed so neere the worldes ende, but the time of his destruction by the comming of Christ: his reigne is not called short, but in comparison of the large and eternall reigne of Christ, as the time of the comming of Christ to iudgement, is accompted short in Gods iudgement, to whom a thousand yeeres, are as one day, and one day as a thousand yeeres. Finally, by his feined miracles, or any figure of him in the Scripture, it cannot be prooued, that hee is a singular man. Nowe therefore, let vs see out of the Scriptures, howe it can bee prooued, that Antichrist is not one singular person. First most euidently out of this text, where it is saide, that the man of sinne shall bee reuealed, whereby it may bee rightly gathered (as S. Iohn also plainely saieth) that Antichrist was euen then, but hee was not reuealed, or openly shewed, but closely caried about in manie of his members. So S. Paul saieth, verse 7. The mysterie of iniquitie doth euen nowe worke, and shall not be vterly destroied, before the second comming of Christ. Seeing therefore it is impossible, that one man could haue continuance, from the Apostles time, to the daie of iudgement, it is manifest, that Antichrist is no one singular man, but a continuall succession of Heretikes, first secretly, and after openly, aduancing themselues against Christ, and God his father. Heereto agree the most cleere testimonies of S. Iohn, 1. Iohn 2.22. Who is a lyer, but hee that denieth that Iesus is Christ, the same is Antichrist which denieth the Father and the Sonne. Euerie one that denieth the Sonne hath not the Father. This note as it doeth agree to all Heretikes, so principally to the Pope, who denieth the offices of Christ, as other Heretiks had denied his person. Againe 1. Iohn 4.3. Euery spirite which confesseth not Iesus Christ come in the flesh, is not of God, and the same is the spirite of Antichrist, which you haue heard that hee commeth, and nowe hee is in the worlde. Also 2. Iohn verse 7. There are many deceiuers entred into the worlde, which confesse not Iesus Christ, that he is come in the flesh, the same is ὁ πλάνος καὶ ὁ ἀντίχριστος, the deceiuer, and the Antichrist. Marke that many deceiuers, are the deceiuer, and the Antichrist with the Greeke article. Againe 1. Iohn 2.18. Little children, this is the last time, and as you haue heard, that ὁ ἀντίχριστος, the Antichrist commeth, euen nowe there are manie Antichristes. Therefore Antichrist is not one, but many, and his comming not deferred, vntill within the three yeeres and a halfe, of the ende of the worlde, as the Papistes by grosse vnderstanding of the mysticall time, described in the Apocalyps would haue it: but hee was come in mysterie, and secretly, euen in the Apostles time, and that mysterie, by the malice and subtiltie of Satan, which is the spirite of Antichrist, ceased not to worke, vntill the open and plaine reuelation of his pride, was publikely professed in the papacie. Nowe for the opinion of the auncient fathers, you heard before, that Irenæus thought it very like to be true, of a whole kingdome of Latines: and therefore it was not proper to one singular man. Hierome in the place by you quoted, acknowledging, that all that were not of the communion of Damasus, which professed the diuinitie of Christ, belonged to Antichrist, doeth plainely auouch, that Antichrist, was in his time no singular man, but the body of all Heretikes, the enimies of Christ, whose head was not yet reuealed. So in the other place, they that haue newe names, after any man in the auctor of their doctrine, as Arrianes, Donatistes, Papistes, be Antichristes. As for Caluinistes, Zuinglians, &c. be but names of reproch, inuented as the like were by your predecessours the olde Heretikes, Athanasians, Alexandrians, Iounites, and such like: but of this matter more in the next Section.

RHEM. 9 And this is the most common sentence also of all auncient fathers. Only Heretikes make no doubt but Antichrist is a whole order or succession of men, which they holde against the former euident Scriptures and reasons, onely to establish their foolish and wicked paradoxe, that Christes chiefe minister is Antichrist, yea the whole order. Wherein Beza specially pricketh so high, that hee maketh Antichrist (euen this great Antichrist) to haue been in S. Pauls daies, though he was not open to the world. Who it should be (except he meane S. Peter, because he was the first of the order of Popes) God knoweth. And sure it is, except he were Antichrist, neither the whole order, nor any of the order can be Antichrist, being al his lawful successours both in dignitie and also in trueth of Christes religion. Neither can al the Heretikes aliue proue, that they or any of them vsed any other regiment or iurisdiction Ecclesiastical in the Church, or forced the people to any other faith or worship of God, then Peter himselfe did preach and plant. Therefore if the rest be antichrist, let Beza boldly say that S. Peter was so also, & that diuers of the auncient catholike fathers did serue and worke (though vnwares) towards the setting vp of the great Antichrist, for so doth that blasphemous penne boldly write in his Annotations vpon this place: and an English printed booke of late comming forth out of the same schoole, hath these words: As for Leo and Gregorie Bishops of Rome, although they were not come to the full pride of Antichrist, yet the mysterie of iniquitie hauing wrought in that Seate neere fiue or sixe hundred yeeres before them, and then greatly increased, they were deceiued with the long continuance of errour. Thus writeth a malapert scholler of that impudent schoole, placing the mysterie of Antichrist as working in the See of Rome euen in S. Peters time, and making these two holy fathers great workers and furtherers of the same. whereas an other English Rabbine doubted not at Paules crosse to speake of the selfe same fathers as great Doctors and Patrones of their newe Gospel, thus: O Gregorie, ô Leo, if we be deceiued, you haue deceiued vs. Whereof we giue the good Christian Reader warning more diligently, to beware of such damnable bookes and Maisters, carying many vnaduised people to perdition.

Beza in hoc cap.
The Caluinists place Antichrist in the See of Rome, in S. Pauls daies.
They make S. Leo, & S. Gregorie, great furtherers of Antichristes pride.
Against D. Sanders rocke, pag. 248. & pag. 57. Iuel.

FVLKE. 9 That it is not the sentence of Irenæus and Hierom, I haue shewed plainely out of their owne words: now it remaineth, that we enquire what other auncient fathers thought vpon the matter. S. Augustine testifieth, that according to the iudgement of some fathers before him, the mysterie of iniquitie, is vnderstoode of euill men and hypocrites, which are in the Church, vntill they come to so great a number, as may make a great people for Antichrist &c. according to the testimonie of 1. Iohn 2. whereby Antichrist by their iudgement can be no singular man. Yea some vnderstood (as he saith) not onely the prince himselfe, but his whole body, that is, the multitude of men perteining to him together with their prince to be Antichrist. De ciuitat. cap. 19. Chrysostome vpon this place hom. 3. applying the text of Math. 24.24. (of many false Christes and false prophetes, able to deceiue the elect, if it were possible) to Antichrist, signifyeth that it is not necessarie to take Antichrist for

for one ſingular man. Alſo hom. 4. where he ſheweth, that Antichriſt ſhall come in place of the Romane Empire, as the Romane Empire came in place of the Macedonian: the Macedonian of the Perſian: the Perſian of the Median: the Median of the Babylonian: he likewiſe ſignifieth, that Antichriſt is a kingdome continued by ſucceſſion, as all the reſt were whom he nameth. Primaſius interpreting this text, by Math. 24. 24. declareth, that he thought Antichriſt to be no one ſingular perſon. Tertullian againſt Marcion lib. 5. ſaith, Who is that man of ſinne, ſonne of perdition? &c. After our opinion, Antichriſt, as the olde and newe prophecies doe teach, as Iohn the Euangeliſt ſaieth, that Antichriſtes are alreadie gone foorth into the worlde, ſpirites, forerunners of Antichriſt. Cyprian Epiſt. 76. ſaith, That all the Lordes aduerſaries are Antichriſtes. Ruffinus expoſit. Symboli. applying alſo that text Math. 24. 24. to the comming of Antichriſt declareth, that he thought not Antichriſt to be one ſingular man. Therefore it is not the common ſentence of all the auncient fathers, that Antichriſt ſhoulde be one ſingular perſon. Seeing therefore it is manifeſt by the Scripture, that Antichriſt is the whole bodie of Chriſtes enimies, vnto the end of the world, wherein yet there is a principall head to be openly reuealed, why ſhould it be compted a fooliſh paradoxe, that the Pope is Antichriſt? You ſay, becauſe he is Chriſtes chiefe miniſter. A ſound argument, if it were not all that is in controuerſie. But Beza (you ſay) pricketh ſo high, that he maketh this great Antichriſt to haue beene in S. Pauls daies, though he was not open to the world. Verily Beza ſaith none otherwiſe then S. Paul himſelfe, and S. Iohn ſay. But who ſhoulde that be (you ſay) God knoweth, except he meane S. Peter, becauſe he was the firſt of the order of Popes. But Beza expreſſeth his meaning plainely, when hee ſaith, Heretikes and falſe Apoſtles, that craftely and cloſely went about to make a defection from Chriſt, and therefore as it is a malitious, ſo a moſt fooliſh and ſenſeles ſurmiſe, that he ſhoulde meane of S. Peter, who was none of the order of theſe Popes, which are nowe Antichriſtes. But you are ſure that except Peter were Antichriſt, neither the whole order, nor any of the order can be Antichriſt. I ſaid before, you can neuer proue, that Peter was of that order of Popes, that nowe are Antichriſtes: you ſay they are Peters lawfull ſucceſſors in dignitie, and in truth of Chriſtes religion. This in deede you ſay, But when ſhall it be prooued? that Peter euer tooke vpon him to diſpenſe againſt the lawe of God, to vſurpe authoritie aboue earthly Princes, to make articles of faith, &c. an hundreth like matters that the Popes doe and haue done: whereof all the Papiſtes, the lymmes of Antichriſt aliue and dead, neither coulde or can euer proue, that the Apoſtle Peter did or taught any thing like. Where Beza ſaith, that diuers of the auncient Catholike fathers vnawares, ſerued toward the ſetting vp of the great Antichriſt, it can not be denied, when they yeelded to much to the vſurped claime of the Biſhops of Rome, who long before the reuelation of Antichriſt (the myſterie of iniquitie working greatly in that See) exalted themſelues as Socrates teſtifieth, beyond the limites of Prieſthood into foren dominions, and yet chalenged a great deale more then they coulde obteine of the auncient Catholike fathers: and for all that by many degrees leſſe, then the Popes when they openly ſhewed themſelues to be Antichriſtes, did openly take vpon them. But there is belike a great contradiction betweene that which I wrote againſt Sanders rocke, of Gregory and Leo: and that which was vttered by the Biſhop of Sarum at Paules Croſſe, whereas if any reaſonable man will compare both our ſayings, he ſhall finde no repugnancie at all in them. The Biſhop ſpake of thoſe poyntes, wherein Leo and Gregorie (which alſo hee declared in that ſermon) taught contrarie to the Papiſtes, my writing was of their errour concerning Peters greater dignitie, then the holy Scriptures doth allowe him. Which errour had taken roote by long continuance of time, becauſe the myſterie of iniquitie had wrought in the See of Rome neere fiue or ſixe hundred yeeres before the time of Leo and Gregory. This is compted a malepert and impudent part, to place the See of Antichriſt, working in the See of Rome, euen in S. Peters time, and to make theſe two holy fathers, great workers and furtherers of the ſame. In deede furtherers I make them, as Beza doth many others yet vnawares, while they ſawe not whereunto the myſterie tended, eſpecially the elder. As for the other, when he foreſawe the reuelation of Antichriſt, he hindred it to his power: but I make them not willing and witting workers and furtherers of the myſterie of iniquitie. The chiefe matter is, whether the myſterie of iniquitie did worke in the See of Rome in Peters time. Firſt, that it did work in Peters time, the text of S. Paul is plaine. That it did worke at Rome, where Antichriſt ſhoulde be openly ſhewed, S. Iohn is plaine in the Reuelation 17. 9. 18. The auncient fathers, Tertullian, Hierom, Auguſtine &c. (as I haue ſhewed elſe where) doe teſtifie, that Rome is Babylon, the See of Antichriſt. And many of the old fathers ſuſpected, that Nero was Antichriſt, who was Emperour of Rome in Peters time. Yea the Papiſtes themſelues confeſſing, that Peter in his Epiſtle called Rome Babylon, muſt needes graunt, that Rome is the See of Antichriſt, and that the myſterie of Antichriſt did worke there, euen in S. Peters time, or elſe why ſhould he call it Babylon? Now that this myſterie did worke in the Church of Rome, where Antichriſt was to be openly ſhewed, how can it be denied? ſeeing it did worke in other Churches. If Simon Magus the father of heretikes (as euen Papiſtes doe confeſſe) firſt broched his hereſie at Rome, and there contended with Peter, as it were for the chiefe place of the Church, did not the myſterie of Antichriſt begin in the See of Rome, euen in S. Peters time? Againe, when there were ſchiſmes at Corinth, one ſaying I am of Cephas, I am of Paul &c. might not the like be at Rome? But all this while you will ſay Peters chaire, was free from theſe myſteries of iniquitie. I doe willingly confeſſe, that Peter himſelfe, and many godly Biſhops, were vtter enimies to Antichriſtian pride: and therefore I doe not place the myſterie of iniquitie in the See of Rome preciſely in Peters time, but neere the ſame, which in proceſſe of time, began by little and little to ſhewe it ſelfe. As when Anicetus contended with Polycarpus, about the celebration of Eaſter, yet with more modeſtie then Victor, which excommunicated the Biſhops of Aſia, becauſe they would not conſent with him in the ſame ceremonie. Cornelius & Stephanus were good men and martyrs: yet by Cyprian a good father and martyr, Firmilianus, and many other Biſhops, they were thought to take to much vpon them, in the queſtion of rebaptiſme, although their cauſe was better. Alſo in admitting the complaints of fugitiue heretikes, that were iudged and excommunicated in Africa. Much more the ambitious titles chalenged by the See of Rome, were miſliked and condemned in the Councel of Carthage 3. c. 26. That the Biſhop of the firſt See, be not called prince of Prieſtes, or higheſt prieſt, or any ſuch thing, but onely Biſhop of the firſt See. Whereunto Gratian 1. Diſtinct. 99. addeth, as for vniuerſall, let not the Biſhop of Rome himſelfe be called. After this, appeales were forbidden vnto the See of Rome, vnder paine of excommunication cont. Milevitanum cap. 22. and conc. Aphric. cap. 92. To heale which wound, the Biſhops of Rome, Zoſimus, Bonifacius, and Celeſtinus, obtruded to the Biſhops of Aphrica, a forged canon of the Councel of Nice, which by true copies of the Nicene Councel, ſent from Cyrillus of Alexandria, and Atticus of Conſtantinople, was diſcouered Ep. conc. Aphric. ad Celeſtinum. After this, Leo by his Legates, and his Epiſtles to Martianus and Pulcheria, Ep. 54. and 55. laboured to hinder the decree of the generall Councell of Chalcedon, whereby the Biſhop of Conſtantinople was made equall with the Biſhop of Rome, vnder pretence of defending the priuiledges graunted to the See of Alexandria, and of Antioch, by the Councel of Nice. But notwithſtanding all his practiſe and indeuour, the generall Councell of Chalcedon concluded againſt him, that the Biſhop of Conſtantinople ſhould be his equal in al things. Whereupon Iohn Biſhop of Conſtantinople being lifted vp in pride, was not content to be fellowe with the Biſhop of Rome, but woulde be his ſuperior: yea woulde tranſlate the auctoritie of all Biſhops vnto his owne See and perſon, by taking vpon him the title of vniuerſall Biſhop. Which when Gregory Biſhop of Rome perceiued, after he could not preuaile with him by admonition, he declared him openly to be the forerunner of the great Antichriſt: for thus he writeth. Sed in hac eius ſuperbia &c. But in this his pride, what other thing is ſignified? but that the times of Antichriſt are euen now at hand, becauſe he imitateth him which deſpiſing the legions of Angels in equal ioy, aſſaied to breake out in the toppe of ſingularitie ſaying: I will exalt my throne aboue the ſtarres of heauen &c. lib. 4. Ep. 34. And againe. Omnia quæ prædicta ſunt iuxta &c. All things are done which were foreſhewed. The king of Pride is at hand, and that which is a vile thing to be ſpoken, an armie of prieſtes is prepared for him, becauſe they that were appointed to be chiefe in humilitie, doe ſerue as ſouldiers vnder pride and arrogancie. lib. 4. Epi. 38. Thus haue we proued by the holy Scriptures, and the teſtimonies of many auncient fathers, that Antichriſt is no one ſingular man: that Rome is the place appointed for his ſoueraigne ſeate: that the time of his reuelation was at hand 900. yeeres agoe: that he exerciſed his Antichriſtian pride, ſpecially by the Clergie, which are his garde or armie: that the vniuerſall auctoritie which he vſurpeth by the name of vniuerſall Biſhop, is the pride of Lucifer, whereof Antichriſt is king. And theſe three laſt points no papiſt can denie, except he will affirme, that the Biſhop of Rome erred in ſo great matters of faith, as are the reuelation of Antichriſt, the deſcription of his qualities and inſtruments, and the auctoritie of the See of Rome.

RHEM. 10 4 Extolled. The great Antichriſt which muſt come neere the worldes ende, ſhall aboliſh the publike exerciſe of all other religions true and falſe, and pull downe both the B. Sacrament of the altar, wherin conſiſteth ſpecially the worſhip of the true God, and alſo al Idols of the Gentiles, and ſacrifices of the Iewes, generally all kinde of religious worſhip, ſauing that which muſt be done to himſelfe alone. which was partly prefigured in ſuch kings as publiſhed that no God nor man but themſelues ſhould be praied vnto for certaine daies, as Darius and ſuch like. Howe can the Proteſtants then for ſhame and without euident contradiction, auouch the Pope to be Antichriſt, who (as we ſay) honoureth Chriſt the true God with all his power, or (as they ſay) honoureth Idols, and chalengeth no diuine honour to himſelfe, much leſſe to himſelfe onely, as Antichriſt ſhal do? He humbly praieth to God, and lowly kneeleth downe in euery Church at diners altars erected to God in the memories of his Sainctes, and praieth to them. He ſaieth or heareth Maſſe daily with al deuotion, he confeſſeth his ſinnes to a Prieſt as other poore men do, he adoreth the holy Euchariſt which Chriſt affirmed to be his owne bodie, the Heretikes call it an Idol (no maruell if they make the Pope his Vicar Antichriſt, when they make Chriſt himſelfe an Idol) Theſe religious duties doeth the Pope, whereas Antichriſt ſhall worſhip none, nor pray to any, at the leaſt openly.

Antichriſt ſhal ſuffer no worſhip or adoration, but of himſelfe only, therefore the Pope cannot be Antichriſt. Dan. 8.

FVLKE. 10 That the great Antichriſt came 900. yeeres ago, you haue heard by the teſtimonie of Gregorie. As for your other ſurmiſes, that he ſhall aboliſh the publike exerciſe of all other religions true and falſe, ſauing that which muſt be done to himſelfe, hath no colour of reaſon out of the ſcripture, although it be true that Antichriſt maketh accompt of no religion, yet vnder the colour of Religion and Gods ſeruice, he vſurpeth all honour due to God. So ſaith S. Hierom, that Antichriſt ſhall obteine his Antichriſtian exaltation, by counterfecting that he is the captaine or chiefe of the couenant that is of the lawe and teſtament of God. In Daniel. cap. 11. Hee ſhall not therefore aboliſh all Religion true or falſe, or ſuffer none to be worſhipped but himſelfe, but by fayning that he is the chiefe of Religion, and captaine of Gods couenant (as the Pope doeth) he ſhould by Hieroms iudgement aduance himſelfe aboue all Religion. And therefore although we be not bound to ſeeke a figure of Antichriſt in the blaſphemous decree of Darius, yet the Pope (not for a time but perpetually) decreeth, that none other in effect be acknowledged for God, but himſelfe. Seeing hee alone taketh vpon him to diſpence againſt the Lawe of God, which argueth that he arrogateth to himſelfe auctoritie aboue God the lawe maker. For no lawe can be diſpenſed withall, but either by the ſame auctoritie by which it was made, or by a greater. Aboue Chriſt he exalteth himſelfe and his propheticall, kingly, and prieſtly office, not onely in abrogating his inſtitution of the Supper of both kindes, and many other notorious matters, but alſo in graunting full pardon of al ſinnes, and abſoluing men both from the paine & the fault, which he denieth to haue beene done by Chriſt in the ſacrifice of his death and paſſion. Yea, he depoſeth Chriſt out of his eternal Prieſthood, by ſetting vp an other ſacrifice and prieſthod after the order of Melchiſedech, whereby hee proteſteth againſt the ſufficiencie of the ſacrifice and Prieſthod of Chriſt, and alſo maketh euery one of his vile creatures (the Maſſe Prieſtes) ſuperiour to Chriſt God and man, whom they take vpon them to offer to God his father. Whereas Chriſt himſelfe could not haue offered that moſt acceptable ſacrifice of himſelfe, vnleſſe by his diuine and eternal ſpirit, he had bene in ſome reſpect better then himſelfe. Againſt the holy Ghoſt he exalteth himſelfe, blaſpheming the Scriptures inſpired by him, to be vnperfect and vnſufficient for the inſtruction of the Church without his traditions and decrees, by pronouncing that to be prophane and forbidding as vnholy, which he hath ſanctified, as mariage and meats, and giuing ſpecial holines to ſuch creatures as he liſteth. By vſurping the office of the holy Spirit, in applying the merits of Chriſt and the effect of his paſſion, according to his pleaſure, by his indulgences and pardons, and by ſacraments and ceremonies of his owne inuention. Arrogating in al things the ſpirit of truth that he can not erre, exempting himſelfe from all mortall iudgements, though he carie infinite thouſands with him to hell: beſide innumerable other blaſphemings of proude ſpeeches, doctrines, and decrees, whereof his lawes and religion are full. And therefore although to blinde the eies of the ſimple, hee hath ſome hypocritical title of humilitie to make ſome ſhew of adoring God, in external and ceremoniall maner, yet cannot he ſo diſſemble his pride & contempt of God, but many times it breaketh forth into open blaſphemie, as hath bene noted in diuers of them, but that which is notorious in al, and maintained by all, cannot be hidden. How in his greateſt pompe the Sacrament which he pretendeth to honour as God, is caried before him on his hackney, when he himſelfe is caried on mens ſhoulders. How his throne is ſet aboue the altar. How the Croſſe which muſt be caried on the right hand of kings ſwords or ſcepters, becauſe diuine honour is due to it (as they ſay) is notwithſtanding laied vnder his feete, how in the Iubily he beateth open the gates of Paradiſe with a golden hammer, with an hundreth more notes of Antichriſtian pride, expreſſed in the Pontificals, and practiſed in their ſolemnities.

The Pope Antichriſt, exalting himſelfe aboue God.

here said that he shal sit in the temple as God, that is, he shal be adored their by sacrifice and diuine honour, the name and worship of the true God wholy defaced. And this they thinke to be the abominatiō of desolation foretold by Daniel mentioned by our sauiour, prefigured and resembled by Antiochus & others, that defaced the worship of the true God by prophanation of that temple, specially by abrogating the daily sacrifice, which was a figure of the only sacrifice & cōtinual oblation of Christs holy body and bloud in the church, as the abolishing of that, was a figure of the abolishing of this, which shal be done principally and most vniuersally by Antichrist himselfe (as now in part by his forerunners) throughout al nations and churches of the world (though then also Masse may be had in secret, as it is now in nations where the secular force of some Princes prohibiteth it to be said openly.) For although he may haue his principal seate & honor in the temple & citie of Hierusalem, yet he shal rule ouer the whole world, and specially prohibite that principal worship instituted by Christ in his sacraments, as being the proper aduersarie of Christes person, name, lawe, and Church. the prophanation and desolation of which Church by taking away the sacrifice of the altar, is the proper abomination of desolation, and the worke of Antichrist onely.

The abomination of desolation consisteth chiefly in abolishing the sacrifice of the altar.

FVLKE. II Though some of the ancient fathers, supposed that Antichrist should sit in the temple of Ierusalem, yet they had no reason out of the worde of God so to thinke. For the temple of Salomon being vtterly destroyed, though an other like it should be builded according to this surmise, yet coulde it not be called the temple of God. But the Church of Christ is by the Apostle called the temple of God, 1. Cor. 3. 16. 17. 2. Cor. 6. Apoc. 3. 12. Wherefore the Apostle meaneth, that Antichrist shal sit in the visible Church of God, or that which is so called and commonly reputed. and there vsurpe diuine auctoritie. That the abomination of desolation consisteth chiefly in abolishing the popish Masse, it is a vaine presumption without auctoritie of the Scriptures, or testimonie of the auncient fathers. For rather the Masse is an abomination that bringeth desolation, because it ouerthroweth the vertue of the sacrifice and Priesthod of Christ, in which is the only comfort of al Christian mens consciences.

Antichrist sitting in the Church.

RHEM. 12 *S. Augustine therefore li. 20. de ciuit. c. 19. and S. Hierom q. 11. ad Algasiam. do thinke, that this sitting of Antichrist in the temple, doth signifie his sitting in the church of Christ, rather then in Salomons temple. Not as though he (should be a cheefe member of the Church of Christ, or a special part of his body mystical, and be Antichrist and yet withal continuing within the Church of Christ, as the Heretikes feine, to make the Pope Antichrist (whereby they plainely confesse and agnise that the Pope is a member of the Church, & in ipso sinu Ecclesiæ, and in the very bosome of the Church, say they:) for that is ridiculous, that all Heretikes whom S. Iohn calleth Antichristes as his precursors, should go out of the Church, and the great Antichrist him selfe shoulde be of the Church, and in the Church, and continew in the same. and yet to them that make the whole Church to reuolt from God, this is no absurditie. But the truth is, that this Antichristian reuolt here spoken of, is from the Catholike Church: and Antichrist, if he euer were of or in the Church, shall be an Apostata and a renegate out of the Church, and shal vsurpe vpon it by tyrannie, and by chalenging worship, religion, and gouernment thereof, so that himselfe shal be adored in al the Churches of the world which he list to leaue standing for his honour. And this is to sit in the temple or * against the Temple of God, as some interprete. If any Pope did euer this, or shal do, then let the Aduersaries cal him Antichrist.*

How Antichrist shal sit in the Church.

* εἰς τὸν ναὸν.

FVLKE. 12 Now you confesse that by the iudgement of S. Augustine and Hierom, Antichrist should sit in the Church of Christ, rather then in the temple of Salomon. Yea, by S. Augustine, he should not onely sit in the Church of God, but take vpon him with his retinue to be the onely Church of God. For thus he writeth, (reporting the opinion of other men whereunto he giueth his assent,) Some wil haue not onely the Prince or chiefe himselfe, but his whole body, that is the multitude of men perteining to him, to be vnderstood in this place (togither with their prince,) to be antichrist. And thinke that it should be said more rightly in Latine, as it is in the Greeke, that he should sit, not in the temple of God, but as the temple of God, as though he himselfe were the temple of God, which is the Church. There could nothing be said more properly of the Pope, who boasteth himselfe to be head and foundation of the Church, and that there is none other Church of God, but he & his body. Hierom saith: He shal sit in the temple of Ierusalem as some thinke, or in the Church as we more truely iudge. Neither are these fathers alone, but other of good credite ioyning with them. Chrysostome vpon this text saith: that Antichrist shal commaund himselfe to be worshipped in stead of God, and to be placed in the temple of God, not only at Ierusalem, but also in the Churches. Theodoret saith: He calleth the temple of God, the Churches in which Antichrist shal arrogate vnto himselfe the chiefe state, endeauouring to shew himselfe as God. Primasius saith, That which is called God, is the Church, That which is worshipped, is the highest God. So that he shal sit in the temple of God, boasting himselfe that he is God. That is, that he himselfe is the Church: which is as if he should say, he sitteth as the temple of God, boasting that he himselfe is the temple of God, or he sitteth as God, boasting that he is God. This is out of the rules of Ticonius, out of which it is like, that S. Augustine also tooke his iudgement aforesaid. Seuerianus apud Oecumenium saith vpon this text, He speaketh not of the temple of Ierusalem, but of the Churches of God. So saith Theophylact, Not in the temple which is at Ierusalem specially, but simplie in the Churches and in euery temple of God. Thus you see by the most and best approued auctors iudgement, Antichrist should sit in the Church of God, But not as though he should be a chiefe member of the Church of Christ, or a special part of his body mystical, (say you.) In deed Antichrist is no member or part of the church or mystical body of Christ, yet he sitteth in the visible Church, boasting himselfe to be the chiefe head thereof, yea as though he and his body were the Church it selfe, as Augustine and Primasius testifie: he taketh vpon him the chiefe seate in the Church, as Theodoret saith. Therefore all things agree so aptly to the Pope, as the great Antichrist can be no where else found, but in his person and place. We do not therefore make the Pope a member of the church of Christ, but an enimie thereof, vsurping tyrannie aboue the Church, and thereby declaring that he is Antichrist. And whereas S. Iohn saith, that Antichrist and his precussors should goe out of the Church, it is true, and so is the Pope gone from the doctrine of the Apostles, and out of the Church of Christ, whereof the Bishops of Rome his predecessors, were sometimes true members and seruants of the Church. But yet those heretikes continued in the outward face of the Church, and profession of Christianitie, though they were neuer true members of the Church and mystical body of Christ. Example of one of these Antichrists we may see in the proud prelate Diotrephes, that would not receiue S. Iohn himselfe, and vsurped tyrannie in the Church, 3. Ioan. v. 9. The like is to be said of Cerinthus and other heretikes, that boasted of the Church of Christ & Christianitie, as the Pope doth, yet were enimies of the church, and no true members thereof. And euen that which you affirme of Antichrist, is true of the Pope. For he is reuolted from the catholike Church of Christ, and boasteth that he onely and his are the Church, he vsurpeth vpon the Church by tyrannie, and by chalenging worship, religion and gouernment thereof: he is adored in al Popish churches (where his sacrilegious decrees are obeied) aboue and against the lawes of God, and so he sitteth in the temple, and against the temple of God, therefore by your owne description, we may cal him Antichrist.

Antichrist (by interpretation, One against Christ) why so called.

RHEM. 13 And let the good Reader obserue, that there be two special causes why this great man of sinne is called Antichrist. The one is, for impugning Christs kingdom in earth, that is to say, his spiritual regiment which he cōstituted & appointed in his church, and the forme of gouernment ordained therein, applying al to himselfe by singular tyrannie and vsurpation, in which kinde

S. Athanasius (ep. ad Solit. vit. degentes.) is bold to cal the Emperour Constantius being an Arian Heretike, Antichrist, for making himselfe Principem Episcoporum, Prince ouer the bishops & President of Ecclesiastical iudgements, &c. The other cause is, for impugning Christs priesthood, which is only or most properly exercised in earth by the sacrifice of the holy Masse, instituted for the commemoration of his death, and for the external exhibition of godly honor to the B. Trinitie, which kind of external worship by sacrifice no lawful people of God euer lacked. And by these two things you may easily perceiue, that the Heretikes of these daies do more properly and neerely prepare the way to Antichrist and to extreme desolation, then euer any before, their special heresie, being against the spirituall Primacie of Popes and Bishops, and against the sacrifice of the altar, in which two the soueraintie of Christ in earth consisteth.

Protestants and Caluinists the neere forerunners of Antichrist.

FVLKE. 13 Both these causes agree most aptly to the Pope: For he impugneth Christs kingdom in earth, that is his spiritual regiment, which he constituted and appointed in his Church, and the forme of gouernment ordeined therein, applying to himself by singular tyrannie and vsurpation. Al this and much more Gregory saith of him that vsurpeth but the title of vniuersal bishop, How much more doth it agree to the Pope, who doth not only make himselfe Prince of bishops, and president of Ecclesiastical iudgements, but taketh away al auctoritie of bishops, & vsurpeth al vnto himself. Farre from al Christian mens harts (saith he) be this name of blasphemie, in which the honor of al priests is taken away, while it is proudly chalenged of one man to himselfe. Lib. 4. Ep. 32. More of this matter who so list, may see at large in the same booke Ep. 34. 36 38. But that which is more properly the spiritual kingdome of Christ, then the externall forme of gouernment in the Church, the Pope impugneth as I haue shewed Sect. 10. The other cause, for impugning Christes Priesthoode, doeth most properly agree to the Pope, as I haue also declared Sect. 10. and specially for setting vp and mainteyning that horrible blasphemie of the sacrifice of the Masse, and communicating the Priesthood after the order of Melchisedech, to all his shauelings, which is the speciall and singular dignitie of Christ alone. Psal. 1. 10. Heb. 7. And lest we should seeke further for the blasphemous exaltation of Antichrist, behold you are not afraid to say. That the soueraigntie of Christ in earth, consisteth only in these two, the Popes primacie, and the sacrifice of the Masse. Whereby you exclude al soueraigntie of Christ gouerning his Church on earth and euery one of his elect by his holy Spirit, ruling the same by his heauenly word, and subduing his enimies by his mightie power and prouidence, working effectually in the preaching of the Gospell and administration of his sacraments. Finally, you acknowledge the soueraigntie of Christ to consist in nothing but in those two, wherein his soueraigntie is most oppugned and blasphemed. Againe, what blasphemie is it to say, that the Priesthod of Christ is exercised only, or most properly in earth by the sacrifice of the Masse? As though Christ being ascended into heauen, (after he hath by one sacrifice of himselfe once offered, made perfect for euer all those that are sanctified) doth not onely and most properly exercise his Priesthod in his own person, which none else can exercise, because none else but he alone is able to saue for euer, those that by him come vnto God, alwaies liuing that he may make intercession for vs. Heb. 7. 24. 25.

RHEM. 14 6 What letteth.) S. Augustine (li. 20. c. 19. de ciuit. dei.) professeth plainly that he vnderstandeth not these words, nor that that followeth of the mysterie of iniquitie, & least of al that which the Apostle addeth, Only that he which holdeth now, do hold, &c. Which may humble vs al, & stay the confident rashnes of this time, namely of Heretikes, that boldly feine hereof whatsoeuer is agreeable to their heresie and phantasie. The apostle had told the Thessalonians before by word of mouth a secret point which he would not vtter in writing, and therefore referreth them to his former talke. The mysterie of iniquitie is commonly referred to Heretikes, who worke to the same, and doe that that Antichrist shall doe, but yet not openly, but in couert and vnder the cloke of Christes name, the Scriptures, the word of the Lord, shew of holines, &c. Whereas Antichrist himselfe shal openly attempt and atchieue the foresaid desolation, and Satan now serueth his turne by Heretikes vnderstand, shall toward the last end vtter, reueale, and bring him foorth openly. and that is here, to be reuealed, that is, to appeere in his owne person. These other words, Only that he which now holdeth, hold: Some expound of the Emperor, during whose continuance in his state, God shal not permit Antichrist to come, meaning that the very Empire shalbe wholy desolate, destroyed and taken away before or by his comming: which is more then a defection from the same, whereof was spoken before: for there shal be a reuolt from the Church also, but it shall not be vtterly destroyed. Others say, that it is an admonition to al faithfull, to hold fast their faith and not to be beguiled by such as vnder the name of Christ or Scriptures seeke to deceiue them, til they that now pretend religion and the Gospel, end in a plaine breach, reuolt, and open apostasie by the appearance of Antichrist, whom al heretikes serue in mysterie, that is, couertly and in the Diuels meaning, though the world seeth it not, nor themselues at the beginning, thought it, as now euery day more and more all men perceiue they tend to plaine Atheisme and Antichristianisme.

S. Augustins humilitie in interpreting the Scriptures.

The mysterie of iniquitie is the couert working of heretikes toward the manifest reuelation of Antichrist himselfe.

FVLKE. 14 S. Augustine which saw not the fulfilling of this prophecie, professeth his ignorance, as Ireneus doth in part: yet most of the ancient writers vnderstand this let, to be the Romane Empire, which so long as it stood, Antichrist could not possesse the Citie of Rome, which was appointed for the seate of his tyrannie, nor vsurpe such dominion as after that was taken away, he challenged. That we faine nothing vpon this text, it is manifest, because we affirme nothing but that which the ancient fathers haue said before vs. Although because we see all these things openly reueiled, which were to them more obscure, because they were not performed, we note the person more boldly, and clearely we pronounce of the fulfilling of this prophecie. That the mysterie of iniquitie is the couert working of heretikes, towards the manifestation of Antichrist himselfe, we agree with you. Whereas Antichrist the Pope openly blasphemeth the Scriptures as vnsufficient notwithstanding the institution of Christ depriueth the people of the Lordes bloud: though he by his wicked life lead infinite thousandes of soules to hell with him, most impudently boasteth that he is not to be reproued or iudged of any man: braggeth that he cannot erre: that he hath al lawes in the closet of his breast: that he is aboue all lawes: that his will is in stead of reason, and such like matters which you cannot denie.

The other wordes (as I said) the auncient fathers for the most part doe expound of the Romane Empire, which was vtterly subuerted before Antichrist was in his highest exhaltation, & now is nothing but a name & shadow of an Empire, and long since when it was of some power, ceased to be the Empire of Rome. when Antichrist had set vp his kingdome there, and the Emperour had nothing but a bare name of the Empire of Rome. Yet Theodoret thinketh as Caluine doeth, that this let should be the preaching of the Gospel ouer al the world, which because it was promised by our Sauiour Christ, must haue bene fulfilled before Antichrist, or the ende of the world to come. Where you conclude, that all men perceiue our doctrine and doings tende to plaine Atheisme and Antichristianisme, because it is nothing but impudent railing without any reason, I passe it ouer as vnworthie any answere.

Slander.

FVLKE. 15 9 In al power.) Satan whose power to hurt is abridged by Christ, shal then be let loose, and shal assist antichrist in al maner of signes, wonders & false miracles, wherby many shal be seduced, not only Iewes: But al such as be deceiued & caried away by vulgar speech only, of heretikes that can worke no miracles, much more shal folow this man of sinne doing so great wonders. And such both now do folow heretiks, & then shal receiue Antichrist, that deserue so to be forsaken of God, by their forsaking

There was neuer any ſtate of religion of the heathen ſo full of falſe myracles, lying ſignes and wonders, as the religion of Antichriſt: the moſt of them being monſtrous fables, ſome Magicall illuſions of deuils, and craftie conueyances of legerdemaine. Of which reports the Legends, Portuſes, Feſtiuales, Promptuaries, Sermons, and other bookes are ſtuffed ſo full, that nothing almoſt is thought to be ſufficiently proued, that is not confirmed by a number of falſe and friuolous miracles: yea they ceaſe not at this day to continue ſome of theſe monſtrous fictions, as of their miraculous hoſtes at Mechline, and of the miraculous bloud of Chriſt at Paris, as good as the blood of Hailes, which was a confection of honie and ſaffron renued as often as it pleaſed them, of the virgine Maries milke, with ten thouſand falſe tales of reliques, that are in euery corner of the Popes dominion. Although God himſelfe (for the preſeruation of his Church,) worketh great things, which being done by him, ought to be wonderfull in our eies. Among which the marueilous preſeruation of our ſoueraigne Lady, againſt ſo many conſpiracies, treaſons, rebellions, murtherings, poyſonings, coniurings, inuaſions, and other diueliſh practiſes deuiſed by Antichriſt and his limmes, againſt her perſon, her Realme and kingdome, now theſe thirtie yeres continuing: is as glorious a worke of his mercifull protection, as euer was ſeene in any age: or is recorded in any ſtorie, holy or prophane, yea, I know not whether the like (all circumſtances conſidered) was euer knowen before.

Traditions vnwritten.

FVLKE.16 Firſt our tranſlations are true and according to the true ſenſe of the word, and of the text. And ſeeing traditions are ſometimes taken in euill part (as you confeſſe) we doe rightly auoyde the ambiguitie, when as the ſignification of the worde doth beare) we tranſlate inſtructions, conſtitutions, or ordinances. And it is as much aduantage, as you can iuſtly require, to haue inſtructions, conſtitutions, ordinances of the Apoſtles, vnwritten, but that vnder the voice, ſound, and colour of the word, Traditions, you would haue all your fables and inuentions of falſe doctrine, receiued without any examination or triall, whether they came from the Apoſtles or no.

Cauilling.

But now let vs ſee whether this text doth allow any traditions, inſtructions, or ordinances of the Apoſtles, that are no where expreſſed and conteined in the Scriptures. S. Paul willeth them to hold the traditions which they had learned, whether it were by word or by his Epiſtle: Ergo ſay you, not only the things written and ſet downe in the holy Scriptures, but all other points of truth and points of religion vttered by word of mouth, & deliuered by the Apoſtles to their ſcholers by tradition, be here approued. In deed as wel that which the Apoſtles did preach, as that which they did write, is here approued. But how doth it follow out of this text, that the Apoſtle did preach or deliuer any thing by word of mouth, which is not written and ſet downe in the holy Scriptures? Vnleſſe this be your argumennt, All was not written in the Epiſtle to the Theſſalonians, Ergo, it is no where written or ſet downe in the holy Scriptures. Therefore this text proueth not that the Apoſtles left traditions, neceſſary to be obſerued vnto ſaluation, which are not conteined in the Scriptures. Or that the Scriptures doe not conteine all things neceſſarie to be knowen, beleeued, and practiſed vnto ſaluation. Hauing therefore no warrant in the Scriptures for ſuch traditions as are no where written, you bring a whole troupe of the ancient fathers: who if they had bene alwaies attentiue in this point, ſhould not in ſome things haue bene ſo caried away as they were. Yet if their ſayings be well marked according to their meanings, they ſpeake nothing for the credit of Popiſh traditions, that is articles of doctrine neceſſarie to ſaluation, not written or ſet downe in the Scriptures. For ſometimes they call the Scripture it ſelfe by the name of tradition, or els they ſpeake of doctrine conteined in the Scriptures, & able to be proued by them, though not expreſſed in the ſame termes: as Omouſion, the Trinitie, the three perſons, the baptiſme of infants and ſuch like. Or els of ceremonies and rites, which are not neceſſary to be at all times, and in all places the ſame. For many of thoſe externall obſeruations & rites, which they aſcribe to tradition of the Apoſtles, haue bene long ſince aboliſhed and growen out of vſe, and are not obſerued euen in the Popiſh Church: whereas they haue a greater number which be of later inuention, which yet they would father vpon the Apoſtles. Laſt of all, thoſe few errors (which the myſterie of iniquitie preuailing, were receiued in their time) diuers of the auncient fathers aſcribe to tradition, becauſe they had no ground in the Scriptures. Now therefore let vs conſider your teſtimonies for tradition vnwritten, in order. Firſt, you note in the Margent Dionyſ. eccle. Hier. c. 1. Who ſpeaketh of the Sacraments and ceremonies of the Church vſed in his time, refereth them partly to the Scriptures, partly to the tradition of Biſhops. Meaning the Sacraments to haue their inſtitution ſet downe in the Scriptures, other ceremonies to haue beene ordeined by the gouernours of the Church, and by them deliuered vnto him. But of doctrine deliuered by the Apoſtles, that is no where written in the Scriptures, and yet is neceſſarie to ſaluation, he ſpeaketh not one word.

Traditions vnwritten.

THEM. 17 But S. Chryſoſtome (ho. 4. in 1. In the ſame booke c. 17. he ſaith*, If we once goe about to reiect vnwritten cuſtomes as things of no importance, we ſhal, ere we be aware, doe damage to the principall parts of the faith, and bring the preaching of the Goſpel to a naked name. And for example of theſe neceſſarie traditions, hee nameth the ſigne of the Croſſe, praying towardes the Eaſt, the words ſpoken at the eleuation or ſhewing of the holy Euchariſt, with diuers ceremonies vſed before and after the conſecration, the halowing of the font, the bleſſing of the oyle, the annointing of the baptized with with the ſame, the three immerſions into the font, the words of abrenuntiation and exorciſmes of the partie that is to be baptized &c. What Scripture (ſaith he) taught theſe and ſuch like? none truly, all comming of ſecret and ſilent tradition. wherewith our fathers thought it meete to couer ſuch myſteries. S.Baſil.

FVLKE.17 Chryſoſtomes wordes bee theſe: Hereof it is manifeſt, that they deliuered not all by Epiſtle, But many things without letters, and the one is of as great credite as the other. Therefore wee thinke the Tradition of the Church alſo to be worthy of credite, It is a tradition inquire no more. It is certaine, that Chryſoſtome ſpeaketh of ſuch traditions, as are not expreſſed in ſo many wordes in the ſcriptures, yet are they conteined in deed in them, or elſe of thoſe laſt words, it is a tradition &c. it ſhould follow, that we ſhould neuer ſearch the ſcriptures, for anie thing, but depend wholy vpon tradition. But that the ſcripture is not onely neceſſarie, but alſo conteyneth doctrine ſufficient for our ſaluation, he declareth plentifully, in other places. One example ſhall ſuffice, in 2. Tim. Hom. 9. If we haue neede to learne any thing, or not to know any thing, there (in the ſcriptures) we ſhall learne it. If it be needefull to reproue falſhod from thence, we ſhall draw it. If any thing be lacking vnto vs, that we muſt obteine, to be corrected or chaſtiſed vnto exhortation or comfort, out of the ſame alſo we do learne it. Theodoretes words are theſe, You haue a rule of doctrine, the wordes which we deliuer vnto you, which both being preſent we haue preached vnto you, and being abſent, we haue written vnto you. This Greeke father as you ſee, ſo vnderſtandeth this place, that the Apoſtle hath written the ſame things, that he preached. Therefore deliuered nothing vnwritten. Hentenius a papiſt tranſlating Oecumenius into Latin, euen in the text, for the greeke word παράδοσις. rendreth Inſtitutiones inſtitutions, as ſome of our tranſlations haue. The coment is the verie wordes of Chryſoſtome in effect, and haue the ſame meaning. The Apoſtle deliuered ſome things both by writing and without writing, and both are worthie to be obſerued. Therefore the tradition of the Church without writing alſo is to be obſerued. He meaneth as Chryſoſtom, that the doctrine of the Church, taken out of the holy ſcriptures, is to be obſerued, though it be not expreſſed in them, in ſuch forme of wordes, as it is deliuered by the Church. So the doctrine of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, was nothing but the doctrine of the holy ſcriptures of the olde Teſtament, yet vttered not alwaies in the ſame formes of ſpeach, although the argument, and matter were manifeſtly conteyned in them.

S.Baſiles place I haue anſwered before. He ſpeaketh partly of ſuch doctrine, as is conteyned in the ſcriptures, though not in the ſame forme of wordes, as the glorifying of the holy Ghoſt, with the father and the ſonne, which is the matter he defendeth by tradition: partly of ceremonies and rites, which are not neceſſarie to ſaluation. Among which ceremonies, he reherſeth, as an Apoſtolike tradition, a cuſtome that the Chriſtians had of olde time, betweene Eaſter and Whitſontide, to pray ſtanding, which long ſince is growne out of vſe, and not obſerued by the Papiſtes themſelues, no more, then that forme of glorifying the Trinitie, which he ſo earneſtly defendeth. Therefore theſe traditions are not neceſſarie. Of the eleuation of the Euchariſt, he ſpeaketh not, but of ſhewing of the bread of thankes giuing, and the cuppe of bleſſing. Neither ſpeaketh he of diuerſe ceremonies, vſed before and after conſecration, but of other wordes or formes of prayer not expreſſed in the Goſpell, vſed before and after the miniſtration of the ſacrament, yet doubtleſſe conteyned in the ſcriptures, and agreeable to them for the matter. Hallowing the font, he nameth not, but bleſſing of the water of baptiſme. Finally of exorciſmes, he ſpeaketh nothing. But that he acknowledgeth the ſcripture to conteine all doctrine neceſſarie to ſaluation, he expreſſeth his minde ſufficiently in other places. It is a moſt certaine argument of infidelitie, and a moſt certeine ſigne of pride, if any man will reiect any of thoſe thinges that are written, or being in any thing that is not written, when our Lord ſaith. My ſheepe heare my voice, and a ſtrangers they will not heare: Tract. de fide. Againe he ſaith. Of ſuch thinges as are in vſe with vs, ſome are vnder the commaundement of God preſcribed in the Scripture, ſome thinges are omitted, concerning thoſe things that are written no libertie is giuen vs at all, either to doe any thing that is forbidden, or to omit any thing that is commaunded, ſeeing the Lord hath one: charged vs and ſaide. Thou ſhalt keepe the worde which I commaund thee this day, thou ſhalt not adde to it, nor take away from it &c. but of thoſe things that are omitted, the Apoſtle Paul hath ſet foorth a rule for vs, All things are lawfull for me but all things are not expedient. And this is S. Baſiles anſwere to this queſtion, Whether it be lawfull or expedient, that a man permit vnto himſelfe to doe or ſay any thinges, which he thinketh to be good, without the teſtimonie of the holy ſcriptures Reg. breu. inter 1. S. Baſil therefore, being rightly vnderſtood, maketh nothing for popiſh traditions that are vrged without ſcripture, as neceſſarie to ſaluation.

RHEM. 18 S.Hierom (Dialog. cont. Lucif. c. 4. & ep. 28. ad Licinium.) reckeneth vp diuers the like traditions, willing men to attribute to the Apoſtles ſuch cuſtomes as the Church hath receiued in diuers Chriſtian countries. S. Auguſtine eſteemeth the Apoſtolike traditions ſo much, that he plainely affirmeth in ſundrie places, not onely the obſeruation of certaine feſtiuities, faſtes, ceremonies, and whatſoeuer other ſolemnities vſed in the Catholike Church, to be holy, profitable, and Apoſtolike, though they be not written at all in the ſcriptures: but he often alſo writeth, that many of the articles of our religion and points of higheſt importance, are not ſo much to be proued by Scriptures, as by tradition, namely auouching that in no wiſe we could beleeue that children in their infancie ſhould be baptized, if it were not an Apoſtolicall tradition. De Gen. ad lit. li. 10. c. 23. Tradition cauſed him to beleeue that the baptized of Heretikes ſhould not be rebaptized, notwithſtanding S. Cyprians auctoritie and the manifolde ſcriptures alleaged by him, though they ſeemed neuer ſo pregnant. De bap. li. 2. c. 7. By tradition onely, he and others condemned Heluidius the heretike for denying the perpetuall virginitie of our Ladie. And without this, be the Scriptures neuer ſo plaine, no Arian, no Macedonian, no Eutychian, no Pelagian, no Zuinglian will yeeld. We muſt vſe tradition. (ſaith S. Epiphanius hær. 61. Apoſtolicorum.) For the Scripture hath not all things: and therefore the Apoſtles deliuered certaine things in writing, certaine by tradition, and for that he alleageth this place alſo of S. Paul. And againe hær. 55. Melchiſed. There be bounds ſet downe for the foundation and building vp of our faith, the tradition of the Apoſtles, and holy Scriptures, and ſucceſſion of doctrine, ſo that truth is euery way fenſed. S.Hierom. S.Auguſtine. S.Irenæus.

FVLKE.18 S.Hierom you ſay, reckneth vp diuerſe like traditions, that are neceſſarie, as you ſaide the other were, which Baſil mentioneth. In the former place his wordes be theſe, in the perſon of the Luciferian heretike. Knoweſt thou not, that this is the Cuſtome of the Church, that handes are layed afterwardes vpon them, that are baptized, and ſo the holy Ghoſt is called vpon? Thou demaundeſt where it is written? In the Actes of the Apoſtles. But if the auctoritie of the Scripture did not warrant it, the conſent of the whole worlde in this parte would obteine the force of a precept. For many other thinges, which are obſerued in the Churches by tradition, haue obtayned the auctoritie of a written Lawe, as in baptiſme, to dippe the head thriſe. Afterwarde, that they which are come forth from baptiſme, would taſte a temper of milke and honie, to ſignifie theire infancie. On the Lordes day and throughout euery Pentecoſt, neither to pray on the knees, nor to faſt, and many other thinges are not written, which reaſonable obſeruation, hath challenged.

Of all theſe ceremonies you obſerue onely one, thriſe dipping, and that not of the head onely, but of the whole body. Therefore euery child may ſee, that theſe ceremonies, with others, were either vntruely aſcribed to the Apoſtles, or if they came from the Apoſtles, they are not neceſſarie for vs. If you ſay, the Church hath auctoritie to abrogate, or admitte, traditions of the Apoſtles at her pleaſure, you may ſay as much, of the holy Scriptures. For we heard before, that traditions vnwritten, were as worthie of credite, as thoſe that are written. But the truth is, theſe ceremonies came not from the Apoſtles, but that men might more eſteeme them, were attributed to the Apoſtles tradition, as Hierom declareth in your ſecond place Ep. ad Licin.

That you demaund of the Sabaoth or ſaterday, whether it is to be faſted, and of the Euchariſt, whether it is to be receiued euerie day, which thing the Church of Rome and Spaine are ſaide to obſerue, the moſt eloquent man Hippolitus hath written of them, and diuerſe writers gathering here and there, out of ſundry auctors haue ſet forth their opinions. But I thinke good to admoniſh you briefly of this thing: that eccleſiaſticall traditions (ſpecially ſuch as doe not hinder the faith) are ſo to be obſerued as they haue bene deliuered of our elders. And that the cuſtome of ſome men, is not ouerthrowen with the contrarie vſage of other men. And I would we could faſte, at all times, which we reade in the actes of the Apoſtles, that Paul and the beleeuers with him did in the daies of Pentecoſt and on the Lordes day. And yet they are not to be accuſed of Manichees hereſie, ſeeing carnall meate ought not to haue bene preferred before ſpirituall meate. Alſo I would we might alwaies receiue the Euchariſte, without condemnation of our ſelues, and a pricking conſcience, and heare the Pſalmiſt ſaying. Taſt and ſee how ſweete the Lorde is, and to ſing with him: my heart hath vttered a good ſaying. I ſay not this becauſe I thinke the Lordes daies are to be faſted, and that I would doe away the ſolemnitie which is continued, for 60. daies together: but let euery prouince abound in her owne ſenſe, and eſteeme the precepts of their elders, to be Apoſtolike lawes. You ſee by his iudgement, that many ceremonies were accompted Apoſtolike traditions, which were contrary to the very practiſe of the Apoſtles, and that the cuſtome of euery Countrye, was eſteemed as an Apoſtolike lawe. This maketh altogither, againſt your poſition of Apoſtolike traditions beſide the Scripture, and the ſame to be neceſſarie for Chriſtian men in all places and times to obſerue. But that S. Hierom would haue no doctrine, obtruded as neceſſarie to ſaluation which is not conteyned in the holy Scriptures, he ſheweth in diuerſe places, namely in Math. 23. That which hath no auctoritie of the holy ſcriptures, is as eaſily condemned, as it is allowed, and in Agg. cap. 1. Such thinges as men finde out and faine of them ſelues as it were of Apoſtolike tradition without the auctoritie and teſtimonies of the Scriptures, the ſworde of Gods worde doth ſtrike downe. Next to Hierom, you place S. Auguſtine, who you ſay doth not onely referre many ceremonies, to the Apoſtolike tradition, but alſo he writeth that many articles of our religion and pointes of higheſt importance, are not ſo much to be proued by ſcriptures, as by tradition. That ſome articles are prooued both by ſcriptures, and alſo by tradition, it is no hurt, for that onely is a true tradition, that hath the teſtimonie of the ſcripture to warrant it. Nay ſay you: He auoucheth, that in no wiſe we could beleeue, that children in their infancie ſhould be baptized. Verely if he did ſo auouch, he was in a great errour. For we haue as good arguments out of the Scriptures, that infants are to be baptized as olde folkes. But you doe impudently belye him, for he hath no ſuch wordes or meaning. For he ſaith. The cuſtome of our mother the Church, in baptizing of the infantes, is not to be deſpiſed, nor by any meanes to be accompted ſuperfluous, neither to be credited at all, if it were not an Apoſtolike tradition. For euen that age hath a great weight or teſtimonie, which firſt merited to ſhedde blood for Chriſt.

How proue you, that by Apoſtolike tradition or deliuerie, he meaneth here an vnwritten tradition? He is ſo farre from denying, that this cuſtome hath teſtimonie in the ſcripture, that he preſently alledgeth an argument out of the ſcripture to confirme it. They that may ſhedde their bloode for Chriſt may be baptized, infantes (as the ſcripture teſtifieth) did ſhedde their bloode for Chriſt therefore they may be baptized. And De baptiſmo contra Donat. lib. 4. cap. 24. He proueth the baptiſme of infantes, not onely by the cuſtome of the Church obſerued euer ſince the Apoſtles, but alſo by the inſtitution of circumciſion out of the ſcriptures. So likewiſe, that ſuch as were baptized by heretikes, were not to be rebaptized, he proueth by the ſaying of Iohn 13. He that is once waſhed, needeth no more to be waſhed. De bapt. lib. 2. cap. 14. And by example of them that were circumciſed in the tenne tribes, where Ieroboames calues were worſhipped.

Againe he ſaith. That euill men haue baptiſme and doe giue and receiue baptiſme, though they be not changed into better men, we haue proued as I thinke ſufficiently both out of the canonicall ſcriptures, and out of Cyprians owne writings. De bap. lib. 6. cap. 3. Of which it followeth manifeſtly, that ſuch as are baptized by heretikes, are not to be baptized againe. Therefore this point of religion hath ſufficient warrant out of the ſcriptures. Heluidius was not condemned by tradition onely, but becauſe he affirmed a new doctrine, without the teſtimony of the ſcriptures, as S. Hierom ſaith. As we denie not thoſe things which are not written, ſo we reiect thoſe thinges which are not written. That God was borne of a Virgine we beleeue, becauſe we reade it, that Marie had matrimoniall companie with her husbande after her childbirth we beleeue it not, becauſe we doe not reade it, Cont. Helu. Neither doth Auguſtine ſpeake any thing, of this condemnation by tradition onely. But you ſay without tradition no heretike will yeeld, be the Scriptures neuer ſo plaine. And what heretike was euer ſo gentle, to yeeld to tradition, that would not yeeld to the ſcriptures? but whether heretikes yeeld or no, they may be alwaies confuted by the holy ſcriptures, and ſo haue all heretikes beene alwaies beaten downe, though Sathan which inſpired them with arrogancie and error, will not ſuffer them to yeeld. As for Zuinglius whom you name among heretikes, would alwaies yeeld to the ſcriptures. Epiphanius in the firſt place Hær. 61. ſpeaketh of the common receiued doctrine of the Church, whereunto our interpretations of the ſcriptures ought to be agreeable, and not following allegories, or other ſtrange ſenſes. Whereby he declareth that the traditions of which he ſpeaketh, are the ſenſe of the ſcriptures, though they be not the verie wordes, as that which he ſaith, to be the Apoſtles tradition: that it is a ſinne, to marrie after virginitie decreed, according to this tradition, he ſaith, that text 1. Cor. 7. is to be interpreted, if a virgine Marie ſhe ſinneth not, and therefore to be ſpoken of ſuch virgins, as had not decreede or vowed virginitie. And the tradition he proueth immediatly out of the ſcripture. 1. Tim. 5. 22. of widowes that breake their firſt faith. In the latter place, Hær. 55. he ioyneth tradition vnto the ſcriptures, both which together, are a good confirmation of truth, that no man be deceiued with newe fables. But that tradition, or continuance of doctrine, which hath no foundation in the Scriptures is ſufficient to builde vpon, he ſaith not.

REM. 19 S. Ireneus (lib. 3. c. 4.) hath one notable chapter, that in all queſtions we muſt haue recourſe to the traditions of the Apoſtles: teaching vs with al, that the way to try an Apoſtolical tradition and to bring it to the fountaine, is by the Apoſtolike ſucceſſion of Biſhops, but ſpecially of the Apoſtolike See of Rome: declaring in the ſame place that there be many barbarous S. Irenæus.

people, simple for learning, but for constancie in their faith most wise, which neuer had Scriptures, but learned onely by tradition. Tertullian (lib. de corona militis nu. 3.) reckeneth vp a great number of Christian obseruations or customes (as S. Cyprian in many places doth in maner the same) whereof in fine he concludeth, Of such and such if thou require the rule of Scriptures, thou shalt finde none: Tradition shall be alleaged the author, custome the confirmer, and faith the obseruer. Origen also of this matter writeth in plaine termes, that there be many things done in the Church (which he there nameth) whereof there is no easier reason to be given then tradition from Christ and the Apostles. ho. 5. in Numer. S. Dionysius Areopagita referreth the praying and oblation for the dead in the Liturgie or Masse, to an Apostolicall tradition in fine Ec. Hierach. c. 7. parte 3. So doth Tertullian De coron militis. S. Augustine De cura pro mortuis c. 1. S. Chrysostom ho. 3. in ep. ad Philip. in Moral. S. Damascene Ser. de defunctis in initio. Tertullian. S. Cyprian. Origen.

We might adde to al this, that the Scriptures them selues, euen all the bookes and partes of the holy Bible, be giuen vs by tradition: als we should not nor could not take them (as they be in deede) for the infallible worde of God, no more then the workes of S. Ignatius, S. Clement, S. Denys, and the like. The true sense also of the Scriptures (which Catholikes haue and heretikes haue not) remaineth still in the Church by tradition. The Creed is an Apostolike tradition. Ruffin. in expo. Symb. in principio. Hiero. ep. 61. c. 9. Ambros. Ser. 38. Aug. de Symb. ad Catechum. li. 3. c. 1. And what Scriptures haue they to proue that we must accept nothing not expresly written in Scriptures? We haue to the contrary, plaine Scriptures, all the fathers, most euident reasons, that we must either beleeue traditions or nothing at all. And they must be asked whether, if they were assured that such and such things (which be not expressed in Scriptures) were taught and deliuered by word of mouth from the Apostles, they would beleeue them or no? If they say no, then they be impious that will not trust the Apostles preaching: if they say they would, if they were assured that the Apostles taught it: then to proue vnto them this point, we bring them such as liued in the Apostles daies, and the testimonies of so many fathers before named neere to those daies, and the whole Churches practise and assineration descending downe from man to man to our time, which is a sufficient proofe (at least for a matter of fact) in all reasonable mens iudgement, specially when it is knowen that S. Ignatius the Apostles equall in time, wrote a booke of the Apostles traditions, as Eusebius witnesseth li. 3. Ec. hist. c. 30. And Tertullians booke of prescription against Heretikes, is to no other effect but to proue that the Church hath this vantage aboue Heretikes, that she can proue her truth by plaine Apostolike tradition, as none of them can euer do. The Scriptures giuen vs by tradition, and the sense thereof. The Creede an Apostolicall tradition. An inuincible argument for the credite of Traditions.

FVLKE. 19 S. Irenæus, doth first confute the heretikes out of the holy Scriptures, saying the Apostles first preached the Gospell and afterward by the will of God deliuered it in writing, to be the foundation and pillar of our faith lib. 3. c. 1. which doctrine the Church from the Apostles had preserued vnto his time. But when the Heretikes (saith he) are reproued out of the Scriptures, they fall to accusing the scriptures them selues, as though all is not well in them, and that they be not of sufficient auctoritie, and that the truth cannot be found out of them, by them that know not the tradition. For that was not deliuered by writing, but by word of mouth, for which cause Paul said we speake wisedome among them that are perfect &c. lib. 3. cap. 2. Against these heretikes therefore, that alledged tradition of the Apostles beside the scriptures, to confirme there blasphemous heresies, as the papistes doe, Irenæus sheweth, that we can not learne the Apostolike tradition, any where but in the Apostolike Churches, and namely in the Church of Rome, as the most notable, by reason of the dominion of that Citie, where the doctrine of the Apostles, had beene continued by succession of Bishops, vnto his time. All which Apostolike Churches, did teach no tradition of the Apostles, but that which was conteyned in the holy Scriptures. And it is most cleere, in that he saith of Polycarpus. This man taught alwaies, those things which he had learned of the Apostles, and which he deliuered to the Church, and which are onely true. If these traditions were onely true, then they were conteyned in the scriptures, which no true Christian will denie, to be true. That he saith of barbarous people, which learned the truth only by tradition, without the scripture, he meaneth of such as learned of their pastors (as many vnlearned men do at this time) who learned of the scriptures, not that there was any such since Christes time, which neuer had the scriptures, either of the old or new Testament, and so long continued.

Tertullian in deede reckneth vp a number of customes grounded vpon tradition without the scriptures: but they were rites and ceremonies, whereof many are not obserued by the Papistes them selues. As the temper of milke and hony, giuen to them that were newly baptized: to abstaine from washing a whole weeke after. Oblations for the birth day yeerely, not to fast, nor kneele in prayer or worshipping of God on the Lords day: nor betweene Easter and Whitsontyde with a great deale more crossing the forehead, then the Papistes them selues vse, at euery going out, at euery steppe, at euery comming in, at putting on of apparell, at putting on of shooes, at washing, at tables, at lightes, at beddes, at seates &c. If all these were traditions of the Apostles, yet are they not necessarie: if these be not Apostolike traditions, what warrant haue we for the other?

But concerning matters necessarie to be beleeued and obserued, Tertullian else where doth testifie, that the scripture conteyneth all such matters. Take away from Heretikes (saith he) those thinges which they holde with Ethnikes, that they may stay their questions vpon the scriptures onely, and they are not able to stande. Deresurrect. carn. Againe, We neede no curiositie after Christ Iesus nor inquisition after the Gospell, when we beleeue it, we desire to beleeue nothing else. For this is the first thing that we beleeue, that there is nothing more, that we ought to beleeue. The things whereof Origen speaketh are also rites and ceremonies, and yet for the chiefe substance of them conteyned in the Scriptures, or else haue there reason out of them. As for example, the bowing the knees in prayers, hath many testimonies in the Scripture, Luke. 22. 41. Act. 9. 40. & 21. 15. Ephes. 3. 14.

The reason of praying toward the East, Basil taketh out of the Scriptures, which recordeth, that Paradise was planted in the East, so praying towarde the East, signifieth, that we haue respect to returne to our olde countrie. De sp. S. c. 27. The interrogations and answeres vsed in baptisme, are grounded vpon the doctrine of baptisme, which is plentifully set forth in the Scriptures. Wherefore the saying of Origen, maketh nothing for your vnwritten traditions, which haue no ground in the scriptures, many of them being cleane contrary to the scriptures. But now at length, you are come to an error receiued of auncient time. Whereby many good men while they perceiued not the mysterie of iniquitie secretly working, were deceiued, the error I meane of praying for the dead, which being first begonne of the Montanistes, (for any thing that we can learne in antiquitie,) and hauing a faire shewe of charitie, was after admitted into open practise of the Church: and then because it could not be iustified by the scripture, was defended by tradition. That the Montanistes were first auctors of it, I shew by this reason, bet ause Tertullian who was a Montanist, is the first of all ancient and Authenticall writers, that make mention of it, and that onely in such bookes, as he did write after he fell into that heresie. As for oblations for the dead made yeerely in the day of mens death, were but thankesgiuing, as those which were for the daies of mens birth. But yet let vs examine your testimonies in order.

First

Firſt Dionyſe which was not the Areopagite, but of later time, by likelyhood the Biſhop of Alexandra, which ſucceeded Origen, this father you ſay, referreth praier and oblation for the dead in the liturgie or maſſe, to an Apoſtolike tradition in fin. eccl. Hierarch, cap. 7. part. 3. But that is falſe, for he ſpeaketh not of any prayer or oblation for the dead in the liturgie, neither doth he referre that prayer (for oblation he hath none) whereof he ſpeaketh, to apoſtolike tradition. But becauſe prayer for the dead, was not long before brought in, neither was it receiued of all men he ſaith. It is neceſſarie for vs to declare, that tradition which we haue receiued of our diuine Maſters, concerning that prayer which the Biſhop maketh, for him that is dead. The ſomme of that praier he expreſſed before He prayeth to God, that he will remit vnto him, that is departed all things which by humaine frailtie and weakenes, he hath tranſgreſſed, and to place him in light, and in the region of the liuing, in the boſome of Abraham, Iſaac and Iacob, in that place which is farre from ſorow, paine, and mourning. Afterward he expoundeth this prayer, not to be a petition of any thing, which is not already graunted, but an interpretation and declaration of that which God hath already performed, vnto the perſon that is to be buried. For this prayer was not ſaide at the liturgie or celebration of the Lordes ſupper, but at the buriall of the dead. Wherein alſo they vſed an other ceremonie, which was, that the Biſhop and all that were preſent, did ſalute him that was dead, which you may likewiſe referre to Apoſtolike tradition, as diuers other ceremonies, which he reporteth to haue beene vſed, and yet perhaps were neuer vſed in the Church of Rome, certaine it is, that of long time they haue beene out of vſe. Of Tertullianes oblations, I haue ſpoken before: they were kept yeerely, they were kept alſo for the birth of men, but that they were prayers, or vſed at the liturgie, he ſpeaketh no worde. Yet els where he ſpeaketh of prayer for the dead, which I will take to haue proceeded from the ſpirit of Montanus, vntill an ancienter head can be brought forth to auouch it. S. Auguſtin De cur. c. 1. ſaith. We read in the bookes of Maccabes, that ſacrifice was offred for the dead, but although it were no where redde in the olde Scriptures. Yet the auctoritie of the whole Church is not ſmall, which in this part is notable, wherein the praiers of the Prieſt, which are offred vnto the Lord God at his altar, the commendation of the dead, hath his place. Chryſoſtom in 3. ph. more expreſly ſaith. It was not in vaine decreed by the Apoſtles, that in the celebration of the reuerend Myſteries, a memorie ſhould be made of them that are departed &c. Damaſcen of much later time, no meruaile if he follow the ſame error. But ſeeing we proue out of the Scriptures themſelues, and euen by teſtimonie of the ſame ancient fathers, that the ſcriptures doe teach all things neceſſarie to be beleeued and practiſed, we are not to admit any teſtimonies of men, contrarie to the Scriptures, and contrarie to that they themſelues in other places haue affirmed, agreeably to the ſcriptures. But further for the credit of tradition, you ſay, you might adde that the ſcriptures themſelues, be giuen vs by tradition: els we ſhould not, nor could not take them for the infallible word of God, no more then the workes of S. Ignatius S. Clement &c. Here to I anſwere, the bookes are giuen vs by tradition, but the matter written in theſe bookes, doth iuſtifie the tradition to be true, and the ſpirit alſo of God, which is in the elect. Therefore they take not their credit, and auctoritie of tradition onely. And we ought to take them as the infallible word of God, though no tradition did commend them. Yea many thouſandes, that neuer examined by what tradition the bookes were preſerued vnto this time, haue receiued them for the infallible word of God, being taught by the word conteined in them, and the ſpirit of God, bearing witnes to the ſame. Moreouer you ſay the true ſenſe of the ſcriptures (which the Catholikes haue, and Heretikes haue not) remaineth in the Church by tradition. I anſwer, if that ſenſe of the ſcripture, be not proued out of the ſcriptures themſelues (which in places eaſie, do expound what ſoeuer neceſſarie to be knowen is vttered in hard places) it is not the ſenſe of the ſcriptures, neither ought the Catholike Church, vpon any tradition, to receiue ſuch a ſenſe, as can not be proued out of the ſcriptures. Aug. de Doctrin Chriſt. lib. 2. cap. 6. Clemens diſt. 37. cap. Relatum.

Againe you ſay, the Creede is an Apoſtolike tradition, we confeſſe, becauſe the doctrine thereof is grounded vpon the holy ſcriptures. Then you demaund what ſcripture we haue to proue that we muſt accept nothing not expreſly written in ſcriptures. Firſt here is fooliſh ſophiſtry in this word, expreſly. For we do not holde, that we muſt accept nothing, but that which is expreſſed in ſuch forme of wordes in the Scriptures, but whatſoeuer is neither expreſſed in playne termes, neither can be neceſſarily concluded out of the Scriptures, we ought not to accept it. And this we prooue by many plaine teſtimonies of Scripture, and arguments concluding neceſſarily vpon them. A fewe ſhall ſerue for example, ſeeing we doe not handle common places, but anſwere to vaine cauillations. Deut. 4. 2. Deut. 12. 32. Deut. 28. 58. Eſa. 8. 20. Ioan. 20. 31. 2. Tim. 3. 15. 16. 17. And where you ſay you haue to the contrarie plaine Scriptures, it is falſe, for you haue none out of which you can in any lawfull forme of argument, conclude your aſſertion. What your brag is of all the fathers, I haue ſhewed before, as alſo of your euident reaſon, that we muſt beleeue tradition or nothing at all. For our controuerſie is not, whether we muſt beleeue any tradition, but whether we muſt beleeue any tradition that is not conteyned in the Scripture, and by the Scripture proued to be true. But yet we muſt be asked further: If wee were aſſured that ſuch and ſuch things (which be not expreſſed) in Scriptures, were taught and deliuered by word of mouth from the Apoſtles, whether we would beleeue them or no? I anſwere, if theſe things you ſpeake of, be compted as neceſſary to ſaluation, you might as well aske vs, if the skie ſhall fall, whether we ſhall haue great ſtore of larkes or no. For when we are aſſured that the Apoſtles haue taught all things neceſſarie to ſaluation in the Scriptures, how ſhould we be aſſured that they haue omitted any thing, which they taught onely by worde of mouth? But if we might be aſſured that they haue taught contrarie by word of mouth, to that they haue left in writing, namely, of the ſufficiencie of the Scripture, to make vs wiſe vnto ſaluation, without impietie, we are already taught in the Scripture, not only not to beleeue ſuch preaching, but alſo to hold them & that their doctrine accurſed. But that they haue taught ſuch things you ſay, we may be aſſured. Firſt, by ſuch as liued in the Apoſtles daies. For my part, I would beleeue none that liued in their daies, contrarie to their owne writings. Secondly, the teſtimonie of ſo many fathers neere their daies. If the firſt be not ſufficient, much leſſe they that ſucceeded. Thirdly, the whole Churches practiſe and aſſeueration deſcending downe from man to man, to our time, and this for a matter of fact in all reaſonable mens iudgement, you thinke to be a ſufficient proofe. But I thinke it is no reaſon to beleeue any man, or al men, againſt the Apoſtles, who haue teſtified the contrarie in their writings, ſeeing their writings are the worde of God. Notwithſtanding, if we ſhould beleeue other men againſt them, in a matter of fact, whereby they ſhould be conuinced to haue taught by word of mouth, contrarie to any thing, which they haue taught in their writing, yet they themſelues haue taught vs in their writing, to reiect whatſoeuer they or an angell of heauen might bring to the contrarie. But now all your three allegations are falſe, for neither doe you bring any mans teſtimonie that liued in the Apoſtles daies, nor of them that liued neere their time, auouching any tradition neceſſarie to ſaluation, omitted by them, neither the whole practiſe of the Church from their time vnto vs. But you ſay, it is knowen that Ignatius the Apoſtles equall in time, wrote a booke of the Apoſtles traditions, as Euſebius witneſſeth, lib. 3. Eccleſ. hiſt. cap. 30. If it be ſo well knowen as you ſay, that Ignatius wrote ſuch a booke of Apoſtolike traditions, how prooue you, that he wrote of ſuch Apoſtolike traditions as were vttered by word of mouth, and not conteyned in the ſcriptures? And if that were prooued, where is the booke that we might ſee what they were? But in truth Ignatius did write no ſuch booke, but contrariwiſe did teſtifie that the tradition or doctrine of the Apoſtles was expreſſed in writing. And that it is which Euſebius ſaith: He exhorted the Church to hold faſt the tradition of the Apoſtles, ὡς ὑπὲρ ἀσφαλείας καὶ ἐγγράφως ἤδη μαρτυρόμενος, διατυπώσεως ἀναγκαῖον ἡγεῖτο. Which he teſtifying, that for certaintie it was already contayned in writing, thought neceſſarie to be eſtabliſhed or diligently obſerued.

Tertullians booke of preſcription prooueth that all hereſies are later then the truth, and that no hereſie can deduce their errors from the Apoſtles, by continuall ſucceſſion as the Church could doe. Of Apoſtolike tradition not taught in the Scriptures, he ſpeaketh not: but of the doctrine of the Apoſtles firſt by them deliuered, and ſo preſerued in the Church. And as he requireth heretikes, to ſhew their offspring from the Apoſtles, you are neuer able to prooue any point of poperie. Contrariwiſe, whatſoeuer we teach, ſeeing we prooue it out of the Scriptures, there is no queſtion to be made, but that it was the tradition of the Apoſtles.

CHAP. III.

He deſireth their prayers, 4 and inculcateth his precepts and traditions, namely of working quietly for their owne liuing, commanding to excommunicate the diſobedient.

Eph.6,18. Col.4,3. FOr the reſt, brethren, pray for vs, that the word of God may haue courſe and be glorified, as alſo with you:

2 And that we may be deliuered from importunate and naughtie men. for all men haue not faith.

3 But our Lord is faithful, who wil confirme and keepe you from euil.

4 And we haue confidence of you in our Lord, that the things which we command, both you doe, and wil doe.

5 And our Lord direct your hartes in the charitie of God, and patience of Chriſt.

6 And we denounce vnto you, brethren, in the name of our Lord IESVS Chriſt, that you withdrawe your ſelues from euery brother walking inordinately, and not accorcording to the [c] tradition which they haue receiued of vs.

[c] παράδοσιν.

7 For your ſelues know how you ought to imitate vs: for we haue not bene vnquiet among you:

Act.20. 1.Cor.4. 1.Theſ.2. 8 *Neither haue we eaten bread of any man gratis, but in labour and in toyle night and day working, leſt we ſhould burden any of you.

1.Cor.9,6. 9 *Not as though we had not auctoritie: but that we might giue our ſelues a paterne vnto you for to imitate vs.

10 For alſo when we were with you, this we denounced to you, that if any will not worke, ‖neither let him eate.

11 For we haue heard of certain among you that walke vnquietly, working nothing, but curiouſly medling.

12 And to them that be ſuch we denoũce & beſeech them in our Lord IESVS Chriſt, that working with ſilence, they eate their owne bread.

Gal.6,9. 13 But you brethren* faint not wel-doing.

14 And if any ‖obey not our word, ‖note him by an epiſtle:

15 And doe not company with him, that he may be confounded: and do not eſteeme him as an enemie, but admoniſh him as a brother.

16 And the Lord of peace himſelfe giue you

*FVrthermore, brethren, pray ye for vs, that the word of the Lord may haue free paſſage, and be glorified, euen as with you: Eph.6,19. coloſ.4,3.

2 And that we may be deliuered from diſordered and euill men: for all men haue not faith.

3 But the Lord is faithfull, which ſhall ſtabliſh you, and keepe you from euill.

4 And we haue confidence in the Lord to youward, that ye both doe, and wil doe the things which we command you.

5 And the Lord guide your hearts to the loue of God, and to the patient waiting for Chriſt.

6 We commaund you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, that ye withdraw your ſelues from euery brother that walketh inordinately, and not after the inſtitution which he receiued of vs.

*7 For ye your ſelues know * how yee ought to follow vs: * For we behaued not our ſelues inordinately among you,* 1.Cor.11.1. 1.Theſ.4.11.

*8 * Neither tooke we bread of any man for nought: but wrought with labour and ſweate night and day, becauſe we would not be chargeable to any of you.* Acts 20.34. 1.theſ.2 9.

9 Not becauſe we haue not anthoritie, but to make our ſelues an enſample vnto you to follow vs.

10 For when we were with you, this we warned you of, that if any would not worke, the ſame ſhould not eate.

11 For we heare that there are ſome which walke among you inordinately, working not at all, but be buſibodies.

12 Them that are ſuch, we commaund, and exhort by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, that they working in quietneſſe, eate their owne bread.

*13 And ye, * brethren, bee not wearie in well doing.* Galat.6.9.

*14 If any man obey not our doctrine, ſignifie him by an Epiſtle, * and haue no companie with him, that he may be aſhamed.* Matt.18.17. 2.cor.5.9.

15 Yet count him not as an enimie, but warne him as a brother.

16 Now the very Lord of peace, giue you peace alwaies, by all meanes. The Lord be with you all.

17 The

you euerlaſting peace in euery place. Our Lord be with you al.

17 The ſalutation with mine own hand, Paules: which is a ſigne in euery Epiſtle. ſo I write.

18 The grace of our Lord IESVS Chriſt be with you al. Amen.

17 The ſalutation of mee Paul, with mine owne hand, which is the token in euery Epiſtle. So I write.

18 The grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt be with you all, Amen.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. III.

RHEM. 1 6 Tradition.) Here alſo (as is noted before, 2. Theſ. 2. 15.) the aduerſaries in their tranſlations auoyde the word, Tradition, being plaine in the Greeke, leſt themſelues might ſeeme to be noted as men walking inordinately, and not according to Apoſtolical Tradition, as all Schiſmatikes, Heretikes, and rebels to Gods Church doe.

TYLER. 1 Here alſo (as is noted before) we tranſlate according to the true ſenſe of the word, and of the Apoſtle, auoiding the word of tradition, not for any euill ſignification (for it is no more but deliuerie) but becauſe it is taken of you for an vnwritten tradition, when the Apoſtle ſpeaketh expreſly of a doctrine deliuered in writing, and therefore your collection is vaine and childiſh. Your owne vulgar Latin interpretor, 1. Cor. 11. 2. tranſlateth the ſame Greeke word Præcepta, precepts or inſtructions, or commandements, or ordinances, whom our tranſlations folow in this place, as I haue ſhewed before, good reaſon why they ſhould. Calling.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. III.

RHEM. 2 10 Neither let them eate.) *It is not a generall precept or rule, that euery man ſhould liue by his handworke, as the Anabaptiſts argue falſely againſt Gentlemen, and the Caluiniſts apply it peruerſly againſt the vacant life of the Clergie, ſpecially of Monkes and other Religious men. But it is a naturall admonition onely, giuen to ſuch as had not where with to liue of their owne, or any right or good cauſe why to chalenge their finding of others, and to ſuch as vnder the colour of Chriſtian liberti did paſſe their time idlely, curiouſly, vnprofitably, and ſcandalouſly, refuſing to doe ſuch workes as were agreeable to their former calling and bringing vp. Such as theſe, were not tolerable, ſpecially there and then, when the Apoſtles and others (that might lawfully haue liued of the altar and their preaching) yet to disburden their hearers, and for the better aduancement of the Goſpell, wrought for their liuing: * proteſting neuertheles continually, that they might haue done otherwiſe, as well as S. Peter and the reſt did, who wrought not, but were found otherwiſe iuſtly and lawfully, as all ſortes of the Clergie preaching or ſeruing the Church and the altar, be and ought to be, * by the law of God and nature. Whoſe ſpirituall labours farre paſſe all bodily trauailes, where the dueties and function of that vocation be done accordingly: as S. Auguſtine affirmeth of his owne extraordinary paines incident to the Eccleſiaſticall affaires & regiment: in ſteede of which, if the vſe of the Church and his infirmitie would haue permitted it, he wiſheth he might haue laboured with his handes ſome houres of the day. as ſome of the Clergie did euer voluntarily occupy themſelues in teaching, writing, grauing, painting, planting, ſowing, embrodering, or ſuch like ſeemely and innocent labours.* See S. Hierom epiſt. 114. ſeu præfat. in Iob. and in vit. Hilario. The Heretikes cauillation againſt Religious men that worke not, anſwered. 1. Cor. 9. * See S. Cypr. ep. 66. The ſpirituall trauailes of the Clergie. Religious men working with their handes.

And Monkes for the moſt part in the primatiue Church (few of them being Prieſts, and many taken from ſeruile works and handicraftes, yea oftentimes profeſſed of bondmen, made free by their maiſters to enter into religion) were appointed by their Superiours to worke certaine houres of the day, to ſupply the lackes of their Monaſteries: as yet the Religious doe (women ſpecially) in many places, which ſtandeth well with their profeſſion. And S. Auguſtine writeth a whole booke (de opere Monachorum tom. 3.) againſt the errour of certaine diſordred Monkes that abuſed theſe words. Nolite eſſe ſoliciti, Be not carefull, &c. and Reſpicite volatilia cæli, behold the foules of the aire, &c.) to proue that they ſhould not labour at all, but pray onely and commit their finding to God: not onely ſo excuſing their idleneſſe, but preferring themſelues into holineſſe, aboue other their fellowes that did worke, and erroniouſly expounding the ſaid Scriptures for their defence: as they did other Scriptures, to proue they ſhould not be ſhauen after the maner of Monkes. Which letting their heads to grow, he much blameth alſo in them. See li. 2. Retract. c. 21. & de op. Monach. c. 31. and S. Hierome ep. 48. c. 3. of Nonnes cutting their heare. Monkes were ſhauen in the primatiue Church, and Nonnes clipped of their heare.

Where by the way you ſee that the religious were ſhauen euen in S. Auguſtines time, who reprocheth them for their heare, calling them Crinitos, Hearelings, as the Heretikes now contrariwiſe deride them by the word Raſos, Shauelings. *So that there is a great difference betweene the auncient Fathers and the new Proteſtants. And as for hand labours, as S. Auguſtine in the booke alleaged, would not haue Religious folke to refuſe them, where neceſſitie, bodily ſtrength, and the order of the Church or Monaſtery permit or require them: ſo he expreſly writeth, that all cannot nor are not bound to worke, and that whoſoeuer preacheth or miniſtreth the Sacraments to the people or ſerueth the altar (as all Religious men commonly now doe) may chalenge their liuing of them whom they ſerue, and are not bound to worke, * no nor ſuch neither as haue beene brought vp before in ſtate of Gentlemen, and haue giuen away their landes or goods, and made themſelues poore for Chriſtes ſake. Which is to be noted, becauſe the Heretikes affirme the ſaid Scripture and S. Auguſtine to condemne all ſuch for idle perſons.* S. Auguſtines opinion concerning Religious mens working or not working. Li. de op. Monach. c. 21.

TYLER. 2 It is a generall precept, that no man ſhould liue idlely, though all men cannot, or need not worke with their hands. The Clergie ought not alſo to deſerue their liuing by their painefull labor, though it is not neceſſary nor expedient, that they ſhould alwaies worke with their handes. Neither doeth Caluine require any ſuch thing of them that labour in ſtudie and teaching. But againſt the popiſh idle Monkes, Friers, and the reſt of that rable, as alſo againſt idle prieſts, this text is ſtrong, that if they will not labour, they ſhould not be maintained by the ſweat of other mens browes. Neither is this a naturall admonition onely, but a diuine precept, that euery man ſhould eate his owne bread: for otherwiſe he is a theefe that deuoureth other mens bread. You ſay that ſome of the Clergie did euer voluntarily occupy themſelues in teaching, writing, grauing, painting, planting, ſowing, imbrodering, or ſuch like ſeemely and innocent labours. And for this you quote Hierom præfat. in Iob, and in vita Hilarionis. In the former place there is no word of any ſuch matter. But Hierome defending his diligence in correcting the old tranſlations of the Scripture againſt the enuious, ſaith: They that will, let them haue the olde bookes written either in purple parchments, with gold and ſiluer, burthens rather then bookes, drawen out in letters of an inch long, (as they ſay) ſo they will ſuffer me and mine, to haue our poore papers and bookes not ſo beautifull as well corrected. In the other place he ſaith, that Hilarion digged the ground with a mattocke, that the labour of his worke, might double the labour of his faſting, and alſo weauing baskets of bull-ruſhes, he followed the diſcipline of the Monkes of Aegypt, and the ſentence of the Apoſtle. He that doth not worke, let him not eate. So that of ſuch exerciſes as you ſpeake of, here is no word. Which I ſay not as though I thought any of the vnlawful for a miniſter Slander. Idleneſſe of Monkes.

of the Church to exerciſe, either for his recreation, or when he hath leyſure from the neceſſary affaires of his calling: But becauſe you would vnder colour of theſe idle occupations, and ſome of them pernicioufly abuſed, (as in grauing, painting, imbrodering of things to ſerue idolatrie) excuſe the idleneſſe of many of your Clergie, who when they doe nothing that pertaineth to the office of Eccleſiaſticall miniſters, practiſe ſuch matters, to deue away the time onely, as other doe waſte their time in tables, cardes, bowles, or ſuch like paſtimes. But let vs ſee how you excuſe the idleneſſe of your Monkes. The Monkes of the primatiue Church you ſay which labored: were few Prieſtes. And as few of yours doe exerciſe the office of true miniſters of the true Church, but are idle prieſtes, to ſay maſſe and ſing ſeruice, and fill their panches. The olde Monkes you ſay were taken from ſeruile workes and handy craftes, and often times profeſſed of bondmen. Admit ſome were ſo, your votaries for the moſt part are ſuch, as being apt for no good ſeruice in the Church, or common wealth, are thruſt in by their friendes, or elſe driuen for pouertie, to ſeeke an idle and wealthie life in thoſe dennes which you call cloiſters. Thoſe olde Monkes you ſay did worke, as ſome of your Nonnes doe, certaine houres. And what letteth your Monkes to worke, except perhaps their full bellies? S. Auguſtine in deede oppoſed himſelfe againſt the myſterie of iniquitie, working in the idle Monkes of his daies, and did write ſharpely againſt them: euen ſuch as caried about with them, counterfeict reliques of Martyrs, to keepe themſelues from labour. De oper. Monach. cap. 28. But you haue found a high point in S. Auguſtine, that the religious were ſhauen in his time, becauſe thoſe diſorderly Monks were called Criniti, as ſhauen Monkes are called ſhauelings. But Crinitus doth not ſignifie him that hath heare on his head, but him that hath long heare, as you might haue learned out of Virgil calling the Harper, Crinitus Iopas. And S. Auguſtine hath neuer a word of ſhauing, but of polling or clipping the heare ſhort, which he vrgeth not as proper to Monkes, but as common to all Chriſtians, and required by the Apoſtle, 1. Cor. 11. which thoſe Monkes to elude, did ſay ridiculouſly, that they which had gelded themſelues for the kingdome of heauen, were no men, cap. 32. And that there was no neceſſitie or religion in polling the heare very ſhort: S. Hierome teſtifieth of Hilarion, Capillum ſemel in anno die Paſcæ totondit, he polled his head once a yeere on Eaſter day. Yea it is to be prooued, that ſhauing of heads was auoyded as Heathenish ſuperſtition, as S. Hierome ſaith in Ezech. lib. 13. cap. 44. who out of that ſaying of Ezechiel concerning the Prieſts. They ſhall neither ſhaue their heads, nor ſuffer their heare to grow long, but ſhall poll their heads, ſaith, It is clearely ſhewed, that we ought not to haue ſhauen heads as the Prieſts and worſhippers of Iſis and Serapis, nor ſuffer our heare to grow long downe, which is the property of riotous perſons, &c.

You ſee then how well you defend your ſhauelings by the auncient fathers againſt the new Proteſtants. As for Nonnes cutting their heare, S. Hierome ſpeaketh onely of the virgins and widowes in the monaſteries of Ægypt and Syria, who vſed ſo to doe not for any religion, but becauſe they neither entred into any bathes, nor vſed any oyle on their heads, he ſaith they did it, To auoyd litle beaſts which breed betweene the ſkinne and the heare, and other filthineſſe. They were neither ſo ſuperſtitious, nor yet ſo nice and delicate, as popiſh Nonnes. But that all Monkes are not bound to worke and labour, you prooue by S. Auguſtine, that ſuch as preach or miniſter the Sacraments, or ſerue the altar, may chalenge their liuing of them whom they ſerue: and all religious men commonly doe ſo now, you ſay. What ſay you, be all your religious men preachers? no, but they ſerue the altar (you will ſay) becauſe they ſay maſſe. A ſore labour, for which they ſhould be ſpared: but S. Auguſtine meaneth of them that laboured in the miniſterie of the Goſpell, either preaching or miniſtring the Sacraments, or elſe ſtudying to make themſelue fitte for ſuch ſeruice, and ſuch in deede are not bound to labour with their hands, if they may be otherwiſe mainteyned, without iniury and oppreſſion of the poore. But as for them that can doe none other but idole ſeruice in ſaying maſſe, it was neuer in his meaning to priuiledge them from labour, for all had there howers of prayers and ſinging of Pſalmes appointed. As for gentlemen that haue giuen lands and goods, there are not many in your cloyſters, to enioy that priuiledge. And yet euen ſueh ought to exerciſe themſelues in ſtudie or ſome other profitable exerciſe, that their bodies are able to endure, for idleneſſe is not allowed in any man. Therfore in vaine you goe about to excuſe the idlenes of your popiſh Monkes and Clergie, of whom many neither ſtudie, nor are apt for ſtudy, neither preach nor are able to preach, neither ſerue the altar in painefull and profitable labour, but in idle and idolatrous exerciſes.

RHEM. 3 14 Obey not.) Our Paſtours muſt be obeyed, and not onely ſecular Princes. and ſuch as will not be obedient to their ſpirituall gouernours, the Apoſtle (as S. Auguſtine ſaith) giueth order and commandement that they be corrected by correption or admonition. By degradation, excommunication, and other lawfull kindes of puniſhments. Contr. Donatiſt. poſt collat. cap 4. 20. Reade alſo this holy fathers anſwere to ſuch as ſaid, Let our Prelates command vs onely what we ought to doe, and pray for vs that we may doe it: but let them not correct vs. Where he prooueth that Prelates muſt not onely commaund and pray, but puniſh alſo if that be not done which is commaunded. Li. de correp. & grat. c. 3. Eccleſiaſtical cenſures againſt the diſobedient.

FVLKE. 3 Our obedience to our Paſtors is ſuch as ought not to hinder our duetie to ciuill magiſtrates, nor our obedience to ciuill magiſtrates, our dutie toward our ſpirituall paſtors: and each office hath their proper kinde of lawfull correction or puniſhment.

RHEM. 4 14 Note him.) Diſobedient perſons to be excommunicated, and the excommunicated to be ſeparated from the company of other Chriſtians, and the faithfull not to keepe any company or haue conuerſation with excommunicated perſons, neither to be partaker with them in the fault for which they are excommunicated, nor in any other acte of religion or office of life, except caſes of meere neceſſitie and other preſcribed and permitted by the Law: all this is here inſinuated, and that all the Churches cenſures be grounded in Scriptures and examples of the Apoſtles. Not to communicate with excommunicate perſons but in certaine caſes.

FVLKE. 4 This prooueth not that all popiſh cenſures be grounded in the Scriptures and examples of the Apoſtles, but onely ſuch as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of, and the Scripture elſe where alloweth. But that a Prieſt vnder colour of Eccleſiaſtical cenſure ſhould depriue a Prince of his kingdome, and abſolue his ſubiects from the othe of obedience giuen vnto him: it hath no warrant in the word of God, but it is a plaine note of Antichriſtian tyrannie. Againe, where you haue caſes preſcribed, and appointed by your Canon law, wherein men may partake with them that are excommunicated (other then caſes of meere neceſſitie and ſeuerall dutie) You play faſt and looſe at your pleaſure. As alſo Pope Gregory in his laſt bull of diſpenſation, for Papiſts to counterfeict obedience to the Queenes maieſtie, vntill he could find ſome means to diſpatch her of the poſſeſſion of her kingdome, declareth plainly that no conſcience of Eccleſiaſtical cenſure, but reſpect of worldly aduantage, carieth him hether and thether as occaſion moueth him. The Pope preſumpeon.

THE

THE ARGVMENT OF THE FIRST EPISTLE OF S. PAVL TO TIMOTHEE.

AFTER the Epistles to the Churches, now follow his Epistles to particular persons, as to Timothee, to Titus, who were Bishops: and to Philemon.

Of Timothee we reade Act. 16, how S. Paul in his visitation tooke him in his traine at Lystra, circumciding him before, because of the Iewes, he was then a Disciple, that is to say, a Christian man. Afterward the Apostle gaue him holy Orders, and consecrated him Bishop, as he testifieth in both these Epistles vnto him. 1. Tim. 4. v. 14. and 2. Tim. 1. v. 6.

He writeth therefore vnto him as to a Bishop, and him selfe expresseth the scope of his first Epistle, saying: These things I write to thee, that thou maiest know how thou ought'st to conuerse in the house of God, which is the church. 1. Timoth. 3. And so he instructeth him (and in him, al Bishops) how to gouerne both him selfe, and others, and touching himselfe, to be an example and a spectacle to all sortes, in all vertue as touching other, to prohibit all such as goe about to preach otherwise then the Catholike Church hath receiued, and to inculcate to the people the Catholike faith: to preach vnto yong and olde, men and women: to seruants, to the rich, to euery sort conuenientely. With what circumspection to giue orders, and to what persons: for whom to pray: whom to admit to the vow of widowhod &c.

This Epistle was written, as it seemeth, after his first imprisonment in Rome, when he was dismissed and set at libertie. 1. Timoth. 3. and thereupon it is, that he might say here, I hope to come to thee quickly, to wit vnto Ephesus, where * he had desired him to remaine, although in his viage to Hierusalem, before his being at Rome, he said as Miletum to the Clergie of Ephesus, vpon probable feare: And now behold I know, that you shal no more see my face. * 1. Tim. 1. Act. 20. v. 25 38.

Where it was written, it is vncertaine: though it be commonly said, at Laodicia. Which seemeth not, because it is like he was neuer there, as may be gathered by the Epistle to the Colossians, written at Rome in his last trouble, when he was put to death. Col. 2. v. 1.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAVL TO TIMOTHEE.

CHAP. I.

He recommendeth vnto him, to inhibite certaine Iewes who iangled of the Law as though it were contrarie to his preaching.
11 Against whom he auoucheth his ministerie, though he acknowledge his vnworthines.

PAVL an Apostle of IESVS Christ according to the commandement of God our Sauiour, and of Christ IESVS our hope:

2 To Timothee his beloued sonne in the faith. Grace, mercie, and peace from God the father, and from Christ IESVS our Lord.

3 As I desired thee to remaine at Ephesus when I went into Macedonia, that thou shouldest denounce to certaine ‖ not to teach otherwise.

4 Nor to attend ‖ to fables and genealogies hauing no end: which minister ‖ questions rather then the edifying of God which is in faith.

5 ‖ But ‖ the end of the precept is charitie from a pure hart, and ‡ a good conscience, and a faith not feined.

6 From the which things certaine straying, are turned into ' vaine talke,

7 ‖ Desirous to be doctors of the Law, not vnderstanding neither what things they speake, nor of what they affirme.

8 But we know that * the Law is good, if a man vse it lawfully.

9 Knowing this that, ‖ the Law is not made to the iust man, but to the vniust, and disobedient, to the impious and sinners, to the PAule the Apostle of Iesus Christ, by the commission of God our Sauiour, and Lord Iesus Christ which is our hope.

2 *Vnto * Timothie a naturall sonne in the faith: Grace, mercie,* and peace from God our father, and Iesus Christ our Lord. Act. 16. 3.

3 As I besought thee to abide still at Ephesus, when I departed into Macedonia, so doe, that thou commaund some that they teach no other doctrine:

4 Neither giue heed to fables, and endlesse genealogies, which breed questions, more then godly edifying, which is in faith.

5 But the ende of the commandement, is charitie out of a pure hart, and of a good conscience, and of faith vnfeined.

6 From the which things, some hauing erred, haue turned vnto vaine iangling:

7 Coueting to be doctors of the law, not vnderstanding what they speake, neither whereof they affirme.

8 But we know that the law is good, if a man vse it lawfully:

9 Knowing this, that the law is not giuen vnto a righteous man, but vnto the lawlesse and disobedient, to the vngodly, and to sinners, to the vnholy, and vncleane, to murde-

the wicked and contuminate, to killers of fathers and killers of mothers, to murderers,

10 To fornicatours, to lyers with mankinde, to man-stealers, to liers, to periured persons, and what other thing soeuer is contrarie to sound doctrine,

11 Which is according to the Gospel of the glory of the blessed God, which is committed to me.

12 I giue him thanks which hath strengthened me, Christ IESVS our Lord, because he hath esteemed me faithful, putting me in the ministerie.

13 Who before was blasphemous and a persecutor and contumelious. but I obteined the mercie of God because I did it being ignorant in incredulitie.

14 And the grace of our Lord ouerabounded with faith and loue, which is in Christ IESVS.

15 A faithfull saying; and worthie of al acceptation, that Christ IESVS came into this world * to saue sinners, of whom I am the cheefe. Mat.9,13. Mar.2,17.

16 But therefore haue I obtained mercie: that in me first of al Christ IESVS might shew al patience, ᵉ to the informatiō of them that shall beleeue on him vnto life euerlasting. ᵉ πρὸς ὑποτύπωσιν.

17 And to the King of the worlds immortal, inuisible, onely God, honour and glory for euer and euer. Amen.

18 This precept I commend to thee ô Timothee: according to the prophecies going before ᶠ on thee, that thou warre in them a good warfare, ᶠ ἐπὶ σε.

19 Hauing faith and a good conscience, ‡ which certaine repelling, haue made shipwrack about the faith.

12 And I thanke Christ Iesus our Lord, which hath made me strong: for he counted me faithfull, putting me into the ministerie, 13 Who was before a blasphemer, and an oppressour: But yet I obteined mercie: because I did it ignorantly, in vnbeliefe.

14 Neuertheless, the grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant, with faith, and loue, which is in Christ Iesu.

*15 This is a faithfull saying, and by all meanes worthy to be receiued, * that Christ Iesus came into the world to saue sinners, of whom I am chiefe.* Matth.9.3. mark.2,17.

17 Now vnto the King euerlasting, incorruptible, inuisible, vnto God onely wise, be honor and glory for euer and euer. Amen.

18 This commandement commit I vnto thee sonne Timotheus, according to the prophecies which went before vpon thee, that thou in them shouldest fight a good fight:

19 Hauing faith and good conscience, which some hauing put away, as concerning faith, haue made shipwracke.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 1 5 A good conscience.) S. Augustine saith, He that list to haue the hope of heauen let him looke that he haue a good conscience, to haue a good conscience, let him beleeue and worke well. for that he beleeueth, he hath of faith. that he worketh, he hath of charitie. Præfat. in Psa.31.

FVLKE. 1 That he hath charitie, he hath it of faith.) It may be rightly said (saith S. Augustine) that all the commandements of God pertaine to faith onely, if not a dead faith, but that liuing faith which worketh by loue be vnderstood. De fide & oper. cap.22. A liuing faith RHEM. 2 19 Which certaine repelling.) Euill life and no good conscience is often the cause that men fall to Heresie from the faith of the Catholike Church. Againe, this plainely reproueth the Heretikes false doctrine, saying, that no man can fall from the faith that he once truly had.

FVLKE. 2 They that haue not a good conscience with faith, may fall from faith, and make shipwracke of it, but it is not a liuely faith, whereby a man is iustified, but a dead faith, consisting only in knowledge of the principles of religion. But they that are iustified by a liuely faith, can neuer finally fall from it, because, whom God iustifieth, he also glorifieth. Rom.8. A dead faith

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 3 3 Not to teach otherwise.) The proper marke of Heretikes and false preachers, is, to teach otherwise or contrarie to that which they found taught and beleeued generally in the vnitie of the Catholike Church before their time: all doctrine that is odde, singular, new, differing from that which was first planted by the Apostles, and descended downe from them to all nations and ages following without contradiction, being assuredly erroneous. * The Greeke word which the Apostles here vseth, expresseth this point so effectually, that in one compound terme he giueth vs to wit, that an Heretike is nothing els but an after-teacher, or teacher other-wise, which euen it selfe alone is the easiest rule for the simple to discerne a false Prophet or preacher by, specially when an heresie first beginneth. Luther found all Christian nations at rest and peace in one vniforme faith, and all preachers of one voice and doctrine touching the B. Sacrament and other Articles: so that what so euer Teaching otherwise then the doctrine receiued, is a special marke of Heretikes. Luthers teaching otherwise.

euer he taught against that which he found preached and beleeued, must needes be another doctrine, a later doctrine, an after-teaching or teaching-otherwise, and therefore consequently must needes be false. And by this admonition of S. Paul, al Bishops are warned to take heede of such, and specially to prouide that no such odde teachers arise in their dioceses.

FVLKE. 3 The proper marke of Heretikes, is to teach otherwise then the truth, or contrarie to it. But if the teacher finde men intangled with pernitious errours, though they be in neuer so great peace and agreement among themselues, they be not in the vnitie of the Catholike Church. He teacheth otherwise, that teacheth otherwise then he learneth out of the Scripture, and not he that teacheth otherwise, then men be falsely persuaded. Therefore, seeing Luther taught not otherwise then the Prophets and Apostles, his doctrine was not odde, singular, and new, but catholike, ancient and true. Therefore finding many nations seduced by the errors of Antichrist, he called them backe to the true faith, taught by the Apostles, from which the Popish Church had made a manifest reuolt and Apostasie Yet were there before him the persecuted Churches of God in diuers nations that held the same true faith and religion that he preached to the Papists, aswel in England, as in France, Italie, Germanie, Bohemia, Morauia, &c. who with all the Churches of the East and North partes of the would, not agreeing with the Romish Church, by this wise note, must heare nothing taught otherwise then they are persuaded they haue receiued from the Apostles. But so you may haue any vaine shew of reason to reteine your fauorites in popery, you care not what become of the trueth, and of the Catholike Church of Christ.

Heretikes. Ancient faith.

RHEM. 4 4 To fables.) He speaketh specially of the Iewes after-doctrines and humane constitutions, repugnant to the lawes of God, whereof Christ giueth warning Mat. 23. and in other places, which are conteined in their Cabala and Talmud: generally of all heretical doctrines, which in deede, how so euer the simple people be beguiled by them, are nothing but fabulous inuentions, as we may see in the Valentinians, Manichees, and others of olde: by the brethren of loue, Puritans, Anabaptists, and Caluinistes, of our time. For which cause Theodoret entitleth his booke against Heretikes, Hæreticarum fabularum, Of Hereticall fables.

All heretical doctrines fables.

FVLKE. 4 All Popish fables, no lesse then Iewish fables, being contrary to the lawes of God, are after-doctrines, and humane constitutions, conteined in the Popish Cabala, that is, tradition, and in the Popish Talmud, that is, the Canon law or schoole diuinitie, but not in the holy Scripture. But the doctrine of them which is grounded vpon the holy Scriptures, which are the word of truth, cannot be condemned of fables. Contrariwise, poperie that is builded vpon such fables, as neuer more fond were inuented to maintaine heathenish superstition, aboue all other heresies may be intituled hereticall fables. For the fables of the Valentinians and Manichees, though they were monstrous lies, yet they are exceeded by the Popish fables of reliques, of saincts liues, of purgatorie, of feined miracles. Neither any Heretikes or Schismatikes of our time, for fabulous inuentions may be compared unto them.

Popish fables.

RHEM. 5 4 Questions.) Let our louing brethren consider whether these contentious and curious questionings and disputes in religion, which these vnhappy heresies haue ingendred, haue brought forth any increase of good life any deuotion, or edification of faith and religion in our daies, and then shall they easily iudge of the truth of these new opinions, and the ende that will folow of these innouations. In truth all the world now seeth they edifie to Atheisme and no otherwise.

Curious questioning in religion.

FVLKE. 5 Not all questions, but such as pertaine not to the edefying of God, which is by faith, are to be auoyded. Those contentions and questions which haue beene necessarily mooued to builde vp the ruines of the Church in faith, which Antichrist had made in heresie and infidelitie (God be praised) haue brought foorth great increase of good life and true deuotion in them that haue imbraced the faith. The wickednesse that aboundeth is rather discouered by the light in most, then increased in any by comming of the light. But this is condemnation (saith our Sauiour Christ) that men loue darkenesse rather then light, because their workes are euill. Iohn 3.

Questions. Contentions.

RHEM. 6 5 The end Charitie.) Here againe it appeareth, that Charitie is the chiefe of all vertues, and the end, consummation, and perfection of al the law and precepts. and yet the Aduersaries are so fond as to preferre faith before it, yea to exclude it from our iustification. Such obstinacie there is in them that haue once in pride and stubburnnes forsaken the euident truth. Charitie doubtles which is here commended, is iustice it selfe, and the very formal cause of our iustification, as the workes proceeding thereof, be the workes of iustice. Charitas inchoata (saith S. Augustine) inchoata iustitia: Charitas prouecta, prouecta iustitia: Charitas magna, magna iustitia: Charitas perfecta, perfecta iustitia est. Charitie now beginning, is iustice beginning: Charitie growen or increased, is iustice growen or increased: great Charitie is great iustice: perfect Charitie, is perfect iustice. Li. de nat. & grat. c. 70.

Charitie the very formal cause of our iustification.

FVLKE. 6 We giue to Charitie her due commendation, and yet in iustification we must preferre faith before Charitie, because we are iustified by faith without the works of charitie, which are the workes of the law. And whereas it is said, charitie is the end and perfection of the law, we doe acknowledge it to be so, but this charitie is in no man before faith, by which God iustifieth the vngodly man, neither in any iustified man is it so perfect, that he may be iustified thereby through the couenant of the law, therfore the onely hope of all godly men (saith S. Augustine) reposed vnder this burden of corruptible flesh, and in this infirmitie of our life, is that we haue a mediator Iesus Christ the righteous, and he is the propitiation for our sinnes. Ad Bonifac. lib. 3. cap. 5. What obstinate blindnesse then is in the proud hypocriticall Papists, to seeke their iustification in their works? But Charitie you say, is iustice it selfe, and the formall cause of our iustification. If you meant that iustification, by which we are not made iust in the sight of God, but declared to be iust before men, whereof S. Iames speaketh, we would not greatly contend with you. But when you make Charitie the formall cause of our iustification before God, which the Scripture saith to be of the vngodly man, whose sinnes are forgiuen, & therefore without works, what obstinate blindnesse possesseth your proud and stubburne harts, that you will not yeelde to so great and cleare light of truth? As Augustine saith. perfect charitie is perfect iustice: so he saith in the same place, that no man hath perfect charitie in this life. Whereof it followeth, that no man is iustified before God by that charitie which he hath in this life, for by vnperfect iustice we cannot be perfectly iustified, but by faith we are perfectly iustified by the iustice of Christ, which of Gods meere grace is giuen vnto vs. Therefore Charitie, or the works proceeding thereof, are no cause of our iustification before God through Iesus Christ. For since that time (saith S. Augustine) good works beginne since the time we are iustified, we are not iustified because they went before. Ep. 120. Honorato.

Iustification by faith only.

Charitie is not the forme of iustification.

RHEM. 7 7 Desirous to be Doctors.) It is the proper vice both of Iudaical and of Heretical false teachers, to professe knowledge and great skill in the Law and Scriptures, being in deede in the sight of the learned most ignorant of the word of God, not knowing the very principles of Diuinitie, euen to the admiration truely of the learned that reade their bookes or heare them preach.

Heretikes great boasters but vnlearned.

FVLKE. 7 Heretikes are often times learned, but neuer rightly learned in the truth. But boasters of learning were neuer any Heretikes, more then the Papists, which neither in the Scriptures, nor in any other good learning

Papists boasters of learning.

(for the most part) are halfe so well learned as they would be accounted. Whose ignorance may sometime moue admiration, not onely to the learned, but euen to them that haue meane vnderstanding: but their impudencie in lying, slandering, forging, falsifying, wresting, and vaine collecting, and false concluding, passeth all admiration in them that with any indifferent eares and eyes read their bookes, or heare them preach.

RHEM. 9 The law not made to the iust.) By this place and the like, the Libertines of our daies would discharge them selues (whom they count iust) from the obedience of lawes. But the Apostles meaning is that the iust man doth wel, not as compelled by law or for feare of punishment due to the transgressors thereof, but of grace and meere loue toward God and all goodnesse, most willingly, though there were no law to command him. Libertines alleage scripture.

RHEM. 8 22 Deliuered to Satan.) Hymenæus and Alexander are here excommunicated for falling from their faith and teaching heresie: an example vnto Bishops to vse their spirituall power vpon such. In the primitiue Church, corporall affliction through the ministerie of Satan was ioyned to excommunication. Where we see also the diuels readines to inuade them that are cast out by excommunication, from the fellowship of the faithfull, and the supereminent power of Bishops in that case. Whereof S. Hierom (ep. 1. ad Heliod. c. 7.) hath these memorable wordes: God forbid (saith he) I should speake sinistrously of them, who succeeding the Apostles in degree, make Christes body with their holy mouth, by whom we are made Christians: who hauing the keyes of heauen, do after a sort iudge before the day of iudgement: who in sobrietie and chastitie haue the keeping of the spouse of Christ. And a little after, They may deliuer me vp to Satan, to the destruction of my flesh, that the spirit may be saued in the day of our Lord Iesus. And in the old Law whosoeuer was disobedient to the Priests, was either cast out of the campe and so stoned of the people, or laying downe his necke to the sword, expiated his offense by his bloud: but now the disobedient is cut of with the spirituall sword, or being cast out of the Church, is torne by the furious mouth of Diuels. So saith he, Which words would God euery Christian man would weigh. Excommunication of Heretikes, and the effect thereof. The Priests high authoritie of excommunication. The terrible effect thereof.

FVLKE. 8 The Apostles had extraordinary power to afflict the bodies of men that obstinately opposed themselues against the truth: but it was not ordinarie in all them that had power of excommunication in the primitiue Church. But notwithstanding, iust excommunication by them that haue lawfull auctoritie, is greatly to be feared. But when Antichrist sendeth out his thunderbolts against the professors of Gods truth, it is not to be regarded: and experience of these thirtie yeeres in England, hath shewed that God blesseth where the Pope curseth. That which Hierome speaketh of making Christes body with their holy mouth, is of making the Sacrament of Christs body wherewith we are spiritually nourished, as also he saith, that by them we are made Christians, speaking of the administration of the Sacrament of baptisme which we receiue by them, but are made Christians properly by the working of Gods spirit. The Popes excommunication.

CHAP. II.

By his Apostolike authoritie he appointeth publike prayers to be made for all men without exception. 8. also men to pray in all places: 9 and women also in seemely attire. 11 to learne of men, and not to be teachers in any wise, but to seeke saluation by that which to them belongeth.

I Desire therefore first of al things that ‖ obsecrations, prayers, postulations, thankesgiuings be made for al men,

2 For Kings and al that are in preeminence: that wee may leade a quiet and a peaceable life in al pietie and chastitie.

3 For this is good and acceptable before our Sauiour God,

4 ‖ Who will al men to be saued, and to come to the knowledge of the truth,

5 For there is one God, ‖ one also mediatour of God and men, man Christ IESVS:

6 Who gaue him self a redemption for al, whose testimonie in due times is confirmed.

1.Tim.1,11. 7 * Wherein I am appointed a Preacher and an Apostle (I say the truth, I lie not) doctor of the Gentiles in faith and truth.

8 I wil therefore that men pray in euery place: lifting vp pure hands, without anger and altercation.

1.Pet.3,3. 9 In like maner * women also in comely attire: with demureneſſe and sobrietie adorning them selues, not in plaited heare, as gold, or pretious stones, or gorgeous apparell,

10 But that which becommeth women professing pietie by good works.

11 Let a woman learne in silence, with all subiection.

1.Cor.14,34. 12 But * to teach ‖ I permit not vnto a woman, nor to haue dominion ouer the man: but to be in silence.

Gen.1,27.3,6. 13 For * Adam was formed first: then Eue.

14 And

I Exhort you therefore, that first of all prayers, supplications, intercessions, & giuing of thanks be made for all men:

2 For kings, and for all that are in auctoritie, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life, in all godlinesse and honestie.

3 For that is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Sauiour.

4 Who will haue all men to be saued, and to come vnto the knowledge of the truth.

5 For there is one God, and one mediator of God and men, the man Christ Iesus.

6 Who gaue himselfe, a ransome for all, a testimonie in due times:

*7 * Whereunto I am ordeyned a Preacher and an Apostle (I tell the truth in Christ, and lie not) a teacher of the Gentiles in faith, and veritie.* 2.Tim.1,11.

8 I will therefore that the men pray euerie where, lifting vp holy hands without wrath and reasoning.

*9 * Likewise also the women, that they aray themselues in comely apparell, with shamefastnesse and discreete behauiour, not in broided heare, either gold, or pearles, or costly aray:* 2.Pet.3.1.

10 But (that becommeth women professing godlinesse) through good works.

*11 * Let the woman learne in silence with al subiections.* 1.Cor.14.34.

12 But I suffer not a woman to teach, neither to vsurpe authoritie ouer the man, but to be in silence.

*13 * For Adam was first formed, then Eue.* Gen.1.27.

14 And

14 And Adam was not seduced: but the woman being seduced, was in preuarication.

15 Yet she shal be saued by generation of children: if they continue in faith and loue and sanctification with sobrietie.

14 And Adam was not deceiued, but the woman being deceiued, was in the transgression.

15 Notwithstanding, through bearing of children she shal be saued, if they continue in faith and charitie, and holinesse, with modestie.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 1 2 For kings and.) Euen for heathen Kings and Emperours by whom the Church suffereth persecution: much more for al faithful Princes and powers and people both spiritual and temporal, for whom as members of Christes body, and therfore ioining in praier and oblation with the ministers of the Church, the Priestes more properly and particularly offer the holy Sacrifice, See S. Augustine de orig. animæ li. 1. c. 9.

FVLKE. 1 While you would most absurdly ground your popish sacrifice of the Masse, vpon the publike praiers, here prescribed by the Apostle, you shall fall into the same pecke of troubles, that S. Augustine in the place by you quoted, placeth the Pelagian. That for infants which are not baptized, would haue daily oblations, and the sacrifices of the holy Priests continually offred for them. So you, finding in this text, that Heathen kings must be commended in these praiers, and minding in any case to gaine oblation and sacrifice, whereof the Apostle speaketh not, with these praiers, are driuen to say; that the Priestes more properly and particularly offer the holy Sacrafice for Christians then for Heathen Princes, as though it were offred also for them that are not the members of Christ, though not so properly, nor particularly. But S. Augustine sayth: Ecce aliud, &c. Behold an other gulfe, from whence he should neuer come forth, except he repent that he hath sayd. For who would offer the body of Christ, except it be for them that are the members of Christ? Wherefore you must either repent that you say, of the oblation or holy sacrifice offred for them in any sort, or els you must take part with the Pelagian against S. Augustine, which you are ready ynough to doe, but for manners sake.

Sacrifice of the Masse.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 2 1 Obsecrations.) This order of the Apostle S. Augustine (ep 59.) findeth to be fulfilled specially in the holy celebration of the Masse, which hath al these kindes, expressed here in foure diuers wordes pertaining to foure sortes of praiers. the difference whereof he exactly seeketh out of the proper signification and difference of the Greeke words. And he teacheth vs that the first kind of praiers which here be called, obsecrations, are those that the Priest sayth before the consecration: that the second called Praiers be al those which are said in and after the Consecration, and about the Receiuing, including specially the Pater noster, wherewith the whole Church (saith he) in maner endeth that part. as S. Hierom also affirmeth, that Christ taught his Apostles to vse the Pater noster in the Masse. Sic docuit, &c. So taught he his Apostles, that daily in the Sacrifice of his body the faithful should be bold to say, Pater noster &c. Li. 3. Cont. Pelag cap. 5. where he alludeth to the very wordes now vsed in the preface to the said Pater noster in the said Sacrifice, audemus dicere, Pater noster. The third sort called here in the text, Postulations, be those which are vsed after the Communion, as it were for dimissing of the people with benediction, that is, with the Bishops or Priests blessing. Finally the last kinde, which is Thankes-giuing, *concludeth al, * when the Priest and people giue thankes to God for so great a mysterie then offered and receiued. Thus the sayd holy father handleth this text ep. 59. to Paulinus.*

The praiers and petitions in the Masse, deduced out of the Apostles words by S. Augustine, and other Fathers.

PATER NOSTER in the Masse.

S. Epiphanius also insinuateth these wordes of the Apostle to pertaine to the Liturgie or Masse, when he thus writeth to Iohn Bishop of Hierusalem. When we accomplish our praiers after the rite of the holy Mysteries, we pray both for al others, and for thee also. ep. 60. c. 2. Ad Io. Hierosolym. apud Hieronymum. And most of the other fathers expound the foresaid wordes, of publike praiers made by the Priest, which are said in al Liturgies or Masses both Greeke and Latin, for the good estate of al that be in high dignitie, as kings and others. See S. Chrys. hom. 6. in 1. Tim. & S. Ambr. in hunc locum. Prosper de vocat. lib. 1. c. 4.. So exactly doth the practise of the Church agree with the Preceptes of the Apostle and the Scriptures, and so profoundly doe the holy Fathers seeke out the proper sense of the Scriptures, which our Protestants do so prophanely, popularely, and lightly skimme ouer, that they can neither see nor endure the truth.

Prayer in the Masse for kings and other.

FVLKE. 2 S. Augustine professing how hard a matter it is to distinguish betweene these wordes, which the Apostle vseth, endeuoureth to shew this distinction in that which all, or almost all the Church doth frequent, meaning the forme of the celebration of the Lordes Supper. For of the Popish masse he speaketh no word. And if the Apostle had purposed in these wordes to describe the Masse, he hath omitted the chiefe and almost onely essentiall part thereof, which is the Sacrifice of the naturall body and bloud of Christ. Therefore doubtles the Apostle speaketh not of the celebration of the Masse. And that you may know, S. Augustine speaketh of the Communion, and not of the Masse, his wordes are plaine, which you mangle because they haue no shewe for your Masse. We may take precationes, (which you call obsecrationes) which we make in the celebration of the Sacraments, before that which is on the Lordes Table beginneth to be blessed, Orationes, prayers, when that is blessed and sanctified, and broken to be distributed, all which petition the whole Church in a maner concludeth with the Lordes prayer. Then discursing a litle vpon the Greeke worde εὐχὴ he addeth: If more vsually in the Scriptures, a vowe is called ἐυχὴ, except the generall name of prayer, that praier is properly to be vnderstoode, which we make according to a vowe. And all those things are vowed which are offred to God, specially the oblation of the holy altar, in which Sacrament that our greatest vowe is set forth, wherein we vowe that we will abide in Christ, and in the fellowship of the body of Christ, of which thing it is a Sacrament, that we being many, are one bread, one body. Therefore in the sanctification and preparation of the distribution thereof, I thinke the Apostle commaunded properly, that prayers should be made, (which some vnskilfully interpreted adorations,) for that is according to a vowe, Which in the Scriptures is most commonly called εὐχὴ. But interpellationes, or (as your bookes haue postulationes,) are made when the people is blessed. For then the Prelates as Aduocates, doe offer vnto the most mercifull power, those whom they haue by imposition of handes vndertaken, which being ended, and so worthy a Sacrament receiued, thankes giuing concludeth all things. This is the very order of our Communion, which was the order of the celebration of the Communion in S. Augustines time, where no Sacrifice is offered, but of thankes giuing for the death of Christ, and of our selues to continue alwayes in the vnitie of Christes body. Ench. q. in. 1. ad Tim. obsecrationes fiunt pro peccatis preteritis & presentibus. Orationes pro adiiscendis quæ speramus. Postulationes cum pro alijs interuenimus. Gratiarum actiones, cum ea quæ poscimus impetramus, vel certe pro immensis dei beneficijs gratias laudesq; referimus. As for S. Hierome, hath not respect to the celebration of the Lordes Supper, in that he sayth, but by that forme of praier which Christ taught his Apostles, as by other Scriptures, he confuteth the Pelagians. His wordes are these: Sic docuit Apostolos, vt quotidie in corporis illius sacrificio credentes, audeant loqui. So he taught

taught his Apostles, that beleeuing the Sacrifice of his body, they should be bould dailie to speake, Our Father, &c. But according to your fantasie and false interpretation, the Lordes praier should neuer be sayde but at Masse, which Christ taught his Apostles, not vpon presumption of their owne merites, but trusting in the Sacrifice of his death, to vtter daily.

Epiphanius speaketh of publike praiers, vsed in the Liturgie, but without any respect to this text, for any thing that can be gathered of his wordes.

Chrysostome sheweth expresly, that he meaneth not of the Liturgie, but of morning and euening prayers. The faithful (saieth he) doe knowe it, how euery daye in the morning and in the euening, prayers are powred forth to the Lorde, how obsecrations are made by the Church, for all the worlde, for Kinges, and all that are in auctoritie.

S. Ambrose also speaketh generally of the publike prayers of the Church, not referring them to the Liturgie, or celebration of the Lordes Supper.

Prosper sayth, that this law of praier is kept, not onely of the Priestes, but of all the faithful throughout the world, without any relation vnto the Liturgie. And so doe we vnderstand the text, principally of publike prayers, and according to them, of all Christian mens priuate prayers. What cause you had therefore to challenge such profound sense of the Scriptures vnto the Popish Church, and to charge vs with prophane, populer and light skimming them ouer, let all indifferent men iudge, by those your quotations of the holy Fathers. That I speake nothing of your dogges eloquence, where you ascribe vnto the holie Sripture, a certaine prophane, populer, and light skimme, which is gathered of vs, how religiously, learnedly, and grauely, let wise men iudge, and God him selfe reuenge.

RHEM. 3 4 Who wil all men.) The perishing or damnation of men must not be imputed to God, who delighteth not in any mans perdition, but hath prouided a generall medicine and redempion to saue al from perishing that wil accept it, or that haue it applied vnto them by his Sacraments and other meanes by him ordeined, and so would haue al saued by his conditional wil and ordinance: that is, if men wil them selues, by accepting, doing, or hauing done vnto them al things requisite by Gods law. for God vseth not his absolute wil or power towards al in this case. But he that list see the manifold senses (al good and true) that these words may beare, let him see S. Augustine, Ad articul. sibi falso impos. resp. 2. to. 7. Ench. c. 103. Ep. 107. De cor. & grat. c. 15. and S. Damascene li. 2. de orthod. fide c. 29.

God wil no mans perdition, but the saluation of all.

FVLKE. 3 God wil haue men of al sortes to be saued, as wel kings as subiects, but not euery particuler man, according to his secrete counsell: for then al should be saued, and none damned. The iudgements of God, concerning the damnation and reprobation of the wicked, are often secrete, but alwayes iust. Your distinction of Gods conditional will, doth not satisfie the question, nor auoid the difficultie which you would escape, that the damnation of men is not to be imputed to God. For no man hath will to accept the generall medicine that God hath prepared, but those whom God vouchsafeth by his grace, to make willing to accept it. And this is the resolution of S. Augustine, in all those places which you quote, after much debating of the question. That the right sense is, that God will haue some of all sortes saued, not all of euery sort, and especially Ench. c. 103. He will haue all men to be saued, not that there is not any man whom he will not haue to be saued, which would not worke miracles among them, whom he sayth that they would haue repented, if he had done them: but that we vnderstand by all men, all kindes of men, by what difference soeuer they are distributed, kings, priuate men, noble, ignoble, high, low, learned, vnlearned. In his omnibus hominibus quos Deus vult saluos facere non totum omnino genus significatur hominum, sed omnium vniuersitas saluandorum. Ideo autem omnes dicti sunt quia ex omnibus hominibus omnes istos diuina bonitas saluat, idque ex omni gente, conditione, etate, ex omni lingua, ex omni prouincia.

The will of God.

Ex hac ergo regula quæ cœlestibus inserta monstratur oraculis, sic intelligamus omnes homines quos vult deus saluos fieri, vt nouerimus omnes qui saluantur, non nisi ex eius gratuita bonitate saluari. Vt enim quisque saluetur nulla præcedunt humana voluntatis bona merita, sed sola Dei voluntas saluationis est causa. Fulg. de incar. & gratia. cap. 31.

RHEM. 4 5 One mediator) The protestants are to pewish and pitifully blind, that charge the Catholike Church and Catholikes, with making moe Mediators then one, which is Christ our Sauiour, in that they desire the Saincts to pray for them, or to be their patrones, and intercessors before God. We tel them therfore that they vnderstand not what it is to be a Mediator, in this sense that S. Paul taketh the word, and in which it is properly and onely attributed to Christ. For, to be thus a Mediator, is, * by nature to be truely both God and man, to be that one eternall Priest and Redeemer, which by his sacrifice and death vpon the Crosse hath reconciled vs to God, and pased his blood as a ful and sufficient ransom for al our sinnes, him selfe without nede of any redemption, neuer subiect to possibilitie of sinning: againe, to be the singular Aduocate and Patrone of mankind, that by him selfe alone and by his owne merites procureth al grace and mercie to mankind in the sight of his Father, none making any intercession for him, nor giuing any grace or force to his praiers, but he to all: none asking or obteining either grace in this life, or glorie in the next, but by him. In this sort then (as S. Augustine truely sayth, Cont. ep. Parm. li. 2. c. 8.) neither Peter nor Paul, no nor our B. Lady, nor any creature whatsoeuer, can be our Mediatour. The aduersaries thinke to basely of Christes mediatism, if they imagine this to be his onely prerogatiue, to pray for vs, or that we make the Saincts our Mediators in that sort as Christ is, when we desire them to pray for vs. which is so far inferiour to the singular mediation of him, that no Catholike euer can or dare thinke or speake so basely vnto him, as to desire him to pray for vs: but we say, Lord haue mercie vpon vs, Christ haue mercie vpon vs: and not, Christ pray for vs, as we say to our Ladie and the rest. Therefore to inuocate Saincts in that sort as the Catholike Church doth, can not make them our Mediatours as Christ is, whom we must not inuocate in that sort. And as well make we the faithfull yet liuing, our Mediators (by the Aduersaries arguments) when we desire their praiers, as the departed Saincts.

* Aug. li. 9. de Ciu. cap. 15. De fid. ad Pet. c. 2.

How there is but one Mediator, Christ: and what it is to be such a Mediator.

Kyrie eleison. Christe eleison.

The different maner of praying to Christ, and to Saincts.

But now touching the word Mediator, though in that singular sense proper to our Sauiour, it agreeth to no more creature in heauen or earth, yet taken in more large and common sort by the vse of Scriptures, doctors, and vulgar speach, not onely the Saincts, but good men liuing, that pray for vs and helpe vs in the way of saluation, may and arerightly called Mediators. As S. Cyrill li. 12. Thesaur. c. 10. proueth, that Moyses according to the Scriptures and Ieremie aad the Apostles and others be Mediators. Reade his owne wordes, for they plainely refute all the Aduersaries cauillations in this case. And if the name of * Sauiour and Redeemer be in the Scriptures giuen to men, without derogation to him that is in a more excellent and incomparable maner the onely Sauiour of the world: what can they say, why there may not be many Mediators, in an inferiour degree to the onely and singular Mediator? S. Bernard sayth, Opus est Mediatore ad Mediatorem Christum, nec alter nobis vtilior quam Maria, that is, We haue neede of a Mediator to Christ the Mediator, and there is none more for our profite then our Ladie. Bernard. Ser. qui incipit, Signum magnum apparuit &c. post Ser. 5. de Assump. S. Basil also in the same sense, writing to Iulian the Apostata, desireth the mediation of our Ladie, of the Apostles, Prophets, and Martyrs, for procuring of Gods mercie and remission of his sinnes. His words wordes are cited in Conc. Nic. 2. act. 4. pag. 110. & 111. Thus did and thus beleeued al the holy fathers, most agreeably to the Scriptures, and thus must al the children of the Church do, be the Aduersaries neuer so importunate and willfully blinde in these matters.

FVLKE. 4 Here we are noted of too much peuishnes and spitefulnes, because we say, as the Apostle sayth, that we haue one onely Mediatour Iesus Christ. And with many wordes we are taught, as if we were young children, what a Mediatour is, and how Christ is our onely Mediatour, when as in deede there is nothing brought but the common blind distinction, that Christ is our only Mediatour of redemption, but not of intercession. But the Apostle speaketh so plainly of praier and intercession, as that distinction can not serue, therefore reteining it in deede, but being ashamed plainly to vse it, in circumstance of wordes you bring in nothing els but it. And first you tell vs that we vnderstand not, what it is to be a Mediatour, in that sense S. Paule doth attribute it only to Christ. Yes God be thanked, we neede not learne of you. Theophil. Alex. M. Ep. pasch. 1. Et ne vnus quilibet sanctorum, vt à plerisque æstimatum est crederetur, sed ille quem & Paulus ostendere volens scribit. Vnus Deus, Vnus & mediator Dei & hominum, homo Iesus Christus. But yet let vs heare what you take vpon you to teach vs. To be thus a Mediatour, is to be God and man, to be that one eternall Priest and Redeemer, which by his death hath reconciled vs to God, and paied his blood as a full and sufficient ransome for all our sinnes. Praise be to God, we neuer thought otherwise of our Sauiour Christ, and would God you would alwaies abide by this doctrine. For then you would giue ouer your blasphemous priesthood and sacrifice, your Purgatory, and merites of workes, and trust onely in Iesus Christ, our full and perfect Redeemer. Againe, that he is the singular Aduocate and Patrone of mankind, that by him selfe alone, and by his owne merites, procureth all grace and mercie to mankinde in the sight of his Father, none making any intercession for him, nor giuing any grace or force to his praiers, &c. If you would abide by this confession, or did beleeue as you say, you would not make so many Aduocates and Patrones of mankind, as you doe: you would not defend this praier of your Popish Church. Tu per Thome sanguinem, &c. By the blood of Thomas, which for thee he did spend, make vs Christ to climbe whether Thomas did ascend. Nor a thousand other, in which you pray by the merites, by the intercession, by the helpe of this Saint, or that Saint, to be heard, to be holpen, to be saued, &c. As in the Masse of one Apostle. Exaudi Domine, &c. Lord heare thy people, praying with the patronage of thy holy Apostle N. that being alwaies defended by thy aide, they may serue thee with secure deuotion, &c. Beati tui, &c. Lord we rehearsing the solemnities of thy blessed Apostle N. beseech thee, that by his ayde, we may receiue thy benefites, for whom we offer to thee the sacrifices of praise. In the birth of one Martyr. Adesto, &c. Lord be present at our supplications, and by the intercession of thy blessed Martyr N. bestow vpon vs gratiously thy perpetuall mercie. In the Masse of any Confessor. Suscipe, &c. Lord receiue the sacrifice of the reconciliation and praise, which by thy blessed Confessor N. comming betweene, may bring vs to pardon, and may appoint this action into perpetuall grace. In the Masse of S. Rooke, the Postcommunion. Lorde we haue receiued thy holie things, remembring the merites of S. Rooke, performe we beseech thee, that we may both be defended by his faithfull ayde, and also profite by his noble example. Of S. Aldelme. O God, which this daye hast lifted vp thy holye Bishop Aldelme to eternall ioyes, we beseeche thee let thy mercye bring vs thither, by his merites. The conclusion of all these Collects, as of many other such, is that whereof you bragge so often, per Christum Dominum, &c. By Christ our Lorde. So that Christ is your Mediatour, Aduocate, and Patrone, with the patronage, and by the ayde of an Apostle, by the intercession of a Martyr, by the interuention of a Confessor, by the remembraunce of the merites, and by the faithfull ayde of Sainct Rooke, by the merites of Sainct Aldelme, and such like. Where you say, That none of you asketh either grace in this life, or glorye in the next, but by him, the publike prayers of your Antichristian Church, reproueth your falshood: for you aske of Christ him selfe eternall life, by the bloud of Thomas, beside many other requestes that you make vnto Sainctes, without any mediation of Christ, as that horrible blasphemie of yours declareth, to the Virgine Marie, Roga patrem, Iube natum, Intreate the Father, Commaunde thy sonne, or that which Bonauentura a Sainct of yours, vttereth in these wordes: Iure matris impera filio, By the right of a mother, commaunde thy Sonne, Compell God to be mercifull to sinners. With infinite like blasphemies, peruerting the whole Psalter of Dauid, with Te Deum, Benedictus, Quicunque vult, Nunc dimittis, all to the honour, or rather to the dishonor of the Blessed Virgine. But the aduersaries (you say) doe thinke too basely of Christes Mediation, if they imagine this to be his onely prerogatiue, to pray for vs. Surely we doe not imagine, but beeing taught by the Scripture both heere and els where, we knowe moste certainly, that the office of intercession pertayneth vnto Christ, as part of his mediation. For S. Paule speaking here of intercession, sayth, he is our onely Mediatour, to make our praiers acceptable and effectuall. Likewise the Apostle to the Hebrewes, sayth: He liueth alwayes to make intercession for vs. Heb. 7, 25. But why should you imagine, that we thinke so basely of Christes mediation, when we doe at all times, and in all places, acknowledge him to be our onely Mediatour of redemption, saluation, intercession, and striue for nothing more, then that the whole glorie of our saluation, from the beginning to the ende, shoulde be ascribed to him, as to our onely and moste sufficient Mediatour? An other argument of like force it is, that we thinke to basely of Christes mediation, if we imagine, that you make the Sainctes your Mediatours, in that sort as Christ is, when you desire them to pray for you. Although we were deceiued in our imagination, of your making of Sainctes Mediatours, yet it followeth not, that we therefore thinke too basely of the mediation of Christ. But that we be not deceiued, nor doe falsely charge you, you sayd before, that you doe acknowledge Christ in such sort to be our singular Aduocate and Patrone, that by him selfe alone, and by his owne merites, procureth all grace and mercie, &c. and yet your vsuall prayers taken out of your Portuis, doe crie out against you, whereunto I will adde some out of your English Primers, printed in Queene Maries tyme, of like or worse blasphemie. Holie Marie mother, most pure of Virgines all, mother and daughter of the king celestiall. So comfort vs in our desolation, that by the prayer and speciall mediation, we enioye the reward of the heauenly reigne. Againe, Holie mother of God, make thy petition that we may deserue Christ his promission. Againe, We beseech thee of thy pitie, to haue vs in remembrance, and make meanes for vs vnto Christ, that we being supported thorough thy helpe, may deserue to atteine to the kingdome of heauen. Againe, Graunt that thorough the intercession of the Virgine thy mother, we may be deliuered from this present heauines, and haue the fruition of eternall gladnes. Againe, The dolorous compassion of Gods sweete mother, bring vs to the blisse of Almightie God the Father. But no Catholike you say, can or dare thinke or speake so basely vnto Christ, to desire him to pray for vs, but you say, Lord haue mercie vpon vs, Christ haue mercie vpon vs, and not Christ pray for vs, as you say to our Ladie, and the rest. In deede our Sauiour Christ sayeth: after he hath by his mediation and intercession brought vs vnto the fauour of God. In that day you shall aske in my name, and I say not to you, that I will praye to the Father for you, for the Father him selfe loueth you. Ioh. 16, 26. If then the prayer of Christ to God his Father be needeles for vs, what vse is there of the praiers of other creatures? But you woulde haue men thinke, you giue a singular prerogatiue to Christ, when you desire him to haue mercie vpon you, as though you did not likewiſe deſire other creatures to haue mercie vpon you. In the Primer afore ſayde, you praye thus: O thou meeke mother, haue mercie therefore on wretches, for whom thou haddeſt theſe paynes all, ſeeing thy ſonne that vine cluſter preſſed ſore, and from the peſtilence of death eternall, keepe vs by voyding the feinde infernall, and ioyne vs with them which rewarded be with eternall life, ſeeing the deitie. And in your Latine Portuis. Pura, pudica, pia, miſeris miſerere Maria. Virgo parens natum fac nobis propitiatum. Nos precibus matris ſaluet ſapientia Patris. O Marie pure, chaſte, godlie, haue mercie on vs wretches. Virgine mother, make thy ſonne reconciled vnto vs. Let the wiſedome of the Father ſaue vs by the prayers of the mother. Againe, Virgo Deo digna, precantibus eſto benigna. O Virgine worthy of God, be fauourable to vs that pray. Quæ peperit florem, det nobis floris odorem. She that hath brought forth the flower, let her giue vs the ſauour of the flower. Conſerua famulos Virgo Maria tuos. O Virgine Marie, preſerue thy ſeruants. Sanctæ Mariæ merita nos perducant ad regna cæleſtia. Let the merites of S. Marie bring vs to the kingdome of heauen. By theſe, and many other, it is manifeſt, that howſoeuer you woulde hide your blaſphemous interceſſion of Sainctes, the Popiſh Church doth inuocate Sainctes in ſuch ſorte, as Chriſt onely by your owne confeſſion, is to be inuocated. And if you did but onely deſire the prayers of Sainctes departed, as ſome of the auncient Fathers, about foure or fiue hundred yeeres after Chriſt, being deceiued by the myſterie of iniquirie preparing a waye to Antichriſt, beganne to inuocate them, as we deſire the prayers of the Sainctes yet liuing, the errour were much leſſe, but yet, ſeeing we haue no warrant ſo to doe out of the holie Scriptures, and euen that kinde of inuocation, by conſequence, implieth great abſurdities, you were not to be excuſed. To praye one for another in this life, is a duetye of charitie, commended in the Scripture, which wee are bounde to yeelde, and require one for an other, and is nothing iniurious to the mediation of Chriſt. For we doe not ſo deſire the godly lyuing to pray for vs, as that by their worthynes we are brought into the fauour of God, but as the members of the ſame bodye of Chriſt, we ioyne in mutuall prayers, they for vs, and wee for them, as we haue warrant in the holye Scripture. But to praye to Sainctes departed, wee haue no warrant, commaundements, promiſe, or approued example. Wherefore ſuch inuocation is at the leaſt ſuperſtition, and will-worſhippe. Beſide, that it is iniurious to the mediation of Chriſt, and the mercie of God, who without any ſuffrage of others, heareth vs him ſelfe, and hath promiſed to graunt all our requeſtes, made in the name of Ieſus Chriſt his Sonne. Ioan. 16, 23. 1 Ioan 5, 14. Whereupon S. Ambroſe ſayeth. Therefore we are brought into the preſence of kinges by Tribunes, and Countries, becauſe the king is a man, and knoweth not to whome he ought to committe the Common wealth: but to obteine the fauour of God, from whome nothing is hidden, (for hee knoweth the worthyneſſe of all men,) there is no neede of any to intreate for vs, but a deuoute minde. For whereſoeuer ſuch an one ſpeaketh vnto God, he will anſwere him. In ep. ad Rom Cap 1.

Christ our onely Mediator.

So ſayth Chryſoſtome: There is no neede of any Porter, there is no neede of any Miniſter, but ſay thou thy ſelfe, Lord haue mercie vpon me, and God will be preſent, while thou art yet ſpeaking, he will ſay, I am come. Ex variis in Matth. locis, Hom. 17. You ſee therefore, that Suffrages of Sainctes departed, are needles, and yet you are not content with Suffrages or Praiers, but you aſcribe vnto them al that is proper to Chriſt, euen reconciliation vnto God, as in that blaſphemous prayer in the Engliſh Primer it is manifeſt. Haile Queene, mother of mercie, our life, our ſweeteneſſe, our hope, vnto thee we do crie and ſigh, weeping and wailing: Come of therefore our Patroneſſe, caſt vpon vs thy pitifull eyes, and after this our baniſhment, ſhewe to vs the bleſſed fruite of thy wombe. O gate of glory, be for vs a reconciliation vnto the Father, and the Sonne: from the wretched, their faults expell, wipe the ſpottes of ſinnes vncleane &c.

Touching the worde Mediatour, ſo Chriſt may haue that which is proper vnto him, as very God and man, we contend not for the ſound of wordes and ſyllables. S. Cyrill ſayth, that many of the Sainctes vſed the miniſterie of mediation: as Paul him ſelfe, Moſes, Ieremie &c. in this life: but in Heauen onely Chriſt is our Mediatour and Aduocate with the Father and our onely Sauiour, although men in this life be called ſauiours and redeemers, which be miniſters and inſtruments of Gods ſaluation and redemption. Which offices and miniſteries, except you can prooue by the ſcriptures, to be appointed to the Sainctes departed, you ſtriue in vaine for the termes. You haue in deede diſtributed the ſeuerall offices and charges vnto Saincts, and appointed vs ſeuerall Patrones for all purpoſes: as Nations, France to S. Denis, England to S. George, Scotland to S. Andrewe. And diſeaſes, Toothache to S. Apollonia, the peſtilence to S. Rooke, the ague to S. Petronill. Beaſtes, as hoogges to S. Antony, horſes to S. Loye, &c. Degrees of men, and occupations: ſchollers to S. Gregorie, ſouldiers to S. Morris, phyſitians to S. Coſmus and Damianus: paynters to S. Luke, ſhoomakers to S. Criſpin and Criſpianus, for fire S. Agatha, for the ſea S. Nicolas, for corne S. Iodocus, for wine S. Vrbane &c. But by what warrant from God, you are not able to ſhewe out of his worde. But becauſe you are not aſhamed to ſay, that S. Cyrill doeth plainely confute all our cauillations againſt the mediation of ſainctes, I will ſet downe his owne wordes. In the ſame Epiſtle he ſayth: There is one God, and one Mediatour of God and man, euen Ieſus Chriſt, which hath giuen him ſelfe to be a redemption for all. Ieſus Chriſt is the Mediatour of God and men, not onely becauſe he hath reconciled men to God, but alſo becauſe naturally, and ſubſtantially he is God and man in one perſon. For by this meanes God reconciled our nature to himſelfe: for els how ſhould Paul haue called Chriſt our one Mediatour? For many of the ſainctes haue vſed the miniſterie of mediation: and Paul him ſelfe crieth out, we deſire you for Chriſt, be ye reconciled to God. Moſes alſo was a mediatour, for he miniſtred vnto the children of Iſrael the law giuen by God. Alſo bleſſed Ieremie was a mediatour, eſpecially when he cried vnto God. Remember me ſtanding before thee: to ſpeake good things for them. what need many wordes? Euery one of the Prophets were mediatours, and euery one of the Apoſtles: how then is Chriſt the onely mediatour of God and men? but that his mediation is newe and vnheard of in any other: but it is not impertinent alſo, breefely to expreſſe the maner, howe he is a mediatour. That which ioyneth together two things, as a meane or middeſt, is of neceſſity touched of both, and after this maner, diuers things are ioynd together by the middeſt. And Chriſt is mediatour of God and man, becauſe in him being one, God and man, are ioyned together.

Are not theſe wordes very pregnant for you, to make ſo great auant of them? he proueth that onely Chriſt is a mediatour properly, whereas all the Prophets and Apoſtles, while they liued, were miniſters of his mediation, and therefore might vnproperly be called mediatours. But if the name of Sauiour and Redeemer, be in the Scriptures giuen to men without derogation vnto Chriſt, you aske what we can ſay, why there may not be many mediatours in an inferiour degree, to the onely and ſingular mediatour. First wee ſay, there is great difference betweene temporall deliuerance and redemption, in reſpect whereof men are called ſauiours and redeemers in the ſcripture: and the ſpirituall and eternall ſaluation and redemption, which onely Chriſt hath purchaſed vnto vs: and therefore you might as well ſay? Seeing the name of God and Chriſt in the Scriptures is giuen to men, as vnto Princes and Prophetes, why may ye not ſay? that there may bee many Goddes and Chriſtes in an inferiour degree to him, which is onely God and Chriſt, and in the office of the eternall ſaluation and redemption? Secondly wee say, that these which in the Scripture are called sauiours and redeemers, are by God appointed for such temporall deliuerance and redemption: shewe the like appointment in the scriptures of sainctes departed, to bee mediatours of eternall saluation and redemption, in an inferiour degree to Christ, our onely Mediatour and Aduocate, and wee will shake handes with you. But this if you cannot doe, thinke not, but wee haue ynough to say, why Christ shoulde bee our onely Mediatour and Aduocate in Heauen with God his Father, so that hee shall haue no inferiour mediatours and aduocates vnder him.

To Saint Bernards auctoritie, who was more then a thousande yeeres after Christ, I oppose Saint Ambrose his auctoritie, which was seuen hundred yeeres elder then he, who sayeth in the place before rehearsed. Ad Deum suffragatore non est opus. We haue no neede of any Suffragator, (much lesse of a mediatour) vnto God. The place of Basil is forged and counterfect, as many other are, in that Idolatrous Councell, to mainteyne Idolatrie. And this most manifestly, because Iulian the Apostata, being vtterly reuolted from the faith, was not to be praied for: but publike praiers were made by the Church against him, and not for him. Theodoret. Hist. lib 3. chap. 9. and 17.

I will conclude with the wordes of Saint Augustine, contr. Parm. lib. 2. Chap. 8. If the Apostle had saide so: These things haue I written vnto you, that you shoulde not sinne: but if any man sinne, you haue mee a Mediatour with the Father, and I doe by my prayer obteyne pardon for your sinnes (as Parmenianus in a certaine place, placed the Bishop a mediatour betweene the people and God) what good and faithfull Christian coulde abide him? who woulde beholde him as an Apostle of Christ, and not as Antichrist? God giue vs grace therefore still to detest your Antichristian doctrine, and practise of many mediatours, and with the Apostle Paule in this place, to acknowledge our Sauiour Christ to bee our onelie mediatour with God, both of intercession and redemption.

RHEM. 5 Thes. Hom. 9. 1 Tim. 12 I permit not.) *In times of licentiousnes, libertie, and heresie, women are much giuen to reading, disputing, chatting, and iangling of the holy Scriptures, yea and to teach also if they might be permitted. but S. Paul vtterly forbiddeth it, and the * Greeke Doctors vpon this place note that the woman taught but once, that was when after her reasoning with Satan she perswaded her husband to transgression, and so she vndid all mankind. And in the Ecclesiastical writers we finde, that women haue been great promoters of euery sort of heresie (whereof see a notable discourse in S. Hierome ep. ad Ctesiph. cont. Pelag. cap 2.) which they woulde not haue done, if they had according to the Apostles rule, folowed pietie and good workes, and lined in silence and subiection to their husbands.* Women great talkers of Scripture, and promoters of heresie.

FVLKE. 5 Although women are forbidden to teach publikely, yet they ought according to their knowledge to instruct their familie priuately: and God hath sometimes extraordinarily vsed the ministerie of women, to the conuerting of great nations. Neither doth S. Paul reproue women for talking of the scripture, which (so it be with modestie, seemely for the sexe) is greatly commended by S. Hierome in many vertuous women. Yea he exhorteth Læta a godly matrone, to season the tender tongue of her young daughter with sweete Psalmes. Let them seeke her (saith he) in the iourney of this worlde, among the multitude and frequence of her kinsfolkes, but let them finde her no where els, but in the closet of the scriptures, enquiring of the Prophets and Apostles, of her spirituall mariage. And as euill women haue been sometimes promoters of heresie, so haue good women been great promoters of true religion, and haue giuen their life for the testimonie of the truth, as constantly and redily as men. Wherefore that which is a reproch onely of wicked persons, ought not to be abused vnto the contumely of the whole sexe. Women.

Of what qualitie they must be, whom he ordeineth Bishops, 8 and Deacons. 14 and the cause of his writing to be the excellencie of the Catholike Church, and of Christ, who is the obiect of our religion.

A Faithful saying. If a man desire a Bishoppes office, he desireth ‖ a good worke.

2 * It behoueth therefore a Bishop to be irreprehensible, the husband of one wife, sober, wise, comely, chast, a man of hospitalitie, a teacher,

3 Not giuen to wine, no fighter, but modest, no quareler, not couetous,

4 Well ruling his owne house, * hauing his children subiect wth all chastitie.

5 But if a man know not to rule his owne house: how shall he haue care of the Church of God?

6 ‖ Not [b] a Neophyte: lest puffed into pride, he fall into the iudgement of the Deuill.

7 And he must haue also good testimony of them that are without: that he fall not into reproch and the snare of the Deuil.

8 Deacons in like maner [c] chast, not double tonged, not giuen to much wine, not followers of filthie lucre:

10 And let these also be proued first: and so let them minister, hauing no crime.

11 The women in like maner chast, not detracting, sober, faithfull in all things.

12 Let Deacons be the husbands of one wife: which rule well their children, and their houses.

13 For they that haue ministred wel, shal purchase to themselues a good degree, and much confidence in the faith which is in Christ IESVS.

14 These things I write to thee, hoping that I shall come to thee quickly.

15 But if I tary long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to conuerse ‖ in the house of God, which is the CHVRCH of the liuing God, ‖ the piller and ground of trueth.

16 And manifestly it is a great sacrament of pietie, which was manifested in flesh, was iustified in spirite, appeared to Angels, hath beene preached to Gentiles, is beleeued in the world, is assumpted in glory.

10 And let them first be prooued, then let them minister, being blameles.

11 Euen so must their wiues be graue, not euill speakers, sober, faithfull in all things.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. III.

RHEM. 1 A good worke.) Nothing (saith S. Augustine) in this life, and specially in this time, is easier, pleasanter, or more acceptable to men, then the office of a Bishop, Priest, or Deacon, if the thing be done onely for fashion sake and flatteringly: but nothing before God more miserable, more lamentable, more damnable. Againe, There is nothing in this life, and specially at this time, harder, more laborious, or more dangerous, then the office of a Bishop, Priest, or Deacon: but before God nothing more blessed, if they warre in such sort as our Captaine commandeth. August. ep. 148. The great charge, and great merite of Ecclesiastical function.

RHEM. 2 2 A Bishop.) That which is here spoken of a Bishop (because the wordes Bishop and Priest in the new Testament be often taken indifferently for both or either of the twaine, as is noted in an other place) the same is meant of euery Priest also: though the qualities here required, ought to be more singular in the Bishop, then in the Priest, according to the difference of their degrees, dignities, and callings. The Apostle vnder the name of Bishop instructeth priests also.

FVLKE. 2 These qualities ought to be common to all the ministers of the word of God and sacrements, as well to the inferiour priests, as to the highest Bishops: although as euery man is called to higher honour, he ought to endeuer more to excell in vertue.

RHEM. 3 2 Of one wife.) Certaine Bishops of Vigilantius sect (whether vpon false construction of this text, or through the filthinesse of their fleshly lust) would take none to the Cleargie, except they would be maried first, not beleeuing (saith S. Hierome aduers. vigilant. c. 1.) that any single man liueth chastly, shewing how holily they liue them selues, that suspect ill of euery man, and will not giue the Sacrament (of Order) to the Cleargie, vnlesse they see their wiues haue great bellies, and children walling at their mothers breasts. Our Protestants though they be of Vigilantius sect, yet they are scarce come so farre, to commande euery Priest to be maried. Neuertheless they mislike them that will not marrie, so much the worse, and they suspect ill of euery single person in the Church, thinking the gift of chastitie to be very rare among them, and they doe not onely make the state of mariage equall to chast single life, with the Heretike Iouinian, but they are bold to say sometimes, that the Bishop or Priest may doe his duetie and charge better maried then single: expresly against S. Paul, who affirmeth that the vnmaried thinke of the things that belong to God, and that the maried be diuersely distracted and intangled with the world. The Heretikes opinion concerning priests mariage. 1. Cor. 7.

FVLKE. 3 First the text is plaine, that a Bishop, a Priest, or a Deacon, must be the husband of one wife: and therefore, if all the men that euer were, or shall be, should say the contrary, mariage is both lawfull and conuenient for a Bishop, Elder, or Deacon, by the iudgement of the holy Ghost. And it was nothing else but the mysterie of iniquitie, working closely by the subtiltie of Satan that deceiued S. Hierome, and many other auncient godly fathers, in causing them to thinke and write, not so honorably of mariage in the Cleargie, as the holy institution thereof, and the allowance of God vnto all degrees of men doth require. We know nothing by Vigilantius, but that as he was auncient, so he was as good a Catholike as Hierome, & in some points defended the trueth, against superstition, more sincerely then S. Hierome. For that he did write so bitterly against him, it was but his priuate affection, who writ also as bitterly against Ruffinus, and as tauntingly against S. Augustine, both which were as good Catholikes as he himselfe. The Church in his time did not condemne Vigilantius, either of heresie or error, but in some things confirmed his iudgement. For vigils, or watches, against the abuse of which he did write, were soone after abolished, and are not reteyned by the Papistes them selues. But Hierome being in a chafe, because the Bishop of Barcilona suffered Vigilantius to teach in his Church vncontrouled, falleth out also with other godly Bishops that tooke his part, and vpon heare-say chargeth them (how truely God knoweth) that they ordeyned no Deacons, except they first maried wiues, with further surmise of their suspition, against al vnmaried men. Whereas it is more like, that vnderstanding this text rightly, they iudged maried men to be as fit as vnmaried men for the holy ministerie, though it be not necessary that all should be maried, or all vnmaried. And the Greeke Church hath of long time obserued this custome, to ordeyne none before The mariage of ministers of the Church.

before they be maried. But the Protestants (you say) though they command not euery Priest to be maried, yet they mislike them that will not marrie. This is a lewd slander: for without respect of being maried, or vnmaried, so they liue honestly, and teach sincerely, they are liked and allowed of vs. Secondly you say, they suspect ill of euery single person in the Church. Verily the single life of Popish Priestes was so farre from chastitie, that there are few parishes in England, that cannot bring manifest proofe of the incontinencie of one popish Priest or other: but that we do therefore suspect ill of euery single person in the Church, you are able to bring no profe. For we verily perswade our selues, that there be many, both in the ministerie, and amongst the people, that leading a single life without vowe, keepe their bodies in chastitie and continence, a hundred times better, then many popish votaries. That the gift of continencie is rare, the incontinencie of so many as vowed chastitie among you, and so litle performed it, may giue vs iust occasion to thinke so. But where you say we make the state of mariage equall with single life, it is false: for wee acknowledge the prerogatiue of virginitie and single life, which the Apostle teacheth 1. Cor. 7. But we are bold to say alwaies, that the Bishop or Priest, hauing not the gift of continencie, may do his duetie and charge better maried, then vnmaried, which is not any whit against the Apostle, but expressely with him, who affirmeth that it is better for such to marrie then to burne. Otherwise the single hath lesse cause to be distracted and intangled with the world in some respect, then the maried man: and yet in some respect a prudent and faithfull wife, may be occasion, that her husband shoulde be lesse intangled with worldly matters, then if he were vnmaried.

RHEM. 4 The Apostle then, by this place we now treate of, neither commaundeth, nor counseleth, nor wisheth, nor would haue Bishops or Priests to marrie, or such onely to be receiued as haue bene maried: but, that such an one as hath beene married (so it were but once, and that to a virgine,) may be made Bishop or Priest. which is no more then an inhibition that none hauing beene twise maried or being Bigamus, should be admitted to that holy Order. And this exposition onely is agreeable to the practise of the whole Church, the definition of auncient Councels, the doctrine of all the fathers without exception, and the Apostles tradition. Which sense S. Chrysostome wholy followeth vpon the Epistle to Titus (though heere he follow not wholy the same sense) Hom. 2. in Epi. ad Tit S. Ambrose also vpon this place, and most plainely and largely in his 82. Epist. post med. giuing the cause why Bigamus cannot be made a Bishop or Priest, in fine affirmeth, not onely the Apostle but the holy Councel of Nice to haue taken order that none should be receiued into the Cleargie, that were twise maried. S. Hierome ep. 83. ad Oceanum cap. 2. & epi. 2. c. 18 epi. 11. cap. 2. expresly writeth that the Cleargie is made of such as haue had but one wife, at least after Baptisme: for he thought that if one were often maried when he was yet no Christian, he might not withstanding be ordered Bishop or Priest. But S. Ambrose epi. 82. S. Augustine de bono Coniug. cap. 18. S. Innocentius the first ep. 2. cap. 5. 6. tom. 1. Concil. S. Leo ep. S. FVLKE. 4 The text of the Apostle is plaine, that although he commaund not all to be maried, yet hee alloweth any that is maried (so he haue but one wife, with the other qualities heere required) to bee ordeined Bishop, Elder, or Deacon. Neither speaketh he onely of them that haue beene maried, and their wifes perhaps dead, but of them that are presently maried: for the verbe is of the present temps. A bishop must be the husband of one wife, and 1. Tit. 6. if any is or be the husband of one wife, therefore not onely such an one, as hath been maried, but such an one as is maried, may be a Bishop or Priest. The Apostle therefore verse 11. of this Chapter giueth order what maner of women their wiues should be, which your vulgar Latine hath corruptly translated Mulieres, and you for a poore aduantage of your heresie, the women, contrary to the manifest circumstance of the text, and the method of the Apostle, who would not so abruptly, when he had spoken of Bishops and Deacons, which he will haue to be the husbands of one wife, speake generally of women which perteine nothing to Bishops and Deacons, and then returne againe to Deacons. More probably doeth Chrysostome, Theodoret, and other, vnderstand women that were Deaconesses, for the helpe of the poore. But where you say, it is no more but an inhibition, that none hauing been twise maried, or being Bigamus, should be admitted, it is false: for he is the husband of one wife, which hath but one wife at one time, though hee hath beene maried more then once or twise, and although his wife were a widow before he maried her. But this your exposition onely is (as you say) agreeable to the practise of the whole Church, the definition of auncient Councels, and the doctrine of all the fathers without exception. If this proud bragge were true, as it is false, yet the auctoritie of the holy Ghost, is to be preferred before all that you name, whose wordes cannot without manifest violence be restreined to such an exposition.

Therefore Chrystome expoundeth this text against Polygamie, which is the hauing of many wiues at once, saying: Hee saith not this as making a lawe, that none without a wife may bee made a bishop, but appointing a measure of that matter: for it was lawfull for the Iewes to be ioyned in the second mariage, and to haue two wiues at once. But in his exposition vpon Titus, you would haue vs beleeue, that he forgate what he said heere, or in so short time changed his exposition, and agreeth wholy with you, whereas in truth, if you vnderstoode him right, he confirmeth that which he saieth vpon this text. For he speaketh against such lasciuious persons, as after their wife was departed from them, not lawfully diuorced, maried another. For such were not the husbands of one wife: seeing she that departed, or was vniustly put away, remained stil a lawful wife. His wordes are these. For what cause doeth he bring foorth euen such kinde of men? He purposeth vtterly to stoppe the mouthes of Heretikes, which condemne mariage: shewing that mariage is without fault, and is so precious, that with it any man may be preferred, euen to the holy seate of a Bishopricke. Also with this saying he chastiseth vnchaste persons, while he suffereth them not after their second mariage, to be taken to the gouernment of the Church, and the dignitie of a Pastor: for he which is found not to haue kept his benewolence toward his wife, which is gone from him, howe should he be a very good teacher to the Church? nay rather to what crimes shall he not daily be subiect? For ye all knowe, that although by the lawes such second mariages are permitted, yet that thing is open to many accusations: therefore he wil haue the Bishop to giue no occasion to them that are vnder him. Therefore before al things, he setteth downe: if any be without crime, that is, if all his life be voide of reproofe, if no man can reproue his manners. Finally here what our Lord saith: if the light which is in thee be darknes, howe great shall the darknes be?

Heere it is plaine, that hee speaketh of seconde mariage in them, whose first wife was not dead, but gone away ἀπολυθῶσαν. For he that marrieth after his wife is dead, is not to bee charged with lasciuiousnesse, nor to bee accompted vnchaste (and much lesse hee that in his first mariage taketh a widowe,) nor daily subiect to many crimes, or to any crime in respect of his mariage, neither is his life and manners to be reproued, that liueth chastly with his second wife, neither is he to be accompted darkenesse, who after his wife is dead, marieth in the Lord.

Therefore Chrysostome speaketh of such second mariages, as were permitted by the ciuill lawes, after vnlawfull diuorcements, or departures of wiues from their husbands, and not against the mariage of them, that after their wife is departed out of this life, doe marrie another in the feare of God, as it is free by Gods ordinance, and willed by S. Paul to the yoonger sort of widowes, 2. Tim. 5. For such mariage is not open to any iust accusation.

Therefore Chrysostome in both places, is directly contrary to your false and enforced exposition. So is Theodoret vpon this text. The husband of one wife: the preaching then began. And neither the Gentiles did exercise virginitie, nor the Iewes did admit it: for they esteemed the procreation of children to be a blessing. Therefore for as much as at that time, they were not easily to be found, which exercised continencie, he commaundeth of such as had maried wiues, to ordeine them which had honoured temperancie. And concerning that saying, The husband of one wife, I thinke certeine men haue said well. For of olde time both Greekes and Iewes, were wont to bee married with two, three, or more wiues at once. But euen now also when the Emperial lawes forbid to men to marry two wiues at once, they haue to do with concubines and harlots. They haue said therefore, that the holy Apostle saith, That he which dwelleth honestly with one onely wife, is worthy to be ordeined a Bishop. For (say they) he doth not reiect the second mariage, which hath often commanded that it should be vsed. For a woman (saith he) is bound by the same lawe so long as her husband liueth, but if her husband be dead, she is free, that she may marrie to whom she will, onely in the Lord. Againe, I say to the vnmaried, and to the widowes, and ioyning both the states together, he maketh one law for them. In deed if the vow of continencie haue bene made, the second mariage is not in the power of their will. For if he haue thrust away his first wife, and be ioyned to another, he is worthy to be reprehended, and is iustly subiect to accusation. But if force of death hath disioyned his first wife, and (nature vrging) hath compelled him to be ioyned to a second wife, his second mariage is proceeded not of his will, but of casualtie. These things considered, I admit their interpretation which haue so vnderstood the place. S. Hierom also, no great fauourer of mariage, and inclined to that opinion, that he which hath bene twise lawfully maried, should not be ordeined, yet in his Commentarie vpon the Epistle to Titus, agreeth not with your exposition, and declareth that there were many which did interprete these words as we do. His words are these. As touching that he saith: The husband of one wife, we ought to vnderstand it so, that we thinke not that euery one that hath bene but once maried, is better then hee that hath beene twise maried, but that he may exhort vnto one onely mariage and continencie, which can bring forth his owne example in teaching. For put the case, there is one which lost his wife when he was a very yoong man, and being ouercome with the necessitie of his flesh, hath taken the second wife, which within short time after he hath lost also: and after that hath liued continently, and that there is another man which hath had the vse of matrimonie, and his wife euen vntil old age, (as many thinke it a felicitie neuer to haue ceased from the worke of the flesh) which of these two seemeth to be the better, the more chaste, the more continent? Verily, he which in his second mariage was vnhappie, and afterward liued chastly and holily: & not he which by olde age was separated from embracing his wife. Therefore let him not please himselfe which hauing beene but once maried, is chosen: that he is better then euery one that hath bene twise maried. Seeing in him his happines was chosen rather then his will. Some (interpreters) of this place do giue this sence: It was of the Iewish custome (say they) that men had two wiues or more at once, as we read in the old lawe of Abraham and Iacob: and this they will haue to be the Apostles commandement in this place: that he which is to be chosen a bishop, haue not two wiues together at one time. Many (more superstitiously then truely) do thinke that such are not to be chosen in the Priesthod, which when they were Gentiles had one wife, and after they had lost her, (since they were baptized in Christ, haue maried another wife, whereas if this were to bee obserued, they should rather be kept from the bishops office, which following before wandring lust by harlots, haue taken one wife since they were regenerated: and it is much more detestable to haue committed fornications with many, then to haue bene twise maried: for in the one is felicitie of matrimony, in the other lasciniousnes prone to sinne. Theophylact saith vpon this text: Let him be the husband of one wife. He spake this because of the Iewes, for to them was permitted polygamie, that is to ioyne mariage with many together.

By these testimonies you may see, how brasen faced these Rhemistes are, which are not ashamed to say, that this their exposition onely is the doctrine of al the fathers without exception. Whereas it is euident, that Chrysostome, Theodoret, and Theophylact, and by the testimonie of Theodoret and Hierom, many other auncient fathers before them, interpreted this text onely against Polygamie, or many wiues at once. And there is no doubt, but according to their doctrine that so vnderstoode the Scripture, the Church practised in ordeining them that had bene married more then once, and in allowing them that were ordeined to liue chastely with one wife. But S. Ambrose (you say) affirmeth that none may be taken into the Cleargie that haue bene twise married. What then? Other doctors were of another iudgement, as we heard before. And S. Hierom condemneth his opinion plainly of superstition Ep. 82. Where he thinketh, that such as had bene often maried before Baptisme, were excluded. But he affirmeth that the holy Councel of Nice haue taken this order. Yet no such thing appeareth in the Actes of that Councel, and therefore it is like he was deceiued with some false copie. For it is not vnlike that the Councel of Nice was falsified as well in this point, as in the point of the bishop of Romes vsurped auctoritie, which was openly discouered in the Councell of Affrica. And yet S. Ambrose alloweth him that hath a wife to be ordeined bishop or priest: As his words are plaine, He commaundeth that a Bishop be the husband of one wife, not that he excludeth him that is vnmarried, for this is aboue the law of the precept, but that with matrimonial chastitie, he keepe the grace of his washing or baptisme. Neither is he againe inuited to get children by the Apostles auctoritie, for he said, hauing children, or begetting children. By these wordes it appeereth, that S. Ambrose thought it lawful, (though not necessarie) for a bishop to be maried, and also to beget children: and of the same iudgement hee is vpon this text. So doth S. Hierome (although he say the Cleargie is made of them that haue bene but once married,) and alledgeth that the text may be expounded onely against Polygamie, as in his Commentarie vpon the Epistle to Titus, against them that refused him that was maried before baptisme and after. Oceano Also cont. Iou. lib. 1. He confesseth that such maner of men were chosen to bee Priestes, because there were not so many Virgines, as it was necessary to haue Priests. And as concerning that opinion, that hee which had one wife before he was baptized, and an other after, can not be ordeined. He calleth it the heresie of Cain, and disputeth earnestly against it, in that Epistle to Oceanus, neither doth S. Augustine simply allow it: but saith, They did vnderstand the Apostle more sharpely, which thought he was not to be ordeined which had an other wife, being a learner of a Pagane. As for Innocentius, Leo, and Gregory bishops of Rome, in which See the mysterie of iniquitie wrought more strongly then in other places, (and specially toward the reuelation of Antichrist) it is lesse marueile, if they thought any thing more hardly of mariage. And yet Leo Ep. 87. toucheth not the case, nor yet Gregory Lib. 2. Ep. 25. But that such as had bene twise maried, or had maried a widow, should not bee admitted they both affirme. As for the Booke De Ecclesiasticis dogmatibus, falsly bearing the name of S. Au-

S. Augustine, deserueth none answere: and yet the auctour excludeth them that haue had wiues before Baptisme, (or one Concubine) which if it were true, S. Augustine could neuer haue bene made bishop, for he confesseth that he had two concubines Conf. l. 6. c. 15. The reason that Leo alleageth out of the Lawe, to proue that he is Bigamus that hath married a widow (because the high Priest was forbidden to marry a widow) is vnsufficient: for that prohibition extended onely to the high Priest which was a figure of Christ, and perteineth no more vnto the Ministers of the Church in the new Testament, then any other parts of his office, that were peculiar to that state and calling. But that the godly ancient fathers accompted Digamy to bee in them that had two wiues at once, and not in them that had bene twise married. Iustinus martyr is a good witnes: Who Apol. 2. expounding that saying of our Sauiour Christ, He that marieth her that is forsaken committeth adulterie: concludeth, that they which according to mans lawe, δυγαμίας πεπίμενοι, doe marrie two wiues, (by our masters iudgement) are sinners. The auncient Councels also of Neocesarea and Laodicea, putting them to open penance, that were Digami, seeme to meane of such as were maried contrary to Gods law to the second wife, before the first was dead, or else it was a grosse error to punish that which was no sinne, with a whole yeeres or two yeeres open penance.

RHEM. 5 And by these few you may see how shamefully the state of the new heretical Clergie of our time is fallen from the Apostolike and al the fathers practise and doctrine herein. Who do not only take men once or twise maried before, but (which was neuer heard of before in any person or part of the Catholike Church) they marie after they be Bishops or Priests, once, twise, and as often as their lustes require. Whereas it was neuer lawful in Gods Church to marrie after Holy Orders. Neither is there one authentical example thereof in the world. For those whom Nice Councel speaketh, were maried before, and were but tolerated onely to vse their wiues: the fathers in the same Councel prouiding expresly at the same time, that none from thence foorth should marrie after they came to holy Orders, and that according to the auncient tradition of the Church. as Socrates and Sozomenus declare in most plaine wordes. See Suidas in the word Paphnutius. * And in what countrie soeuer they haue beene permitted to haue carnal dealing euen with their wiues whom they had before, it was not according to the exact rule of the Apostles and Churches tradition, by which al that be in holy Orders, should wholy abstaine, not onely from marying, but euen from their wiues before maried. Whereof thus writeth S. Epiphanius hæres. 59. cont. Catharos. The holy preaching of God receiueth not, after Christ, them that marrie againe after their wiues departure, by reason of the great dignitie and honour of Priesthod. And this the holy Church of God obserueth with al sincerity. Yea she doth not receiue the once maried person that yet vseth his wife & begetteth children: but only such an one she taketh to be Deacon, Priest, Bishop, or Subdeacon, as abstaineth from his owne wife, or is a widower, specially where the holy canons be sincerely kept. But thou wilt say vnto me, that in certaine places Priestes, Deacons, and Subdeacons, do yet beget children (belike this holy father neuer heard of any Bishop that did so, and therefore he leaueth out that order which he named with the other in the former part of the sentence) but that is not done according to order and rule, but according to mans minde, which by time slacketh, and for the great multitude (of Christian people) when they were not found sufficient for the ministerie, &c. the rest of his wordes be goodly for that purpose.

FVLKE. 5 We depart neither from the Apostles doctrine, nor from the iudgement of all the auncient fathers (as the places of Chrysostome, Theodoret and Hierom doeth declare,) in vnderstanding this text, of him that is the husband of one wife at one time, though he haue bene married more then once. And seeing the holy Ghost doeth not restraine marriage from them that are ordeined being single, it were Antichristian presumption and the doctrine of diuels, to forbid that which God hath left to bee free. That you say it was neuer lawfull in Gods Church to marrie after Holy orders, and that there is not one authenticall example thereof in the world, it is a lewde and impudent lie. For to omit so many of your Popish Church, which by the Popes dispensation haue maried after Holy orders, the Councel of Ancyra. can. 9. or 10. alloweth them, that when they are ordeined Deacons, doe professe that they must haue wiues to marrie after orders taken, and to continue in the Ministerie. But of this matter see more the Notes vpon S. Matthew the 8. Sect. 3. where also is handled the iudgement of the Nicene Councel, according to the sentence of Paphnutius, and the saying of Epiphanius. Sauing that you say, Epiphanius neuer heard that any Bishop did beget children, as he did of other inferiour degrees, Where I might answere you, that vnder the name of Priestes, Bishops are also conteined, as you confesse sometimes. And Athanasius ad Dracontium affirmeth, That hee knewe many Bishops not married, and contrariwise Monks made fathers of children, as on the other side you may see (saith he) Bishops fathers of children, and Monks that haue not sought libertie of generation, and that Clearkes haue drunke wine, and Monkes haue fasted. For so it is lawfull and after this maner it shall not be prohibited, but les euery man striue in what he will, &c.

Where you say Eusebius saith, that such as be consecrated to the holy Ministery, should abstaine wholy from their wiues which they had before, it is false. His words are these, According to the lawes of the new Testament, begetting of children is not altogither forbidden, although that which is not vnlike to the auncient godly men, is appointed. For the word saith, that a Bishop must be the husband of one wife, but also it is meete that euen they which are consecrated and exercised about the Ministery of God, do abstaine from thence forth, from matrimoniall companie. He speaketh therefore of that which he iudged conuenient, but not necessarie. S. Hierom was too much addicted to extol continencie and virginitie, and therefore (otherwise then the truth requireth) he pronounceth of the Apostles: yet can he not deny, but many Bishops and Priestes in his time were married, and did also vse the act of mariage (although they abstained at some times) as appeereth by the former place in his Apologie. For in the other place he saith, Bishops, Priestes, and Deacons, are chosen either virgines or widowes, vel certe post sacerdotium in æternum pudici, Or at least after Priesthood for euer chaste, We may well vnderstand him, of them that liue chastly in marriage. For els it would follow, that married men were impudici, vnchast & filthy, which crime of reproch of marriage, Hierom in that Apologie laboureth to wipe away from himselfe. But Socrates lib. 5. cap. 22. Saith that in his time many Bishops (leuen in the time that they were Bishops) begat children of their lawfull wiues. S. Augustine de adulterinis coniugijs, saith, That some which were constrained to be of the Cleargie, did continue continent by Gods helpe to the end: He saith not, that they were bound vnto it by the Law of God. For of S. Peter, the auctour of those questions vnder his name saith. It is knowen that he had a wife, and the begetting of children did not hinder him to take the Primacie among the Apostles, Quæstion. ext. vtroq; mixt. Q. 102.

The rest that you say, of our complaining of these necessities, &c. and thinking there is no life without women, is vaine & slanderous. We know Gods gifts are diuers, & that to some he giueth the gift of continencie, but not to all. And therefore to whom God giueth not the gift, we say it is impossible for him to haue it. But if it be a matter so easie, and the gift in euery mans power that will seeke it (as you defend) the more inexcusable is the Popish Cleargie, if they keepe not continencie which also they haue vowed or professed, as it is well knowen how ill they kept it in times past, and it is to be doubted they would doe little better hereafter, if they were setled in such ease and wealth, as they haue bene. Slander.

But to proue that it was generally the Churches order from the Apostles time, that the Cleargie should abstaine from mariage, you wil ve to see. First Tertullian in his first booke to his wife, where no such matter is, although as he had at that time embraced the heresie of Montanus, he saith, That second mariages were against the discipline of the Church, and the prescript of the Apostle, which suffereth not them that haue beene twise maried to be Bishops. But the Catholike Church in his time alowed them to be Bishops, that were twise maried, and that doth Tertullian obiect vnto the Catholikes as a crime, in his booke de Monogamia. Whereby we may see, from how good a spring that interpretation of this text proceeded, that a Bishop might not bee one that had bene twise maried, euen from the filthie sinke of Montanus the heretike. And yet it is not like, that Tertullian abstained from his wife, because he vseth not that for a reason, to perswade her from second mariage, that she had experience by long abstinence in mariage, that she had strength to refraine from mariage, if she woulde vse it. The booke de singularitate clericorum, (though it be none of S. Cyprians workes) yet doth it not shew, that it was the generall order of the Church from the Apostles, that the Ministers of the Church should be vnmaried or abstaine from their wiues, but that such as had promised openly to abstaine from lawfull mariage, should not secretly keepe company with strange women. Therefore he saith Num. 4. Why hath he taken a woman to him, which hath despised to marry a wife. Again, He hath giuen to me a suspected plee, which hath refused a lawful wife, and taken an vnlawful woman. The third Canon of the Councell of Nice likewise, forbiddeth all strange women to dwell with the Ministers of the Church, but not their owne wiues. The Councel of Neocesarea c. 1. deposeth him, that marrieth after he is a Priest from his dignitie, but if he commit fornication or adulterie, casteth him out of the church, & putteth to open penance among lay men. This prouincial constitution (though not grounded vpon the word of God) yet declareth that they compted it a breach of mans lawe, for a Priest to marrie, and therefore deposed him from his order, (but no sinne against God,) therefore they neuer diuorced him nor put him to penance, as they did them that committed fornication or adulterie. But that a married man might be ordeined and reteine his wife, it appeereth in the same Councel Can. 8. The Councel of Ancyra before that, Can. 10. decreed in these wordes. The Deacons (whosoeuer) at the time of their ordination, protested saying: they would haue wiues, and that they could not conteine, if afterward they come to be maried, let them remaine in the Ministerie, because the Bishop hath giuen them licence. But so many as held their peace, and receiued imposition of hands, professing continencie, if after they come to be maried, ought to cease from the Ministerie. This Canon doth shew most manifestly, that abstinence from mariage was not exacted of any, but such as would willingly professe it, and that it was lawful to marrie euen after holy orders taken, contrary to your stoute assertion. Therefore whatsoeuer was decreed in the later Councels, can be no preiudice to the ancient truth, and practise of the Church. And seeing the Councel of Nice the first, allowed the Cleargie to cõtinue with their wiues, you are not able to shew a contrary decree more ancient then that vngodly and vnlearned Epistle of Siricius Bishop of Rome, to the bishops of Affrica, In which he would proue, that the Apostle (although he said a bishop must be the husband of one wife,) yet would haue him to abstaine from his wife, because he saith else where: They that are in the flesh cannot please God. According to which decretal Epistle, that Councel of Carthage 2. was held, if al be not counterfect, the Epistle Rescript. Councel & al, as there is good cause to suspect. The Councels of Toletane 2. & Orleans 3. being of much later time, and neerer to the open reuelation of Antichrist, it is lesse marueile if they drew neerer to the prohibition of mariage, and the Canon 3. of Toledo which you quote, forbiddeth the cohabitation only of strange women: and in the first Canon, these Spanish bishops allow maried men to be taken into the Ministerie, so they promise to renounce the workes of the flesh. The Councell of Orleans deposeth them that abstein not from their owne wiues, yet leaueth them in the communion of Lay men. And howsoeuer the mysterie of iniquitie wrought sometimes more closely, sometimes more openly, yet Gregory the 7. otherwise called Hildebrand, placed by the diuel, whom as a Necromancer he serued in the Antichristian See of Rome about 500. yeeres agoe, was the first that by cruel decrees of excommunication, deprined the Ministers of the Church of their lawfull wiues, and compelled the Cleargie to the vowe of continencie. For vntill his time, and in his time, many of the Priestes were married, though by hypocrisie of other Popes and Prelates, they were sometimes molested, yet neuer vtterly prohibited or diuorced from them. But whosoeuer was auctour of the Cleargies single life by prohibition of mariage, it is certaine he learned it of the diuel, as the Apostle testifieth in the beginning of the next Chapter.

RHEM. 6 6 Not a Neophyte.) That which is spoken here properly and principally of the newly baptized (for so the word Neophyte doth signifie) the fathers extend also to al such as be but newly retired from prophane occupations, ciuil gouernment, warfare, None rashly to be admitted to the Cleargie.

warfare, or secular studies, of whom good trial must bee taken before they ought to bee preferred to the high dignitie of Bishop or Priest, though for some special prerogatiue and excellencie, it hath in certaine persons been otherwise, as in S. Ambrose and some other notable men. Tertullian (li. de præscript.) noteth heretikes for their lightnes in admitting euery one without discretion to the Clergie. Their Orders (saith he) are rash, light, inconstant: now they place Neophytes, then secular men, then our apostates, that they may tie them by glorie and preferment, Whom with the truth they can not. No where may a man sooner prosper and come forward, then in the campe of rebels, where to be onely, is to deserue much. therefore one to day a Bishop, to morow somewhat els: to day a Deacon, to morow Lector, that is a Reader: to day a Priest, to morow a lay man. for to lay men also they enioyne the functions of Priestes. And S. Hierom ep. 83. ad Oceanum c. 4. saith of such, Yesterday a Catechumene or newly conuerted, to day a Bishop: yesterday in the theatre, to day in the Church: at night in the place of games and maisteries. in the morning at the altar: a while ago a great patron of stageplaiers, now a consecrator of holy virgins. And in another place, Out of the bosome of Plato and Aristophanes they are chosen to a Bishoprike, whose care is, not how to sucke out the marow out of the Scriptures, but howe to sooth the peoples eares with florishing declamations. Dialog. cont. Lucifer. c. 5. Heretikes admit al sorts without exception.

FVLKE. 6 There was neuer heresie that hath admitted more vnworthy persons into their Cleargie, then the heresie of Papistrie hath, not onely into inferiour places, but euen into their bishops See, and vnto the See of Rome it selfe, as their owne histories do testifie of many.

RHEM. 7 8 Deacons.) Vnder the name of Deacons are here conteined Subdeacons, as before vnder the name of Bishop, Priests also were comprehended. for to these foure pertaineth the Apostles precept and order touching one wife, and touching continencie and chastitie, as by the alleaged Councels and fathers (namely by the words of S. Epiphanius) doth appeare: for they only be in holy Orders, as serving by their proper function about the Altar and the B. Sacrament: in respect wherof, the lawe of chastitie pertaineth to them, and not to the foure inferior Orders of Acolyti, Exorcistæ, Lectores, and Ostiarij. Who neither by precept nor vow be bound to perpetual chastitie, as the others of the holy and high Orders be bound, both by precept and promis or solemne assent made when they tooke Subdeaconship. Leo ep. 41. c. 3. Greg. l. 1. ep. 42. The three holy orders, onely bound to chastitie. The 4. inferior orders not bound to chastitie.

Al these degrees and orders to haue been euer since Christes time in the Church of God, it might be prooued by al antiquitie. but for as much as the Apostles purpose is not here to recken vp al the Ecclesiastical Hierarchie, it needs not to be treated of in this place. But we wish the learned to reade the 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. chapters of the 4. Councel of Carthage, whereas S. Augustine was present: where they shall see the expresse callings, offices, and maner of ordring or creating all the saide sortes, and shall wel perceiue these things to be most ancient and venerable. Let them reade also Eusebius historie, the 35. Chapter of the 6. booke. where for al these orders he reciteth Cornelius epistle to Fabius, concerning Nouatus. Likewise S. Cyprian in many places, namely ep. 55. nu. 1. where see the notes vpon the same. S. Hier. ep. 2. c. 6. Of Subdeacon there is mention in S. Augustine. ep. 74. & ep. 20. de epistolis 22. in edit. Paris. S. Epiph. hær. 59. S. Cyprian ep. 24. S. Ignatius ep. 9. ad Antiochenos, and in the 43. canon of the Apostles. Conc. Tolet. 2. can. 1. & 3. Conc. Laodicen can. 21. Epist. Epiph. apud Hiero. 60. c. 1. Al the seuen orders auncient, euen from Christ and the Apostles time.

FVLKE. 7 S. Paul knew no subdeacons, and therefore you cannot comprehend them vnder his rule of Deacons. As for Bishops and Elders differ not in order, but onely in office of gouernment. Pope Vrbane in the decrees confesseth that the primitiue Church had onely these two orders of Deacons and Priestes. Dist. 60. cap. Nullus in Episcopatum, whereupon it may appeere howe true hee saide that tould your fiue orders to haue beene euer since Christes time in the Church, it might be prooued by all antiquitie. In the auncient times there is mention of vnder Deacons, which were assigned to some inferiour seruice in that Ministerie, for an orderly and quiet distribution of those duties, and so might be comprehended vnder the names of Deacons. But your subdeacons are a distinct degree and order from Deacons, nothing intermedling with the dutie and office of Deacons, therefore nothing like the auncient vnder Deacons, but in name onely. As for those other offices which you name Acoluthi, were yoong men appointed to attend vpon the Bishop, for their learning to bee instructed by his doctrine and example, that afterward they might be meete to be called vnto the same office. The Exorcistes were such as had the gift to cast out deuils in them that were possessed and were called Energumeni. The readers were such as were appointed to read the text of the Scriptures openly in the Church. The doore keepers were assigned to keepe the entric of the Church, that no heathen person or excommunicate shoulde enter, but such onely as were admitted either to the hearing of the word, or to the prayers, or to the Sacraments. They had also Singers, labourers, confessours, diggers of sextons and Catechistes, as it appeareth by Ignatius ad Antioch. Canon. Apost. 42. Hierom de septem ordinibus. Cyprian Epist. 24. Euseb. lib. 6. cap. 3. So that if you will haue all offices that were in the Primitiue Church, to be seuerall orders of the Ministerie, you must haue at the lest tenne or eleuen orders. That continencie was required by auncient Canons of Subdeacons also, you ground much vpon Epiphanius, who cõfesseth that it was not generally obserued in his time. It sufficeth vs to haue only those orders & degrees as necessarie, which the holy Scripture hath commended. Other variable offices as euery Church shal thinke expedient for their gouernment and discipline, they may institute or retaine. As for the ridiculous offices that are appointed to these Popish orders, to carie tapers, cruettes, flieflaps, and to driue dogges out of the Church, it is superfluous to write, the auncient Primitiue Church knewe no such vanities. And where as you sende the learned to the Councel of Carthage 4. Where you say S. Augustine was present, the learned may iustly suspect the credit of that Councel, which is wholy patched out of the popes decrees. Where Gratian saith, that Pope Zosimus was present by his deputies Dist. 93. c. Diaconi ita &c. when by the date that is giuen to it, Zosimus was not yet Pope, but either Siritius or Anastasius. Subdeacons. Popish orders. Clemens. const. lib. 8. cap. 15. Lamb. lib. 4. d. 24. Aureum speculum Papæ. Iuo part. 6.

Againe, many auncient copies of these decrees, haue no title of the Councell of Carthage, but of auncient Statutes of the Church. And therefore those decrees, seeme to bee of a later making then S. Augustines time. And yet in those decrees, the Priest receiueth no power to consecrate, nor to offer for the quicke and the dead, the Deacon is ordained to minister. The subdeacon hath a platter, and a cuppe, a cruse of water and a towell deliuered vnto him, to signifie that he is appointed to serue the tables, as Act. 6. Not a popish patten, chalice, cruet and other toies for the masse. The Acoluth hath a candlestick and waxe candle deliuered, that hee may knowe hee is bounde to light the candles of the Church, which came together in time of persecution in the night season. In remembrance whereof, euen in time of peace, they kept the Vigils and night watches, when they lighted waxe candels as S. Hierom saith to driue away the darkenes of the night, and not in the day time, as S. Vigilantius obiected, except perhaps superstitious women, which had more zeale then knowledge, as Hierom said, lighted them in the day time also. The Acoluth also, had a little cruse deliuered vnto him, to serue wine for the communion. But admit they were then decreed, the popish church, hath not for many yeres had any vse of these inferior orders: for a poore Sexten, or a boy, doth most commonly execute all those offices, which in those degrees are appointed to Acolytes, Ostiaries, Readers:

yea most commonly, they supplie the office of Deacons and Subdeacons also, when masse is said. Neither do they ordaine Acolytes to do their office, nor any of the rest, but as preparatories to Priesthood. These offices therefore in the church are needles.

RHEM. 8 15 In the house of God.) Al the world being Gods, yet the Church onely is his house, the Rector or Ruler whereof at this day. (saith S. Ambrose vpon this place) is Damasus. Where let our louing brethren note well, howe clere a case it was then, that the Pope of Rome was not the Gouernour onely of one particular See, but of Christes whole house, which is the Vniuersall Church, whose Rector this day is Gregorie the thirteenth.

S. Ambrose calleth the B. of Rome rector of the whole church.

FVLKE. 8 S. Ambrose saith not, that Damasus was the ruler of the whole Church or Gouernour of the vniuersall Church, but a ruler and a gouernour of the church of God, as euery other catholike Bishop was, and is by S. Paules wordes Act. 20. 28. If you aske why then doth he name Damasus alone, rather then any other Bishop? I answere, because the Arrianes had greatly ouerrunne, not onely the East churches, but also the West churches, and the citie of Rome it selfe in the time of Liberius and Felix, that were his predecessors, and the Catholikes began to recouer their strength againe, vnder Damasus: to distinguish the Catholike Church from the Arrians hereticall companions, whereof there were great troopes still remayning, he nameth Damasus Bishop of Rome, a Gouernour of the Church of God, being the chiefe Bishop of Italy, with whom hee did communicate. As also Hierom against the Arrians, professeth that he would ioyne with Damasus, because he maintained the truth of Christes diuinitie, against those heretikes in the East. Wherefore the saying of Ambrose, doth no more allow Gregorie the thirteenth, to be a catholike Bishop, then Liberius, Honorius, Vigilius, or any other that were found to be heretikes, much lesse make him the Gouernour of the vniuersall church of Christ.

The Popes authoritie.

RHEM. 9 15 The piller of truth.) This place pincheth al heretikes wonderfully, and so it euer did, and therefore they oppose themselues directly against the very letter and confessed sense of the same, that is, cleane contrary to the Apostle, some saying, the Church to be lost or hidden: some to be fallen away from Christ these many ages: some, to be driuen to a corner onely of the world: some, that it is become a stewes and the seate of Antichrist: lastly the Protestants most plainly and directly, that it may and doth erre, and hath shamefully erred for many hundred yeeres together. And they say, herein like themselues, and for the credite of their owne doctrine, which cannot be true in very deede, except the Church erre, euen the Church of Christ, which is here called the house of the liuing God.

The heretikes say directly contrary to the Apostle, that the Church is not the piller of truth.

But the Church which is the house of God, whose Rector (saith S. Ambrose) in his time was Damasus, and now Gregorie the thirteenth, and in the Apostles time S. Peter, is the piller of truth, the establishment of all veritie: therefore it cannot erre. It hath the spirit of God to lead it into al truth til the worlds end: therefore it cannot erre. It is builded vpon a rocke, hel gates shal not preuaile against it: therefore it cannot erre. Christ is in it till the end of the world, he hath placed in it apostles, Doctors, Pastors, and Rulers, to the consummation and ful perfection of the whole body, that in the meane time we be not caried about with euery blast of doctrine: therefore it cannot erre. He hath praied for it, that it be sanctified in veritie, that the faith of the chiefe Gouernour thereof faile not: it is his house, his spouse, his body, his lotte, kingdome and inheritance, giuen him in this world: he loueth it as his owne flesh, and it cannot be diuorced or seperated from him: therefore it cannot erre. The new Testament, Scriptures, Sacraments, and sacrifice cannot be changed, being the euerlasting dowrie of the Church, continued and neuer rightly occupied in any other Church but in this our Catholike Church: therefore it cannot erre. And therefore al those points of doctrine, faith, and worship, which the Arrians, Manichees, Protestants, Anabaptists, other old or new Heretikes, vntruely thinke to be errors in the Church, be no errors indeede but themselues most shamefully are deceiued, and so shall be still, til they enter againe into this house of God, which is the piller and ground of al truth: that is to say, not onely it selfe free from al error in faith and religion, but the piller and stay to leane vnto in al doubtes of doctrine, and to stand vpon against al heresies and errors that il times yeeld, without which there can be no certainty nor securitie. And therefore the holy Apostles, and Councels of Nice and Constantinople, made it an article of our Creede, to beleeue the CATHOLIKE & APOSTOLIKE CHVRCH Which is, not onely to acknowledge that there is such a Church, as heretikes falsely saie: but that that which is called the Catholike Church, and knowen so to be, and communicateth with the See Apostolike, is the Church: and that we must beleeue, heare, and obey the same, as the touchstone, piller, and firmament of truth. For, all this is comprised in that principle, I beleeue the Catholike church. And therefore the Councel of Nice said, I beleeue in the Church, that is, I beleeue and trust the same in al thinges.

That the church is the piller of truth and can not erre, is proued by many reasons. Io. 14. 16. Mat. 16. Mat. 28. Eph. 4. Io. 17. Luc. 22. Psal. 2. Eph. 5.

The meaning of this article, I beleeue the Cath. Church. πιστεύω εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν.

FVLKE. 9 As this place pincheth all heretikes generally, so the Papists most specially. For seeing the Church of God, is the piller and stay of truth, and the Romish church is not the piller and stay of truth, but an enimie thereof, and a bolster out of lies, fables, heresies, and the doctrine of deuils, it followeth inuincibly, that the Romish Church is not the Church of God. The minor hath bene often prooued, both by preaching, disputing and writing, and is sufficiently declared in this answere. But howe I praie you doth it pinch vs, as you imagine? You saie we oppose our selues directly against the very letter and confessed sense of the same. Howe proue you that? you answere, some say the Church, is lost or hidden who saith the Church is lost? sure I am, none of vs euer said so, some perhaps haue saide, that the true Church hath beene hidden from the eies of the worlde, and of Antichrist, that hath persecuted her. But heereof I trow it followeth not (except it bee in Rhemish Logike) that therefore the Church is not the piller of truth. Secondly you adde, that some saie the Church is fallen away from Christ these many ages, and that is become a stewes, and the seate of Antichrist. We say so indeed of the Romish Church, yet Christ hath, and had his Church and chaste spouse all this while, which is the piller of truth. Yet againe, you say, that some of vs say, it is driuen to a corner onely of the worlde. But you say vntruely, for we beleeue that it is, and alwaies was, dispersed in many nations, although in respect of the persecution, it is saide, to be driuen into the wildernesse. Apocalyp. 12. And you acknowledge, when Antichrist commeth, it shall be driuen into corners, and great streights, yet for al that, it was alwaies, and euer shall be, the piller and stay of truth.

Lastly, you charge the Protestants to say, that it may and doth erre, and hath shamefully erred, for many hundred yeres togither, We say not that the Catholike Church of Christ, but the Church of Rome hath shamefully and damnablie erred, these many hundred yeeres. Wee say also, that the true Church of Christ, may erre, and haue spots in doctrine as wel as in conuersation, yet not in any point necessary vnto saluation. And for all that be the piller and stay of truth, for it is no otherwise called the stay and piller of truth then it is called the chast virgin without spot or wrinckle. Eph. 5. 27. Hauing neither perfection of truth, nor of holines in her members in this worlde, but so farre foorth as she is directed by the worde of God, and his holy spirite, which ministreth alwaies sufficient truth, to conduct them to the state of perfection, after this life. The Church therefore is the piller & stay of truth, because al truth necessary to saluation, is to be found no where in the worlde, but in the Church of God, and this truth is alwaies to be found, in euery Church of God, though it bee not alwaies pure, from all contagion of errors. For S. Paul instructeth Timothee, how to behaue himselfe in the the Church of Epheſus, or any other part of the Catholike Church of Chriſt, that it may continue the houſe, or Church of God, whoſe office is to be a piller and ſtay of truth that is learned out of Gods worde. He doth not ſend Timothee to learne of the Church, whereof he was appointed a teacher, but he willeth Timothee, to teach the Church out of the worde of God that it might ſtill continue the piller and ſtay of truth. For if any particular Church, as the Church of Rome, contemne the worde of God and preſume to decree both without it and againſt it, euen in articles of faith neceſſarie to ſaluation, it ceſſeth to be the Church of God and the piller and ſtay of truth, which is become an harlot, a mainteiner of hereſie and falſe doctrine. But let vs heare what maine reaſon, you haue to proone, that the Church can not erre in any thing.

Firſt I denie that the popiſh Church is that, whereof Peter was a gouernour in his time, and Damaſus in the time of S. Ambroſe. That principle you muſt proone, for by begging, you ſhall neuer haue it graunted.

Secondly you ſay, the Church is the piller of truth, ergo it can not erre. I denie your argument. for Peter was a piller of truth, yet he erred, and was reproued by S. Paul. Gal. 2. 11. I haue ſhewed, how it can not erre, and how it may erre, being the piller and ſtay of truth builded vpon the foundation of the Apoſtles and prophets Ieſus Chriſt being the corner ſtone Ephe. 2. 20. &c.

Thirdly, you ſay, it hath the ſpirite of God to leade it into all truth, to the ende of the worlde: Ergo it can not erre, I denie this argument. Euerie one of Gods elect, after they be called, haue the ſpirit of truth by Chriſtes prayer Iohn 17. vnto their liues ende, yet they may erre, though not finally to their damnation.

Fourthly, to be briefe, although the gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt the Church of Chriſt, to ouerthow it, it followeth not, that it cannot erre, for euery true Chriſtian is builded vpon the ſame rocke, which is Chriſt, and the gates of hell ſhall not preuaile, to condemne any true Chriſtian.

Fiftly, he hath placed Apoſtles, Prophets, Euangeliſtes, Paſtors, and Doctors, to the full conſummation and perfection of the whole bodie, and euerie member, that we be not carried about &c. Ergo the Church can not erre. You may as well conclude, that no true member of the Church can erre. And certaine it is, that the doctrine of the Apoſtles, Prophets, and Euangeliſtes, if it be continually taught, by the paſtors and teachers, is ſufficient to preſerue the Church, and euerie true member from all errour in doctrine. But if they decline from the rule of the Apoſtles, Prophets, and Euangeliſtes, they erre themſelues, and deceiue as many as follow them. S. Paul therefore declareth, what an excellent benefit Chriſt hath beſtowed on his Church, and euerie true member thereof, he doth not aſſure either the whole Church, or euerie member thereof of truth alwaies, if they neglect the benefite: although he otherwiſe aſſure his whole bodie and euerie part thereof, neuer to be deceiued finally vnto deſtruction. But ſeeing there bee ſome paſtors, and teachers, builders of the Church, that builde wodde, haye, and ſtubble vpon the foundation Chriſt, which ſhall be ſaued, although they looſe their combuſtible worke, the Church by ſuch builders, may be brought into errror, but holding ſtill the foundation, can neuer be depriued of ſaluation. 1. Cor. 3.

Sixtly, he hath prayed for the Church, that it be ſanctified in the veritie, Ergo it cannot erre. The concluſion followeth not: for the Church is ſanctified in the truth, and yet may erre, as it doth ſinne in euerie member thereof. And the ſame prayer, pertaineth to euerie one of Gods elect, which may erre, and yet be ſanctified in the truth, not to erre vnto damnation Ioan. 17. 20.

Seuenthly, he hath prayed, that the faith of the chiefe gouernour thereof faile not. Ergo it can not erre. This is the worſt of all the arguments, that went before, for there is no part of it true. Chriſt prayed not for Peter, as chiefe gouernour of the Church, but as one of the true members thereof, that his faith ſhould not faile, which praier he made generally, for euery member of the Church, which yet may erre, and ſo did Peter Gal. 2. That ſpeciall prayer for Peter, was that his faith ſhould not faile in that greeuous tentation, when he was ſifted by Sathan: and cannot be applied to euerie one that is Biſhop, where Peter taught, except you will ſay, that euery one of them muſt deny Chriſt, as Peter did.

Eightly, the Church is Chriſt houſe, his ſpouſe, his bodie, his lotte, kingdome and inheritance: this is confeſſed, but hereof it followeth no more, that it is free from all error, then that it is free from all ſpot of ſinne while it is a ſtranger on the earth.

Ninthly, he loueth it as his owne fleſh, and it cannot be diuorced or ſeparated from him. Ergo it cannot erre. we may as well conclude, that ſeeing he loueth euery one of his members, as his owne fleſh, for we are euerie one, members of his body, of his fleſh, & of his bones, which cannot be ſeparated from him. Eph. 5. 30. Therefore none of his members, can erre, or ſinne. And yet it is certaine, that none of his members, can erre or ſinne vnto eternall damnation, though euery error and ſinne, deſerue damnation.

Laſtly, the new Teſtament, ſcriptures, ſacraments and ſacrifice, can not be changed, being the euerlaſting dowrie of the Church, continued and neuer rightly occupied in any other Church, but in your Popiſh Church, which you falſely call the Catholike Church, Ergo the Church, and that the Popiſh Church, can not erre. As great learning as you would bethought to haue, you ſhew it little, in ſetting the worſt argument in the laſt place. For beſide the inconſequens of the argument, common with all the reſt of his brethren that went before, it conteyneth no leſſe, then three moſt impudent and beggerly petitions of the whole matter in controuerſie.

Firſt, that the new Teſtament, the ſcriptures, ſacraments and ſacrifice of Chriſt, haue beene euer continued, in the right vſe of them, in the popiſh Church.

Secondly, that no other Church hath rightly occupied them. And thirdly, that the popiſh Church is the Catholike Church of Chriſt. But if all theſe three principles were admitted as true, which while heauen and earth ſtandeth ſhall neuer be graunted of vs, nor prooued by you, yet the concluſion is falſe. For that the true Catholike Church though ſhe haue the right vſe of the new Teſtament, ſcriptures, ſacraments, and ſacrifice of Chriſt to the ſaluation of all her members, yet ſhe hath not alwaies, ſuch perfection of knowledge, but that ſhe may be deceiued in ſome things.

Your generall concluſion is yet more impudent, that all thoſe points of doctrine, faith, and worſhip, that any man thinketh to be errors in the popiſh Church, be no errors, although they be neuer ſo contrarie to the new Teſtament, which is Gods couenant of remiſſion of ſinnes freely, and iuſtification by grace, and faith onely, as your doctrines of merites, and ſatisfaction, though they be neuer ſo contrarie to the ſcriptures, as the Communion vnder one kinde, worſhipping of Images and other creatures, prohibition of mariage and meates meates &c. and though they ouerthrowe the onely sacrifice of Christes death and sufficiencie thereof, by the daily sacrifice of the Masse, and the Popes pardons a pœna & culpa &c. But the faithfull knowe, that Church to be the piller and stay of truth, which is builded vpon the foundation of the Prophets and the Apostles, Iesus Christ being the head corner stone, therefore they seeke the Church in the holy scriptures, which are the monuments of the Prophets and the Apostles, and a perfect testimonie of Christ, and so leane to the Church, as the Church leaneth to the scripture, and to Christ, the onely foundation thereof. For none other thing did the Apostles, and the Nicene councell meane, when they taught vs, to beleeue and confesse, the Catholike and Apostolike Church of Christ. For neither the Apostles, nor the Nicene councell, had auctoritie, to make any articles of faith, but to teach and declare, those points of doctrine that the spirit of truth, hath reuealed, to be necessarie articles of faith vnto saluation. But it sufficeth not you, that we confesse that there is a Catholike Church, whereof euerie Christian man must be a childe and member, that he may be saued. But further your require, that we acknowledge: that that which is called the Catholike Church, and knowen so to be, and communicateth with the See Apostolike, is the Church, Here is as great vncertaintie as before: for all companies of heretikes, call them selues the Catholike Church. But how shall they be knowen to be the Catholike Church, and to communicate with the See Apostolike, but by their consent in doctrine with the holy scriptures, and writings of the Apostles? The Churches of the East, call and count themselues the Catholike Church, as much as the Papistes, and communicate with the Apostolike Sees of Ierusalem, Antioch, Alexandria, Constantinople, Ephesus, where the Apostles Peter, Andrew, Iames, and Iohn and Marke the Euangelist haue sitten, and their doctrine in many points is more agreeable to the writings of the Apostles, and Euangelists, then the Papistes, yet the Papistes, will not acknowledge them to be the Catholike Churrch, therefore this rule is no part of our Creede, at leastwise, it can not sufficiently direct vs, to the Catholike Church, which is the article of our faith. Your second rule: (that we must heare, beleeue, and obey the same, as the touchstone, piller, and firmament of truth) so it be rightly vnderstood, we doe yeeld vnto, but this Church is that, which is builded vpon the foundation of the prophets and Apostles whose doctrine is comprehended in the holy scriptures, and is therefore called the piller and stay of truth, because it teacheth this true doctrine. Therefore what Church is the piller of truth, which we must heare, beleeue, and obey: we must know onely out of the Scriptures, and so farre acknowledge it to the piller of truth, as it teacheth nothing, but that which is conteined in the word of truth, declared in the Scriptures. And thus the ancient fathers, haue taught vs to knowe the Church. Chrysostome opere imperf. in Math. Hom. 24. Augustine de vnitate Ecclesiæ c. 3. & 16. Neither did the Nicene Creede say, I beleeue in the Catholike Church, otherwise then we say in the Apostles Creede, I beleeue the Catholike Church, whereof see more at large. Rom. 10. sect. 4.

RHEM. 10 Neither can the Heretikes escape the fleeing from the knowen visible Church, to the hid congregation or companie of the Predestinate. For that is that a false phantasticall apprehension of Wickleffe and his followers. The companie of the Predestinate maketh not any one Societie among them selues, many of them being yet vnborne, and many yet Infidels and heretikes, and therefore be not of the one house of God which is here called, the piller of truth. And those of the Predestinate that be already of the Church, make not a seuerall company from the knowen Catholike Church, but are baptized, housseled, taught, they liue and die in the common Catholike visible Church, or els they can neither receiue Sacramentes, nor saluation. S. Paul instructeth not Timothee howe to teach, preach, correct, and conuerse in the inuisible societie of the Predestinate, but in the visible house of God. So that it must needes bee the visible Church which can not erre.

It is the visible Church that is the piller of truth and can not erre.

FVLKE. 10 We seeke not to flye from the knowen visible Church, to the hid congregation of the predestinate. For that which is knowen to be the visible Church, is a part of the Catholike Church, which we beleeue to the congregation of all the true members of Christ: although in the externall societie of the visible Church: there be manie, that be not of the Church: as S. Iohn saith, they went from vs, but they were none of vs. Iohn. 2. 19.

What the catholike Church is.

Where you denie the congregation of the predestinate, to be the Catholike Church of Christ, you flatlye denie an article of our faith. For S. Augustine expounding the articles of the Creede saith: that the Church is here to bee taken for the whole, and not for that parte onely, which is a stranger vpon earth. Encher. ad Laurent. c. 56. and oftentimes in his writings affirmeth, the Catholike Church to consist of all the predestinate, which are the members of Christs mysticall bodie, and that no wicked men perteine vnto it, but onely the good, holy, and iust. De baptism lib. 6. c. 3. De ciuitat. Dei lib. 21. c. 25. In Ioan. Tr. 45. Whereby you may see, this is not a newe and false apprehension of Wickleffe, but an olde and true iudgement of the Catholike Church. But let vs heare what arguments you haue against this apprehension. First you say, the company of the predestinate maketh not any one societie among themselues, many of them being yet vnborne, and many yet Infidels and Heretikes, and therefore be not of the one house of God, which is here called the piller of truth. If you had said, many are not yet in the visible Church, which be vnborne or vncalled, we would haue agreed with you, but yet all the elect, be of the Catholike Church, which in the time appointed, shall be borne and called. For is not that the Catholike Church for which Christ dyed, that he might sanctifie it and clense it by the lauer of water in his worde? Ephes. 5. 25. 26. Or did he deliuer him selfe, onely for that societie of men which then were borne, and called? was it not the spouse of Christ, for which hee deliuered himselfe, and which not many lines before, you affirmed to be the piller of truth, which could not errre? Certaine it is, Christ died for the companie of the predestinate, therefore the companie of the predestinate are the Church and spouse of Christ, therefore the house of God and the piller of trueth, yet most properly called the piller of trueth in respect of that parte, which is a straunger heere vpon the earth.

But those of the predestinate (you say) that be alreadie of the Church, make no seuerall companie, from the knowen Catholike Church. Therefore he speaketh of the visible Church. I answere, that those of the predestinate, that bee alreadie not onely of the Church, but also in the visible Church, are the same with the Church militant, which is a part of the Catholike Church, and euen that is the piller of trueth in this worlde. I vnderstande visible, that which may be seene of men, not that which is alwaies in the sight of the wicked, nor euer in the sight of euerie godly man. You say further S. Paul instructeth not Timothee, how to teach, preach, correct, and conuerse, in the inuisible societie of the predestinate, but in the visible house of God. I say hee instructeth him, how to behaue him selfe in both, not as in two Churches, but in one, seeing that the later, is but a parte of the former. For else the predestinate, that are yet vnborne and vncalled, should not perteine to his charge. In trueth, he teacheth him howe to behaue him selfe in the Church of Ephesus, or any other particular congregation, gation, whereof he should haue charge, and not in the Catholike Church, as it is dispersed in the whole world. For euerie particular Church is euen as the whole, the piller and stay of truth, so long as it continueth the true Church of Christ. Yet this difference obserued, that any visible particular Church, may cesse to be in this or that place, but the Catholike Church, shall neuer be remoued out of the world, before the ende of the world.

RHEM. 11 If any make further question, how it can be that any companie or societie of men (as the Church is) can be voide of error in faith, seeing all men may erre: he must know that it is not by nature, but by priuiledge of Christs presence, of the Holy Ghostes assistance, of our Lordes promise and prayer. See S. Augustine vpon these wordes of the 118. Psalme Conc. 13. Ne auferas de ore meo verbum veritatis vsquequaque. Where he hath goodly speaches of this matter. For the same purpose also these wordes of Lactantius are verie notable. It is the Catholike Church onely, that keepeth the true worship of God, this is the fountaine of truth, this the house of faith, this the Temple of God: whether if any man enter not, or from which if any man goe out, he is an aliene and stranger from the hope of euerlasting life and saluation. No man must by obstinate contention flatter him selfe, for it standeth vpon life and saluation &c. S. Cyprian saieth, The Church neuer departeth from that which she once hath knowen. Ep. 55. ad Cornel. nu. 3. S. Irenæus saith. That the Apostles haue laid vp in the Church as in a rich treasurie, all truth. And, that she keepeth with most sincere diligence, the Apostles faith and preaching. lib. 3. c. 4. & 40. & lib. 1. c. 3. It were an infinite thing to recite all that the fathers say of this matter, all counting it a most pernitious absurditie to affirme, that the Church of Christ may erre in religion.

Whence the Church hath this priuiledge neuer to erre. S. Augustine. Lactantius. S. Cyprian. S. Irenæus.

FVLKE. 11 The presence of Christ by his spirit, according to his promise and prayers as I haue shewed before, perteineth to euerie true member of Christes bodie, as much as to the whole. Yet euerie member may erre of infirmitie though not finally vnto damnation. S. Augustine in that place quoted, saith nothing to prooue that the Church can not erre, but that the worde of truth, which he calleth confession of Christ, shall neuer faile from the whole Church, though many members denie Christ, for a time, as Peter did, and afterward repent. Not altogither out of the mouth of Peter (saith he) in whom was a figure of the Church, the word of truth was taken away, who although for an hower, he had denied Christ, being troubled through feare, yet by weeping, he was restored, and by confessing was crowned.

The Church may erre.

But these words of Lactantius, are verie notable, and yet they note nothing for your purpose, that the Church can not erre in any thing, but in matters necessare to eternall life and saluation, which we graunt. Notwithstanding for as much as all singuler companies of heretikes (as he saith) thinke them selues chiefely to be Christians, and the Catholike Church. We must beware that wee take not a Church falsely called Catholike in stead of the true Church.

The note to discerne the true Church which Lactantius giueth is obscure, but if it bee compared with that which he writeth in the former part of the Chapter, that Christ and his Embassadoures, haue giuen precepts that are certaine, which we ought alwaies to keepe, which are their heauenly writings, from which all heresies haue swarued, it may be better vnderstoode. We must know (saith he) that to be the true Catholike Church, in which is the confession and repentance, which wholesomely cureth the sinues and wounds whereunto the frailtie of the flesh is subiect. His meaning is, that the true Catholike Church teacheth the way of saluation by true faith, and remission of sinnes according to the Scriptures. De vera sapientia, lib. 4. cap. 30. Cyprian saith: That they which departed from Christ, doe perish through their owne fault, but the Church which beleeueth in Christ, and which holdeth that which she hath once knowen, doth neuer depart from him altogether, and that they are the Church which continue in the house of God. Whereby the Reader may see, how without shame you falsifie S. Cyprian to make a colour for your assertion, which Cyprian doth nothing fauour.

Irenæus speaketh of the true doctrine of saluation, which the Church in his time did embrace, hauing testimonie (as he saith) of the Prophets and Apostles, lib. 3. cap. 40. which we confesse to be true of the Catholike Church in all ages, yet may the Church erre in matters of lesse moment, as in his time in the contention about the celebration of Easter: in S. Augustines time, in giuing the communion to infantes, &c. Neither is there any of the auncient fathers that holdeth it a pernitious absurditie, to affirme that the Church of Christ can erre in any point of religion, keeping still the foundation. S. Augustine sayeth expressely, the determination of the former generall Councels, (which represent the whole Church) may oftentimes be reformed by the latter, when by any experiment of things, that is opened, which before was shut, and knowen which before was vnknowen. De bapt. cont. Don. lib. 2. cap. 2. Therefore in some things euen the whole Church visible on earth may erre. Neither is there any of the auncient fathers that expound this text, that gather thereof that the Church can not erre.

Chrysostome saith: The Church is not as that temple of the Iewes, for this containeth faith and preaching, for trueth is the piller and stay of the Church. By which wordes you see, in what sense the Church is the piller of truth, namely, because the trueth is preached in it, which is the piller and stay of the Church it selfe. For trueth maketh the Church, the Church maketh not truth. Theodoret saith: He calleth the house of God and the Church of those that haue beleeued. And those he called the piller and stay of truth. For being founded on the Rocke, they remaine stedfast and vnmooueable, and in the things themselues doe preach the truth of doctrine. The world (saith Ambrose) is in preuarication, troubled with diuers errors. Therefore it is necessarie that it be said, that there is the house of God, and the truth, where he is feared according to his owne will, while his seruants professe that of him, which he hath vouchsafed to teach, &c. The Church is therefore the piller and staie of truth, because it is her duetie to professe the truth as Christ hath taught it, which assisted by his grace, she doth sufficiently to the saluation of all her children, though not so perfectly alwaies, but that in some point she may be deceiued.

CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 1 He prophecieth that certaine should depart from the Catholike faith, willing Timothee therefore to inculcate to the people those articles of the said faith. 7 Item to exercise himselfe in spirituall exercise. 12 to get authoritie by example of good life, 13 to studie, to teach, to increase in the grace giuen him by holy orders.

FVLKE. 1 S. Paul speaketh of an extraordinarie grace which Timothee receiued by imposition of hands, as many other did, which tooke not holy orders.

AND

2.Tim.3. 3.Pet.3. Iude v.18. AND the Spirite manifestly saith, that in the last times certaine ‖ shall depart from the faith attending to spirits of errour, and doctrines of diuels,

2 Speaking lies in hypocrisie, and hauing their conscience seared,

3 ‖ Forbidding to marrie, to abstaine meates which God created to receiue with thanksgiuing for the faithful, and them that haue knowen the truth.

4 For ‡ euery creature of God is good, and nothing to be reiected that is receiued ‖ with thanksgiuing.

5 For it is ‖ sanctified by the word of God and prayer.

9 These things proposing to the brethren, thou shalt be a good minister of Christ IESVS, nourished in the words of the faith and the good doctrine which thou hast attained vnto.

7 But foolish and old wiues fables auoid: and exercise thy selfe to pietie.

1.Tim.1,4. Tit.3,9. 8 For ‡ corporal exercise is profitable to litle: but pietie is profitable to al things: hauing promise of the life that now is, and of that to come.

9 A faithful saying and worthy of al acceptation.

10 For to this purpose we labour and are reuiled, because we hope in the liuing God which is the Sauiour of al men, especially of the faithful.

11 Command these things and teach.

12 Let no man contemne thy youth: but be an example of the faithfull, in word, in conuersation, in charitie, in faith, in chastitie.

13 Till I come, attend vnto reading, exhortation, doctrine.

14 Neglect not ‖ the grace that is in thee: which is giuen thee by prophecie, with imposition of the hands ‖ of priesthood.

15 These things do thou meditate, be in these things: that thy profiting may be manifest to al.

16 Attend to thy selfe, and to doctrine: be earnest in them. For, this doing, thou shalt ‖ saue both thy selfe and them that heare thee.

NOW the spirit speaketh euidently, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giuing heed vnto spirits of errour, and doctrines of deuils.* 1.Tim.3,13. 1.pet.2,3. iude 1.18.

2 Which speake false in hypocrisie, hauing their conscience seared with an hot iron:

3 Forbidding to marrie, and commaunding to abstaine from meates which God hath created to be receiued with giuing thankes, of them which beleeue and know the truth.

4 For euery creature of God is good, and nothing to bee refused, if it bee receiued with thankesgiuing.

5 For it is sanctified by the word of God, and prayer.

6 If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Iesus Christ, which hast beene nourished vp in the words of faith, and of good doctrine, which thou hast continually followed.

7 But cast away prophane and olde wiues fables, and exercise thy selfe rather vnto godlinesse: 1.Tim.2, titus 3,9.

8 For bodily exercise profiteth litle, but godlinesse is profitable vnto all things, hauing promises of the life that is now, and of that which is to come.

9 This is a sure saying, and by all meanes worthie to be receiued:

10 For therefore we both labour, and suffer rebuke, because we haue hoped in the liuing God, which is the sauiour of all men, specially of those that beleeue.

11 These things commaund and teach.

12 Let no man despise thy youth: but bee thou a paterne of the beleeuers, in word, in conuersation, in charitie, in spirit, in faith, in chastitie.

13 Till I come, giue attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine.

14 Despise not the gift that is in thee, which was giuen thee through prophecie, with the laying on of hands, by the authoritie of the eldership.

15 Haue a care of these things, and giue thy selfe vnto them, that it may bee seene how thou profitest in all things.

16 Take heede vnto thy selfe, and vnto doctrine, and continue therein: for in doing this, thou shalt both saue thy selfe, and them that heare thee.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 2 4 Euery creature.) We see plainly by these words such abstinence only to be disallowed as condemneth the creatures of God to be naught by nature and creation.

RHEM. 2 We see the creatures of God to be good both by their first creation, and also after their corruption through sinne, by sanctification, which is by the word of God which hath giuen the vse of them vnto vs, and by prayer by which the vse of them is consecrated vnto vs. Therefore not onely such abstinence is detested, as condemneth the creatures to be naught by nature or creation, but that also which forbiddeth them to be receiued vpon any hypocritical surmise of vnholinesse, when they be giuen to be receiued with thankesgiuing, being sanctified by the word of God, and by prayer. Forbidding meates.

RHEM. 3 8 Corporall exercise.) Some (saith S. Chrysostome) expound this of fasting, but they are deceiued. for fasting is a spirituall exercise. See a goodly commentarie of these words in S. Augustine, lib. de mor. Eccl. Cath. c. 33.

FVLKE. 3 He saith that bodily exercise (saith S. Ambrose) is profitable to litle. For to fast and to abstaine from meats, the authoritie of the Creator remaining, profiteth not much, except pietie be added. Therefore fasting of it selfe is not a spirituall exercise, except it be to the ende of pietie, and so meaneth Chrysostome. S. Augustine also in the places quoted, True fasting ted, speaking of the fasting and abstinence of godly men in his time, that was without superstition, or any preiudice to Christian libertie, saith: They exercise pietie diligently, as for bodily exercise as the Apostle saith, they know to pertaine but to a short time. They placed not religion in abstinence from mariage and meates, as Popish Votaries doe.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 1 Shall depart.) *It is the proper description of heretikes, to forsake their former faith, and to be Apostatars, as the Greeke word importeth: to giue eare to particular spirits of error and deception, rather then to the Spirit of Christ in his Church, to follow in hypocrisie and shew of vertue the pernicious doctrine of Diuels, who are the suggesters and prompters of all Sects, and are lying spirits in the mouthes of all Heretikes and false preachers: men that haue put their conscience to silence and made it senseles to the holy Churches admonition: the Apostle noting * once before also in this same Epistle, that Heretikes haue no conscience, which is the cause both of their fall and of their obduration in heresie.* All Heretikes are apostataes from the faith. cap.1.19.

RHEM. 4 1 Forbidding to marrie.) He speaketh (saith S. Chrysostome) of the Manichees, Encratites, and Marcionists. ho. 12. in 1. Tim. S. Ambrose vpon this place, addeth to these the Patritians also. S. Ireneus lib. 1. cap. 30. S. Epiphanius hær. 45. 26. 61. 30. S. Hierome 1. cont. Iouin. cap. 1. ep. 50. cap. 1. & 3. S. Augustine hær. 25. 40. and generally all antiquitie affirme the same both of them, and also of the Heretikes called Apostolici, Ebionitæ, and the like. Their heresie about mariage was, that to marrie or to vse the act of matrimonie, is of Satan, as S. Irenæus witnesseth, lib. 1. cap. 22. *and that the distinction of male and female, and the creation of man and woman for generation, came of an ill God. They taught their hearers, saith S. Augustine, that if they did vse women, they should in any wise prouide that they might not conceiue or beare children. Clemens Alexandrinus (lib. 3. Strom. in principio) writeth, that such admit no mariage nor procreation of children, least they should bring into the world creatures to suffer miserie and mortalitie. And this is the damnable opinion concerning mariage, noted here by the Apostle. The old Heresies against matrimonie. * Aug hær. 46.

FVLKE. 4 Seeing the spirite speaketh so euidently of this matter, you labour in vaine to post ouer the crime to the olde heretikes, who as in their prohibition of mariage, they were forerunners of Antichrist, so there was none of them, to whom this cleere prophecie may so properly be applied, as vnto Antichrist himselfe, and his neerer members. For those olde heretikes that ascribed the institution of matrimonie to Sathan, and the creation and procreation of mankinde vnto the diuell, spake not falsehood in hypocrisie, but in open blasphemie, and therefore might easily be discerned and auoided. But you that vnder pretense of holinesse, religion, chastitie, puritie, fasting, prayer, by lawes and decrees forbid mariage and meates to some men at all times, and to all men at some times, are they of whom the spirite speaketh euidently, that they vtter their false doctrine in hypocrisie, and therefore had need to be described by your speciall notes, and the Church to bee forewarned of you by this prophecie. For after the Apostle hath declared wherein the great mysterie of true religion consisteth that is taught and beleeued in the Church of Christ: He doth immediately giue euident notes of the mysterie of iniquitie maintained in the false Church of Antichrist, who placeth the highest pointes of religion, in prohibition of mariage and meates. In so much as they are specially, and in a maner onely, called and compted of you religious, that obey this prohibition of mariage and meates, though they liue no more continently, then the olde Heretikes called Origeniani turpes, Filthie Originists, who as Epiphanius testifieth of them: Reiected mariage, and yet lust ceased not among them, and defiled their body and mind with wantonnes. For some of them are in the habite of Monkes that liue solitarily, and some of the women are in the cahite of women that liue solitarily, but they are corrupt, perfourming their lust in their bodies. Againe, They studie not for chastitie, but for fained chastitie, and that which hath the name onely of chastitie. Againe, They desire to be in honour, for the exercise of chastitie supposed to be in them. Epiph. hæres. 63. Such were your Monkes, Friers and Nonnes for the most part in England, as was found manifestly in the visitation of their houses before their suppression. And euen the Manichees permitted mariage to their lay men, which they called their hearers, but in no wise to their Clergie, which they called their Elects or chosen men. Aug. de hær. ad Quod vult deum hær. 46. Againe, such as had made the vowe of chastitie and were not able to performe it, the heretikes, called Apostolici, would not permit to marrie, which was contrarie to the doctrine of the Catholike Church, which as Epiphanius doth testifie, iudged that it was better for such to marrie openly, then to burne priuily. Hæres. 61. Therefore there is no way for you to escape the iudgement of the holy Ghost, by turning the matter ouer to the olde Heretikes, who with as good reason might post it of from one to another, the Manichees to the Tacianistes, and the Tacianistes to the Manichees, as you do to them. But the markes are so euident, as no heretike that forbiddeth mariage or meates, can escape cleare, and you that forbid them with colour of more perfection and holines, in hypocrisie, of all other heretikes are most properly described by them. Forbidding of mariage.

RHEM. 5 For the second point consisting in the prohibition of meates or vse of certaine creatures made to be eaten, the said Heretikes or diuers of them (for they were not all of one sect touching these pointes) taught, that men might not eate certaine sortes of meates, specially of beastes and liuing creatures, for that they were not made (say they) of the good God, but of the euil. And wine they called the gall of the Prince of darknesse, and not to be drunke at all, and the Vine whereof it came, to be of the Diuels creation. And diuers other creatures they condemned as things by nature and creation polluted and abominable. August. hær. Manich. 46. & hær. 25. Tatian. & toto libro de mor. Manich. to. 1. Lo these were the Heretikes and their heresies which S. Paul here prophecieth of, that forbid mariage and meates as you haue heard, for which they and their followers were condemned in diuers Councels. The olde heresies about abstinence from meates.

FVLKE. 5 Not onely the Manichees, Encratites, Aërians and such like olde heretikes, as condemned the eating of flesh, as vncleane and abominable, but euen the Papists also, commannd to absteine from meates for pietie and religions sake, which God hath created to be receiued with thanksgiuing. Counting such holinesse in eating of fish, that they are the most holy among you that eate no flesh, as the Charterhouse Monkes, counting generally the eating of fish or fruites and spices, to be an holy faste at such times, as the tasting of flesh or white meates is thought an hainous sinne, and for this cause as Durand testifieth, because all fleth was accursed, not fish in the daies of Noe, lib. 6, cap. De alijs ieiunijs. So that fasting is but pretended in hypocrisie, for a colour that the libertie of Christians, might bee brought into bondage of Antichristes law. Wherein how like the popish fastes are vnto the fastes of the Manichees. S. Augustine sheweth, De moribus Manichæorum, lib. 2. cap. 13. who compted it a wonderfull praise to them, and a holy fast, that they did not eate flesh nor drinke wine (as they said) to chastise themselues and bridle lust but of meere hypocrisie, as he saith: For I demaund of you (saith he) If there be a man (which may well be) so sparing and thrifty that moderating the appetite of his belly and throte, he eateth not twise in one day, and when he suppeth, he hath set before him, a fewe herbes sodden, and seasoned with a little bacon, so much as is sufficient, to stay his hunger. Likewise he quencheth his thirst, hauing respect vnto his health, with two or three draughts of wine vnmingled with water, and this is his daily fare. There is another on the other Forbidding of meates.

side which tasteth no flesh nor wine, but at the ninth houre he taketh gladly exquisite and strange fruites, varied in many seuerall dishes, sprinckled with plentie of pepper, and supperh in the beginning of the night with like fare, drinketh the sweete licour of figges or other fruits, as delicate as wine and excelling wine in sweetnesse, and drinketh not so much as he thirsteth, but as much as he listeth and prouideth this fare daily, and enioyeth such a delicate diet of no necessitie, but with great pleasure: which of these concerning meat and drinke, doe you iudge to lead his life in greater abstinence? I suppose you are not so blinde, that you will preferre him that liueth with a little bacon and wine, before this Gourmander. So truth constraineth, but your errour singeth otherwise: for if one of your elect (saith he) should but once sup with the former man, of sparing diet, and should but annoint his lips with restie bacon, or but take the sauour of it, as a breaker of his fast or abstinence, he shall be condemned to hell fire. What difference there is then betweene the fast of the Manichees, & the fast of the Papists, sauing that the Papists more grosse in hypocrisie, allowed fish commonly, and wine, with all delicate confections at all times, euen on their Good Fryday fastes: when to eate one piece of restie bacon, hath beene compted a more hainous sinne then to kill a man.

RHEM. 6 Is it not now an intollerable impudencie of the Protestantes, who for a small similitude of wordes in the eares of the simply, apply this text to the fastes of the Church, and the chastitie of Priests and Religious? As though either by appointing or vsing some daies of abstinence from certaine meates, the Church or any Catholike man condemned the said meates. vnles the Rechabites Hierom. 35. or the Nazarites, Num. 6. or the Niniuites, Ion. 3. or Moyses Exod. 34. or Elias, 3. Reg. 19. or holy Anna the widow, Luc. 2. or Iohn Baptist, Mat. 3. & 9. or Christ himselfe, Mat. 4. commending, vsing, and following a prescript number of fasting daies, or God himselfe that in the very beginning in Paradise, prescribed abstinence from the fruite of one certaine tree, and after appointed so many fastes in the Law, vnles he therefore condemned his owne creatures, and the rest, those creatures from which they abstained. No, there be many good and lawful causes to forbid some, or to abstaine from some meates: as, for obedience, as in Paradise: for signification, as the Iewes: for that they haue beene offered to Idols, as in the Epistle to the Corinthians: for chastening the body and penance, for health also: and only those causes are vnlawfull for which the Manichees and other Heretikes abstained.

The Catholikes impudently charged with the said old heresies.

Abstinence from certaine meates is no condemnation of the meats.

Diuers good causes of abstinence.

FVLKE. 6 Is it not intollerable impudencie in the Papists, that being conuicted by so euident a prophecie of the spirite, are not ashamed to say, it is but a similitude of wordes? Is fasting, an abstinence from flesh? may not a priest liue chastely in mariage? to whom the holy Ghost alloweth one wife, or may they not liue chastely out of marriage without prohibition to any, of that which God hath made free for all? But by appointing daies of abstinence from certaine meates (you say) your Church doeth not condemne these meates, which is nothing else but falshoode in hypocrisie, for you forbid them for holinesse, for religions sake, and therefore condemne them as vncleane, and vnholy, though not by Gods creation, yet by your Antichristian prohibition. As for the voluntarie abstinence of the Rechabites and Nazarites, was no prohibition of Gods creatures, nor other abstinence then God allowed. The faste of the Niniuites, Moses, Elias, Anna, Iohn Baptist, and Christ, was nothing in the worlde like your popish prohibition. For your abstinence by prohibition from flesh, and filling the belly with fish or other delicacies by your permission, is no faste nor abstinence for any lawfull cause of chastisement of the body, but a meere note of Antichristian hypocrisie. Which yet sheweth it selfe more euidently, when you make it as lawfull for Antichrist to prohibite the vse of Gods creatures for religion, as it was for God himselfe in paradise, for obedience, or in the lawe for signification, to forbid the vse of his owne creatures. Wherein Antichrist is exalted aboue God, to forbid that which God hath appointed to be free. But there are for all this (say you) diuers good causes of abstinence. I graunt, but no cause of prohibition for causes of religion. For albeit God for obedience in paradise, or for signification in the olde lawe, commanded abstinence from certaine meates, yet when he hath made all meates free in the newe Testament, none but Antichrist either for obedience or signification, will prohibite that which God hath permitted. In the time of Rabanus Maurus anno 855. there was no general prohibition of flesh to al men, but only to Monkes, and to them of foure footed beastes onely, the flesh of birdes being permitted. because they were created of the same element that fishes were. As he writeth De inst. Cler. lib. 2. cap. 26. & 27. wine was also prohibited. And afterward in the time of Ludouicus Pius because they deuoured so many birdes, they were prohibited also, yet blood was allowed to them in all their brothes, ibid. And yet the Popes law hath presumed not only to prohibite some kinde of creatures vnder a false pretence of fasting, but also such as were prohibited to the Iewes in the old law, as vncleane, as appeareth by Iuo, part. 15. cap. 97. & 100. 118. where penance is appointed for eating vncleane beasts, or such as died alone, or were torne with beasts, or strangled, or touched by vncleane beastes, or for eating or drinking, that wherin a dog or a cat hath lapped, or wherin a mouse or a weasel hath bene drowned, and such like.

Popish prohibition of mariage and meates.

Boniface also forbade all the seruants of God, all hunting and hauking with dogs or hawkes, Iuo. part. 13. c 29. And Gratian dist. 86. in diuers chapters, maketh it a great sinne to hunt, and the art of hunting, is compted a vice, cap. Qui venatoribus. In the glosse it is declared to be vnlawfull for all men in Lent, &c. Hunting is also condemned, because it can not be without crying, and no Hunter can be an holy man so long as hee continueth an huntsman. cap. Esau & in gloss. The abstinence from meate offered to Idols, is either for offence, or for participation with idolatrie, not for conscience of the eater, if the other causes doe cease. For chastising of the bodie, it is vnlawfull to abstaine, but that is in respect of the quantitie or qualitie of the meate, which more prouoketh carnall lusts, not in prohibition of any kinde, as you doe in your fastes, of all flesh, yea of that which hath but touched flesh, though it be neuer so grosse, as (S. Augustine putteth the example of restie bacon) and in neuer so small a quantitie. When you permit all delicate fishes, fruites, wines, spices, confections, euen to the filling of the stomacke: and that which filleth vp the measure of this Antichristian note, you doe not onely thus abstaine, but you prohibite vnder paine of damnation, the eating of such meates, in anie quantitie, or of any qualitie. As for abstinence for health, or for any ciuill respect, is nothing to the matter now in hand, when the Apostle giueth it as a note of Antichristian apostasie, to forbid meate or mariage for religions sake.

RHEM. 7 Concerning mariage likewise, they may as well charge God or the Church for forbidding the father to marrie the daughter, or the brother the sister, or other prohibited persons in the Lawe: as well might they charge Christ and the Apostle for prohibiting the man to marry, during his wiues life: and appointing widowes that serue the Church, to liue vnmarried, and not admitting a married woman as well as a widow, nor her that hath had moe husbands, as wel as her that hath bene married but once: as they charge the Church for not admitting married persons to the altar, and for forcing them and Religious persons to keepe their promise of chastitie. No, the holy Church is so farre from condemning wedlocke, that she honoureth it much more then the Protestantes, accounting it an holy Sacrament, which they do not, who onely vse it to lust as the Heathen doe, and not to religion.

Forbidding certaine persons to marrie is no condemnation of matrimonie.

Catholikes esteeme matrimonie more then the Protestantes doe.

FVLKE. 7 God the auctor of matrimonie hath appointed what degrees of consanguinitie or affinitie are to be auoyded, auoyded in contracting the ſame. But therefore may Antichriſt forbid the Miniſters of the Church to marrie according to Gods ordinance, which he hath left free for them? Our Sauiour Chriſt forbiddeth not any to marrie, but him that is maried already, and not lawfully diuorced. And albeit he had done ſo, becaule he was the auctor of mariage, as God, yet it is not lawfull for Antichriſt to prohibite whatſoeuer it was lawfull for Chriſt to forbidde.

The Apoſtle forbiddeth no widowes that ſerue the Church, to marrie, but ſuch as for their yeeres had no neede to marrie, and willingly abſteined from marriage that they might ſerue the Church. For which ſeruice a maried woman is vnfitte, becauſe ſhe is bound to ſerue her husband. As for her which had twiſe or ofner lawfully married, he refuſeth not, but onely ſuch an one as had beene vnlawfully coupled to more husbandes then one at once, as departing or being vnlawfully ſeparated from one, and then taking an other. But you by law prohibite married men to ſerue in the Church, and the Miniſters of the Church to marrie, whom God alloweth to haue one wife, and inforce them to take the vow of continencie, though they be not able to performe it, and though they be not able to keepe it, yet you condemne their marriage, with the Heretikes that called themſelues Apoſtolikes. And it is a meere mockery, that you honour matrimonie more then Proteſtantes, accompting it an holy Sacrament. when you accompt the holy calling of Prieſthood to be prophaned by matrimonie, which is nothing elſe but to ſpeake a lie in hypocriſie. Greg. Mart. cap. 16. ſect. 12.

RHEM. 8 But it is an olde deceitfull practiſe of Heretikes to charge Catholike men with olde condemned hereſies. The Eutychians ſlandered the Councell of Chalcedon and S. Leo to be Neſtorians, and to make two perſons in Chriſt, becauſe they ſayd there were two natures. Vigilius li. 5. cont. Eutychen. Arius charged Alexander his Biſhop of Sabellianiſme, for auouching the vnitie of ſubſtance in Trinitie. Socrat. li. 1. c. 3. Iulianus accuſed S. Auguſtine of the hereſie of Apollinarii. li. 5. cont. Iulian. c. 15. Other Pelagians challenged him for condemning mariage. Retract. li. 2. c. 53. *And that our Proteſtants bragge not too much of their goodly inuention, Iouinian the old Heretike, their Maiſter in this point, accuſed * the holy doctors and Catholikes vpon this ſame place, to be Manichees, and to condemne meates and mariage, as both S. Hierom and S. Auguſtine doe teſtifie. And they both anſwere to the Heretike, that the Church in deede and Catholikes doe abſteine from ſome for euer, and ſome for certaine daies, and euery Chriſtian man lightly all the 40. daies of Lent faſt: not for that they thinke the meates vncleane, abominable, or of an ill creation, as the Manichees doe: but for puniſhment of their bodies and taming their concupiſcences.* Hiero. li. 2. cont. Iouin. c. 11. Aug. cont. Adimantum. c. 14. Lib. de mor. Cath. Ec. Hiero. in c. 4. ad Galat. And as for mariage, the ſaid doctors anſwere, that no Catholike man condemneth it for vnlawfull, as the old Heretikes did, but onely preferreth virginitie and continencie before it, as a ſtate in it ſelfe more agreeable to God and more meete for the Cleargie. See S. Auguſtine againſt Fauſtus the Manichee li. 30. c. 5. 6. and hær. 25. in the name, Apoſtolici. S. Hierom ep. 50. c. 1. & 3. All this the Catholikes continually tell the Aduerſaries, and they can not but ſee it. Yet by accuſtomed audacitie and impudencie they beare it out ſtill.

The Proteſtants obiections anſwered long ago by S. Hierom and S. Auguſtine.

* Aug li. 2. c. 5. de nupt. & concupiſc.

RHEM. 8 This olde deceitfull practiſe you forgette not to vſe againſt vs. But we doe iuſtly charge you with olde hereſies, which you doe holde in deede, not as the Heretikes did falſely accuſe the Catholikes. You can not denie, as impudent as you are, but that you doe forbidde meates and marriage, which the Church did not in S. Auguſtines and S. Hieromes daies. There were that abſteined from mariage, and there were that faſted, but there was no law to compell any to the one, or to the other. Theodoret vpon this text ſaith: He doth not diſpraiſe the ſingle life and continence, but he accuſeth them which compell men by making a law to follow it. Therefore theſe auncient Fathers anſwere not our obiections, nor yet you by ſaying, you thinke not that meates are vncleane, or of an ill creation, but you abſteine for puniſhment of your bodies, and taming your concupiſcences.

Popiſh continence and abſtinence.

So ſaid the Manichees, as S. Auguſtine teſtifieth: but he prooued that they lied, and ſo doe you. Si parſimoniæ, &c. If you abſteine (ſaith he) of frugalitie, and to tame luſt, with which by ſuch meates and drinkes we are delighted and taken I heare it, and I allow it: but it is not ſo, for I demand of you &c. as before: De moribus Man. lib. 2. c. 13. And as for mariage, you doe not onely preferre virginitie and continencie, as a ſtate more agreeable to God in it ſelfe, and more meete for the Clergie (which yet the holy Ghoſt hath not taught you) but you inforce it by law, as neceſſarie for the Clergie, and condemne matrimonie, as prophaning the ſacred order of Prieſthood, I vſe your blaſphemous and deuliſh wordes. You condemne the ſtate of marriage, as carnall, wherein no man can pleaſe God, approouing that vile decretall vnder the name of Siritius. ep. 4. c. 9. where he ſaith, that the Miniſters of the Church muſt abſteine from matrimonie, becauſe they that be in the fleſh can not pleaſe God. All this and much more we continually tell the Papiſts, and they cannot but ſee it, yet their cauterized conſciences feeling nothing, they continue in their audacitie and impudencie to beare it out ſtill.

RHEM. 9 4 With thanks giuing.) By the moſt auncient cuſtome of the faithfull both before Chriſt and ſithence, men vſe to bleſſe their table and meates, by the hand and word of a Prieſt, if any be preſent otherwiſe by ſuch as can conueniently doe it. And in husbandmens houſes where they haue no other meanes, they ſhould at leaſt bleſſe Gods giftes and themſelues with a Pater noſter or the ſigne of the Croſſe: not onely to acknowledge from whom they haue their continuall ſuſtenance, but alſo to bleſſe their meate and ſanctifie it. For the Greeke word vſed of S. Paul, by Eccleſiaſticall vſe, when it concerneth meates, ſignifieth not onely thankes giuing, but bleſſing or ſanctifying the creatures to be receiued, as being all one with εὐλογία, and in Engliſh we call it grace, not onely that after meate, which is onely thankes to God, but that before meate, which is alwaies a benediction of the creatures, as it is plaine in the preſcript and vſuall formes of grace. For which cauſe a Prieſt ſhould euer doe it rather then a lay man or any of inferior order in the Cleargie. In ſo much that S. Hierom (ep. 85.) reprehendeth certaine Deacons whom he ſaw ſay grace or bleſſe the meate and the companie, in the preſence of a Prieſt. Who alſo recordeth (in the life of S. Paul the holy Eremite) the great curteſie and humilitie of him and S. Antonie, yeelding one to the other the preeminence of bleſſing their poore dinner. For to bleſſe is a great thing, and a Prieſtly prerogatiue, as the Apoſtle witneſſeth, declaring the preeminence of Melchiſedec in that he bleſſed Abraham. Reade the note following.

Bleſſing of the table of meats, ſpecially by a Prieſt. μεσα' εὐχαριστίας.

To bleſſe is a preeminence of the better perſon. Heb. 7.

VLKE. 9 The creatures in their lawfull vſe to the Chriſtian receiuer, are ſanctified by the word of God, and by prayer. By whom the prayer be pronounced it is not greatly materiall, ſeeing euery one ought to ioyne in conſent with him that vttereth the prayer. Although for order or comelines ſake it is moſt conuenient, that the good-man of the houſe, or any by his appointment, or a miniſter if he be preſent, or the beſt man in the company doe pronounce the prayer in the name of the reſt. But that the meate ſhould be ſanctified, or is ſufficiently bleſſed with the ſigne of the croſſe, it is altogether beſide the booke. For the gifts of God are to be ſanctified by the word of God, and by prayer, not by the ſigne of the croſſe, which is neither the word of God nor prayer. As for bleſſing of the perſon, whereof the prerogatiue is to the greater, is not here ſpoken of, but onely of the ſanctification of meats to the lawfull vſe of Chriſtians.

Bleſſing with the ſigne of the croſſe.

RHEM. 10 5 Sanctified.) Al creatures be of Gods creation, none of the Diuel, or of any other cause and beginning, as the Manichees blasphemed: and therefore none are ill, abominable, or vncleane by creation, nature, and condition, but all good and made for mans vse, though all be not alike holy nor equally sanctified. God made seuen daies, but he sanctified onely one of them. he made all places, but he sanctified none but the Temple and such like deputed to his seruice, as the Arke, the altar, and the rest which were by sacred vse both holy them selues, and gaue also holines and sanctification to things that touched them or were applied vnto them. So our Sauiour saith, that the temple sanctified the gold, and the altar the gift, and generally all creatures seuered from common and profane vse, to religion and worship of God, are made sacred thereby. So the places and daies of Gods apparition or working some special wonders or benefits toward the people, were holy, as Bethel, Sinai, and others And much more those times and places of Christes Natiuitie, Passion, burial, Resurrection, Ascension: which is so plaine a case, that the hil where he was transfigured onely, is called therefore by S. Peter, the holy mount.

No creature evil by nature, yet one more sanctified then an other.

Mat. 23. Holy times and places, & euery thing deputed to the seruice of God, holy. 2. Pet. 1.

FVLKE. 10 All the creatures of God, not onely by creation, but also by sanctification by the word of God and prayer, are alike holy in the necessary and lawfull vse of them to true Christians, which be cleane and holy. Yet are there some things specially applied to the seruice of God, which in that respect, in an other kinde are more specially called holy, as the Sabboth day, the Temple, the Arke, the altar, &c. But that such things gaue holinesse to things that touched them, otherwise then according to Gods word they were dedicated to Gods seruice, it is false. For euen the sacrifices of the vngodly, which not only touched the altar, but also lay vpon it and were offered in it, because they were not offered with such faith as they should be offered by the word of God, were abhominable vnto the Lord, as he testifieth often by the Prophets. Therefore that our sauiour Christ saith of the Temple and the altar, sanctifying the golde and the gift, his meaning is plaine, that the Temple when it is holy, is the principall, and the golde that is offered in it is the accessarie: so of the altar and the gift. Not that the Temple or altar had power to giue holinesse to euery thing that touched it. Neither are all creatures to be seuered from the common vse, and consecrated to the seruice of God, but only such as he hath prescribed and appointed by his holy word, without which, all other sanctifying or consecrating of creatures to the vse of religion, is superstitious and idolatrous. The places and times of Gods apparition, or working some speciall wonders, were holy for that time only of Gods presence, and not for euer after. For Bethel was not counted holy for euer of the faithfull, but of the superstitious and the idolatrous Israelites, who by the wickednesse of Ieroboam were brought to esteeme it more holy then Ierusalem, the place which God had chosen. But by the Prophets, Bethel that by Iacob was called the house of God, was termed Bethauen, the house of wickednesse or vanitie. Ose. 4. 15. So the hill on which Christ was transfigured, is called holy in respect of the time in which the transfiguration was, not that the holinesse of the place doth alwaies continue, or that there was any pilgrimage of the faithfull vnto it.

Hallowing of creatures.

RHEM. 11 Those therfore be holy memories and monuments of al sortes sanctified, besides that creatures (as we see here) be sanctified also by the word of God and praier, that is to say, by benediction and inuocation of our Lordes holy name vpon them, specially by the signe of the Crosse, as S. Chrysostom noteth on this place, ho. 12 in 1 ad Tim. by the which the aduersaries power of Satan vsurping vniustly vpon Gods creatures through mans sinne, and seeking deceitfully in or by the same to annoy mans body or soule, is expelled, and the meates purged from him and made holesom. S. Gregorie (li. 1. Dialog. c. 4.) recordeth that the Diuel entred into a certaine religious woman by eating the herbe lettice vnblessed. And S. Augustine li. 18 de ciu. Dei c. 18. sheweth at large, what woies he hath by meates and drinkes and other vsual creatures of God, to annoy men: though his power be much lesse then it was before Christ. but still much desire he hath on al sides to molest the faithful by abusing the thinges most neere and necessarie vnto them, to their hurt both bodily and Ghostly. for remedie wherof, this sanctification which the Apostle speaketh of, is very soueraine, pertaining not only to this common & more vulgar benediction of our meats & drinks, but much more (as the proprietie of the Greeke word vsed by the Apostle for sanctification, doth import) to other more exact sanctifying and higher applying of some creatures, and blessing them to Christes honour in the Church of God, & to mans spiritual and corporal benefites.

Creatures hallowed by the signe of the Crosse.

The blessing of our meate what a vertue it hath.

FVLKE. 11 Such memories or monuments of holy things haue no holinesse in them, but may stirre vp mens minds to the remembrance of holy things. But seeing to the vncleane all things are vncleane, not by creation, but by pollution of sinne, and the abuse of Sathan: The Apostle sheweth how all creatures in their lawfull vse, are sanctified vnto the cleane, namely by the word of God, who hath generally permitted vnto the faithfull the free vse of them, and by praier, by which they are specially sanctified to the priuate vse of euery one of the faithfull. The signe of the crosse is superstitiously added by Chrysostom, which is omitted by the Apostle. And where you are not content with this vulgar and common benediction of our meats and drinkes, whereof the Apostle speaketh, but will extend the same to a more exact sanctification, and higher applying of some creatures, &c. beside the word of God: you declare that you preferre your owne inuentions and superstitions before the prescript commandements and rules of the word of God. For sanctifying of meats and drinks, according to the doctrine of the Holy ghost, was neuer greatly regarded in popery, nor is yet much practised among your recusant papists in England. But other toyes which you call sanctified creatures by the popes holinesse, and not by the holinesse of Gods word are highly esteemed. But the Greeke word, you say, doth import such a matter: you would make the ignorant beleeue so. But they that know the Greeke tongue as well as you, are bolde to tell you there is no such matter imported by it. And the text is plaine, that no such thing can be allowed by it. Not onely because the Apostle speaketh onely of the common or ordinary vse of Gods creatures, but also because he appointeth two meanes, both necessarie to sanctification, The word of God, & prayer. For if men will presume of prayer, without the word or God, their prayer is not of faith, and so it is sinne. As also if men will presume of sanctification by Gods word, and contemne prayer, it can not but be greeuous presumption and sinne in them. Therefore seeing you can not bring the word of God to approue that your more exact sanctifying, and higher applying of creatures, &c. vnder colour whereof you bring in all your execrable holy things, it is at the least superstition, and vaine worshipping of God, if it be not blasphemous vsurping of the honour and office of the Holie ghost, to whom it perteineth to sanctifie, and whatsoeuer is sanctified in deed, is rightlie and truelie (being dedicated by the ministerie of man) sanctified and hallowed by him.

Sanctifying of creatures.

RHEM. 12 For as S. Augustine writeth li. 2. de pec. merit. c. 26. besides this vsuall blessing of our daily foode, the Catechumenes (that is, such as were taught toward Baptisme) are sanctified by the signe of the Crosse, and the bread (saith he) which they receiue, though it be not the body of Christ, yet is holy, and more holy then the vsual bread of the table. He meaneth a kinde of bread then halowed, specially for such as were not yet admitted to the B. Sacrament: either the same, or the like to our holy bread, vsed in the Church of England and France on Sundaies. And it was a common vse in the primitiue Church to blesse loaues, and send them for sacred tokens from one Christian man to an other, and that not among the simple and superstitious (as the Aduersaries may imagine) but among the holiest, learnedst, and wisest. Such hallowed breads did S. Paulinus send send to S. Augustine and Alipius, and they to him again, calling them blessings. Read S. Hierome in the life of Hilarion (post medium:) how Princes and learned Bishops and other of all sorts came to that holy man for holy bread, panem benedictum. In the primitiue Church the people commonly brought bread to the Priests to be halowed. Author. op. imp. ho. 14. in Mat. The 3. Councel of Carthage cap. 24. maketh mention of the blessing of milke, hony, grapes, and corne. See the 4. Canon of the Apostles. And not onely diuers other creatures vsed at certaine times in holy Churches seruice, as waxe, fire, palmes, ashes, but also the holy oyle, Chrisme, and the water of Baptisme, that also which is the cheefe of all Priestly blessing of creatures, the bread and wine in the high Sacrifice, be sanctified, yea (as S. Augustine affirmeth tract. 118. in Ioan.) without the signe of the Crosse, none of these things can rightly be done. The signe of the crosse vsed in blessing.

FVLKE. 12 Hauing nothing out of the word of God, you thinke to cary the matter by the wordes and practise of men. But of what weight that is in matters of religion, euen those men vnto whose auctoritie you would leane, may sufficiently instruct you. And yet the matter is farre from that you would beare the ignorant in hand. S. Augustines wordes of that pretended holy bread, are against the Pelagians, which contended, that baptisme was not necessarie for the infants of the faithfull, because they are holy: Non vnius modi est sanctificatio &c. Sanctification is not after one sort. For I thinke that the Cathumens, after a certaine maner of theirs, are sanctified by the signe of the crosse, and prayer of imposition of hands, & that which they receiue, although it be not the body of Christ, yet it is holy, and more holy then those meates with which we are nourished, because it is a Sacrament. And euen those meates wherewith we are nourished to the necessary maintenance of this life, the same Apostle said to be sanctified by the word of God and prayer, which we make when we are to refresh our bodies &c. Here Augustine speaketh of a supposed sanctification and of a superstitious kinde of bread, which without any word of God, he calleth a sacrament, by which you may see how largely he vseth that terme. But what holinesse was in it, or how it could be holy without the word of God, how can we be assured? And yet what kinde of holinesse it was, he after declareth, namely, such as could not make the receiuers holy if they were not baptised. As for popish holy bread, it was not, for that is not giuen to them that are not baptised, neither is it a sacrament, therefore it was one of those burthenous ceremonies, and humane presumptions, of which he complaineth, and wisheth that they might be taken away. Ep. 118. As for the loaues that were sent by the ancient fathers, from one to an other, were but tokens of friendship and communication, and no such hallowed breads as you fantasie: for they desired one an other to make them blessinges, by their thankefull acceptation of them. Ep. 34. 35. And they called them blessings, not for any consecration, but according to the phrase of the Scripture. 1. Sam. 25. 27. where Abigaile desired Dauid to take a blessing of her hand, that is, a gift or present. So 2. Reg. 5. 15. Naaman desired Elizeus to take a blessing of him, that is, a gift and no hallowed matter. But there was great concourse, as Hierom testifieth, of all sortes vnto Hilarion, that they might receiue of him bread or oyle that he had blessed. This was for the great holinesse that was supposed to be of that person, not an ordinary ceremony of holy bread, or holy oyle. But was he as ready to giue it, as they to desire it? No verily. S. Hierome saith, he had no minde but of the wildernesse. Whereby it appeareth it was rather a superstition in them to require it, then any vsurpation in him to grant any such thing. Holy bread.

And therefore Hierome admireth his humilitie, that despised such honour as was offered vnto him. That in the primitiue Church, the people commonly brought bread to the priestes to be hallowed, it is not prooued by the place you quote: for there the auctour doth not speake of any such vse, but sheweth by a similitude, how in the Lords prayer, we call that our bread which we pray to God to giue vs. That is (saith he) giue vs that bread which we haue prepared, that while it is giuen of thee, it may be sanctified. As for example, if a lay man should offer bread to a Priest, that the Priest should take it, and sanctifie it, and so giue it to him. In that it is bread, it is his that offereth it, but that it is sanctified, it is the benefit of the Priest. Is not a common custome here strongly prooued, or rather disprooued? For if there had beene any such common custome as you speake of, he would not haue said, Vt puta si Laicus. As for example, If a lay man, but as when a lay man offereth bread to a Priest, &c.

The mention made in the Councell of Carthage, and the Canons of the Apostles is a condemnation of such superstition, and a comandement that nothing be offered but bread and wine for the Sacrament, which is of grapes and corne. Wherefore you haue small supportation euen of mans auctoritie, as you haue none of Gods word, for hallowing of waxe, fire, palmes, ashes, &c. when you cannot bring so much as a shadow of antiquitie for your holy bread. As for the sanctifying of the water in baptisme, and the bread and wine in the Lords supper, hath the word of God manifestly to warrant it, as none of your popish trumperie which you call hallowed or blessed creatures hath. That which S. Augustine saith of the signe of the crosse, importeth not any necessitie thereof vnto sanctification, but sheweth that it was a ceremonie so vsuall, that without it nothing was done rite, that is, according to the rite and ceremonie, if that signe were lacking.

RHEM. 13 Can any man now marueil that the Church of God by this warrant of S. Pauls word expounded by so long practise & tradition of the first fathers of our religion, doth vse diuers elements and blesse them for mans vse and the seruice of God, expelling by the inuocation of Christes name, the aduersarie power from them, according to the authoritie giuen by Christ, Super omnia dæmonia, ouer all Deuils: and by prayer, which importeth as the Apostle here speaketh, desire of helpe, as it were by the vertue of Christ to combat with the Diuell, and so to expell him out of Gods creatures, which is done by holy exorcisme, and euer beginneth, Adiutorium nostrum in nomine Domini, *as we see in the blessing of holy water and the like sanctification of elements. FVLKE. 13 Verily, but that we know the impudencie of the whore of Babylon we would maruell how the Romish Church without the warrant of Gods word, which the Apostle maketh necessarie vnto sanctification, durst attempt such blessings and conjurings of creatures as she doth. Yea to ascribe such power vnto the deuill, ouer them after they be sanctified by the word of God, that they neede any such exorcismes or blessings to driue Popish conjuring of water, &c.

him away, which is in other termes, and by an other fetch to renue the olde blasphemie of the Maniches, from which in the beginning you would seeme to purge your selues. But Christ (you say) hath giuen auctoritie ouer all deuils. Luc. 9. To whom I pray you? To his Apostles, when he sent them to preach, not to all priests, more then the power of working other miracles, which he then gaue to his Apostles. And giuing them auctoritie ouer all deuils, did he bidde them coniure the deuill out of water, salt, bread, or such like? or rather to cast out deuils mightely from them that were possessed with them, not that all creatures were possessed by them. Neither doth the Apostle speake here of prayer to expell the deuill out of Gods creatures, but to make the vse of Gods creatures sanctified in themselues by Gods word, holy and sanctified vnto vs. How you beginne your coniuration of holy water and such like, it skilleth not, seeing you haue no word of God to attempt any such matters. And certaine it is, that your exorcismes are no prayers, but meere coniurations, for those words (Our helpe is in the name of the Lord) are no words of prayer, and your prayers follow the coniurations being as good as they. For you pray that your coniured salt and water may be saluation of body and soule to all that receiue them. Againe you coniure not the deuill out of the creatures, but the creatures themselues. Exorcizo te creatura salis, aquæ, &c. I coniure or command thee, thou creature of salt or water, &c. not that the deuill should depart from thee, but that thou be made coniured salt to the saluation of the beleeuers, and that thou be health of soule and body to all that receiue thee: and that from the place where thou art sprinckled, all fantasies and wickednesse of deuilish fraud, and euery vncleane spirit being coniured, may flie away and depart. So likewise you coniure and charge the water in the name of God, that thou be made coniured water, to driue away all power of the enemy, and that thou maist be able to root out, and to pull out the enemy it selfe, with all his reuolted angels, &c. who gaue you such authoritie, to lay such a charge, or to bestow such a power upon the creatures of God? wilt not thou O God be reuenged of this Antichristian blasphemie? But the practise and tradition of the first fathers hath so expounded S. Paules wordes, as you say.

You doe well to say the practise and vnwritten tradition, for none of the fathers that interpret this text, in their writings doe mention any such exposition. For practise therefore, you send vs first to S. Augustine for exorcismes, and namely of children, who saith in deede, that in baptisme the power of the deuill is exorcised in children, meaning that they are deliuered from the tyranny of the deuill, whom they doe renounce by the harts and mouthes of them that beare them, which is nothing to your magicall exorcismes of children. The booke De dogmatibus, is none of S. Augustines, yet he speaketh not onely of exorcismes, but also of exufflations, which you use not, to cast the vncleane spirit from them that are to be baptised. Although there is great difference betweene the casting out of the deuill from children, which in some sense is truly performed according to the Scripture. Luc. 11. and the coniuring and hallowing of creatures, which hath no colour in the Scripture. For holy water to be 1400. yeeres olde, you send vs to that counterfet Epistle of Alexander, which you know to be an impudent forgery, and all the world may know by the date, if there were nothing else, which was when Traianus and Helianus were Consuls the ninth of the Calends of August, which might as well be Ad Calendas Græcas, or at latter Lammas, for there was neuer any Helianus Consul with Traianus. The famous storie that yon send vs to see in Theodoret, is a miracle wrought by Marcellus Bishop of Apamea, in setting the Temple of Iupiter a fire, with sprinkling of water after he had signed it with the Crosse, and prayed, when it would not burne with fire. Which perteineth nothing to your ordinarie ceremonie of holy water, which is coniured after an other sort, and to an other purpose. The other storie in Epiphanius, is also of a miracle, in curing a madde man, by casting water vpon him, in the name of Christ, but no holy water, except you will allow him that is neither Priest, nor Clearke, nor Christian man, to make holy water. For that miracle was done by a Iewe, to trie a dreame that he had, before he was baptized. Holywater.

But when you come to Gregorie, for hallowing of Churches with holy water, you come neerer to your time, and the reuelation of Antichrist, but then you must strike of 500. yeeres of your 1400. for the age of holy water.

Gregorie in deede willeth holy water to be made, and to be sprinkled in the Idols Temples, aultars to be builded, and reliques to be laied vp, but where is the ashes strewed in the Church? where be the candles? where is the Sexten counterfecting the Deuill, and answering in a base voice within the Church, when the Bishop coniureth him without? where are a great many more ceremonies prescribed in your Pontifical, to be vsed in hallowing of Churches? I forbeare you, if you can not tell, for Antichrist lacked as yet some yeeres of his open manifestation, and therefore this ceremoniall consecration, prescribed by Gregory, lacked many things that were afterward reuealed by the spirite of Antichrist. But among other things we must remember, that Elizeus applied salt to the healing and purifying of waters: while you forget that you haue not the spirite of Elizeus, to worke miracles. For your water coniured with salt, can not heale nor purifie any vnwholsome waters. How the Angell vsed the fishes liuer to driue away the Deuill, we leane it to you to doe the like, if you can. We must haue the word of God, and no Apocryphall stories, to build our faith vpon, Dauids harpe did nothing, but as it was made to sound by Dauid, whose Godly musicke procured some rest to Saule for the time. S. Augustine saith not, that a peece of the holy earth saued such a mans chamber from infestation of Diuels, but that the same ceased at the prayers of a Priest, that offered the sacrifice of the body of Christ there, and prayed earnestly that the said vexation might cease. Therefore you take your markes amisse for the holy earth. But what madnes is this? of miracles wrought by God, with externall signes of his creatures, to establish an ordinarie doctrine and ceremonie of hallowing what creatures you will, and to what purpose you are disposed? But Christ occupied diuerse sanctified elements, some for the health of the body, some for grace and remission of sinnes, and some to worke miracles. And why might not he occupie his owne creatures, to such purpose as it pleased him? But shall Antichrist therefore imitate our Sauiour Christ, like an Ape, to occupie the Lords creatures, and to sanctifie them without his word, to make his false Sacraments of them, and to worke his lying miracles by them? If God shewed miracles by the reliques of Saincts, is it lawfull for you to make holy reliques what yourlist? In the story of Iulianus, the Deuill that was coniured, fledde, when one by chance and custome, made the signe of the Crosse, Ergo the Deuill is perillously afraid of the Crosse. No, no, the Deuill is too craftie and stronge, to yeelde to so weake a weapon, but when he is disposed to play with men, that they may be the more easily seduced by him. In the Actes of the Apostles, we reade that the Deuill would not giue place to the name either of Paule, or of Iesus, pronounced by Coniurers, but played the Deuill with them. But you forget your selues, or else you alledge the Scripture most impudently. For there you note that the Deuill contemned the Exorcistes. Here you say the name of Iesus, yea and of Paul, putteth them to flight.

Furnish

RHEM. 14 Furnish your selues with such examples and grounds of Scriptures and antiquitie, and you shall contemne the aduersaries cauillations and blasphemies against the Churches practise in such things, and further also finde, these sacred actions and creatures, not onely by increase of faith, feruor, and deuotion, to purge the impuritie of our soules, and procure remission of our dayly infirmities, but that the cheefe Ministers of Christes Church, by their soueraine authoritie graunted of our Lord, may ioyne vnto the same, their blessing and remission of our veniall sinnes or spirituall debtes: as we see in Iames. S. Iames, remission of all sinnes to be annexed to the vnction with holy oyle, which to the Catholikes is a Sacrament, but to the Protestants was but a temporall ceremony, and to some of them not of Christes institution, but of the Apostles onely. In their owne sense therefore they should not marueil that such spirituall effects should proceede of the vse of sanctified creatures, whereas venial trespasses be remitted many waies, though mortall ordinarily by the Sacraments onely. S. Gregorie did commonly send his benediction and remission of sinnes, in and with such holy tokens as were sanctified by his blessing and touching of the Apostles bodies and Martyrs Relikes, as now his successors doe in the like halowed remembrances of religion. See his 7. booke, Epistle 126. and 9. booke, Epistle 60. Thus therefore and to the effects aforesaid the creatures of God be sanctified.

Remission of venial sinnes annexed to halowed creatures.

S. Gregory.

FVLKE. 14 If you furnish your selues with such stuffe as heere is brought out of the Scriptures, and the practise of the auncient Church for holy water, waxe, palmes, ashes, graines, and such like holy bables: you may easily contemne, but you shall neuer auoid the force of such arguments, as we bring against your Antichristian blasphemies. But you will further assure your besotted Disciples, that they shall finde these actions and creatures, not onely by increase of faith, feruor, and deuotion, to purge the impurities of their soules, and procure remission of their dayly infirmities, but also that the Popes, and Prelates may ioyne vnto the same, their blessing and remission of veniall sinnes, and spirituall debtes. I passe ouer the absurditie of this saying, where after so great matters without the Popes blessing so small a thing as is remission of veniall sinnes (which are washed away with a Pater noster,) is promised with the Popes blessing added to those creatures. But where learne you, that faith, feruor, and deuotion, is increased by these meanes? The worde of God acknowledgeth no such meanes, but the diligent hearing of the worde, and the vse of the Sacraments, with hartie prayers. And where is any such soueraine auctoritie graunted to the cheefe Ministers of the Church, to ioyne their blessing with remission of sinnes, to such actions and creatures? But you may faine what you list, to vphold your Antichristian kingdome, which yet shall fall and be consumed dayly by the word of the Lord, doe what you can. But you haue an argument out of S. Iames, that remission of sinnes was annexed to the vnction of holy oyle, where no such thing is said, although health of body is promised by the gift of miracles, to him that was annointed with oile, and remission of sinnes, at the prayer of the Elders of the Church, not onely of those that you call veniall, but of all his sinnes, not by any vertue annexed to the oyle, but by promise of God, that our prayers are heard, not onely for our selues, but also for our brethren. For the many waies, whereby veniall sinnes are remitted, and the onely way whereby mortall sinnes are forgiuen, it is your owne stuffe, and therefore you may dispose of it as you list. We know that al sinnes that are forgiuen to men of yeeres, are forgiuen through faith in the mercie of God reconciled to vs by Christ, which faith is confirmed by the seales of his holy Sacraments. But where you say, that mortall sinnes are ordinarily remitted, onely by the Sacraments, either you forget the Popes pardons of all sinnes A pena & culpa, or else you compt the Popes pardon an extraordinary way of remission.

Holy things of Popery.

Gregorie in deede did send many superstitious tokens, if the poscript of that Epistle be not counterfect, but yet not with such grosse termes of his blessing, and remission of sinnes, as you speake of. In the former place, among other things, he sendeth a litle key from the body of S. Peter, for his blessing, in which is inclosed (saith he) the yron of his cheynes, that that which had bound his necke to martyrdome, may loose your necke from al sinnes. Here you must vnderstand a prayer or a wish of Gregorie, or else you must acknowledge that he sent remission of all his sinnes, as well mortall as veniall by this relique, and so mortall sinnes may be remitted without a Sacrament.

In the second place he hath no such matter, but onely saith to Athilbert King of Kent: I haue sent you small tokens, which shall not be small vnto you, when they be receiued of you, with the blessing of S. Peter the Apostle. By the blessing of S. Peter, he meaneth commendations and prayers from the Bishop of Rome, as he him selfe receiued presents, with the blessing of S. Marke, when he receiued commendations from the Bishop of Alexandria. How his successors that were Antichristes openly reuealed, did behaue them selues in such matters, it is not to be merueiled.

RHEM. 15 If any man obiect that this vse of creatures is like coniuration in Necromantie, he must know the difference is, that in the Churches sanctifications and exorcismes, the Deuels be commaunded, forced, and tormented by Christes word and by prayers: but in the other wicked practises, they be pleased, honoured, and couenanted withall and therefore the first is godly and according to the Scriptures, but Necromantie abominable and against the Scriptures.

The difference betweene the Churches exorcismes and other coniurations.

FVLKE. 15 Those your exorcismes be not like coniurations, but very coniurings in deede, and the difference that you make betweene them and other coniurations, is false. For in those other coniurations the Deuils be commaunded by the names of God, and word of Christ, and by many prayers. Yet are they diuelish and abhominable abusings of the holy names and wordes of God, and so are yours, seeing you haue no more warrant out of the holy Scriptures to coniure, then they haue.

Popish coniurations.

RHEM. 16 14 The grace) S. Augustine declareth this grace to be the gift of the holy Ghost giuen vnto him by receiuing this holy Order, whereby he was made fitte to execute the office to his owne saluation and other mens. And note withall, that grace is not onely giuen in or with the Sacraments, by the vertuous faith or deuotion; but by the Sacrament, per impositionem, by imposition of hands. For so he speaketh 2. Tim. doubtles here said cum impositione, with imposition.

Grace giuen in the Sacrament of Orders.

FVLKE. 16 When you cite S. Augustine at large, you deserue small credite. The gifts of the holy Ghost were giuen to them that receiued not holy orders. And it is certaine, that Timothy was fitte for his calling, either by this extraordinary gift, or by his ordinary studie in the Scriptures, before he was ordeined, or else S. Pauls rule had been broken, which he giueth 1. Tim. 3. 2. But that any such grace is giuen by your Sacrament of orders, we can not see by experience. For he that was an vnlearned asse, before he was made Priest, is made no better then Sir Iohn Lacklatine, by his ordeined Priesthood. Where you note that grace is giuen, not onely in or with the Sacrament, but by the Sacrament, it is vaine, for this grace was commonly giuen without any Sacrament. Seeing all tooke not orders, that receiued the gifts of the holy Ghost by imposition of hands, as it is manifest in the Actes of the Apostles.

Popish orders giue no grace.

RHEM. 17 14 With imposition.) S. Paule speaketh in this place, implieth the word Imposition of handes, al the holy action and sacred wordes done and spoken ouer him when he was made Priest. Whereby (saith he) he was designed to the worke, and receiued authoritie, that he durst offer sacrifice in our Lords steede vnto God. So doth the holy Doctor

Consecration of Priests by imposition of handes.

Doctor allude vnto the wordes that are said now also in the Catholike Church to him that is made Priest: Accipe potestatem offerendi pro viuis & mortuis in nomine Domini. That is, Take or receiue thou authoritie to offer for the liuing and the dead in the name of our Lord. for the which S. Hierome also (as is noted before) saith, that the ordering of Priests is, by imposition of hands and imprecation of voice.

In Esa.c. 58.

FVLKE. 17 S. Ambrose saith: Imposition of handes are the mysticall wordes, by which he that is elected, is confirmed vnto the worke, receiuing authoritie, his conscience bearing witnesse, that he may be bold in steede of our Lord, to offer sacrifice to God. But whereas you gather that he doth allude to the words, spoken in the ordering of your Priests, is a friuolous and fond collection, for he sheweth before, that this sacrifice is by preaching and teaching, to offer the people to God. And your sacrifice he cannot meane, who take vpon you not to offer vp Christ him selfe to his Father, not to offer in the steede of Christ, as the ministers of the Gospell, in steede of Christ, exhort men to be reconciled to God. 2. Cor. 20.

Popish Sacrifice.

RHEM. 18 14 Of Priesthod.) The practise of the Church giueth vs the sense of this place, which the auncient Councel of Carthage doth thus set downe. When a Priest taketh orders, the Bishop blessing him and holding his hand vpon his head, let al the Priests present lay also their handes on his head by the Bishops hands, &c. Who seeth not now, that holy Orders giuing grace by an externall ceremonie and worke, is a Sacrament? So all the old Church vnderstood it. And S. Augustine (cont. ep. Parmen. li. 2. c. 13.) plainely saith that no man doubteth but it is a Sacrament. and lest any man thinke that he vseth not the word Sacrament properly and precisely, he ioyneth it in nature and name with Baptisme. Againe who seeth not by this vse of imposition of hands in giuing Orders and other Sacraments, that Christ, the Apostles, and the Church may borow of the Iewish rites, certaine conuenient ceremonies and Sacramental actions, seeing this same (as ~~the Heretikes can not deny~~) was receiued of the maner of Ordering Aaron and the Priests of the old law or other heades of the people? See Exod. 39. Num. 27, 23.

Holy Orders Sacrament.

Beza in cap. 6. Act.

FVLKE. 18 By any thing that you alledge, we see not how it doth giue any grace, and much lesse that it is a Sacrament. For the grace whereof S. Paule speaketh, was an extraordinarie gift, and followeth not alway imposition of handes in the ordering of Ministers. And if it did, yet followeth it not, that imposition of handes is a Sacrament. For it must be an element, and not an externall action onely, that maketh a Sacrament in that sense, We say Baptisme and the Lords Supper, are Sacraments. Your reason to proone, that S. Augustine calleth Holie order a Sacrament, as precisely and properly, as he doth Baptisme, is sufficient, because he ioyneth it in name with Baptisme, for so he doth the Catechumens bread mentioned sect. 12. with the Lords Supper, yet it followeth not, that he calleth it a Sacrament in the same nature, that the Lords Supper is a Sacrament. That Christ and his Apostles, by the spirite of Christ, vsed the ceremonie of imposition of handes, according to the Law, it is no warrant for the popish Church, to borow the Iewish rites, ceremonies, and Sacramentall actions, but it argueth an Antichristian spirite in her, which presumeth that she may doe all thinges that Christ and his Apostles by his commaundement, did in the Law abrogated by Christ. But the true Church of Christ submitteth her selfe to the doctrine of Christ, and his Apostles in all things, and is content with those ceremonies which Christ, and his Apostles by his commandement, haue left vnto her.

Iewish ceremonies.

RHEM. 19 16 Saue both thy selfe.) Though Christ be our onely Sauiour, yet the Scriptures forbeare not to speake freely and vulgarly and in a true sense, that man also may saue himselfe and others. But the Protestants notwithstanding folow such a captious kinde of Diuinitie that if a man speake any such thing of our Ladie or any Saint in heauen, or other meanes of procuring saluation, they make it a derogation to Christs honour. with such hypocrites haue we now a daies to doe.

Men also are called Sauiours without derogation to Christ.

FVLKE. 19 When you can proone any such office to be appointed by Christ, vnto the blessed Virgine Marie, and the Sainctes in heauen, to procure saluation vnto vs as is by Christ committed to the Ministers of the Gospell, we will not spare to say, that the Virgine Mary, and the Sainctes doe saue vs, that is, are instruments or meanes of our saluation, as the Apostle saith here to Timothy. But if you are not able to proone, such office or charge committed to them, we may say, we haue to doe not onely with blasphemous hypocrites, but also with vnlearned Heretikes, that gather so absurdly out of this text, that the glorie of our saluation may be ascribed to creatures, who haue not so much as any ministerie therein, by Gods appointment, Sainctes departed saue vs not.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. V.

RHEM. 1 5 Praiers night.) Because of this continuall praier which standeth not with coniugal and carnal actes of matrimonie (as the Apostle signifieth 1. Cor. 7,5.) therfore were these widowes to liue in the state of perpetual continencie.

FVLKE. 1 All Christian men and women are commaunded to pray continually, Luc. 18, 1. of which many are maried, therefore continual praier may stand with mariage. But S. Paule 1. Cor. 7,5. speaketh of some special times, in which more feruent praier with fasting is requisite. Continuall praier may stand with mariage.

RHEM. 2 17 Worthy of double honour.) Double honour and liuelihood due to good Priests.

FVLKE. 2 We see double honour, but double liuelihood we see not in the text. Forget not your owne preferment, and worldly aduancement, howsoeuer you doe.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. V.

RHEM. 3 3 Widowes in deede.) S. Ambrose calleth them widowes and desolate in deed, that might marie, but to make them selues better and more worthie of God, refuse mariage, which they know to be but once blessed, imitating holy Anne, who in fasting and prayers serued God night and day, neuer knowing but one husband: Such professed widowes then are to be honoured and succoured. Neither doth he speake onely of the Churches widowes (of whom specially after ward) but of all that by profession kept their widowhod, exhorting them to passe their time in praier and fasting, verse 5. Which was an honourable and holy state much written of, and commended in the primitiue Church, namely by S. Ambrose and by S. Augustine, who wrote bookes intitled thereof, and make it next to virginitie. Ambr. de viduis. Augustin. de bono viduitatis.

FVLKE. 3 Theodoret sayth, he speaketh of the Church widowes from the beginning and so forth. They must haue oile of the Church (saith he) which haue none other helpe or comfort. S. Ambrose sayth nothing to the contrary. But that second mariages were not blessed in his Church it was a smacke of Montanisme, wherein lay hid the mysterie of iniquitie: for the second mariage is no lesse blessed of God (if it be in the Lord) then the first. And yet the state of widowhod, that liueth continently in praier and fasting, is honorable, and more free to serue God in some respects, then the state of wedlocke. Ambr. in hunc locum. Luk. c. 2. 37. Widowhod.

RHEM. 8 He hath denied.) Not that by this or by any other deadly sinne (except incredulitie or doubtfulnesse in beliefe.) they lose their faith: but that their factes be not answerable to their faith and to Christian religion, which prescribeth all such duetie.

RHEM. 4 9 Let a widowe be chosen.) Now he speaketh more particularly and specially of such widowes as were nourished and found by the oblations of the faithful and the almes of the Church, and did withall some necessarie seruices about women that were to be professed or baptized, for their instruction and addressing to that and other Sacraments, and also about the sicke and impotent: and withall sometimes they had charge of the Church goods or the dispositions of them under the Deacons in respect whereof they also and the like are called Diaconissæ. Eusebius lib. 6. cap. 35. reciteth out of Cornelius Epistle, that in the Church of Rome there is one Bishop, 40. Priestes, fiue Deacons, seuen Subdeacons, Acoluthi 42. Exorcistes, Lectors, and ostiarij 52. widowes together with the poore 150. all which God nourisheth in his Church. See Act. Apost. cap. 6. S. Chrysostome lib. 3. de Sacerdotio propius finem. S. Epiphanius in hæresi 77. Collyridianorum. Now then, what manner of women should be taken into the fellowship of such as were found of the Church he further declareth. Widowes called Diaconissæ, and their office.

FVLKE. 4 That Diaconesses were appointed to some necessarie seruice about women that were to be professed, or baptized for their instruction, and addressing to that and other sacraments you say, but without sufficient proofe: for that which Epiphanius speaketh, is not necessarily to be vnderstood of Baptisme, or any other Sacrament.

RHEM. 5 9 The wife of one husband.) If you would haue a plaine patterne of Heretical fraud, corruption, and adulteration of the naturall sense of Gods word, and an inuincible demonstration that these newe Glosers haue their consciences seared and hartes obdurated, willingly peruerting the Scriptures against that which they know is the meaning thereof, to the maintenance of their sectes: marke well their handling of this place about these widowes of the Church. S. Paul prescribeth such onely to be admitted as haue been the wiues of one husband, that is to say, once onely maried, not admitting any that hath bene twise maried. By which wordes the Catholikes proue first, that the like phrase vsed before of Bishops and Deacons, that they should be the husbands of one wife, must needes signifie that they cannot be twise maried, nor admitted to these and the like functions, if they were more then once maried before. Secondly, we proue by this place against the Aduersaries, that the state of widowhod is more worthie, honorable, decent, and pure in respect of the seruice of the Church, and more to be releiued of the reuenewes therof, then the state of maried folkes, and that not onely (as the Aduersaries perhaps may answere) for their greater necessitie, to more leisure, freedome, or expedition to serue, in that they be not combered with husband and household, but in respect of their viduall continencie, chastitie, and puritie. for els such as were widowes with intention and freedome to marie afterward might haue been admitted by the Apostle, as well as those that were purer to marie againe. Their widowes must haue had but one husband whereof many Catholike conclusions are deduced. Chap. 3. 2

Thirdly, we proue that second mariage not onely after admission to the almes or seruice of the Church, but before also, is disseruiceable and a signe of incontinencie or more lust and fleshlinesse then is agreeable or comely for any person belonging to the Church: and consequently, that the Apostle in the last Chapter treating of the holy functions of Bishops, Priestes, Deacons, and of the Churches refusing generally bigamos or twise maried persons, must needs much more meane that no man twise maried should be receiued to holy Orders: and further, that women were admitted to be widowes of the Church, that euer intended to marie againe, so none should euer be receiued to minister the Sacraments (which is a thing infinitely more, and requireth more puritie, and continencie, then the office or state of the said widowes,) that intended to marie againe. To receiue the body of Christ (saith S. Hierom in Apolog. pro lib. cont. Iouin. Epist. 50. cap. 6.) is a greater and holier thing then praier, and therefore Priestes that must both continually pray and also be occupied about the receiuing or ministring the holy Sacrament daily, must liue continently. 3

Fourthly, we proue that it is not vnlawful to annexe by precept or the parties promise single life vnto the whole state or order of the faithfull, because the Apostle and the whole Church in his time ioyned to this state of the Churches widowes perpetuall continencie. Fifely, we proue hereby that to refuse and not to accept the twise married, or such as will not liue single, into the state of widowes or holy Orders, is not to condemne or forbid second mariage, or once and often marying, with the Manichees according to the doctrine of Diuels, as the Protestantes (and before them the olde condemned Eunomianistes) doe blaspheme the Church. for then did S. Paul allow and teach doctrine of Deuils, who refuseth a twise maried woman, & willeth others by their entering into this state, neuer to marie againe: as no doubt he did the Clergie men spoken vnto in the next chapter before. Thus loe we Catholikes conferre and confer the Scriptures, and for this meaning we haue all the doctors without exception. What shift then haue the Heretikes here? for marie and remarie they must, let the Scriptures and all the Doctors in the world say nay to it. In truth they doe not expound the word of God, but flee from the euidence of it, some one way and some an other. 4 5

FVLKE. 5 If not onely the circumstance of the text, but also the iudgement of auncient fathers interpreting the same, doth warrant our handling of this place, what meane these hideous out cries of these popish hypocrites? Saint Paul (you say) prescribeth such onely to be chosen, as haue been but once maried. We denie that: for he requireth such as haue beene of honest conuersation, and therefore haue not had two husbands aliue at once: therefore your popish conclusions be such, as they are accustomed to be, that is, vaine and inconsequent. But let vs examine them in order: First you proue, that the like phrase vsed before of Bishops and Deacons, that they shall be the husbands of one wife, must needes signifie that they cannot be twise maried &c. To this I answere: First, the phrases are not like, for in them he sayth, him that is the husband of one wife: Here he sayth, her that hath bene the wife of one husband. Secondly, as he that hath beene twise maried, is husband of one wife as well in his second mariage, as in his first: so she that hath neuer had but one husband at one time, is said to haue beene the wife of one husband. Twise maried not excluded.

Secondly you proue, that the state of widowhod is more worthy, honorable, decent and pure, in respect of the seruice of the Church &c. then of maried folke: but no such thing followeth of the text, but you replie, that els such as were widowes with intention to marie, might haue beene admitted, as well as those that were neuer to marie. This is no good consequent, for those that might haue sufficient releefe by their mariage, were not to be releeued of the publike almes of the Church, neither were meete for the seruice of the Church, which they must leaue when they are maried, and attend vpon their husbands. Whereas Priestes and Deacons maried, or to be maried, are not in subiection to their wiues, as women are to their husbands, therefore may serue the Church, which the other coulde not.

Thirdly you proue, that second mariage is disagreeable, and a signe of Incontinencie, and more lust and fleshlines, then is agreeable or comely for any person belonging to the Church: But if the second mariage is not refused in widowes, you proue nothing. For although the naturall infirmitie of incontinency, is declared by often repeating of mariage, yet seeing mariage is an holy medicine for that disease, it hindreth no more once vsed then often. S. Hierome also sheweth, that there may be greater continencie shewed in some that haue beene twise maried, then in some other, that haue been but once maried, in Tit. 1. Therefore the Apostle in the third chapter, refused not them that had been twise maried, but them that had more wiues at once then one, as I haue proued in that place sufficiently. Neither doth it follow, that as none were to be admitted widowes, that intended to marie, so none ought to be admitted to minister the sacraments, that intendeth to marie. For though it be a greater thing to minister the sacrament, then to serue in the place of widowes, yet the reason for mariage is far different. The widowes office could not be executed of them that were vnder their husbands auctoritie, the sacraments may be ministred by maried men. The widowes were not to be chosen vnder threescore yeeres of age, when the disease of incontinencie is healed by nature. The ministers of the sacraments, cannot be chosen all of such age, as that infirmitie may be like to haue left them: therefore they are not to be restrayned from that remedie, which God hath prouided for them. If receiuing of the body of Christ, should hinder the libertie of mariage, (as you gather out of S. Hierome) then in those Churches, where they receiued the body of Christ euery day, there ought to haue beene no maried folkes: and that such there were, it is manifest by S. Augustine, Epi. 117. yea the Church of Rome had that custome in his time, and most Churches of the West.

Fourthly you proue, that it is not vnlawfull to annexe by precept, or the parties promise single life to a whole state or order of the faithfull, because the Apostle &c. I answere, the Apostle requireth not abstinence from mariage, but of such persons as had no neede to marie, neither doth he prohibite mariage in any order of the faithfull, but requireth that such be receiued to this seruice of the Church, as neither had any necessitie to marie, nor by marying, should forsake their charge once taken in hand. Therefore it followeth not hereof, that the Pope, or any other which are farre inferiour to the Apostle, hath auctoritie to forbid mariage in any order of the faithfull, which is expresly contrary to the Apostles doctrine, 1. Tim. 4.

Fifthly you proue, that to refuse the twise maried, or such as will not liue single, is not to condemne second mariages. In this argument you take that which is in controuersie, that the Apostle refused the twise maried: which if he had done, it had beene some mislike of second mariages, but that he doth not. He refuseth them that will not liue single, because that seruice of women required them, that were not vnder subiection of their husbands. And this he doth without any reproche vnto mariage, for he willeth the yonger widowes to marie. But if after mariage repeated holily, and by the Apostles counsell, they should be depriued for euer, of the releefe of the Church, and the honour of widowhod: he should both iniuriously will them to mary, and signifie some mislike or reproch of second mariage, by which they should be made vnworthy of that office in the Church. Therefore it is certaine that the Apostle meaneth, of them that had liued honestly in mariage, whether they were once or twise maried, and haue not had more husbands then one, at one time. Therefore your conference, and your construction sheweth your selues not onely to be great Clearkes, but also wonderfull wise men, to make such bragges of it, and such outcries against vs.

IEM. 6 *And of all other, their extremest and most shamefull tergiuersation is, that the Apostle here forbiddeth * not the admission of such widowes as haue been twise maried, but onely them that haue had two husbands at once. Which was a very improbable and extorted exposition before, concerning Bishops and Deacons cap. 3. and (as S. Hierom saith ep. 83.) malo nodo manus culeus: but here that an exception should be made onely against widowes that had had two husbands together (which was a thing neuer lawfull nor neuer heard of) that is a most intollerable impudentie, and a construction that neuer came to any wise mans cogitation before: and yet those their fansies must be Gods worde, and* bigamus or bigamiâ must against their olde natures and vse of all writers, be all one with Polygamus and Polygamiâ. They giue an example of such widowes in women diuorced iustly from their husbands in the olde lawe. As though S. Paul here tooke order for the Iewes widowes onely, or that had been such a common case among the Iewes also, that the Apostle needed to take so carefull order for it. Finally, they let not to say that if the Apostle should be vnderstood to refuse a widowe twise maried at sundry times, it were vnreasonable and iniurious to second mariages, which haue no more indecencie or signe of incontinencie (say they) then the first. Thus bold they are with the Apostles and all antiquitie. Bera vpon this place. The Caluinists most absurd exposition of the Apostles words. Their blasphemy against the plaine text.

LKE. 6 Howe true our exposition of the husband of one wife is, I haue shewed by sufficient reasons, and as good auctoritie of auncient fathers as S. Hierome is. But here you say, it is most intollerable impudencie, and a construction that neuer came to any wise mans cogitation before, to say, that heare is an exception onely against such widowes as haue had two husbands together: why so my masters? because it was a thing neuer lawfull nor heard of. In deede I confesse it was neuer lawful: but it hath been often heard of, that one woman hath beene maried to a second husband, when her first husband was aliue. And I thinke not the contrarie, but you may heare of some such in Rhemes. And such women because of their infamie, though afterward they repented, and became honest women, were vnmeete to be admitted to any office in the Church. Of Polygamie and Bigamie, Twise maried lawfully are not excluded.

I haue spoken sufficiently vpon the third chapter, and who of auncient time was called διγαμὸς, and what is διγαμία. But where you say, we giue example of such widowes, in women diuorced iustly from their husbands in the olde law, You slander vs, for we giue example of such as were diuorced vniustly, either among the Iewes or among the Gentiles, and not them onely, but such as had forsaken their first husband, & were vnlawfully coupled with an other. For many such wicked women, as well as wicked men, were conuerted to the faith, and became good Christians: yet for their former infamous life, were not meete for the seruice of the Church. When we say, it were vnreasonable and iniurious to second mariages, if the Apostle shoulde refuse widowes that haue liued chastly in mariage, though they had beene twise maried: we speake no blasphemie against the text, but by those arguments proue, that the text is not against such widowes. Neither is there any indecencie, or intemperancie in the second mariage, more then in the first, when the second as well as the first, is approoued by God, to be an honorable and vnpolluted remedie, of the naturall infirmitie of incontinencie. But because you say, we are thus bolde with the Apostle and all antiquitie, beside that you called our exposition a most intollerable impudencie, and a construction that neuer came to anie wise mans cogitation. You shall heare what one of good antiquitie, sober, and wise, as any in Rhemes, I dare say, writeth of this matter. Slander.

Theodoret by name, vpon these very wordes of the text: Heare of also it is manifest, that he reiecteth not second mariages, but decreeth, that they liue chastely in matrimonie: for he which before hath established the second maryage by lawe, hath not here forbidden her which hath beene twise maried, to obteine bodily reliefe. Theophylactus saieth vpon this text, Hee requireth of her Monogamie, that is, that she hath beene coupled to one husband (at once) as a signe of honestie, chastitie, and good manners: for it is no signe of dishonestie, vnchastenesse, or ill maners to haue had two husbands lawfully. The other place Chapter 3. hee expoundeth plainely to be meant onely against Polygamie, or many wiues at once. Yea S. Ambrose expounding this text in his booke de viduis saith: Neither truely if any woman haue fallen into the second mariage (which the Apostolike precepts doe not condemne) if she be againe loosed from her husband, is kept of from the effect of widowhod, as though she had lost the fruite of shamefastnesse: for euen she, shall haue the rewarde of her latewarde chastitie, but she shall be more approoued, which hath not tried the second mariage.

Tertullian in his booke de velandis virginibus, interpreteth widowes vniuirae id est nuptae aliquando. Wiues of one husband, that is, such as haue beene maried in times past, by which exposition such as haue beene twise maried, may be vnderstood: and yet when he was a Montanist, he was an enimie to second mariages. By these you see, that our exposition is neither vntollerable, nor vnworthy of the cogitation of wise men, though the Rhemish Doctors fret neuer so much against it.

RHEM. 7 11 Wanton in Christ.) Widowes waxing warme, idle, and well fedde by the Church, lust after husbands, as also Apostate-Priests and Superintendets marrie, specially after they haue gotten good Ecclesiasticall liuings. which is to waxe wanton in Christ, or against Christ, κατὰ χριστοῦ. *The Greeke word signifieth to cast off the raines or bridle, that is, the bond or promis of continencie which they had put vpon them. *κατατρηνιῶσι FVLKE. 7 If widowes waxing warme, idle, and well fedde, did lust after husbands, what doe Popish Votaries, Prelates and Priestes, more warme, more idle, and better fedde then those poore widowes were, lust after? nothing but chastitie? Verily, when they were warme, idle, and wel fedde in England, it is well knowen, they lusted not for wiues, but to quench the fire of their concupiscence, with all filthinesse and vncleannesse, as their manifold actes beare witnesse. The Apostle saith, the yonger sort of widowes, if they waxe wanton against Christ, will cast off the bond or promise of continencie, as you expound it. And what thinke you, wil the yoonger nonnes, monkes, and priestes do? will they keepe the promise of continencie? no verily, as the effects haue shewed. But so they doe not marrie, what filthinesse so euer they commit, the bond or promise of continencie with you, is well ynough kept, being made belike with that condition, Si non castè, tamen cautè. If not chastely, yet warely: ye many haue not kept it warily, but that they haue beene openly conuicted of incontinencie. Popish chastitie.

RHEM. 8 11 They wil.) In the chastitie of widowhod or virginitie (saith S. Augustine) the excellencie of a greater gift is sought for. Which being once desired, chosen, and offered to God by vow, it is not onely damnable to enter afterward into mariage, but though it come not actually to mariage, onely to haue the will to marrie is damnable. Aug. li. de bono viduit. cap. 9. The very will to breake the vow of chastitie, is damnable.

FVLKE. 8 They that haue a will to marrie, and therefore doe not marrie, because they can not without punishment, which should do better to be maried, then to be burned, that is, to be wasted with secret flame of lust in lust it selfe, whom it repenteth of their profession, and they are wearie of it, except they reforme their heart, and by the feare of God againe ouercome lust, are to bee compted for dead women. So writeth Augustine of professed virgins. De sancta virgine. cap. 34. Better for vocaries to marie then to burne.

RHEM. 9 12 Hauing damnation.) *It signifieth not blame, checke, or reprehension of men, as some to make the faulte seeme lesse, would haue it: but * iudgement or eternall damnation, which is a heauie sentence. God graunt all maried Priests and Religious may consider their lamentable case. What a grieuous sinne it is, see S. Ambrose* ad virginem lapsam cap. 5, & 8. *κρῖμα.

FVLKE. 9 Epiphanius distinguisheth iudgement, which is the Apostles word, from condemnation, speaking of them that had maried after the vowe of continencie, and saith. Better is iudgement, then condemnation: for they which least they should be made ashamed before men, doe commit fornication priuilie, and fulfill their lust vnder the shewe of single life and continence, haue not shame before men but before God, which knoweth their secretes, and at his comming shall conuince all flesh, as euery one hath sinned. Votaries may marie rather then burne.

Therefore it is better to haue one sinne, and not many, it is better for him that hath fallen from his course, openly to take a wife to him, according to the law, and to repent a long time from his iniquitie, and so againe to be restored vnto the Church, as one that hath done euil, as one that is fallen and broken, and hath neede of binding vp, and not to be daily wounded of the secret dartes of that wickednesse, which is put into him by the deuill. S. Cyprian saith of vowed virgines, that were taken a bed with men, and yet said they were chaft. If they cannot or will not continue, it is better that they mary, then that they fal into the fire with their pleasures, at least let them giue no offence to the brethren and sisters. ep 62. The same iudgement hath Hierom ad Demetriadem. The name of some that behaue not themselues wel, doth defame the holy purpose of virgines, and the glory of the heauenly and angelike familie: to whom it must be said openly, that eyther they should mary, if they cannot liue continently, or els they should liue continently, if they will not mary. By this it appeareth, that the auncient fathers although they preferred virginitie, or continencie in them that had vowed the same: yet they allowed mariage in them that could not performe their vowe.

RHEM. 10 12 Their first faith.) All the auncient fathers that euer wrote commentaries vpon this Epistle, Greeke and Latine, as S. Chrysostome, Theodoret, Oecumenius, Theophylactus, Primasius, S. Ambrose, Ven. Bede, Haimo, Anselme, and the rest: also all others that by occasion vse this place, as the 4. Councell of Carthage cap. 104. and the 4. of Toleto cap. 55. S. Athanasius lib. de virginitate. S. Epiphanius hær. 48. S. Hierom cont. Iouinianum lib. 1. cap. 7. & in cap. 44. Ezech. prope finem finem S. Augustine in exceeding many places: all these expound the Apostles wordes of the vowe of Chastitie or the faith and promis made to Christ to liue continently. What is to breake their first faith? saith S. Augustine. They vowed, and perfourmed not. in Psal. 75. prope finem. Againe in an other place, They breake their first faith, that stand not in that which they vowed. lib. de Sancta virgin. cap. 33. Againe he and all the fathers with him in Carthage Councell before named: If any widowes, how yong so euer they were left of their husbands deceased, haue vowed themselues to God, left their laical habite, and vnder the testimonie of the Bishop & Church haue appeared in religious weede, and afterward go any more to secular mariage, according to the Apostles sentence they shall be damned, because they were so bold to make voide the faith or promis of chastitie which they vowed to our Lord. So saith he and 215. fathers moe in that Councell.

Breaking of their first faith, is (by the consent of all antiquitie) when they breake their vow of chastitie.

And this promis of chastitie is called, faith, because the fidelitie betwixt maried persons is ordinarily called of holy writers, faith: and the vowe of chastitie made to God, ioyneth him and the persons so vowing, as it were in mariage, so far, that if the said persons breake promis, they are counted and called in the last alleaged Councell, Gods adulterers. In the third to the Romanes also and often els where, faith is taken for promis or fidelitie. And that it is so taken here, the wordes irritum facere (to frustrate and make voide) do proue. for that terme is commonly vsed in matter of vowe, promis, or compact. Gen. 17. Num. 30. This promis is called here prima fides (the first faith) in respect of the later promis which vowbreakers make to them with whom they pretend to marry. So saith S. Augustine lib. de bono viduit. cap. 8. and 9. and Innocentius 1. Epist. 2. cap. 13. tom. 1. Conc. And this is the onely native, euident, and agreeable sinse to the circumstances of the letter. And the vaine euasion of the Heretikes to saue the Apostate-Monkes, Friers, Nunnes, and Priestes from damnation for their pretended mariages, is friuolous: to wit, that first faith here signifieth the faith of Baptisme or Christian beleefe, and not the promis or vowe of Chastitie. But we aske them if this faith of Baptisme be broken by mariage or no. For the text is plaine that by intending to marie, they breake their faith, and by breaking their faith they be damned, if they die without repentaunce. In trueth which way so euer they writhe them selues to defend their sacrilege or pretended mariages, they loose their labour and struggle against their owne conscience and plaine Scripture.

Why this vow is called faith or fidelite.

Why the first

The heretikes expositio of this first faith, impossible and against the text.

FYLKE. 10 Although the most of the auncient fathers, doe expound this first faith of the vowe or promise of continencie, yet no such thing can be proued of the text. For first, the Apostle speaketh not of widowes already chosen, but of widowes to be chosen, willing yong widowes not to be chosen, because their was danger in such, of lasciuiousnesse against Christ, to mary euen to infidels, and to renounce their Christian faith: whereof he giueth example, of some that had forsaken Christ, and folowed Satan, which were not Deaconesses, but other wanton widowes. For this cause Tertullian writeth his second booke to his wife, charging her, that if she would needes mary after his death, yet she should not mary vnto an Infidel, as diuers had done.

Vow of continencie.

Secondly, the first faith is improperly called the vowe of continencie, but the faith of Christianitie is rightly called the first faith: against which exposition you aske, if the faith of Baptisme be broken by mariage or no? I answere not by mariage, but by mariage against Christ, by so marying, as they renounce Christianitie, and followe Satan: for these things the Apostle præmiseth, and not mariage only, or entendement to mary: and it is but an inforced interpretation of the first faith made to Christ, to be in respect of the second faith giuen to their husbandes. For the Apostle speaketh not of any faith of continencie made to Christ, therefore you proue that to bee the first faith, by that which is in controuersie, and so you doe nothing but begge the principle.

But admit that the first faith, according to the interpretation of the auncient fathers, doeth signifie the promise of continencie made to God, or the Church, yet by the auctoritie of the same fathers, such as haue made a rash vowe, which they are not able to performe, are willed to marie lawfully, rather then to burne, and liue single incontinently. And therefore which way soeuer you take it, mariage of votaries, that can not conteine, is not prohibited.

S. Paul meaneth not that widowes professed should marie,

RHEM. 11 14 I will the yonger.) He speaketh of such yong ones as were yet free. For such as had already made vowe, neither could they without damnation marie, were they yong or olde, nor be without sinne commaund or counsell them to it. Neither (as S. Hierome prooueth to [a] Gerontia, and S. Chrysostome vpon this place) doeth he precisely commaund or counsell the yong ones that were free, to marie, or absolutely forbidde them to vowe Chastitie: God forbidde, say they. But his speach conteyneth onely a wise admonition to the frailer sort, that it were farre better for them not to haue vowed at all, but to haue maried againe, then to haue fallen to aduoutrie and Apostasie after profession. Which is no more but to preferre second mariage before fornication: and a good warning, that they which are to professe, looke well what they doe. S. Pauls experience of the fall of some yong ones to mariage, caused him to giue this admonition here: as also that before, that none shoulde be receiued to the Churches almes vnder threescore yeeres of age. Not forbidding the Church for euer, to accept any vowes of widowes or virgins til that age, as the Heretikes falsely affirme: but shewing what was meete for that time, and the beginning of Christianity, when as yet there were no Monasteries builded, no prescript rule, no exact order of obedience to Superiors: but the professed (as S. Paul here noteth) coursed and wandred vp and downe idly, as now our professed virgins or Nunnes do not, neither can do. Of whom therfore, where discipline is obserued, there is no cause of such danger. Besides that widowes hauing had the vse of carnal copulation before, are more dangerously tempted, then virgins that are brought vp from their tender age in pietie and haue no experience of such pleasures. See S. Ambrose li. de viduis, prouing by the example of holy Anna, who liued a widow euen from her youth til 80 yeeres of age, in fasting and praying night and day, that the Apostle doth not here without exception forbid al yong widowes to vow, yea he esteemeth that profession in the yonger women much more laudable, glorious, and meritorious. See his booke de viduis in initio.

It is better for the frailer sort that are in danger of faling, to marie rather then to vow.

Yong women may be professed and taken into religion.

[a] Hieronyme Ageruchiæ.

FYLKE. 11 He neither commaundeth nor counselleth all widowes in generall to marrie, but the yong widowes that haue not the gift of continencie, he willeth and commaundeth to marrie. S. Paul saith, I will, Nouatus saith I will not (saith Theodoret,) in like maner as we may say: S. Paul saith, I wil that the yonger widowes marrie, the Pope saith: I will not that the yonger widowes marrie, but let them hardly take the mantle and the ring, whether they be assured of the gift of continencie, or no. The Apostle in deede speaketh not of such as were professed, but he forbiddeth expresly any to be professed (if he speake at all of profession) before 60. yeeres of age, when the heate of lust is past. Therefore where he counselleth widowes and virgiues to continue, he meaneth they should continue so, freely without vow, as long as God will giue them grace. But if they had made a vow already (say you) neither they could marrie without damnation, nor he commaund or counsel them without sin. Thus bold you are with the Apostle. As though it were sinne to breake an vnlawfull vow, when it is sinne to make such a vow. But to vow that which is not in our power to perfourme, is to make an vnlawful vow. And such is the vow of continencie, in them that haue not the gift of continencie. Therfore the Apostle doth not only preferre second mariage before fornication, but also expresly commaundeth that none be chosen to that office which required an vnmarried woman, but such an one as was threescore yeere olde at the least. Therefore the Pope and his Cleargie, admitting either widowes or virgins to professe or vow continencie before that age, do sinne against the expresse commaundement of the holy Ghost. But this prohibition you are not ashamed to denie to be perpetual, affirming that it was onely meete for that time, and the beginning of Christianitie. But the incontinencie of such young persons in all times, proueth that it is necessarie for euer, which was necessary in his time, to auoide incontinencie. And therefore your reason of the want of Monasteries, and Monkish or Nonnish rules and orders (which you doe honestly confesse not to haue been in the Apostles time) cannot restraine his precept to that time onely. For the incontinencie of Nonnes and Monkes in cloysters, and vnder all your rules and orders, hath and doeth daily giue sufficient proofe, that lust will not be kept out by the walles of your Monasteries, nor by the rules and prescripts of your orders. Therefore, as the experience of some yonger widowes that had followed after Satan, was a sufficient reason to cause the Apostle to refuse al yong widowes to the office of Deaconesses, so the experience of so many milch Nonnes, and filthie Monks & Friers, teach vs, that no yong persons are to be admitted to any vow or profession of perpetual continencie. For your other reason is vaine, of virgins, that haue not had experience of carnal concupiscence as widowes haue had, & confuted by infinite examples of vnchast Nonnes. Beside that they are oftentimes more burned, that haue not had that experience (as good writers testifie of gelded men) then they that haue quenched that lust in lawful matrimonie. And those Nonnes that haue not the gift of continencie, are not voyde of experience, although they haue it not in lawfull matrimonie. Yea, the deuil himselfe helpeth them in their abominable lustes, as Wierus testifieth of open experience in diuers Nonneries in Germanie, and namely of one in the borders of the prouince of Collen, where the deuil in the likenesse of a dogge, was seene to fall vpon them in the day time in most beastly maner, about the yeere of our Lord 1558. Also in the Nonnerie of Nazareth in Collen, the Nonnes in most filthie manner, suffered the same illusion oftentimes in the presence and sight of many. Anno 1564. De præstig. Dæmon. lib. 3. cap. 9. & 11. edit tert. If therefore the example of some that were turned after Satan, was thought a sufficient reason to the Apostle, to refuse yong widowes, what doth so many examples of Nonnes, not onely spiritually turned after Satan, as the Apostle meaneth, but euen in their bodies made the slaues of Satã, but cry out against the wickednes of Antichrist, that so contumeliously reiecteth the Apostles precept, & professeth Nonnes and widowes (be they neuer so yong) many times against their owne consent, being extorted rather then perswaded thereto? Therefore as the pure chastitie of virgins and widowes, is glorious and worthily praised of the ancient fathers, so it ought to be free, that it may be of greater commendation and a more noble victorie, and not bound with vowes, neither ought any yong person that is not assured of the gift of perpetuall continencie, to be admitted to make any solemne vow or open profession thereof, by the Apostles doctrine.

RHEM. 12 15 After Satan.) We may heare learne, that for those to marry which are professed; is to turne backe after Satan. For he speaketh of such as were maried contrarie to their vow. And hereupon we call the Religious that marie (as Luther, Bucer, Peter martyr and the rest) Apostataes. More we learne, that such yong ones haue no excuse of their age, or that they be vehemently tempted and burne in their concupiscences, or that they haue not the gift of Chastitie. For notwithstanding al these excuses, these yong professed widowes if they marie, go backward after Satan, and be Apostataes, and damned, except they repent. For as for the Apostles wordes to the Corinthians, It is better to marrie then to burne, We haue before declared out of the fathers, and here we ad, that it perteineth onely to persons that be free and haue not vowed to the contrarie, as S. Ambrose li. ad virg. lapse. c. 5. S Augustine de bono vid. c. 8. and S. Hierom li. 1. cont. Iouin. c. 7. expound it.

To marrie after the vow of Chastitie, is to go after Satan.

1. Cor. 7.

The heretikes of our time thinke there is no remedie for fornication or burning, but mariage, and so did S. Augustine when he was yet a Manichee. Putabam me miserum &c. I thought (saith he li. 6. Confes. c. 11.) that I should be an vnhappie and miserable man if I should lacke the companie of a woman, and the medicine of thy mercie to heale the same infirmitie I thought not vpon, because I had not tried it: and imagined that continencie was in a mans owne power and libertie, which in my self I did not feele: beeing so foolish not to vnderstand that no man can be continent vnles thou giue it, Verely thou wouldest giue it, if with inward mourning I would knocke at thy eares, and with sound faith would cast my care vpon thee.

The heretikes only remedie against concupiscence is mariage.

By all which you may easily proue, that chastitie is a thing that may lawfully be vowed, that it is not impossible to be fulfilled by praier, fasting, and chastisement of mens concupiscence, that it is a thing more grateful to God then the condition of maried persons. for els it should not be required either in the Cleargie or in the Religious. finally, that it is most abominable to perswade the poore virgins or other professed to such sacrilegious wedlocke, which S. Augustine auoucheth to be worse then aduoutry. De bon. vidu. c. 4. 11. Iouinian was the first that euer made mariage equal with virginitie or chast life, for which he was condemned of hereste. Aug. in argumento li. de bono Coniugali. De pec. merit. li. 3. c. 7. Li. de hæres. hær. 82. He was the first that perswaded professed virgins to marie, which S. Augustine saith was so clerely and without question wicked, that it could neuer infect any Priest, but certaine miserable Nunnes. Yea for this strange persuasion he calleth Iouinian a monster, saying of him thus Li. 2. Retract. cap. 22. The holy Church that is there (at Rome) most faithfully and stoutly resisted this monster. S. Hierom calleth the said Heretike and his complices, Christian epicures. li. 2 cont Iouin. c. 19. See S. Ambrose ep. 82 ad Vercellensem episcopum in initio. But what would these holy doctors haue said, if they had liued in our doleful time, when the Protestants go quite away with this wickednes, and call it Gods word?

The vow of chastitie lawful, possible to be kept, more grateful to God. Iouinians heresie in this point, condemned of old, is called of the Protestants, Gods word.

FVLKE. 12 The Apostle speaketh not of any widowes chosen to the Ministerie of the Church, but of wanton yong widowes which had forsaken Christ. For such yong widowes were neuer eligible to that office: S. Paul therefore doeth not make a new lawe vpon occasion of them that were fallen, but by example of them, sheweth a reason of the lawe of the Church, which refused yonger widowes, then of 60. yeeres olde. Therefore he saith not, that for Votaries to marrie is to turne after Satan. For saith Primasius, They are turned after Satan, either denying the faith of God, or committing fornication. S. Augustine saith, By these wordes we may vnderstand, that those whome he would haue to marrie, might better conteine then marrie, but that it is better for them to marrie then to go after Satan: that is, from that excellent purpose of virginitie or widowhod, by looking backe to fall and perish. And that for such to marie, is not to goe after Satan: he sheweth that the mariage of such is not to be condemned, but the breach of their purpose, which (saith he) That the Apostle might briefly insinuate, he would not say, that they haue damnation, which marrie after the purpose of greater holines, not because they are not condemned, but lest the marriage it self in them might be thought to be condemned. De bono viduit. cap. 8. & 9. Therefore for them that are professed, to be maried, is not to be turned after Satan. But if they haue bene rashly professed, and are not able to perfourme that vow of continencie, it is better to marrie then to burne by the iudgement of Cyprian, Epiphanius, Hierom and Augustine, as I haue shewed before Sect. 8. 9. Neither doeth the Scripture prouide other remedie against fornication or burning, in them that haue not the gift of continencie, but marriage. And S. Augustine doeth rightly acknowledge, that continencie is not in a mans owne power or libertie, but onely of the gift of God. But that God wil giue that gift to euery one (when our Sauiour Christ and the Apostle saith, it is not graunted to euery one,) you doe not well gather it out of his wordes. For although when the heate of his youth was passed ouer incontinently (as he confesseth,) he obteined by praier the gift for the rest of his time, it followeth not that euery one in the

What it is to go after Satan.

The gift of continencie not in euery mans power.

the heate of their youth, may haue the gift, if they will pray for it. Neither are men any where exhorted to pray for it, with certaine promise that they shall obtaine it. Therefore your conclusions doe not follow, That continencie may be lawfully vowed, which is not in our power to performe. That it is not impossible to be fulfilled of all men by prayer, fasting, and chastisement, when there is no promise that al men may obtaine it by praier, fasting, &c. The reason that you alleadge for your third conclusion, is that which is in controuersie, and is denyed of vs. Yet we denie not, but the condition of the continent, in some respects is beter then of the married. For your fourth conclusion, we perswade none to marrie that can liue chastely out of marriage, but if they cannot, wee perswade them with the Apostle and the auncient fathers, that it is better for them to marrie then to burne, if they be not able to keepe their rash and vnlawfull vow. You slander S. Augustine, to say he auoucheth that the marriage of vowed persons is worse then aduoutrie: for in neither of both places that you quote, he saith so. But cap. 4. he saith: that by chast widowhood not only euils were auoided (which are adultery and fornication) but also marriage which is good, is extolled. In the cap. 11. after he hath by many reasons prooued the marriage of such as be good, in whom the breach of vow is euil, he concludeth in these words: wherefore I cannot say, that if women that are fallen from a better purpose do marry, it is no mariage but adultrie, but I would not doubt to say plainly, that the falling and ruine from more holy chastitie, is worse then adulterie. He saith not therefore, that the mariage of such is worse then adultery, but the breach of vowes & fal from their purpose. For he proueth at large cap. 9. 10. 11. that the marriage is good and not to broken, therfore he saith immediately before. By this inconsiderate opinion, whereby they thinke that the mariages of those women that are fallen from their holy purpose are no mariage, no smal euil commeth, that wiues are separated from their husbands, as though they were adulteresses and not wiues, and when by separating of them they wil restore them to continencie, they make their husbands adulterers, when their owne wiues being aliue, they marrie other women. As for Iouinians heresie we haue nothing to do with it, more then Cyprian, Epiphanius, Hierom, Augustine, whose sentences are before rehearsed, willing vowed persons to marrie rather then to burne, yet preferring pure continencie, before matrimonial chastitie, as farre as the Apostle doth. Therefore what would those holy doctors haue said, if they had liued in these times, and seene the filthie life of the Popish clergie? Which yet they defend as pure chastitie, and when the earth stinketh of their abominations, yet they are not ashamed to preferre their foule and vnchaste single life, before holy and chaste matrimonie.

RHEM. 13 17 In word and doctrine.) Such Priests specially and Prelates are worthy of double, that is, of the more ample honour, that are able to preach and teach and to take paines therein. Where we may note, that all good Bishops or Priestes in those daies were not so well able to teach as some others, and yet for the ministerie of the Sacraments, and for wisedome and gouernment, were not vnmeete to be Bishops and Pastors. for though it be one high commendation in a Prelate, to be able to teach, as the Apostle before noted: yet al can not haue the like grace therein, and is often recompensed by other singular gifts no lesse necessarie. S. Augustine laboured in word and doctrine, Alipius and Valerius were good Bishops, and yet had not that gift. Possid. in vit. Aug. c. 5. And some times and countries require preachers more then other. All which we note to discouer the pride of heretikes, that contemne some of the Catholike Priestes or Bishops, pretending that they can not preach as they do, with meretricious and painted eloquence.

Many good and woorthie Bishops, that haue not the gift of preaching and teaching.

FVLKE. 13 To defend your vnlearned and vnpreaching Popes, Cardinals, Bishops, and Priests (you say) there be many good and woorthy Bishops and Priestes that haue not the gift of preaching and teaching, but no such thing can be gathered out of the text: for the Apostle hath expressely required, and it is the most proper qualitie, that he expresseth in a Bishop or a priest, that he be apt to teach. 1. Tim. 3. 2. Tit. 1. 9. For all the rest of the vertues are to be required in euery true Christian man. Therefore he meaneth, that as euery one of them laboureth more in preaching, and teaching, he is so much the more to be honoured, or else he meaneth of those elders that S. Ambrose speaketh of vpon the first verse of this Chapter, that were appointed onely for gouernement, and not for teaching, such as are in some Churches at this time. But it was neuer allowed that any should be such a Bishop or (Priest as you meane) ordeined to teach, which is not able, or hath not the gift to teach. Therefore the Law being against you, you flie to examples of Alypius and Valerius that were good Bishops, and yet had not the gift to teach. For which you quote Possid. in vit. August. c. 5. where no such thing is to bee found: for of Alypius there is no mention. Of Valerius it is saide, that because he was a Greeke, and had not so good vtterance in the Latine tongue, he was lesse profitable to edifie by preaching and teaching, and therefore procured Augustine to supply that his want in his life time, but that he had no gift of teaching at all, it is vtterly false. But of Alypius, S. Augustine himselfe testifieth, that hee was woorthy to be a bishop before hee was ordeined. Ep. 8. which he would not haue said, if he had not had the gift of teaching at all. But this you note to couer the shame of your Popish Prelacie, among whom it is a rare thing to haue a Bishop apt to teach: as Erasmus said, That onely England in his time had learned Bishops.

RHEM. 14 23 Water.) You see how lawfull and how holy a thing it is, to fast from some meates or drinkes, either certaine daies, or alwaies, as this B. Bishop Timothee did: who was hardly induced by the Apostle to drinke a little wine with his water in respect of his infirmities. And marke withall, what a calumnious and stale cauillation it is, that to abstaine from certaine meates and drinkes for punishment of the body or deuotion, is to condemne Gods creatures. See an homilie of S. Chrysostome vpon these words, to. 5.

FVLKE. 14 No man doubteth, but it is lawfull (without superstition for chastising of a mans bodie) to absteine from wine, flesh, fish, fruites, spices, or other creatures, but to forbid the vse of them, as though in the very abstinence there were religion, it is the doctrine of deuils, 1. Tim. 4. Therefore we vse no calumnious or stale cauillation: but you to hide your blasphemous doctrine, make an impudent and vnlearned alteration of the question in controuersie betweene vs.

RHEM. 2 4 Languishing.) Euen these be the good disputes of our new Sect-masters, and the world hath to long prooued these inconueniences here named, to be the fruites of such endles altercations in religion as these vnhappy sectes haue brought forth.

FVLKE. 2 They be not wordes that we striue for, but the chiefest articles of Religion concerning the glory of Christ, and the saluation of our soules.

RHEM. 3 20 Depositum.) The whole doctrine of our Christianitie being taught by the Apostles, & deliuered their successors, and comming downe from one Bishop to another is called the Depositum, as it were a thing laid into their handes, and committed vnto them to keepe. Which because it passeth from hand to hand, from age to age, from Bishop to Bishop without corruption, change, or alteration, is all one with tradition, and in the truth giuen vnto the holy bishops to keepe, and not to lay vp. See the notable discourse of Vincentius Lirinensis vpon this text. Ad. cont. prof. hær. Nouationes. And it is for this great, old, and known treasure committed to the bishops custody, that S. Irenæus calleth the Catholike Church Depositorium diues, the rich treasurie of truth. li. 3. c. 4. And as Clemens Alexandrinus writeth li. 2. Strom. this place maketh so much against all Heretikes who do alchange this Depositum, that for it onely suche men in his daies denied this Epistle. The Heretikes of our daies chalenge also the truth, and say it is the old truth, but they leape 14. or 15. hundred yeeres for it ouer mens heads to the Apostles. But we call for the Depositum, and aske them in whose hands, that truth which they pretend, was laid vp, and how it came downe to them, for it cannot be Apostolicall, vnlesse it were Depositum in some Timothees hand, so to continue from one Bishop to an other vntill our time and to the end.

Depositum, is the Catholike truth descending from the Apostles by succession of Bishops, euen vnto the end. The Protestants can shew no such Depositum.

FVLKE. 3 Timothy had nothing committed to him by vnwritten tradition, but the doctrine conteined in the holy Scriptures, and the gouernement of the Church according to the same. Wherefore you doe but mocke the vnlearned readers, with a Latin word, which the Apostle vsed not, nor any of the auncient fathers, did include any such matter, (as you pretend) there in S. Ambrose vseth the word Commendatum, that which is committed, and saith he admonisheth, that those thinges be kept, which were said before, therefore he speaketh of no vnwritten tradition. Theodoret saith, I thinke he calleth the grace of the spirite, which he receiued by ordination, the thing that was committed to him. But that was not vnwritten traditions deliuered by handes of men. The rest vnderstand it of the Apostolike doctrine, committed to him by S. Paule, who preached nothing but the Gospell conteined in the holy Scriptures. Neither doth Vincentius allow any tradition, but that which is contained in the Scriptures, and inueigheth against all new opinions, which haue no grounde in the holy Scriptures, though the auctors of them doe abuse the Scriptures, to make a shewe for their errors. Irenæus also doth sufficiently declare, that the holy Scriptures are the chiefe treasure of the Church, when he saith the Apostles did deliuer the Gospell which they preached in writing, to bee the foundation and piller of our faith lib. 3. cap. 1. Neither was it the worde Depositum, that caused Heretikes in the daies of Clemens, to reiect this Epistle, but the worde, knowledge falsely so called, which the Gnostikes that bragged of knowledge, could not abide. And of the sufficiencie of the Scriptures he saieth, They that are sealed with the holy Scriptures (as I saide) ought to esteeme them, as the best storehouses from whence wisedome is sent out, to what part of life soeuer they bee turned, and to thinke that this wisedome is the hauen of health, which is troubled with no waues. Therefore so long as it is the olde truth that we teach, and no newe doctrine of falshod, it skilleth not, though wee fetched it three or foure thousand yeere hence, ouer all mens heades, out of Moses and the Prophets. And yet wee shewe the continuance of this truth also, for the principall pointes of doctrine, in the auncient fathers for many hundred yeeres from Christ, and in all ages euen in the depth of Antichristes darknes, vntill our time. Where as for poperie, first you are driuen to disclaime of the auctoritie of the Scriptures, for many things, and to flie to vnwritten tradition: secondly you are neuer able to proue your traditions from hand to hand, from age to age, from Bishop to Bishop, wherof you falsely boast. But in the primitiue Church, alwaies as yon ascend higher and higher, you will be forsaken of all men (except perhaps of heretikes) long before you come at the Apostles.

Traditions vnwritten.

RHEM. 4 20 Prophane noueltyes.) Non dixit antiquitates (saith Vincentius Lirinensis) non dixt vetustates, sed prophanas nouitates. Nam si vitanda est nouitas, tenenda est antiquitas: si prophana est nouitas, sacrata est vetustas: that is. He said not. ANTIQVITIES: he said not, AVNCIENTNES: but PROPHANE NOVELTIES, for if noueltie is to be auoided, antiquitie is to be kept: if noueltie be prophane, auncientnes is holy and sacred. See his whole booke against the prophane noueltyes of heresies.

We may measure the newnes or oldnes of wordes and termes of speaking in religion, by holy Scriptures onely: as though all those or only those were new and to be reiected, that are not expresly found in holy write: but we must esteeme them by the agreeablenes or disagreeablenes they haue to the true sense of Scriptures, to the forme of Catholike faith and doctrine, to the praise of the old Christians, to the Apostolike vse of speach come vnto vs by tradition of all ages and Churches, and to the prescription of holy Councels and Schooles of the Christian world: which haue giuen out (according to the time and question raised by heretikes and contentious persons) very fit, artificiall, and significant words, to discerne and defend the truth by, against falshood.

Prophane noueltyes of words how to be tried and examined.

These termes, Catholike, Trinitie, Person, Sacrament, Incarnation, Masse, and many moe, are not (in that sense wherein the Church vseth them) in the Scriptures at all, and diuers of them were spoken by the Apostles before any part of the new Testament was written, some of them taken vp straight after the Apostles daies in the writings and preachings of holy Doctors, and in the speach of all faithfull people, and therefore can not be counted Noueltyes of wordes. Others beside Catholike termes not expresly in the Scriptures, but in sense, are no such noueltyes of wordes.

these, as, Consubstantial, Deipara, Transubstantiation, and the like: which are neither in expresse termes founde in Scriptures, not yet in sense (if we should follow the iudgement of the speciall sectes against which the saide wordes were first inuented, the Arians crying out against Nicene Counsel for the first: the Nestorians against Ephesine Counsel, for the second: the Lutherans and Caluinists against the Laterane and the later Councels, for the thirde) these wordes also notwithstanding, by the iudgement of holy Church and Councils approued to be consonant to Gods wordes, and made authentical among the faithfull, are sowed vnder the wordes, and vse of those fonde whiche the Apostle calleth Nouelties.

The wordes then here forbidden are the new prophane termes and speeches inuented or specially vsed by heretikes, such as S. Irenee recordeth the Valentinians had a number most monstrous: as the Manichees had also diuers, as may be seene in S. Augustine: The Arians had their *Similis substantiæ, and Christ to be ex non existentibus: the other heretikes after those daies had their Christiparam, and such like, agreeable to their sectes. But the Protestants passe in this kinde, as they exceed most heretikes in the number of new opinions: as their Scriuum arbitrium, their sole faith, their fiduce, their apprehension of Christes iustice, their imputatiue righteousnes, their horrible termes of terrors, anguishes, distresses, distrust, feare and feeling of hell paines in the soule of our Sauiour, to expresse their blasphemous fiction of his temporall damnation, which they call his descending to hell. Their markes, tokens, and badges Sacramentall, their Companation, Impanation, Circumpanation, to auoid the true conuersion in the Eucharist: their presence in figure, in faith, signe, spirit, pledge, effect, to auoide the reall presence of Christes body. These and such like innumerable which they occupie in euery parte of their false doctrine, are in the sense that they vse them, all false, captious and deceitfull wordes, and are notitates vocum here forbidden.

Hereticall nouelties of words

The Protestants prophane nouelties of wordes.

* ὁμοούσιον.

* ὁμοιούσιον.

And though some of the said termes haue bene by some occasion obiter without il meaning spoken by Catholikes before these Heretikes arose, yet nowe knowing them to bee the proper speeches of heretikes, Christian men are bound to auoide them. Wherein the Church of God hath euer beene as diligent to resist Nouelties of wordes, as her aduersaries are busie to inuent them, for which cause she will not haue vs communicate with them, nor folow their fashion and phrase newly inuented, though in the nature of the wordes sometime there bee no harme. In S. Augustines daies when Christian men had any good befallen them, or entered into any mans house, or met any friend by the way, they vsed alwaies to say, Deo gratias. The Donatistes and Circumcellions of that time being newfangled, forsooke the old phrase and would alwaies say, Laus Deo: from which the Catholike men did so abhorre (as the said Doctor writeth) that they had as leefe weete a theefe as one that said to them, Laus Deo, in steede of Deo gratias. As now we Catholikes must not say, The Lord, but Our Lord: we say, Our Lady for his mother, not, The Lady. Let vs keepe our forefathers words, and we shal easily keepe our old & true faith that we had of the first Christian. Let them say, Amendement, abstinence, the Lordes Supper, the Communion table, Elders, Ministers, Superintendent, Congregation, so be it, praise ye the Lord. Morning-praier, Euening-praier, &c. the rest, as they will: Let vs auoid those nouelties of wordes, according to the Apostles prescript, and keepe the old termes, Penance, Fasting, Priest, Church, Bishop, Masse, Mattins, Euensong, the B. Sacrament, Altar, Oblation, Host, Sacrifice, Alleluia, Amen, Lent, Palme-Sonday, Christmas, and the very wordes will bring vs to the faith of our first Apostles, and condemne these newe Apostataes new faith and phrase.

Catholikes must abhorre from heretical phrases and words.

in Ps. 132.

FVLKE. 4 That onely is true and ancient, which is first, and that is false that is later, though it be ancient as Tertullian prooueth at large in his booke of prescriptions against heretikes, and so meaneth Vincentius and not otherwise. There be heresies 1500. yeeres old and more, but age can not make falshood to be true. As for prophane Nouelties of wordes, about which you make many wordes to no purpose, are such, as are not newe, onely in sound of wordes, but in sense also. And those words, (the sense and true meaning whereof is contained in the Scriptures,) may be new words, but not prophane nouelties of wordes, as those termes, Catholike, trinitie, person, sacrament, incarnation &c. the meaning of which, is found in the Scriptures. But the words of the Masse, transubstantiation, our Lady, Pope, Cardinals, and an hundreth such like, whereof neither the word, nor the meaning are in the holy Scriptures, are prophane nouelties of words, which the Apostle willeth to be auoided. And for those termes which you charge vs to vse, as we vse them they are in the Scripture either in word or sense: as will captiue or thrall to sinne, Rom. 7. 15. Sole faith we defend not to iustifie, but faith without works which is faith onely: and that we haue in the Scriptures. Rom. 3. 28. Fiducia or trust Heb. 3. 6. and 4. 16. Apprehension of the iustice of Christ by faith Rom. 9. 30. Imputation of Iustice Rom. 4. The terrors and anguishes of Christ feeling the paines of hell Mark. 14. 33, 34. Mat. 26. 37. Mat. 28. 46. Luk. 22. 44. Heb. 5. 7.

Antiquitie.

By markes and badges sacramentall, I knowe not what you meane, but wee finde in the Scriptures, that the Sacramentes be signes and seales of the righteousnesse of faith Gen. 17. Rom. 4. 11. As for companation, impanation, circumpanation, we renounce as well as transubstantiation. The presens of Christ in spirite, to faith, by signe, figure, pledge, or effect, we proue by many testimonies of Scripture, which teach that Christ was present to the fathers in the olde testament, in the Sacrament of Manna, and the rocke, and other Sacraments which could not be in body, before he was incarnate. 1. Cor. 10. 6. therefore in spirite, to faith, by signe, figure, pledge, effect of grace &c. which termes, beside that the sense of them is conteined in the Scriptures, you know we haue receiued also of the auncient fathers, and euen in the same meaning, that wee vse them.

Where you say, the Catholikes in S. Augustines time, did abhorre from the phrase Laus Deo, because the Circumcelliones vsed it, it is false, and you shew your great reading in S. Augustine, that vnderstande him no better. The Donatistes in deede, of a vaine curiositie changed the vsuall terme, Deo gratias, which was honest and godly, and saide in steede of it, Deo Laudes in which worde there was no hurt, nor any cause why the Catholike shoulde abhorre the worde, that giueth praise to God, because the heretikes abused it. But this was the matter, that they abhorred. The Circumcellions were furious runnagates, of the secte of the Donatistes, that spared not to beat, hurt, and wound, yea sometimes to kill the Catholikes, when they mette them, where they coulde maister them, therefore when they were knowne by their termes, Deo Laudes, the Catholikes had good cause to be afraide of them. Therefore saith S. Augustine. I would they were the soldiers of Christ, and not the soldiers of the diuell, by whom Deo Laudes being vttered, is more feared, then the roaring of a Lyon. Againe you laugh at our Deo gratias, but men weepe at your Deo Laudes. meaning those whom they had beaten and hurt. But as for those, that be your proper termes, I would you had them wholy to your selues. For such wordes as we vse in religion, we are readie to giue accompt before God and his church, that they haue the true sense, and meaning of the holy Scriptures, and therefore cannot be called prophane or vaine nouelties of wordes, which are to be auoided, by the Apostles precept.

RHEM. 5 20 Falsely called knowledge.) It is the propertie of all Heretikes to arrogate to themselues great knowledge, and to condemne the simplicitie of their fathers the holy Doctors and the Church, but the Apostle calleth their pretended skill, a knowledge falsely so called, being in truth high and deepe blindnes. Such (saith S. Ireneus li. 5. c. 17.) as forsake the preaching of the Church, argue the holy Priests of vnskilfulnes, not considering how far more worth a religious ligious idiote is, then a blasphemous and impudent sophister, such as all heretikes be. And againe Vincentius Lirinensis speaking in the person of heretikes saith, Come ô ye fooliſh and miſerable men, that are commonly called Catholikes, and learne the true faith which hath beene hid many ages heretofore, but is reuealed and shewed of late, &c. See his whole booke concerning these matters.

Traditions vnwritten.

FVLKE. Such Heretikes were the Valentinians and Gnostikes, which not content with the simple knowledge that was conteined in the holie Scriptures, did arrogate vnto themselues, a farre higher vnderstanding, which none could atteine vnto, but they that vnderstoode the vnwritten tradition. When they are conuicted (saith Irenæus) out of the Scriptures, they fall to accusing of the Scriptures themselues, as though they were not perfect, as though they were not of authoritie sufficient, because they were diuerſly vttered, and that the truth out of them can not bee founde out, of them which know not the tradition, for that was not deliuered by writing, but by worde of mouth. Ioyne this saying therefore to the other two, out of Irenæus and Vincentius, and you shall make a perfect description of Papistes: which boast of the trueth, of the Church, of tradition by worde of mouth more certeine then the Scriptures, all which is nothing else but falsely called knowledge, being indeede, deepe blindnesse and ignorance of the truth, a false bragge of the catholike Church, and a counterfect boasting of Apostolike tradition, where they haue nothing but new vanities and prophane nouelties, not of wordes onely, but of matters inspired by the deuill, maintained by Antichrist, and vpholden by tyrannie or sophistry, without auctoritie of the holy scriptures.

THE ARGVMENT OF THE SECOND EPISTLE OF S. PAVL TO TIMOTHEE.

IHE M. THE chiefe scope of this second to Timothee is, to open vnto him that his martyrdome is at hande. Which yet he doth not plainely before the end: preparing first his minde with much circumstance, because he knewe it would grieue him sore, and also might be a tentation to him. Therefore hee talketh of the cause of his trouble, and of the reward: that the one is honourable, and the other most glorious: and exhorteth him to be constant in the faith, to be readie alwaies to suffer for it, to fulfill his ministerie to the end, as himselfe nowe had done his.

Whereby it is certaine that it was written at Rome, in his last apprehension and imprisonment there: as he signifieth by these wordes Cap. 1. MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 1 — 6 Grace of God.) Here againe it is plaine that holy Orders giue grace, and that euen by and in the externall ceremonie of imposing the Bishops hands. And it is a maner of speach specially vsed in this Apostle and S. Luke that Orders giue grace to the ordered, and that to take orders vv authoritie to minister Sacraments or preach, is, to be giuen or deliuered to gods grace. Act.14.25.

FVLKE. 1 — Here is no such matter to be gathered, for he speaketh of the same extraordinary grace of prophecie, that was giuen by imposition of hands, whereof he spake 1.Tim.4.14. Neither doth the Apostle, or S. Luke, any where say, that the orders giue grace to the ordered, nor that to take orders, is to be deliuered to the grace of God. In the place Act.14. it is said, that Paul and Barnabas sayled to Antioche, from whence they were deliuered to the grace of God, and to the worke which they fulfilled, meaning that from Antioch they were sent to preach and by praier commended to the grace of God. For to vse your terme, the Apostles tooke no orders at Antioch. Paul was an Apostle immediately from Christ, and not by men. Galat.1. And they both preached before they were sent from Antioch, not without sufficient auctoritie, I dare auow. Act.11.26. Againe the text is, from whence they were deliuered to the grace of God, not where they were deliuered, to the grace of God. Therefore if your glose were true, the sense shoulde not be, they sailed to Antioch, where they tooke orders, but from whence they tooke orders, which is an vnusuall kinde of speech, and farre from the meaning of the Euangelist.

RHEM. 2 — 16 Not bene ashamed.) What a happie and meritorious thing it is to relieue the afflicted for religion, and not to be ashamed of their disgrace, yrons or what miseries soeuer.

FVLKE. 2 — It is an happy thing, to minister to the afflicted for true religion: but not meritorious. And the Apostle praieth, that Onesiphorus may be rewarded of Gods mercy, and not of the merite of his worke.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 3 — 5 In thy grandmother.) Though God shew mercie to many that be of incredulous, heretical or ill parents, yet it is a goodly benediction of God to haue good education and to haue good faithfull progenitors and Catholike parents. And it is a great sinne to forsake the faith of our fathers that be Catholikes, or contrarie to our education in the Church to folowe strange doctrines, abandoning not onely our next natural parents faith, but the auncient faith and beleefe of all our progenitours for for many hundred yeeres together. And if to follow the faith of mother and grandmother onely, the Christian religion being then but newly planted, was so commendable euen in a Bishop, how much more is it now laudable to cleaue fast to the faith of so many auncient progenitors and ages that continued in the same Christian religion which they first receiued.

Our Protestants in their great wisedome laugh at good simple men when they talke of their fathers faith. But S. Hierome, I am a Christian (saith he) and borne of Christian parents, and carie the signe of the crosse in my forehead. And againe ep. 85. c. 3. Vntil this day the Christian world hath beene without this doctrine. that faith will I hold fast being an old man, wherein I was borne a child And the holy Scriptures set vs often to schoole to our fathers. Aske thy fathers, and they will shew thee, thy ancetours, and they will tell thee. And againe, Our fathers haue shewed vnto vs. And commonly the true God is called the God of the faithfull and of their forefathers. Dan. 2. 3. And false Gods and new doctrines or opinions be named, New and fresh, such as their fathers worshipped not. Deut. 32. *Finally S. Paul both here and * oftentels alleageth for his defense and commendation, that he was of faithfull progenitours. And it is a case that Heretikes cannot lightly brag of, no one sect commonly during so long without interruption, that they can haue many progenitors of the said sect. Which is a demonstration that their faith is not true. and that it is impossible our Catholike faith to be false, supposing the Christian religion to be true.*

The peoples speeches of their fathers faith, is verie Christian and laudable. *Apol. cons. Ruff. lib. 1. c. 8. Deut. 32. & Ps. 43. * Act. 24. 2. Cor. 11.*

FVLKE. 3 If the faith of our progenitors were true, it is safer to forsake it · but to build vpon our fathers faith, when it was false, or none, is to build vpon a weake foundation. Therefore the popish peoples speeches of their fathers faith to be the onely ground of their religion, against which they will heare nothing, is vaine, ridiculous, and damnable. Wherefore when so euer the Scripture or the ancient fathers, speake in commendation of their fathers faith, they speake of the true faith. For against their fathers faith which was none, or false, the Scriptures doe often cry out. Ez. 20. 18. Zach. 1. & 1. Pet. 1. 18. &c. And heretikes may easily bragge of their fathers faith, as Nestorius and other did, as impudently as the Papists, but they can neuer proouе their faith by the holy scriptures, nor by the testimonie of the most ancient and approued fathers, as true Catholikes do.

Our fathers faith,

RHEM. 4 12 Depositum.) A great comfort to all Christians, that euerie of their good deeds and sufferings for Christ, and all the worldly losses susteined for defense or confession of their faith be extant with God, and kept as depositum, to be repayed or receiued againe in heauen. Which if the worldlings beleeued or considered, they would not so much marueil to see Catholike men so willingly to lose land, libertie, credit, life and all for Christs sake and the Churches faith.

Al our good deeds are laid vp with God, to be rewarded.

FVLKE. 4 Although it be true that all our good works and sufferings for his truth, be laied vp with God to be rewarded, yet the Apostle speaketh not of his good deeds, but of himselfe and his saluation, which by faith he hath committed to God, that will surely preserue him vnto the perfect reward of iustification in the day of iudgement. What doth he commit to God but his saluation? saith S. Ambrose. Theodoret saith, The grace of Gods spirit. Primasius, Faith. Chrysostome, His faith and preaching, all which come to one ende. The sufferings of the Papists in England, are not for Christ and the faith of his Church, but for Antichrist and their horrible treasons and murthers conspired against the Lords annointed and their natiue countrey.

RHEM. 5 13 A forme.) The Apostles did set downe a platforme of faith, doctrine, and phraase of Catholike speach and preaching, and that not so much by writing (as here we see) as by word of mouth: to which he referreth Timothee euer and aboue his Epistle vnto him. And how precisely Christian Doctors ought to keepe the forme of wordes anciently appropriated to the mysteries and matters of our religion, S. Augustine expresseth in these words, lib. 10. de ciuit. cap. 23. Philosophers speake with freedome of words, &c. but we must speake according to a certaine rule, lest licentious libertie of words breed an impious opinion of the things also that are signified by the same. Trinitie, person, essence, Consubstantiall, Transubstantiation, Masse, Sacrament, and such like, be verba sana (as the Apostle speaketh) sound wordes, giuen to expresse certaine high truths in religion, partly by the Apostles and first founders of our religion vnder Christ, and partly very aptly inuented by holy Councels and fathers, to expresse as neere as could be the high ineffable or vnspeakable veritie of some points, and to stop the heresikes audacitie and inuention of new wordes and prophane speaches in such things which the Apostle warneth Timothee to auoid, 1. ep. c. 6, 20. and 2. ep. 2. 16. See the Annotations there.

We must speake in Catholike termes after a certaine rule of faith, and forme of wordes.

FVLKE. 5 For substance of doctrine, the Apostles taught nothing by worde of mouth, but that which is conteyned in their writings. The Apostles (saith Irenaeus) preached the Gospel, & after by the wil of God deliuered it to vs in writing, to be the foundation and piller of our faith, lib. 3. cap. 4. Therefore the truth of all those termes which the Church vseth to expresse the mysteries of our religion, or to meete with the fraud of heretikes, is manifestly conteined in the Scriptures, though the termes themselues be not expressed. But transubstantiation and Masse, be not onely not found in the Scriptures, but are manifestly contrarie to the truth of the Scriptures as we haue often prooued.

Traditions vnwritten.

RHEM. 6 18 Our Lord) To haue this prayer of an Apostle, or any Priest or poore Cath. man so relieued, giueth the greatest hope at the day of our death or generall iudgement, that can be: and it is worth all the lands, honors, and riches of the world.

Relieuers of Cath. prisoners.

FVLKE. 6 The faithful haue their onely hope at the day of their death, and at the general resurrection in the mercie of God through Christ. So saith S. Augustine, My whole hope is in nothing but thy exceeding great mercie. Conf. lib. 10. c. 29. Without which faith, if Moses, Samuel, Noe, Iob, Daniel, Hieremie, or any of the Prophets prayed for vs, it will not auaile vs. Ezech. 14. 14. 1. Sam. 16. Hier. 15. 1. c. 7. 16. Therefore, miserable is the condition of Papists, which can haue no greater hope then that which is giuen by the prayer of a priest or other papist by them relieued, and therefore must bestow all their lands, honours and riches, to purchase such a prayer. For with popish priests it hath alwaies beene a true Prouerb, No penny, No Pater Noster. And it is good to marke, what a large net is here spred, to bring all the landes, honours, and riches of the world, into the popish priests hands, when their prayer giueth the greatest hope that can be to them, that bestow any thing vpon them, and is worth all that they can giue for it.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 2 4 No man being a ſouldiar.) Firſt of all, the Apoſtle (1. Cor. 7.) maketh mariage and the needfull cares, ſolicitude, and diſtractions thereupon euer depending, ſpecial impediments of al ſuch as ſhould employ themſelues wholy to Gods ſeruice, as Biſhops and Prieſts are bound to doe. He that is with a wife (ſaith he) is carefull for the world, how to pleaſe his wife, and is diſtracted or deuided. 1. Cor. 7. what ſecular affaires do not agree nor conſiſt with ſpirituall mens function.

Secondly, the practiſe of Phiſicke, merchandiſe, or any other profane facultie and trade of life to gather riches, and much more to be giuen to hunting, hauking, gamening, ſhewes, enterludes, or the like paſtimes is here forbidden.

Thirdly, the ſeruices of Princes and manifold baſe offices done to them for to obtaine dignities and promotions, are diſagreeable to Prieſtly function, not ſo, to be their chaplens for this purpoſe to preach vnto them, to heare their confeſſions, to miniſter the Sacraments vnto them, to ſay Diuine ſeruice before them, and ſuch other ſuch ſpirituall duties. for, all ſuch ſeruices done to principall perſons both of the Clergie and Laitie, be godly and conſonant to Prieſtly vocation. As alſo ſeruing of Princes & Commonweales in ciuil cauſes and matters of ſtate, in making peace and quietnes among the people, by deciding or compounding their controuerſies, and all ſuch like affaires tending to the honor of God and good of men, and to the vpholding of true religion, when they may be done without notorious damage or hinderance of their ſpirituall charge, or when the hurtes thereof be abundantly recompenſed by the neceſſarie dueties done for the generall good of kingdome or countrie: all ſuch things (I ſay) be lawfull and often verie requiſite. And S. Auguſtine, S. Ambroſe, S. Bernard, and other holy Biſhops of old were much occupied therein, as we ſee in S. Auguſtines booke De opere Monachorum cap. 29. & Poſſid. in vit. cap. 19. How ſpirituall men may ſeruе ſecular princes, and deale in ciuill cauſes. In vit. S. Ambr. & Bern.

FVLKE. 2 The Apoſtle 1. Cor. 7. maketh mariage no more impediment of Biſhops and Prieſts to employ themſelues wholly to Gods ſeruice, then of all other men and women. And alſo ſheweth, that it is neceſſarie for all perſons, that haue not the gift of continencie. Secondly, for couetouſneſſe or immoderate vaine delight, it is forbidden to practiſe phiſicke &c. but not for neceſſitie or honeſt recreation. Thirdly, if baſe offices about Princes ſeruices, be vnfit, what is it to be a ſtewarde in a noble mans or gentlemans houſe, as it was vſuall among popiſh prieſts? To heare Princes confeſſions, if they haue good cauſe to make them, is not vnmeete for their Chaplens. But to bind Princes to make their confeſſions to their prieſts, is a baſer and more ſeruile thing, then is required of any common ſubiect. To be occupied in making of peace, either priuate or publike with ſuch conditions, as you adde no reaſonable man can miſlike, but to make bloodie warres vpon Chriſtian Princes, as the Pope and ſome popiſh prelates vſe to doe, is contrarie to the ſpirituall ſouldiers office, whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. Mariage no impediment to a biſhop, &c.

RHEM. 3 15 Rightly.) *The Scriptures or chalenge of the word of God is common to Catholikes and Heretikes, but all is in the handling of them. theſe later handle them guileſully, adulterating the word of God, as * els where the Apoſtle ſpeaketh: the other ſincerely after the maner of the Apoſtles and doctors of Gods Church. Which the Greeke expreſſeth by a ſignificant word of cutting a thing ſtraight by a line, ὀρθοτομοῦντα.* Catholikes onely right handlers of the Scripture.

FVLKE. 3 The Papiſts ſo chalenge the ſcriptures, as they compt them inſufficient, to determine of all their controuerſies: being in that reſpect inferiour to many heretikes. And their handling is like to heretikes, which learne not their errors out of the ſcriptures, but ſtudie to draw the ſcriptures to their hereſies, where catholikes learne their faith out of the plaine and euident ſcriptures, and by the ſame confirme all true articles thereof. Abuſing of the ſcriptures.

RHEM. 4 17 Their ſpeach.) The ſpeaches, preachings, and writings of Heretikes be peſtiferous, contagious, and creeping like a canker, therefore Chriſtian men muſt neuer beare their ſermons, nor read their bookes. For ſuch men haue a popular way of talke wherby the vnlearned, and ſpecially women loden with ſinne, are eaſily beguiled. Nothing is ſo eaſie (ſaith S. Hierom) as with voluble and rolling tong to deceiue the rude people, which admire whatſoeuer they vnderſtand not. Ep. 2. ad Nepot. c. 10. Heretical bookes and ſermons are to be auoided.

FVLKE. 4 Hereticall bookes with the confutations of them, may be read of them that deſire to ſee the victorie of truth againſt falſehood, as the bookes of S. Auguſtine, S. Ambroſe, S. Cyril, confuting Paganes or heretikes.

RHEM. 20 In a great houſe.) He meaneth not that Hymenæus and Philetus (of whom he ſpake immediatly before) or of other heretikes, be properly within the Church, as Catholike men are, though grieuous ſinners: but that euil men who for the puniſhment of their ſinnes become heretikes, were before they fell from their faith as veſſels of contumely within the Church. Yea and often alſo after they be ſeuered in hart and in the ſight of God, ſo long as they ſtand in externall profeſſion and vſe of the ſame Sacraments, and in the outward fellowſhip of Catholikes, nor yet either ſeparated of themſelues, nor caſt out by the gouernours of the Church, ſo long (we ſay) they be after a ſort in the Church: though properly and indeed they be out of the Who are out of the Church or within it.

compasse of Gods house. Marrie of those that are openly severed in Sacraments, Service and communion, there is no question but they are out of the Church.

RHEM. 5 21 Cleanse himselfe.) Man then hath freewil to make himselfe a vessell of saluation or damnation: though saluation be attributed to Gods mercie principally, the other to his iust iudgement: neither of both being repugnant to our free wil, but working with and by the same, all such effects in vs as to his prouidence and our deserts be agreeable. Freewill.

FVLKE.5 Man hath no free will to make himselfe a vessell of saluation, but onely and altogether of the grace of God, to whose mercy saluation is to be attributed onely, and not to mans will, which is euer free from constraint, but neuer from captiuitie of sinne, vntill by grace it begun to be inlarged. Therefore saith S. Augustine, O euill free will without God. De verb. Apost. ser. 11. Againe, Free will made captiue, auaileth to nothing but to sinne. August. ad Bonif. lib. 3. cap. 8. Where you say the mercie of God worketh all such effects in vs, as not onely to his prouidence, but also to our deserts, are agreeable, you ioyne flatly with Pelagius, which said, that the grace or mercie of God was bestowed according to mens deserts. Against which was holden the councels of Mileuite and Aphricane, and it is most directly contrary to the Scriptures, Ioan. 1. 16. Rom. 11. 6. &c. Freewill. Pelagianisme.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. III.

RHEM.1 Iannes and Mambres.) That thoſe Magicians which reſiſted Moyſes, were thus called, it is not written in all the old Teſtament. therefore it came to the Apoſtles knowledge by tradition, as the Church now hath the names of the 3. kings, of the penitent theefe, of the ſouldiar that pearced Chriſts ſide on the Croſſe, and of the like.

FVLKE.1 The names of thoſe Magicians were not neceſſarie to ſaluation, therefore not expreſſed in the old Teſtament. And albeit the Apoſtle had them of tradition, yet hath not the Popiſh church the like certeintie of tradition in ſuch names as you ſpeake of. For neither the number, nor the names of the wiſe men that came to Chriſt, were knowen to the ancient church, as I haue ſhewed in Mat.2.ſect.4. The penitent theeues name, Diſmas, beſide that it hath no teſtimony of antiquitie, doth ryme with the other theeues name, Giſmas, as in ſo caſuall a matter it is very vnlike to be but feined: the names themſelues being ſuch as were neither vſuall among the Iewes, nor among the Gentiles. The ſtorie of the ſouldiour that pearced Chriſts ſide, is a very fable, as his name is a childiſh fiction. For S. Iohn would not haue conceiled the miracle of his ſight reſtored. And he hath his name feined of his office, becauſe he was a ſpeare-man. 3 Folly manifeſt.) Al heretikes in the beginning ſeeme to haue ſome ſhew of truth, God for iuſt puniſhment of men ſinnes permitting them for ſome while in ſome perſons and places to prenaile: but in ſhort time God detecteth them, and openeth the eies of men to ſee their deceites: in ſo much that after the firſt brunt they be mainteined by force onely, al wiſe men in maner ſeing their falſhood, though for troubling the ſtate of ſuch common weales where vnluckely they haue beene receiued, they can not be ſodenly extirped. The folly of Heretikes in time appeareth.

RHEM. 12 Al that will line.) Al holy men ſuffer one kinde of perſecution or other, being grieued and moleſted by the wicked, one way or another: but not al that ſuffer perſecution, be holy, as al malefactors. The Church and Catholike Princes perſecute heretikes, and be perſecuted of them againe, as S. Auguſtine often declareth. See ep.48. Perſecution.

13 Proſper.) Though hereſies and the authors of them be after a while diſcouered and by litle and litle forſaken generally of the honeſt, diſcrete, and men careful of their owne ſaluation, yet their authors and other great ſinners proceed from one errour and hereſie to another, and finally to plaine Atheiſme and al Diueliſh diſorder.

RHEM. 3 16 Al Scripture.) Beſides the Apoſtles teaching & tradition, the reading of holy Scriptures is a great defenſe & helpe of the faithful, and ſpecially of a Biſhop, not onely to auoid and condemne al hereſies, but to the guiding of a man in al iuſtice, good life and workes. Which commendation is not here giuen to the bookes of the new Teſtament onely (whereof he here ſpeaketh not, as being yet for a great part not writen) but to the ſcripture of the olde Teſtament alſo, yea and to euery booke of it. For their is not one of them, nor any part of them, but it is profitable to the end aforeſaid, if it be read and vnderſtood according to the ſame Spirit wherewith it was written. The great profit of reading the Scriptures.

The Heretikes vpon this commendation of holy Scriptures, pretend (very ſimply in good ſooth) that therefore nothing is neceſſarie to iuſtice and ſaluation but Scriptures. As though euery thing that is profitable or neceſſarie to any effect, excluded al other helpe, and were onely ynough to attaine the ſame. By which reaſon a man might as well proone that the old Teſtament were ynough, and ſo exclude the new: or any one piece of al the old, and thereby exclude the reſt. For he affirmeth euery Scripture to haue the foreſaid vtilities. and they might ſee in the very next line before, that he requireth his conſtant perſeuerance in the doctrine which he had taught him ouer and aboue that he had learned out of the Scriptures of the olde Teſtament, whithhe had read from his infancie, but could not thereby learne al the myſteries of Chriſtian religion therein. Neither doth the Apoſtle affirme here that he had his knowledge of Scriptures, by reading onely, without helpe of maiſters and teachers, as the Aduerſaries hereupon (to commit the holy Scriptures to euery mans preſumption) do gather: but affirmeth onely that Timothee knew the Scriptures and therefore had ſtudied them by hearing good readers and teachers, as S. Paul himſelfe did of Gamaliel and the like, and as al Chriſtian ſtudents do, that be trained from their youth in Catholike vniuerſities in the ſtudie of Diuinitie. The Heretikes fooliſh argument. Al Scripture is profitable, ergo only Scripture is neceſſarie and ſufficient.

FVLKE.3 The Apoſtle ſaid before, that the ſcriptures are able to make a man wiſe vnto ſaluation, therefore they conteine all doctrine, not onely profitable, but alſo neceſſarie and ſufficient to ſaluation. And this commendation perteineth euen to the ſcriptures of the olde Teſtament, but not to euery booke of them, more then to euerie line, word, ſyllable, or letter: but to the whole ſcripture that God deliuered for a ſufficient inſtruction to his Church. Which was firſt the fiue booke of Moſes, and afterward the Prophets for a more full and plaine declaration of the doctrine conteined in thoſe firſt bookes, and laſt of all, the bookes of the new Teſtament, for a moſt plaine and full explication of the Law and the Prophets, and a teſtimonie of the fulfilling of all things that were foreſhewed in the Law and the Prophets. And where you ſay, there is not any one of thoſe bookes, nor any part of them, but it is profitable to the end that the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, it is falſe, for the The ſufficiencie of the Scriptures.

man of God cannot be made perfect by euery part of ſcripture, but by the whole. But of this commendation of holy ſcriptures, you ſay, the heretikes (for ſo you call true Catholikes) pretend that therefore nothing is neceſſarie to iuſtice and ſaluation, but ſcriptures, wherein, not more fooliſhly then maliciouſly, you falſifie the queſtion, becauſe againſt the true ſtate of the controuerſie you are able to ſay nothing: except you will denie the ſcripture it ſelfe. Who euer heard or read that we pretend that nothing is neceſſarie to iuſtice and ſaluation but ſcriptures? By which ſaying we ſhould exclude Chriſt himſelfe, as vnneſſarie to inſtice and ſaluation, therefore we pretend no ſuch thing. But this is the true ſtate of the controuerſie. Whether the whole ſcriptures doe conteine all doctrine neceſſarie to be learned vnto ſaluation? And we affirme they doe, becauſe the ſcriptures are able to make vs wiſe vnto ſaluation, to make the man of God perfect, inſtructed to all good workes. Againſt this if you could ſay any thing, you would not ſo impudently faine a new queſtion, which we doe not holde. But euery thing that is profitable or neceſſarie to any effect, excludeth not all other helpes, nor is ſufficient to atteine the ſame. As though our argument were onely of the profit and neceſſitie of the ſcripture, and not of the perfection. The Apoſtle ſaith, it is able to make wiſe to ſaluation, ergo it is perfect and ſufficient for doctrine. It is profitable to euery part of the man of Gods office, euen that he may be perfect, and throughly furniſhed vnto euery good worke. Therefore it is perfect and ſufficient, conteining all doctrine that is neceſſarie for this end. But you obiect that a man by this reaſon might as well proone that the olde Teſtament were ynough, and ſo exclude the new. We confeſſe that the olde Teſtament for the time before Chriſt, was enough, but that doth not exclude the new. For all that is more then enough, is not ſuperfluous. God will haue his Church in the new Teſtament, to be not onely ſufficiently (as in the olde Teſtament) but moſt richly and abundantly furniſhed with all cleereneſſe and euidence of knowledge, by the Scriptures of the Apoſtles and Euangeliſts. But you cannot by any reaſon proone, that one piece of the olde Teſtament is or euer was enough: for any one piece of the olde Teſtament, cannot make Timothee wiſe to ſaluation, but the whole may. Againe, one piece cannot make the man of God perfect, but the whole can. Therefore he affirmeth not euery peece of ſcripture to haue theſe vtilities, but the whole. But we might ſee (ſay you) in the verie next line before, that he requireth his perſeuerance in the doctrine, which he had taught him, ouer and aboue that he had learned out of the ſcriptures of the olde Teſtament, which he had read from his infancie, but could not thereby learne all the myſteries of Chriſtian religion therein. We ſee in deed that the Apoſtle had taught him to vnderſtand the Scriptures, but that he taught any thing ouer and aboue the ſcriptures of the olde Teſtament, or that Timothee could not learne all doctrine of all the myſteries of Chriſtian religion in them, we ſee not, but the contrarie. For the Apoſtle ſaith theſe ſcriptures were able to make him wiſe vnto ſaluation, which no man can be that is ignorant of the myſteries of Chriſtian religion. Therefore the ſcriptures of the olde Teſtament were able to teach him the doctrine of the myſteries of Chriſtian religion. Slander. Neither doe we gather, that Timothee had his knowledge by reading onely, without helpe of maiſters and teachers, as you falſely ſlander vs. For we acknowledge paſtours and teachers to be neceſſarie in the Church, yet by reading only, diligent ſtudie, and praier, many haue atteined without other teachers, to ſufficient knowledge. But becauſe you ſay we make a fooliſh argument out of this text, to proone that the ſcriptures conteine ſufficient doctrine to ſaluation, let vs ſee whether any of the ancient fathers was as fooliſh as we, to gather the ſame concluſion. Firſt Chryſoſtome ſaith vpon this text. Hom. 9. If any thing be needfull for vs to learne, or to be ignorant of, there (meaning in the ſcriptures) ſhall we learne it, if to reproone falſhood, from thence ſhal we draw it, if any thing lacke to be corrected or rebuked, which muſt be had vnto exhortation, vnto comfort, there alſo do we learne it. Likewiſe Hom. 8. vpon the fifteenth verſe. he ſaith. The ſcriptures doe teach both what things are to be done, and what things are not to be done. Theodoret ſaith: The ſcripture is inſpired of God, therefore he teacheth the kindes of vtilitie. It is profitable to teach. For whatſoeuer we know not, we learne out of it. To reproone, it reprooueth our wicked life. To correct, for it exhorteth, that they which haue gone aſtray, returne into the right way. To inſtruct in righteouſneſſe, for it teacheth vs the kinds of vertue. That the man of God may be perfect, furniſhed to all good workes. All theſe things doe attribute and aſcribe perfection to the God of all. This father by the perfection of the ſcripture, prooueth the holy Ghoſt to be perfect God.

Primoſius ſaith: Out of the ſcripture, he that is ignorant is taught, he that is inſolent is reproued, he that erreth is corrected, he that can keepe no meaſure is inſtructed to iuſtice, to euerie good worke, not vnto one. Oecumenius ſaith, after he hath rehearſed the particular vtilities to teach all true opinions and good workes to reproue errours and vice, he concludeth that the man of God may be not onely partaker after a vulgar maner of euery good worke, but perfect and complete by the doctrine of the ſcriptures. Not to ſome kinde of good worke and to ſome not, but to all and euerie good worke, ſaith Theophylact.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 1 6 To be ſacrificed.) The martyrdome of ſaincts is ſo acceptable to God, that it is counted as it were a ſacrifice in his ſight, and therefore hath many effects, both in the partie that ſuffereth in, and in others that are partakers of the merite, as of a ſacrifice: which name it hath by a Metaphore.

VLKE. 1 The faithful receiue confirmation by the conſtancie of the martyrs, ſuffering for the truth. But there is no participation of merits, where the martyr himſelfe doth not merite, but is crowned of Gods mercy. Partition of merits.

RHEM. 2 21 * Linus) This Linus was coadiutor with and vnder S. Peter, and ſo counted ſecond in the number of Popes.

VLKE. 2 The ancient fathers are not agreed who was next ſucceſſor to Peter, and who third and fourth, therefore the ſtorie of Peters being at Rome & of his ſucceſſion in the Apoſtolike chaire, is not ſo certaine a matter as the Papiſts make it. See Phil.4. ſect.2. Peters being at Rome vncertein.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 3 3 * There ſhal be a time.) If euer this time come (as needs it muſt that the Apoſtle foreſaw and foretold) now is * The Apoſtle propheeied of our new delicate preachers.

is vndoubtedly, for the properties fal so iust in euery point vpon our new Maisters and their Disciples, that they may seeme to be pourtred out, rather then prophecied of. Neuer were there such delicate doctors that could so pleasantly claw & so sweetly rub the itching eares of their hearers, as these, which haue a doctrine framed for euery mans phancy, lust, liking, & desire. the people not so fast crying, Speake placentia, things that please: but the Maisters as fast warrating thē to do placentia. Esa.30.v.10.

FVLKE.3 They that heare vs preach mortification according to the scriptures, can testifie that we preach not things pleasant to the flesh or carnall man. But your religion is the religion of pleasure, seruing al the senses almost, in your Church seruice, and bringing men into securitie through your doctrine of pardons, masses, and merits, to be auaileable not onely in this life, but after men be dead. Carnall libertie and securitie.

RHEM.4 8 A crowne of iustice.) This place conuinceth for the Catholikes, that al good workes done by Gods grace after the first iustification, be truely and properly meritorious, and fully worthy of euerlasting life: and that thereupon heauen is the due and iust stipend, crowne, or recompence, which God by his iustice oweth to the persons so working by his grace. for he rendreth or repaieth heauen as a iust iudge, and not onely as a mercifull giuer. and the crowne which he paieth is not onely of mercy or fauour or grace, but also of iustice. It is his mercifull fauour and grace, that we worke wel and merite heauen: it is his iustice, for those merits to giue vs a crowne correspondent in heauen. S. Augustine vpon these wordes of the Apostle, expresseth both briefely thus. How should he repay as a iust iudge, vnlesse he had first giuen as a mercifull father? Li, de grat. & lib. arbit. c.6. Workes meritorious. How heauen is due both of iustice and mercy.

And when you heare or read any thing in the scriptures, that may seeme to derogate from mans works in this case, it is alwaies meant of workes considered in their owne nature and valure, not implying the grace of Christ, by which grace it commeth, and not of the worke in it selfe that we haue a right to heauen and deserue it worthily: which the Apostle in the 6. to the Hebrues more then insinuateth saying these wordes, God is not vniust, to forget your worke and loue which you haue shewed in his name &c. As though he would say, that we were vniust if he did forget to recompense their workes. It is not of vs, but of Gods grace, that works be meritorious.

Mat.20. * The parable also of the men sent into the vineyard, proueth that heauen is our owne right, bargained for and wrought for, and accordingly paid vnto vs as our hire at the day of iudgement, for that is merces and μισθὸς whereby the Scripture so often calleth it. It is the goale, the marke, the price, the hire, of al striuing, running, labouring, due both by promis and by couenant and right deete. See a notable place in S. Augustine in Psal.83. in fine: and 100. in initio, & ho.14.c.li.50. hom. To such good workes heauen is due: to say the contrary is to derogate from Gods grace.

In Ps.100. S. Cyprian also, and namely the later end of his booke de opere & eleemosyna: and thou shalt easily contemne the contrarie falshod, which doth not so much derogate from mans workes, as from Gods grace which is the cause and ground of al worthines in mans merits. S. Augustines wordes be these. Marke that he to whom our Lord gaue grace, hath our Lord also his detter. He found him a giuer, in the time of mercie: he hath him his detter in the time of iudgement. See the place and the rest here quoted, where he examineth and explicateth the matter at large.

FVLKE.4 This place proueth not that any workes done after the first iustication, are meritorious. For this crowne of iustice is giuen to the iustice of faith, freely giuen by the grace of God. For whereto shoulde that iustification serue, if the reward of iustice were not due vnto it? Therfore the apostle saith, whom God hath iustified he hath also glorified. Rom.8,30. And he rendreth heauen as a iust iudge, not to the merite or worthines of our works, but to the merite & worthines of Christ, & as due to vs by his promise freely made in Christ. The crowne therfore is only of mercy & of fauour in respect of vs, but of iustice in respect of Christ, who hath purchased it for vs, by his merites & worthines. Therefore saith S. Augustine, *He crowneth his gifts, not our merites, when he crowneth vs. In Psal.*101. and euen in the place quoted by you, he addeth immediatly. And how should this be a crowne of iustice, if grace had not gone before, which iustifieth the vngodly mā. You see it is a crown of iustice, in respect of our free iustification by grace. Neither doth the scripture any where ascribe merite to our works, or worthines of heauen to works proceeding of grace, but faith. We are saued by grace, & not of works, Eph.2. which saying could not be true, if we were saued by both, or by works comming of grace. Wherefore, if you had any text of Scripture to proue the merite of Christian mens works, you would not flie to an insinuation, Heb.6. where in deede the Apostle doth insinuate no such matter: but assureth the Hebrues, that God wil be iust of his promise, & not forget to reward their labour & dutiful seruice, yet this reward is of mercy, not of the merite of the worke. The parable of the men sent into the Vineyard, is mightie for grace, against merites. For although God enter into couenant & promise of a reward, or a wages, yet he sheweth in the end, that this wages is of his mercy, & not of the merite or worthines of the worke or labour. For if it were of the merite of the worke & labour, then by iustice, they that wrought but one houre, should not haue as much as they that wrought all day, or if one houres labour deserued one peny. 12. houres labour deserued 12. pence. Therfore the reward is onely of Gods mercy, in respect of vs, not of the merite of our works. I confesse it is due by promise and couenant, & so a right debt. But the couenant & promise is established altogither in mercy and grace towards vs, through Iesus Christ, in whō is al our merite & worthines, not in our selues or our own works, though done by his grace. The Pharisee that trusted in himself, that he was iust by works proceeding of Gods grace, & therfore gaue God thanks for al his vertues, went home without iustification. Lu. 18.9.11. Neither saith S. Augustine any thing against this, or if he spake against Christ, he were not to be heard. He often vseth the name of merits for good works, but he doth alwaies deny the worthines of the worke, to attaine to the reward, ascribing all to the grace & mercy of God. Concerning the place that you cite, out of his exposition of the Psal. 100. he telleth you plainly, how God commeth to be a debter. Donando delicta fecit se coronæ debitorem. By forgiuing sinnes he hath made himselfe a debter of the crowne. Therefore he is not a debter to the merite of our workes, but to the meane of his mercy Iesus Christ, whereby our sinnes are pardoned: to whose iustice the crowne of iustice is due. In Psal.83. he saith: The Lord hath made himselfe a debter, not by receiuing any thing, but by promising. It is not said to him, pay that thou hast receiued, but pay that thou hast promised. Againe, He that hath giuen the death of his sonne to a sinner, what doth hee keepe to him that is saued by the death of his sonne? Be out of feare. Hold him as a debter, because thou hast beleeued in him, as a promiser. You see therefore, that the debt groweth not of the worthines or merite of our workes, but by the promise of God, in the worthines & merite of Christes death. Hom.14.de 50. he saith by an Apostrophe to S. Paul, When God crowneth thy merites or good workes, he crowneth nothing but his owne gifts. So he saith in the person of Paul: I obtained mercy, debts were not paied vnto me, for if debts should be paied, punishment should be paied. Here againe you see, nothing is giuen as due to the merite of our workes, but of the mercy of God, which hath promised reward, and giueth al power to worke. Cyprian in the booke named, exhorteth earnestly to the workes of almes and piety, assuring men of the reward, that God hath promised to our merite, (for so he calleth good workes:) as before the Pelagian heresie, the Fathers vsed that word more freely, but this question, whether the reward be due to our works of the merite or worthines of them, he teacheth not. But ad Quirinum cap.4. he saith, We are to glorie of nothing, seeing nothing is our owne. And againe: That faith onely profiteth, and that we may be able to so much as we beleeue. And De duplici martyrio, He trusteth not in God, that doth not repose the confidence of all his felicitie in him alone. By which saying it followeth, that we are not to trust in the merite of good workes, but in the mercy of God through Iesus Christ, which is our righteousnes. Merite.

THE ARGVMENT OF THE EPISTLE OF S. PAVL TO TITVS.

RHEM. THAT Titus was a Gentil, and not a Iew, and that he was in S. Pauls traine, at the leaſt the 14 yeere after his converſion, if not before, we vnderſtand by the Epiſtle to the Galatians c. 2. And that he continued with him to the very end, appeereth in the ſecond to Timothee cap. 4. Where hee maketh mention that he ſent him from Rome into Dalmatia, when himſelfe was ſhortly after to be put to death.

And therefore although S. Luke neuer name him in the Actes, as neither himſelfe, yet no doubt he comprehendeth him commonly, when he ſpeaketh thus in the firſt perſon plural: Forthwith we ſought to goe into Macedonia. Act. 16. For S. Paul alſo ſent him to Corinth, betweene the writing of his 1. and 2. to the Corinthians (which time concurreth with Act. 19.) by occaſion whereof he maketh much and honorable mention of him in the ſaid ſecond Epiſtle c. 2. & c. 7. and againe * he ſent him with the ſame Epiſtle: both times about great matters: ſo that no doubt he was then alſo a Biſhop, and receiued accordingly of the Corinthians, with feare and trembling, 2. Cor. 7. v. 15. But the ſame is plainer in this Epiſtle to himſelfe c. 1. v. 5. Where the Apoſtle ſaith, for this cauſe I left thee at Crete, &c. Therefore he inſtructeth him (and in him, all Biſhops) much like as he doth Timothee, what qualities he muſt require in them that ſhal make Prieſts and Biſhops, in what ſort to preach, and to teach all ſortes of men, to commend good workes vnto them: finally, himſelfe to be their example in all goodnes.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 1 15 Cleane to the.) He ſpeaketh not of the Churches abſtaining from meates ſometimes, which is not for any vncleannes in the creatures, but for chaſtening their bodies: but he meaneth the Iewiſh ſuperſtition, who now being Chriſtians would not ceaſe to put difference of cleane and vncleane according to their old lawe. See S. Auguſtine Cont. Fauſt. lib. 31. cap. 4.

FVLKE. 1 The Popiſh Churches forbidding of meates is Antichriſtian, and the doctrine of Deuils, not a voluntary abſteining for chaſtiſement of the body, among whom all kind of meates and drinkes are permitted that prouoke luſt moſt of all, only fleſh excepted. Therefore they make the creatures of God by their prohibition, vncleane, not in reſpect of their creation, but in reſpect of their Antichriſtian prohibition. As the Iewiſh abſtinence was not for any uncleanes in the creatures, by Gods creation, but only by the prohibition of the lawe. Therefore, as the Apoſtle meaneth the Iewiſh ſuperſtition, who ceaſed not to put difference of cleane and vncleane, according to their old lawe, ſo alſo he comprehendeth much more the Popiſh ſuperſtition, who boaſting that they are the Diſciples of Chriſt which hath made all things cleane to the cleane, yet ceaſe not to put difference of meates, cleane and vncleane, holy and vnholy, not according to Gods law, as the Iewes did, but according to the law of the Pope, which is Gods enemie. S. Auguſtine in the place quoted, hath neuer a word ſounding to the defence of the Popes prohibition of meates. See 1. Tim 4. ſect. 2. 5. &c. Forbidding of meates.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 2 5 Ordeine Prieſts.) Though Prieſts or Biſhops may be nominated and elected by the Princes, people, or Patrons of places, according to the vſe of the time and diuerſitie of Countries and faſhions, yet they can not be ordered and conſecrated but by a Biſhop who was him ſelf rightly ordered or conſecrated before, as this Titus was by S. Paul. And here it ſeemeth that he did not onely conſecrate them whom the people had elected before, but him ſelf alſo made choiſe of the perſons, no mention being here made of any other election popular. Which though it were long vſed in the primitiue Church, yet for diuers cauſes and ſpecially for continual tumultes, partialities, and diſorders which S. Auguſtine much complaineth of in his time, was iuſtly taken away, and other better meanes of their deſignement appointed. See Conc. Laodic. cap. 12. 13. S. Auguſt. de adult. coniug. li. 2. c. 20. Ep. 110. and Poſſid. in vita Aug. c. 8. Prieſts muſt be conſecrated by Biſhops only. The popular election of the Clergie taken away.

And that the ordering of Prieſts or impoſition of handes to that purpoſe, belongeth onely to Biſhops, and to no inferior Prieſts or other perſons, it is plaine by the Apoſtolike practiſe ſet downe in the Scriptures, namely in the Acts, and in the Epiſtles to Timothee and Titus. And S. Hierom, who ſeemeth ſometimes to ſay that in the Primitiue Church there was no great difference betwixt a Biſhop and Prieſt, yet he euer exceepteth giuing holy Orders, which preeminence he attributeth to Biſhops onely. ep. 85. as he doth alſo Confirming the Baptized by giuing them the holy Ghoſt through impoſition of hand & holy Chriſme. Dial. cont. Lucifer. c. 4. Note alſo that Aerius was of olde condemned of hereſie, for holding that there was no difference betwixt a Prieſt and a Biſhop. Epiph. hær. 75. Auguſt. hær. 53. Note laſtly the fraudulent tranſlation of the Heretikes alwaies, turning for Prieſts (which here is euident to be a calling of Order and office) Elders, ſaying, That thou ordaine Elders, which in our vulgar toong ſignifieth the age, and not the Office properly: and all this for hatred of Prieſts. The preeminence of a Biſhop aboue a Prieſt. To put no difference betweene them is Aerius hereſie. Heret. tranſlation.

Meere

FVLKE. 2 Meere popular elections were neuer allowable in the Church of God, and therefore forbidden by the Councell of Laodicea. Yet long after that Councell, the people had their elections, moderated by the wisedome and grauitie of the Clergie, among whom, for order and seemely gouernment, there was alwaies one principall, to whom by long vse of the Church, the name of Bishop or Superintendent, hath been applied, which roome Titus exercised in Creta, Timothy in Ephesus, and others in other places. Therefore although in the Scripture, a Bishop and an Elder is of one order and auctoritie in preaching the worde, and administration of the Sacraments, (as Hierome doth often confesse) yet in gouernment, by ancient vse of speech, he is onely called a Bishop, which is in the Scripture called ἐπίσκοπος, προεστὼς or ἡγούμενος, Rom. 12. 8. 1. Tim. 5. 17. Heb. 13. 17. that is, cheefe in gouernment, to whom the ordination or consecration by imposition of hands, was alwaies principally committed. Not that imposition of hands belongeth only to him, for the rest of the elders that were present at ordination, did lay on their handes, or els the bishop did lay on his handes in the name of the rest. Which most ancient forme of gouernment, when Aerius would take away, it was noted among his other errors. Where you say, S. Hierome doth attribute to the Bishop only, confirming the baptised by giuing them the holy Ghost, through imposition of handes, and holy Chrysme. S. Hieroms words are these: I do not deny that this is the custome of the Churches, that to them which are baptised farre of in little cities by the Priestes and Deacons, the Bishop goeth abroad to lay on his hand at the inuocation of the holy Ghost. Heere you see there is neither giuing of the holy Ghost, nor holy Chrysme, therfore no Popish confirmation. And further he sheweth, that this was a custome, and not a matter of necessitie. But if you aske (saith he) why he that is baptised in the Church, doth not receiue the holy Ghost, but by the hands of the Bishop, whom we affirme to be giuen in true Baptisme: learne that this obseruation proceeded of that auctoritie, because after the ascention of our Lord, the holy Ghost descended vpon the Apostles. And we finde that the same hath beene done in many places, rather for the honour of Priesthood, then for the necessitie of a lawe. Or els, if onely at the praier of a Bishop, the holy Ghost descendeth, they are to be lamented, which in little townes and villages, or places farre of, are baptised by Priests and Deacons, and die before they be visited of the Bishop. You see therefore, that the ceremonie of confirmation of the baptized by imposition of hands with calling vpon the holy Ghost, (though laudable) yet is it not necessary to saluation, and therefore no Sacrament, as it holden of you.

Popular elections.

Popish confirmation.

Our translation is according to the truth of the word, which we translate. And as the word (Elders) in our tongue signifieth age, and not office properly, so doth the Greeke worde signifie age, and not office properly. Yet it is easie to gather by the circumstance of the text, that here it signifieth an office, which hath his name of age, because the Elder sort, for wisedome, grauitie, and experience are most meete to gouerne. And that although yong men be called to that office, yet in knowledge, grauitie, gouernment of affections, they must bee ancient. Your owne vulgar Latine doth translate the worde when it signifieth office, sometime Seniores, sometime Maiores natu, Act. 15. cap. 16. cap. 20 which can signifie nothing else but Elders, Seniors, or as you had rather call them by a French English terme, Ancients.

Cauilling.

RHEM. 3 6 Of one wife.) To that which is said vpon the like wordes 1. Tim. 3. adde this testimonie of S. Epiphanius li. 3. to. 2. cont. hæreses in fine. Holy Priesthod, saith he, for the most part proceedeth of Virgins: and if not of virgins, yet of them that liue a sole or single life: but and if the single and sole persons suffice not to the Ministerie, of such as conteine from their wines, or after once marying remaine widowes. For, him that hath beene maried twise, it is not lawfull to take to Priesthod &c. If you list to see the causes why bigamie is forbidden them that are to be Priests, and continencie required of the Clergie, see the same authour li. 2. to. 1. hæres. 59. S. Leo ep. 87. and other auncient authors.

Bigami excluded from holy Orders, and the causes thereof.

And if the studious reader peruse al antiquitie, he shal finde al notable Bishops and Priests of Gods Church to haue beene single or continent from their wiues, if any were maried before they came to the Clergie. So was S. Paul, and exhorteth all men to the like. 1. Cor. 7, 7. So were al the Apostles after they folowed Christ, as S. Hierom witnesseth, affirming that our Lord loued Iohn specially for his virginitie. Apol. ad Pammach. c. 8. & li. 1. cont. Iouin. c. 14. S. Ignatius ep. 6. ad Philadelph. saith of the said Iohn, & of Timothee, Titus, Euodius, Clement, that they liued & died in chastity, reckening vp of the old Testament diuers notable personages that did the same, as Elias, Iesus Naue (otherwise called Iosue) Melchisedec, Eliseus, Hieremie, Iohn Baptist. No man is ignorant that al the notable fathers of the Greeke and Latine Church liued chaste: Athanasius, Basil, Nazianzene, Chrysostom, Cyprian, Hilarie (who entered into holy orders after his wines death) Ambrose, Hierom, Augustine, Leo, Gregorie the great. Certaine other notable fathers had onte wiues, but no holy man euer vsed them, much lesse maried, after they were in holy Orders. A maruelous thing, that so many heretofore should haue the gift of chastitie then, and now so few, if the Protestants say true, that skarse one among them in our age of al their sectes, euen of their principal Superintendents, hath had it.

The notable men of both Testaments, that liued continenly from wiues.

Onely the Protestants complaine that they haue not the gift of chastitie.

FVLKE. 3 The testimonie of a man cannot controll the auctority of the holy Ghost: and yet the same man confesseth, that in some places in his time, the Ministers of the Church were maried, & did beget children, and that it was necessarie for the multitude that were required to the ministerie, when other were not found, to take such. Hær. 59. Before Montanus and other Heretikes came with his hypocritical fasting, and condemning of second mariages, there was no question, but he that had been twise maried, might be a Bishop, as they were in Tertullians time, who obiecteth it to the Catholikes as a crime, that Digami, twise maried men, were Bishops and Priestes among them. De Monogam. But after that time, the mysterie of iniquitie wrought so much, euen in godly Fathers, that though they doo not simply denie second mariages, yet by denying the blessing vnto them, by calling them honest fornication, and comely adultery, and otherwise derogating from the holines of them, they brought them in discredit, that it was thought first vnmeete, and then vnlawful for one that had been twise maried, to be receiued into the ministerie. See Athenagoras Apol. Orige. in Luc. hom. 19. Greg. Naz. Or. 32. Hierom. ad Gerontiam, &c. And this cane second mariages to be condemned in the ministerie. And whatsoeuer is alledged by Epiphanius, Ambrose, Hierom, or any other, for the continencie of the Clergie, can argue no necessitie thereof, seeing the holy Ghost so expresly alloweth the husband of one wife, to be a Bishop, Priest, or Deacon.

Mariage of Ministers.

Heretical fasting.

Second mariages.

Where you say, that al notable Bishops were either single, or conteined from their wiues, it is false. For Ambrose testifieth, that al the Apostles, except Iohn and Paul had wiues Com. in 2. Cor. 11. Clemens Alexandrinus affirmeth, that Peter and Philip begate children. Strom. 3. Chæremon Bishop of Nilus fled with his wife in persecution. Euseb. lib. 6. cap. 42. Demetrianus a notable Bishop of Antiochia, had a sonne called Domnus: that was made Bishop in steade of Paulus Samosatenus the Heretike. Euseb. lib. 7. cap. 30. Spiridion was a famous Bishop in the Councel of Nice that was maried, and had a daughter called Irene. Ruffi. lib. 1. cap. 5. Gregorie Bishop of Nazianzen, was a notable Bishop, and father of the other Gregorie that succeeded him, as appeareth by the oration that he made in praise of his father. Gregorie Bishop of Nyssa, was a notable Bishop, maried Niceph. Lib. 11. cap. 19. Synesius a most excellent learned Bishop of Ptolemais was maried, and begate children, while he was Bishop, as appeereth in diuers of his Epistles. Epi.70.& epi.126. S. Hilarie that notable Bishop of Poyctiers was married, and had a yoong daughter, as appeareth by his Epistle to her (if it be not counterfect) and by other recordes. S. Germanus was a notable Bishop in Africa, and was married, hauing a daughter called Leontia that was after martyred by the Arrians, Victor Vticens. Hist. lib. 3. S. Sulpicius Seuerus arch. of Burges in Fraunce, writeth to Bassula his wiues mother *Ep.*3. & Paulinus *ep.*1. Paulinus Epis. Nolanus had a wife called Thorosia, Amb. *Ep.*36. ad Sabinum. Fabianus and Hormisda Bishops of Rome, were married, and many other Bishops of Rome were Priestes sonnes, as Pope Damasus in his Pontificall doth testifie. And although many holy men were vnmaried, yet it is false, that you say, no holy men euer vsed their wiues after they were in holy orders. For Socrates testifieth of many godly bishops of the East Church in his time, that begat lawfull children of their lawful wiues, since they were Bishops. *Lib.*5. *cap.*22. That many also were married after they were in holy orders, I haue prooued before vpon 1. *Tim.*3. *Sect.*3.4.5. &c. That scarce one amongst vs hath the gift of continencie, it is a new slander: for beside a great nnmber of inferiour ministers, both liuing and departed this life in England, diuers godly Bishops haue liued vnmarried, without any note of incontinencie. To omit them that yet liue, these may serue for example that are departed, Latimer, Ridley, Iewel, Grindal, to conuince your impudencie.

Here is no word to proue, that baptisme giueth grace of the worke wrought, but the Apostle saith, that God hath saued vs by the renuing of the holy Ghost, which is testified by the sacrament of Baptisme, which is sacramentally the lauer of regeneration, not by the worke wrought, but by the grace of Gods Spirit; by which we are iustified. Descriptions or markes how to know an Heretike.

Vit. Aug. c. 18.

Let our Protestants behold themselues in this glasse, and withall let them marke all other properties that old Heretikes euer had, and they shall finde all definitions and markes of an Heretike to fall vpon themselues. And therefore they must not marueil if wee warne all Catholike men by the wordes of the Apostle in this place, to take heed of them, and to shunne their preachings, bookes, conuenticles and companies. Neither needs the people be curious to know what they say, much lesse to confute them: but they must trust Gods Church, which doth refute and condemne them. And it is ynough for them to know that they be condemned, as S. Augustine noteth in the later end of his booke de hereſibus. And S. Cyprian saith notably to Antonianus demanding curiously what heresies Nouatianus did teach: No matter, quoth he, what heresies he hath or teacheth, when he teacheth without, that is to say, out of the Church.

The former markes agree to the Protestants. Their bookes, seruice, and preaching must be auoyded. Ep. 52. num. 7.

FVLKE. 2 A man may be conuicted to be an Heretike, without a generall Councell, if he doe obstinately defend any grieuous errour, against the manifest auctoritie of the holy Scriptures. So were many Heretikes and heresies condemned, against which there was no Councels gathered. Againe, many godly men and the trueth it selfe by Councels, haue bene condemned for Heretikes and heresies: as Athanasius was condemned in the Conncels of Tyre and Antioche, Iohn Chrysostome in a Councell holden at Chalcedon. The Councels of Ariminum and Nicomedia, decreed against the diuinitie of Christ for the Arrians. The Councell of Ephesus the second for Eutyches and Dioscorus against the trueth of Christes humanitie. Therefore your descriptions and markes to knowe Heretikes, are not sufficient: for no opinion is to be taken for heresie, which is agreeable to the holy scriptures, though it be condemned by all men in the world. S. Cyprian also had his errour confirmed by a Councell of Carthage, and did defend it against the Bishop of Romes sentence: Yet was he no Heretike, but his opinion was erronious, because it was contrarie to the truth of the scripture. Neither was it the onely See Apostolike, that condemned Pelagius for an Heretike, but the Councels of Africa. And if the See Apostolike had not condemned him, yet had he beene an Heretike, and his opinion heresie: because it was contrarie to the doctrine of the holy Scriptures. Nestorius the Bishop of Constantinople was an Heretike, and his opinion (that there was but one will in Christ) was heresie, although the See Apostolike of Rome, did not onely not condemne him, but also by Honorius the Bishop thereof confirmed his heresie, as is testified Conc. Constit. 6. Act. 13. in these wordes: Beside these also we haue foreseene, that Honorius sometime Bishop of olde Rome, is cast out of the holy Catholike Church of God and accursed, because we haue found by certaine writings of his made vnto Sergius, that in all things he followed his minde, and confirmed his vngodly opinions. Neither was Arrianisme made Catholike religion, when Pope Liberius confirmed it by his subscription, and condemned the Catholikes by a Councel holden at Rome, as Pope Damasus testifieth in Lib. Hierom. in Catalog. Athanasius ad finis. Therefore in the description of an Heretike giuen by S. Augustine, those are meant to be false and new opinions, which are contrarie to the true and auncient doctrine, conteyned in the holy Scriptures. Seeing therefore we hold no new or false opinion, contrarie to the word of God, the markes of Heretikes and heresies, shall neuer be found in vs. We are not condemned of the Church of Christ, nor by any generall Councell: for the Romish Church is the Church of Antichrist, and the Chapter of Trent, consisting of fourtie Popish Bishops, is vnworthie the name of a Councell, much lesse of a generall Councell, which is not receiued of the papists themselues. For the Papists of France protested against it, as no lawfull Councell in the time of Francisce the first. Therefore so long as you haue nothing but this most impudent petition of principle: that you are the Church, which hath condemned the Protestants for Heretikes, no reasonable man will thinke vs sufficiently conuicted or condemned. Specially seeing the question is, whether you or we are the Church, as it was betweene the Donatists and Catholikes, in S. Augustines time: and to be determined onely by the Scriptures, as he saith: Betweene vs and the Donatists the question is, where the Church is. Therefore what shall we doe? Shall we seeke her in our owne wordes, or in the words of her head our Lord Iesus Christ? I suppose that we ought rather to seeke her in his words, which is the truth, and best knoweth his owne bodie. De vnitat. Eccles. cap. 2. Againe: I will not haue the holy Church to be described by humane documents, but by the diuine oracles. Therefore let vs seeke her in the holy Canonicall scriptures. Cap. 3. Againe cap. 16. Whether they hold the Church, let them shew vnto vs otherwise, but by the Diuine Testimonies. For we doe not say, that they are the Church, because we are in the Church, and Faustus Optatus Bishop of Milevet, or Ambrose Bishop of Mylaine, or innumerable other Bishops of our communion, haue commended that Church which we hold, or because it hath been set forth by the Councels of our fellow Bishops &c. Therefore let the Papists by the Scriptures only proue that they are the Church, and that all their doctrine is true, or els they haue no auctoritie to condemne other men of heresie, being the greatest heretikes themselues.

A Heretike who is.

RHEM. 11 Subuerted.) Heretikes be often conuicted, yet the Church of God ceaseth not by all meanes possible to reuoke them. therefore S. Augustine saith ep. 162. The Heretike himselfe though swelling with odious and detestable pride, and mad with the frowardes of wicked contention, as we admonish that he be speedily left, he deceiue the weakelings and little ones, so we refuse not by all meanes possible to seeke his amendment and reformation.

The Church seeketh the amendment of the most obstinate Heretikes.

12 By his owne iudgement.) Other grieuous offenders be separated by excommunication from the communion of Saincts and the fellowship of Gods Church, by the sentence of their Superiours in the same Church: but Heretikes more miserable and infortunate then they, runne out of the Church of their owne accord, and so giue sentence against their owne soules to damnation.

Heretikes cut themselues from the Church.

THE EPISTLE OF PAVL TO PHILEMON.

THE ARGVMENT.

Hearing of Philémons vertue, who was a Coloſſian, he writeth a familiar letter from Rome, (being priſoner there) about his fugitiue ſeruant Oneſimus: not doubting but that he might commaund him, yet rather requeſting that he will forgiue him, yea and receiue him as he would Paul himſelfe, who alſo hopeth to come vnto him.

PAVL the priſoner of Christ IESVS, and brother Timothee: to Philémon the beloued and our coadiutor, MARGINALL NOTES.

RHEM. 1 5 Charitie and faith.) Faith and charitie commended alwaies together, both necessarie to make a complete Christian man, and to iustification and saluation.

FVLKE. 1 Charitie followeth faith by which we are iustified, but goeth not before nor concurreth with faith vnto iustification. Yet is charitie necessarie for a Christian man that looketh to be saued. Iustification.

ANNOT.

RHEM. 2 5 Toward all the saincts.) The Apostle sticketh not to say, Charitie and faith in Christ and al his Saincts, which our captious Aduersaries count in Catholike mens speaches and writings, very absurd, feining that in al such we make no difference betwixt the loue we beare to Christ, & the loue we owe to our neighbours: betwixt the trust or beleef we haue in God, and that which we haue in his holy Saincts. Malice and contention doth so blinde al Heretikes. Faith and beleefe in Saincts.

FVLKE. 2 The Apostle naming charitie and faith together, doth assigne to either of them their proper subiect, namely faith in our Lord Iesus Christ, and charity toward all the Saincts. For he commendeth no faith or trust in men, but in God onely, and charity toward all holy men. So doth Theodoret expound the words: I know (saith he) how great faith thou hast reposed in our Lord which hath saued vs, and how great charity thou hast, and how much thou hast helped them that esteeme godlinesse. S. Ambrose writeth: Hee saith he reioyceth and giueth thanks in his prayers, because he was stedfast in faith, and continued in good workes: for he that loueth Christ, ought to proue it in his seruants, &c. Againe, the Apostle speaketh of the Saincts liuing, and not departed. therefore this place cannot serue to colour your Popish faith and beleife in Saincts that are departed out of this life. No faith in Saincts.

THE ARGVMENT OF THE EPISTLE OF S. PAVL TO THE HEBREWES.

RHEM. THAT the Hebrewes were not all the Iewes, but only a part of them, it is manifest Act. 6: where the primitiue Church of Hierusalem, although it consisted of Iewes only, as we reade Act. 2, yet is said to consist of two sorts, Greekes and Hebrues. Which againe is manifest Phil. 3. where S. Paul comparing him self with the Iudaical false Apostles, saith, that he also is, an Hebrue of Hebrues. Finally, they seeme to haue beene those Iewes which were borne in Iurie, which for the most part dwelled also there. Therfore to the Christian Iewes in Hierusalem and in the rest of Iurie, S. Paul writeth this Epistle, out of Italie saying thereupon, The brethren of Italie salute you. Heb. 13. By which words, and by these other in the same place, Know ye our brother Timothee to be dimissed, with whom (if he come the sooner) I will see you, it is euident, that he wrote this, not only after he was brought prisoner to Rome, wherein S. Luke endeth the Actes of the Apostles: but also after he was set at libertie there againe.

Many causes are giuen of the Doctors, why writing to the Iewes, he doth not put his name in the beginning, Paul an Apostle &c. as he doth lightly in his Epistles to the Churches and Bishops of the Gentils. The most likely cause is, for that he was the preacher and Apostle and Maister of the Gentils. And againe in an other place he saith, that him self was appointed the Apostle of the Gentils, as Peter of the Iewes. Gal. 2. Only S. Peter therfore writing to the Iewes, doth vse this stile: Peter an Apostle of IESVS Christ &c. because he was more peculiarly their Apostle, as being the vicar of Christ, who was also himself [‡] more specially the minister of the Circumcision, that is (as himselfe speaketh) not sent but to the sheepe which were lost of the house of Israël Mat. 15. 2. Tim. 1. 1. Tim. 2. 1. Pet. 1. Rom. 5.

The

The argument of the Epistle S.Paul himselfe doth tell vs in two wordes, calling it verbum solatij, the word of solace and comfort. Which also is plaine in the whole course of the Epistle, namely in the tenth chapter. v.32. &c. Where he exhorteth them to take great comfort & confidence in their manifold tribulations sustained of their owne countrie men the Iewes, whereof the Apostle also maketh mention to the Thessalonians. 1.Thess.2.v.14. Those persecutious theis of the obstinate incredulous Iewes their countrie men, was one great tentation vnto them. An other tentation was, the persuasions that they brought them out of Scriptures, to cleaue vnto the Law, and not to beleeue in IESVS the dead man. Heb.13.

And whereas the Iewes did magnifie their Law, by the Prophets, and by the Angels by whom it was giuen, and by Moyses, and by their land of promise, into which Iosue brought them, and by their father Abraham, and by their Aaronicall or Leuiticall priesthood and sacrifices, by their tabernacle, and by their Testament: he sheweth, that our Lord IESVS, as being the naturall sonne of God, passeth incomparably the Prophets, the Angels, and Moyses: that the Rest or quietnes which God promised, was not in their earthly land, but in heauen: that his figure Melchisedec far passed Abraham: and that his priesthod, Sacrifice, Tabernacle, and Testament, far passed theirs. In al which he shooteth often at these three markes: to take away the scandall of Christs death, by giuing them sundrie good reasons and testimonies of it: to erect their minds from visible and earthly promises (to which only the Iewes were wholy bent) to inuisible and heauenly: and to insinuate that the Ceremonies should now cease, the time of their correction by Christ being now come.

The Epistle may be deuided into these parts: the first, Of Christs excellencie aboue the Prophets, Angels, Moyses, and Iosue: c.1.2.3.4. The second, of his priesthod and excellencie thereof aboue the priesthod of the old Testament: c.5. vnto the middest of the 10. The last part is of exhortation c.10.v.9. to the end of the Epistle.

MARGINALL NOTES.

RHEM. 1 [‡] More specially.) Yet was Christ head of the Gentiles also. So likewise his vicar S.Peter, notwithstanding his more peculiar Apostleship ouer the Iewes.

FVLKE. 1 Christ neuer made S.Peter his Vicar generall, nor his successour in the headship, but holdeth it himselfe, and executeth it by his holy Spirit. But Peters Apostleship principally ouer the Circumcision, we finde in the Scripture, and Paules ouer the Gentiles, and the composition betweene Peter, Paul, and the rest of the Apostles, touching that Primacie or chiefe Apostleship, Gal.2. But that Peter was neuertheless head of the Gentiles, the holy Scripture neuer teacheth. Peters Primacie.

THE EPISTLE OF PAVL THE APOSTLE TO THE HEBREWES.

RHEM. 2 *LEt the Christian Reader note the corruption and impudent boldnes of our Aduersaries, that vpon a false priuate persuasion of their owne, that S.Paul as not the author of this Epistle, leaue out his name in the title of the same, contrarie to the authentical copies both Greeke and Latin. In old time there was some doubt who should be the writer of it, but then, when it was no lesse doubted whether it were Canonical Scripture at all. Afterward the whole Church (by which onely we know the true Scriptures from other writings) held it and deliuered it, as now she doth, to the faithful, for Canonical, and for S.Pauls Epistle. Notwithstanding the Aduersaries would haue refused the Epistle, as wel as they do the Author, but that they falsely imagine certaine places thereof to make against the Sacrifice of the Masse. Heretical corruption. * In the English Bible of the yeere 1579. The Epistle to the Hebrues, is S. Paules.

FVLKE. 2 Let the Christian Reader note the malice of our Aduersaries, which charge vs with corruption of the Scripture, without any ground. First, because the titles and subscripts of the Epistles, be no part of the Apostles writings, but added by such as copied out the same. Therefore if we did leaue out the title of the Epistle of S.Paul to the Romanes, or the Corinthians, or any other (which it is most certaine were written by the Apostle Paul:) yet were it no corruption of the Scripture. But this title some of our translations haue left out, because it is not agreed among ancient writers, who was the writer of this Epistle: Paul, or Barnabas, or Luke, or Clemens. Secondly, because diuers reasons are brought by some, to proue that it was not written by S. Paul. And because some ancient Greeke copies haue not S.Pauls name in the title, but onely: The Epistle to the Hebrewes. And so doth Oecumenius intitle it, and Hentenius a Papist translate it. Where you say, it was no lesse doubted, whether it were Canonical Scripture then who should be the writer of it, it is false. For many were vncertaine of the writer, that doubted not of the auctoritie. For they that ascribe it to Barnabas or Luke, the one an Apostle, the other an Euangelist, doe not doubt whether it be to be admitted for holy Scripture. There were in deed in the Latine Church, that doubted of it. Because the Nouatians and Montanists, abused a place or two in it, as Tertullian doth in his booke de pudicitia, yet nothing doubting, but that it was written by Barnabas, as the title then gaue it, and that it was of sufficient auctoritie. Where you say, that by the Church onely, we know the true Scriptures from other writings, it is false. For by the Spirit of God, (which is the auctour of them,) we know them more certainely, then by the auctoritie of the Church. Slander. Cauillings. Auctoritie of the Church and Scriptures.

Seeing therefore the doctrine of this Epistle is consonant to the doctrine of the other Canonical Scriptures, there ought to haue beene no doubt of it. Of like truth it is that you say, we would haue refused it, as well as we doe the auctor. For none of vs doth refuse S. Paul, though some iudge that he was not writer of this Epistle. Neither are you able to bring any reason, why it is like we would refuse the Epistle, which not onely maketh manifestly against the sacrifice of the Masse, but also against many other points of your heresie, and hath not so much as any shew against any thing that we teach.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 1

3 The figure.) To be the figure of his substance, signifieth nothing els but that which S. Paul speaketh in other words to the Philippians c.2.v.6. that he is the forme and most expresse resemblance of his fathers substance. So S. Ambrose and others expound it, and the Greeke word Character is very significant to that purpose. Note also by this place, that the Sonne, though he be a figure of his Fathers substance, is notwithstanding of the same substance. So Christs body in the Sacrament and his Mysticall death and sacrifice in the same, though called a figure, image, or representation of Christs visible body and sacrifice vpon the Crosse, yet may be and is the selfe same in substance. μορφὴ χαρακτὴρ. The B. Sacrament a figure, and yet the true body.

FVLKE. 1

The Sacrament is not so the Character of Christs substance, as Christ is of his fathers substance. Beside this, the distinction of the persons of the Father and the Sonne, is inuincibly proued by the opposition that is in these relatiues, the character and the substance of the Father. For this Argument followeth most certainly, the Sonne is the character of his Fathers substance, Ergo the Sonne is not the Father, though of the same substance, nor the Father is the Sonne: So must the opposition of necessitie holde. The Sacrament is the figure, signe, and representation of the body of Christ, Ergo it is not the body of Christ, but sacramentally, significatiuely, or representatiuely. Paschasius de corpore & sang. c.4. Cum figura vel character substantiæ eius humanitatis designat naturam vbi corporaliter plenitudo inhabitat Diuinitatis. Wherefore this is such impudent sophistrie to delude the ignorant, that euery yong sophister in the Vniuersities, which knoweth the opposition of Relatiues, is able to discouer it, as a very vaine and vnlearned shift, to make the signe and the thing signified, to be the same in the very respect and point, wherein they are opposite, which is impossible. The word (visible) which you foyst in, to make an apparance of opposition, will not serue your turne. For the Sacrament is not a figure or signe of the visiblenes of Christs body, but of his very body in deed, which is alwaies of his owne nature visible though it be not alwaies seene. The real presence.

RHEM. 2

6 Let al the Angels adore.) The Heretiks maruel that we adore Christ in the B. Sacrament, when they might learne by this place, that whersoeuer his person is, there it ought to be adored both of men & Angels. And where they say it was not made present in the sacrament nor instituted to be adored, we answer that no more was he incarnate purposely to be adored: but yet straight vpon his discending from heauen, it was the dutie both of Angels and al other creatures to adore him. The adoration of Christ in the B. Sacrament.

First,

FVLKE. 2

Fuſt, we deny the body of Chriſt to be preſent in the Sacrament (as you affirme it) that is, really, corporally, ſubſtantially, &c. Secondly, if it were ſo preſent with the ſubſtance of the elements, or vnder the accidents of elements: yet, becauſe Chriſt is not ioyned either to the elements, or to the accidents of them in vnity of perſon, ſo that the elements and Chriſt, or the accidents and Chriſt, doe not make one perſon, as the Godhead and manhood are one perſon, which is Chriſt: we ought not to adore Chriſt in any ſuch viſible forme. No more then we may adore God the Father, in the Sunne, the Moone, or any other creature, in which he is verily preſent, as he is preſent in all places. Or the holy Ghoſt in euery true Chriſtian in whom he is preſent, not onely by ſubſtance, as God is euery where, but alſo by ſpeciall grace. Becauſe God the Father, and God the holy Ghoſt, is not vnited to any creature in vnitie of perſon, as God the Sonne is vnto the humanitie: and therefore is to be adored as God manifeſted in the fleſh. Where you ſay, Chriſt was not incarnate purpoſely to be adored, it is falſe, for he was incarnate to be ſeene and adored of the Angels, and of all the world in the fleſh. 1. Tim. 3. 16. Though not onely for that purpoſe. And if you make ſo little accompt of this Argument, of the inſtitution or end of the Sacrament, why doe you not adore likewiſe euery man that hath receiued it, for ſo long time as you determine that Chriſt is preſent within him? Or why doe you not fall downe before euery ſuch perſon, as you doe before the Pixe, when it is caried about with the Sacrament in it, for the ſame reaſon that you adore or fall downe before the Pixe: ſeeing in reſpect of Chriſtes preſence as you ſuppoſe it to be, there is as great dueti in the one as in the other.

Real preſence and adoration of the Sacrament.

CHAP. II.

He inferreth of the foreſaid, that it ſhall be incomparably more damnable for them to neglect the new Teſtament then the olde, 3 conſidering the irrefragable authoritie of the Apoſtles alſo. 5 Then he proſecuteth the excellencie of Chriſt aboue the Angels, 9 who neuertheleſſe, was made leſſer then Angels, to ſuffer and die for men, to deſtroy the dominion of the Diuell, 15 To deliuer men from feare of death, 17 And to be a faith Prieſt for men.

1 THerefore more abundantly ought we to obſerue thoſe things which we haue heard: ‘ leſt perhaps we runne out.

‘ Or that which runneth out of broken veſſell, or that runneth by a hole.

2 For if the word that was ſpoken by Angels, became ſure, and al preuarication and diſobedience hath receiued a iuſt retribution of reward:

3 How ſhall we eſcape if we neglect ſo great ſaluation? which when it was begonne to be declared by our Lord, of them that heard was confirmed on vs,

4 * God withal teſtifying by ſignes, and wonders, and diuerſe miracles, and diſtributions of the holy Ghoſt according to his wil.

Mar. 16. 20.

5 For not to Angels hath God made ſubiect the world to come, whereof we ſpeake.

6 But one hath teſtified in a certaine place, ſaying: What is man, that thou art mindfull of him: or the ſonne of man, that thou viſiteſt him?

7 Thou didſt miniſh him litle leſſe then Angels: with glorie and honour thou haſt crowned him, and conſtituted him ouer the workes of thy handes.

8 All things haſt thou made ſubiect vnder his feete. For in that he ſubiected al things to him, he left nothing not ſubiect to him. But now we ſee not as yet al things ſubiected to him.

1. Cor. 15. Epheſ. 1.

9 But * him that was a litle leſſened vnder the Angels, we ſee IESVS, ‡ becauſe of the paſſion of death, crowned with glorie and honour: that through the grace of God he might taſt death for al.

Pſal. 8. Heb. 2. 8.

10 For it became him for whom al things and by whom al things, that had brought many children into glorie, to conſummate the author of their ſaluation, by his paſſion.

11 For he that ſanctifieth, and they that be ſanctified: all of one. For the which cauſe he is not aſhamed to call them brethren.

12 Saying,

VVHerefore we ought to giue the more earneſt heede to the things which we haue heard: leſt at any time we ſhould let them ſlippe.

2 For if the word ſpoken by Angels, was ſtedfaſt, and euery tranſgreſſion and diſobedience receiued a iuſt recompence of reward:

3 How ſhall we eſcape if we neglect ſo great ſaluation? which at the firſt began to be preached of the Lord, and was confirmed vnto vs warde by them that heard it,

4 * God bearing witneſſe thereto both with ſignes and wonders alſo, and with diuers powers, and gifts of the holy Ghoſt, according to his owne will.

Mar. 16. 20.

5 For vnto the Angels hath he not put in ſubiection the world to come, whereof we ſpeake.

6 But one in a certaine place witneſſed ſaying, * What is Man, that thou art mindfull of him? or the ſonne of man, that thou viſiteſt him?

Pſal. 8. 5.

7 Thou madeſt him for a litle while lower then the Angels, thou haſt crowned him with glorie and honour, and * haſt ſet him aboue the workes of thy handes.

8 Thou haſt put all thinges in ſubiection vnder his feete. In that he put all things vnder him, he left nothing that is not put vnder him, But now we ſee not yet all things put vnder him.

1. Cor. 15. 17.

9 * But him that for a while was made leſſe then the Angels, † we ſee that it was Ieſus, who through the ſuffering of death, was crowned with glory and honour, that he by the grace of God, ſhould taſt of death for all.

Phi. 1. 8. Fulke. The Greeke is word for word, We ſee Ieſus by the ſuffering of death, crowned &c.

10 For it became him, for whom are al things, and by whom are all things, after he had brought many ſonnes vnto glorie, that he ſhould make the captaine of their ſaluation perfect through afflictions.

11 For both he that ſanctifieth, and they which are ſanctified are all of one: for which cauſe he is not aſhamed to call them brethren,

Ps. 21.23. 12 Saying, I will declare thy name to my brethren: in the middes of the Church will I praise thee.

Ps.17,3. 13 And againe, I will haue affiance in him, And againe, Behold here am I and my children: whom God hath giuen me.

Es. 8,18. 14 Therefore because the children haue communicated with flesh and bloud, him selfe also in like maner hath beene partaker of the same: that * by death he might de-

15 And might deliuer them that by the feare of death through al their life were subiect to seruitude.

e The dignitie of man, in that Christ tooke our nature vnto his person in Deitie, and not the nature of Angels.

16 For no where doth he take Angels: but the seede of Abraham he taketh.

17 Whereupon he ought in al things to be like vnto his brethren, that he might become a merciful and faithfull high Priest before God, that he might repropitiate the sinnes of the people.

18 For in that wherein himselfe suffered and was tempted, he is able to helpe them also that are tempted.

12 Saying, * I will declare thy name vnto my brethren, in the middest of the Church will I praise thee. Ps.22.23.

13 And againe I will put my trust in him. And againe, behold here am I, and the children which God hath giuen me.

14 For asmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himselfe likewise tooke part with them, * that through death, he might expell him that had lordship ouer death, that is, the deuil: Osee.13.14. 1.Cor.15.54.

15 And that he might deliuer them which through feare of death, were all their life time in danger of bondage.

16 For he in no place taketh on him the angels: but the seede of Abraham taketh he on him.

17 Wherefore in all things it became him to be made like vnto his brethren, that he might be mercifull, and a faithfull high Priest in thinges concerning God, for to purge the peoples sinnes.

18 For in that he himselfe suffered, and was tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 1 9 Because of the passion.) This proueth against the Caluinistes that Christ by his Passion merited his owne glorification. Which they would not for shame deny of Christ, but that they are at a point to denie all meritorious works, yea euen in Christ also, and therefore they translate also this sentence heretically, by transposing the wordes. In the Bible printed in the yeere 1579.

If it were graunted that Christ merited his glory by his suffering, it would helpe you nothing for your meritorious workes. And yet we would not for all the world, deny all meritorious works, for we acknowledge the sacrifice of Christ to haue merited and deserued for vs remission of our sinnes, and eternall life. But all glory that Christ hath, was from euerlasting due to his person, because he is the eternall sonne of God. And it is not long since, you confessed that streight vpon his descending from heauen it was the dutie both of Angels and all other creatures to adore him, therefore he merited not his glorification by his death which was due to him so soone as he was incarnate by the right of his godhead. Neither doth this text proue any thing to the contrary, if it be rightly translated. For the Apostle saith that Christ was made lesse then the Angels, in respect of the passion of his death, as S. Paul saith, he made himselfe of no reputation, &c. Phili.2.7. not that that he was crowned with glory for the merite of his death. And therefore we translate not this sentence heretically, but according to the sense of the Apostle, and the iudgement of the Catholike fathers. First Athanasius distinguished as we doe. De incarnat verbi dei.

So doth Chrysostome Hom 4. If he which should haue all subiect vnto him, died and suffered innumerable things: why art thou sad, when thou sufferest? For we see Iesus, euen him that was made a litle lesse then the Angels, for the passion of death. And then againe he added, good and prosperous thinges, crowned with glory. S. Ambrose likewise saith. He sheweth that the Crosse of Christ is glory and honour, for which Crosse he was made lesse then the Angels. Theodoret saith. He was not lesse then the Angels by nature of his diuinitie, but by suffering of his humanitie. S. Augustine vpon this text, Cont. Maxim. lib. 3. c. 18. saith. That which is written in the Epistle to the Hebrewes. (But now we do not yet see all things subiect vnto him: but we see Iesus euen him that was made a litle lesse then the Angels for the passion of death) ought to teach vs how we should vnderstand that which is written to the Corinthians, When all things shall be subdued vnto him, that it is said according to his humanitie, not according to his deitie. So therefore appearing in man in whom by the passion of death, he was made a litle lesse then the Angels, he shall iudge the quicke and the dead, Againe, Cap. 25. he writeth, The Scripture hath opened why it is said, Thou hast made him a litle lesse then the Angels, where it is read: we see Iesus euen him which is made a litle lesse then the Angels for the suffering of death. Therefore not for the nature of man, but for the suffering of death. Primasius saith, he was made lesse then the Angels by dying for vs. Fulgent. ad Trasimundum lib. 3. cap. 20. Aduertant Paulum Apostolum hunc locum ad mortis humanæ intelligentiam referentem, ita vt istam minorationem non solùm naturæ humanitatis assignet, quinetiam Diuinitatem Christi à consortio passionis & mortis excepter. Ita namque ad Hebræos loquitur; Eum autem, &c. Eusebius Emissenus Dom. Ad. Hom. 3. Eum qui modico quàm angeli minoratus est, videmus Iesum propter passionem mortis. Minor enim ist angelis Iesus, secundum hoc quod mortalis & passibilis factus est. Cerea'is cont. Maximin. cap. 8. Nunc modico minus ab angelis minoratum vidimus Iesum. Quare? Sequitur: Propter passionem mortis. Faustinus cont. Arr. c. 4. Minoratus est propter passionem mortis. Greg. Eticus idem. Seeing our translation therefore is according to the interpretation and distinction of these Catholike fathers, you see either what learning, or what honestie is in these men, to charge vs with hereticall translation, and transposing of the words. And although we should otherwise distinguish, that Christ by the passion of death was crowned with glorie, yet Christes meriting his glory, were not proued thereby. For all the members of Christ by death attaine to the crowne of glory, yet not by the merite of their death.

CHAP. III.

By example of Christ (who is incomparably more excellent then Moses also) he exhorteth them to be faithfull vnto God.
7 There reward shall be, to enter into euerlasting rest, if they perseuere, as contrariwise to be excluded (as was shadowed in their forefathers in the wildernes) if they sinne and become incredulous.

WHEREFORE holy brethren, partakers of the heauenly vocation, consider the Apostle, and high Priest of our confession IESVS.

2 Who is faithful to him that made him, as also * Moyses in all his house.

The excellencie of Christ aboue Moyses. Nu.12,7.

3 For, this man is esteemed worthy of more ample glorie aboue Moyses, by so much as more ample glory then the house, hath he that framed it.

4 For euery house is framed of some man, but he that created al things, is God.

5 And Moyses in deede was faithfull in al his house as a seruant, for a testimonie of those things which were to be said:

6 But Christ as the Sonne in his owne house: which house are we, if we keepe firme the confidence and glory of hope vnto the end.

7 Wherefore, as the holy Ghost saith, To day if you shall heare his voice,

P.94,8.

8 Harden not your harts as in the exacerbation according to the day of temptation in the desert.

9 Where you fathers tempted me: proued and saw my workes.

10 Fortie yeeres. For the which cause I was offended with this generation, and said, They doe alwaies erre in hart. And they haue not knowen my waies.

11 To whom I sware in my wrath, If they shall enter into my rest,

12 Beware brethren, lest perhaps there be in some of you an euil hart of incredulity, to depart from the liuing God.

13 But exhort your selues euerie day, whiles to day is named, that none of you be obdurate with the fallacie of sinne.

14 For we be made partakers of Christ: yet so if we keepe the ‡ beginning of his substance firme vnto the end.

‡ Faith is the ground worke of our creation in Christ, which if we hold not fast, the building is lost. Nu.14,37. 21,23.

15 While it is said, To day if you shal heare his voice, doe not obdurate your harts as in that exacerbation.

16 For some hearing did exasperate: but not all they that went out of Ægypt by Moyses.

17 And with whom was he offended fortie yeeres? was it not with them that sinned, *whose carcasses were ouerthrowen in the desert?

18 And to whom did he sweare that they should not enter into his rest: but to them that were incredulous?

19 And we see that they could not enter in, because of incredulitie.

THerefore holy brethren, partakers of the celestiall calling, consider the Apostle and high Priest of our profession Christ Iesus.

*2 Being faithfull to him that appointed him, as also * Moses was faithfull in all his house.* Num.12.7.

3 For this man was counted worthy of more glory then Moses, in as much as he which hath builded the house, hath more honour then the house.

4 For euerie house is builded of some man, but he that builded all things, is God.

5 And Moses verely was faithfull in all his house, as a seruant, for a witnesse of those things which were to be spoken after:

6 But Christ as the sonne hath rule ouer his owne house: whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the reioycing of that hope vnto the end.

*7 Wherefore: as the holy Ghost sayeth, * To day if ye will heare his voice,* Psal.95.8.

8 Harden not your hartes, as in the prouocation in the day of temptation in the wilderneſſe:

9 Where your fathers tempted me, proued me, and saw my workes fortie yeeres.

10 Wherefore I was greeued with this generation, and saide they doe alwaie erre in hart, they verily haue not knowen my waies.

11 So that I sware in my wrath, If they shall enter into my rest.

12 Take heede brethren, least at any time there be in any of you an euill hart of vnbeliefe, to depart from the liuing God:

13 But exhort ye one another daily, while it is called to day: lest any of you be hardned through the deceitfulneſſe of sinne.

14 For we are made partakers of Christ, if we keepe sure vnto the end the beginning of the substance.

*15 ‖ So long as it is said, * To day if ye will heare his voice, harden not your harts, as in the prouocation.* ‖ Or, while. Psal.95.8.

16 For some when they had heard, did prouoke: ‖ howbeit, not all that came out of Ægypt by Moses. ‖ The Lord.

17 But with whom was he displeased fortie yeeres? Not with them that had sinned, whose carkeises fell in the desert?

18 And to whom sware he that they should not enter into his rest, but vnto them that were not obedient?

19 And we see that they could not enter in, because of vnbeliefe.

CHAP. IIII.

That they must feare to be excluded out of the foresaid rest (which he proueth out of the Psalme) 12 considering that Christ seeth their most inward secretes. 14 And that he (as their Priest who also himselfe suffered) is able and ready to strengthen them in confession of their faith.

LET vs feare therefore lest perhaps forsaking the promise of entring into his rest, some of you be thought to be wanting.

2 For to vs also it hath beene denounnounced, as also to them, but the worde of hearing did not profit them, not mixt with faith of those things which they heard.

3 For we that haue beleeued, shal enter into the rest: as he said, As I sware in my wrath, if they shall enter into my rest: and truely the workes from the foundation of the world being perfited.

Psal.94,11.

4 For he said in a certaine place of the ‡seuenth day, thus. And God rested the seuenth day from all his workes.

Gen.2,2.

5 And againe in this, If they shall enter into my rest.

6 Because it remaineth that certaine enter into it, and they to whom first it was preached, did not enter because of incredulitie:

Heb.3,7.

7 Againe he limited a certaine day: To day, in Dauid saying, after so long time, as is aboue said, To day if you shall heare his voice: doe not obdurate your harts.

8 For if * Iesus had giuen them rest: he would neuer speake of an other day afterward.

* So Iosue is called in Greek.

9 Therefore there is left a sabbatisme for the people of God.

10 For he that is entred into his rest, the same also hath rested from his workes, as God from his.

11 Let vt hasten therefore to enter into that rest: that no man fall into the same example of incredulitie.

‡ Whatsoeuer God threateneth by his word concerning the punishment of sinne and incredulitie, shal be executed, be the office neuer so secret, deepe, or hidden in our harts, because Gods speach passeth easily and searcheth throughly euery part, power, and faculty of mans soule.

12 For ‡ the word of God is liuely and forcible, and more persing then any two edged sword: and reaching vnto the diuision of the soule and the spirit, of the iointes also and the marowes, and a discerner of the cogitations and intents of the hart.

13 And there is no creature inuisible in his sight, but al things are naked and open to his eies, to whom our speach is.

14 Hauing therefore a great high Priest that hath entred the heauens, IESVS the sonne of God, let vs hold the confession.

15 For we haue not a high Priest that can not haue compassion on our infirmities: but tempted in all things by similitude, except sinne.

THE Epistle in a Masse for the election of the Pope.

16 ‖ Let vs goe therefore with confidence to the throne of grace: that we may obtaine mercy, and finde grace in seasonable aide.

LET vs feare therefore, least at any time by forsaking the promise of entring into his rest, any of you should seeme to be defrauded.

2 For vnto vs was the Gospell preached, as well as vnto them: but the word which they heard, did not profit them, not being coupled with faith to them that heard.

3 For we which haue beleeued, doe enter into his rest, as he said, * Euen as I haue sworne in my wrath, if they shal enter into my rest: although the workes were made perfect from the foundation of the world. Psal 95.11,

4 For he spake in a certaine place of the seuenth day on this wise: * And God did rest the seuenth day from all his workes. Gen.2.2.

5 And in this place againe, If they shall enter into my rest.

6 Seeing therefore it followeth that some must enter thereinto, and they to whom the Gospell was first preached entred not therein for vnbeliefe.

7 Againe, he appointed a certaine day, by to day, saying in Dauid after so long a time, (as it is said) *To day if yee will heare his voice, harden not your harts. Psal.95.8.

8 For if Iesus had giuen them rest, then would he not afterward haue spoken of another day.

9 There remaineth therefore yet a rest to the people of God.

10 For he that is entred into his rest, hath ceased also from his owne workes, as God did from his.

11 Let vs study therefore to enter into that rest, least any man fall ‖ after the same example of the disobedience. ‖ Or, into 12 For the word of God is quicke and mightie in operation, and sharper then any two edged sword and entreth through euen vnto the diuiding asunder of the soule and the spirit, and of the ioints, and the marow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and of the intents of the hart.

13 Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in the sight of him: but all things are naked and open vnto the eies of him of whom we speake.

14 Seeing then that we haue a great high priest, which is entred into heauens, Iesus the sonne of God, let vs hold fast this confession.

15 For we haue not an high priest which can not be touched with the feeling of our infirmities: but was in all pointes tempted like as we are, and yet without sinne.

16 Let vs therefore come boldly vnto the throne of grace, that we may obtaine mercy, and finde grace to helpe in time of neede.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 1 4 Seuenth day.) If the Apoſtle had not euidently here ſhewed that the Sabboths reſt was a figure of the eternal repoſe in heauen, who durſt to haue applied that Scripture of Gods reſt the ſeuenth day, to that purpoſe? Or how can our Aduerſaries now reprehend the like application manifoldly vſed in all holy auncient writers to the like end?

FVLKE. 1 Before this Epiſtle was written, the prophet Eſay deliuered the ſame doctrine of the Saboath that the Apoſtle doth: Eſay 58. 13. &c. & cap. 66. 23. The like application, in any ancient writer, to the like end we doe not reprehend, when it hath the ſame warrant of the Scripture. But ſeeing the auncient holy fathers, had neither the ſame priuiledge of the ſpirit, that they ſhould neuer erre in their applications, nor alway the holy Scripture to direct them vnto ſuch endes, ſometimes we may iuſtly reprehend them by auctoritie of the holy Scriptures when their applications are not agreable vnto them. Applying of Scriptures.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 2 16 Let vs goe with confidence.) The Aduerſaries goe about to procue by theſe wordes, that we neede no helpe of Saincts to obtaine any thing, Chriſt him ſelfe being ſo readie, and we being admoniſhed to come to him with confidence as to a moſt merciſull Mediator and Biſhop. But by that argument they may as well take away the helpes and prayers of the liuing one for an other. And we doe not require the helpe either of the Saincts in heauen, or of our brethren in earth, for any miſtruſt of Gods mercie, but for our owne vnworthines: being aſſured that the prayer of a iuſt man auaileth more with him, then the deſire of a greeuous ſinner: and of a number making interceſſion together, rather then of a man alone. which the Heretikes can not deny except they reproue the plaine Scriptures. Neither doe we come leſſe to him, or with leſſe confidence, when we come accompanied with the prayers of Angels, Saincts, Prieſts, or iuſt men ioyning with vs, as they fondly imagine and pretend: but with much more affiance in his grace, mercie, and merites, then if we prayed our ſelues alone. Scripture abuſed againſt inuocation of Saincts.

IVLKE. 2 Chriſt is a moſt merciſull Mediator, to whom we ought to come with confidence, and by him to God. Therefore we haue no neede of the mediation of Saincts departed. This argument (you ſay) is inſufficient. Whereby we may as well take away the helpes and prayers of the liuing, one for another. I anſwere, the prayers of the Saincts liuing, haue both commaundement, and promiſe in the Scriptures: ſo hath not inuocation of Saincts departed this life, and therefore, they are not of one kinde. Againe we haue no neede of the prayer of Saincts liuing for the merite or worthyneſſe of their perſons, but becauſe this mutuall ductie of praying one for another, is by God required, and is acceptable to him, when it is done in faith and obedience vnto him, and of loue and charitie one towards another. The like cauſe is not of praying to Saincts in heauen, becauſe there is neither commaundement to be obeyed, nor promiſe to be beleeued, nor any vſe of our prayer for them. You ſay, you require not the prayers of Saincts in heauen, or of your brethren on earth, for any miſtruſt of Gods mercy, but for your owne vnworthineſſe. And we go with confidence to the throne of grace, not truſting in our worthineſſe, or in the worthineſſe of any other creature, but onely in the worthineſſe of Chriſt, in whom we are aſſured to be heard, according to his promiſe, whether we be few or many. But you are aſſured that the prayer of a iuſt man, auaileth more with him then of a greeuous ſinner. And we are aſſured, that no mans prayer auaileth with him any thing at all in reſpect of the merite of any iuſt man, but onely in the merite and mediation of Chriſt. Yet we know the prayer of a iuſt man, auaileth much by Gods merciſull promiſe, but not by the worthineſſe of his prayer: ſo we ſay of the interceſſion of many together, and otherwiſe the Scripture teacheth not. Therefore, ſeeing we haue no promiſe of helpe, by inuocation of Saincts, we can haue no confidence or hope in ſuch inuocation. Laſt of all you ſay, You come not leſſe to God, or with leſſe confidence, but with much more affiance in his grace, when ye are accompanied with the prayers of Angels and Saincts, &c. Firſt it is to to manifeſt, that you come leſſe to God, when you goe ſo much to Saincts, then you ſhould doe if you went onely to God. Secondly, the affiance that you haue, is not in the meere grace, mercie, and merites of Chriſt, ſo great as if you came to Chriſt onely, truſting in his grace, merites and mercie, and not a whit in the merites or worthineſſe of Angels and Saincts, or any other creature, liuing, or dead. Whether the Angels and Saincts doe pray for you or no, you know not by the word of God. But that neither the one nor the other, can know your harts, or your petitions offered to them in ſo many places at once, you might learne by the Scriptures, and euen by naturall reaſon, ſeeing it is proper to the diuinitie onely, to know the hart of man, and all things or many things at one inſtant, 1. Reg. 8. 39. Chriſt our only mediatour. Inuocation of Saincts.

CHAP. V.

That Chriſt being a man and infirme, was therein but as all Prieſts, and that he alſo was called of God to this office: offering as the others: 8 and ſuffered obediently for our example. 11 Of whoſe Prieſthood he hath much to ſay, but that the Hebrues haue neede rather to heare their Catechiſme againe.

The Epiſtle for Biſhop Iuel is a Creſcas and for Vſſher of Canterbury.

3 And for the ſame infirmitie he is bound to offer for ſinnes, as well for himſelfe, as for the people.

4 And no man taketh the honour vnto himſelfe, but he that is called of God, * as was Aaron. 1. Chr. 23. 13.

11 Of whom we haue great speach and ‖ inexplicable to vtter: because you are become weake to heare.

12 For whereas you ought to be maisters for your time, you neede to be taught againe your selues what be the elements of the beginning of the wordes of God: and you are become such as haue need of milke, and not of strong meate.

13 For euerie one that is partaker of milke, is vnskilful of the word of iustice: for he is a child.

14 But strong meate is for the perfect, them that by custome haue their senses exercised to the discerning of good and euil.

6 As he saith also in another place, * Thou art a priest for euer, after the order of Melchisedech. Psal.110.4.

9 And being perfect, was made the author of eternall saluation vnto all them that obey him:

11 Of whom wee haue many things to say, and hard to be vttered seeing yee are dull of hearing.

12 For when as concerning the time, ye ought to be teachers, yet haue ye neede againe that we teach you the first principles of the beginning of the word of God, and are become such as haue neede of milke, and not of strong meate.

13 For euery one that vseth milke, is vnexpert of the word of righteousnesse, for he is a babe.

14 But strong meate belongeth to them that are perfect, euen those which by reason of vse, haue their wits exercised to discerne both good and euill.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. V.

RHEM.1 1 Euery high Priest.) By the description of a Priest or high Priest (for to this purpose all is one matter) he proueth Christ to be one in most excellent sort. First then, a Priest must not be an Angell, or of any other nature but mans. Secondly, euery man is not a Priest, but such an one as is specially chosen out of the rest, and preferred before other of the communitie, seuered, assumpted and exalted into a higher state and dignitie then the vulgar. Thirdly, the cause and purpose why he is so sequestred and piked out from the residue, is to take charge of Diuine things, to deale as a mediator betwixt God and the people, to be the Deputie of men in such things as they haue to craue or to receiue of God, and to present or giue to him againe. Fourthly, the most proper and principall part of a Priests office is, to offer oblations, giftes and sacrifices to God for the sinnes of the people: without which kinde of most soueraine duelties, no person, people or Common wealth can appertaine to God: and which can be done by none, of what other dignitie or calling soeuer he be in the world, that is not a Priest: diuers Princes (as we read in the Scriptures) punished by God, and king Saul deposed from his kingdome, specially for attempting the same. The description of a Priest, and his office. 3.Reg.13. 2.Par.26. 1.Reg.13.

And generally we may learne here, that in ijs quæ sunt ad Deum, in all matters touching God, his seruice, and religion, the Priest hath onely charge and authoritie: as the Prince temporall is the peoples gouernour, guider, and soueraine, in the things touching their worldly affaires: Which must for all that by him be directed and manneged no otherwise, but as is agreeable to the due worship and seruice of God, against which if the terrene Powers commit any thing, the Priests ought to admonish them from God. The Princes temporal authoritie how farre it extendeth.

We learne also hereby, that euery one is not a Priest, and that the people must alwaies haue certaine persons chosen out from among them, to deale in their suites and causes with God, to pray, to minister Sacraments, and to sacrifice for them. And whereas the Protestants will haue no Priest, Priesthood, nor sacrifice, but Christ and his death, pretending these words of the Apostle to be verified onely in the Priesthood and Seruice of the old law, and Christes person alone, and after him of no mo: therein they shew themselues to be ignorant of the Scriptures, and of the state of the new Testament, and induce a plaine Atheisme and godlesnesse into the world. for so long as man hath to doe with God, there must needes be some deputed, and chosen out from among the rest, to deale according to this declaration of the Apostle, in things pertaining to God, and those must be Priests. for else, if men neede to deale no more, but immediatly with Christ, what doe they with their Ministers? Why let they not euery man pray, and minister for himselfe and to himselfe? What doe they with Sacraments, seeing Christes death is as well sufficient without them, as without Sacrifice? Why standeth not his death as well with Sacrifice as with Sacraments: as well with Priesthood, as with other Ecclesiasticall function? There is no other cause in the world, but that (Sacrifice being the most principall act of religion that man oweth to God, both by his Law, and by the Law of nature) the Diuell by these his ministers, vnder pretence of deferring or attributing the more to Christs death, would abolish it. There is a peculiar order & calling of Priests of the new Testament. Priests and sacrifice necessarie in the new Testament, and nothing derogatorie to Christs priesthood in sacrifice.

This definition of a Priest and his function, with all the properties thereto belonging, holdeth not onely in the law of Moyses, and order of Aarons Priesthood, but it was true before, in the Law of nature, in the Patriarches, in Melchisedec, and now in Christ, and all his Apostles and Priestes of the new Testament: sauing that it is a peculiar excellencie in Christ, that he onely offered for other mens sinnes, and not at all for his owne, as all other doe. The difference and excellencie of Christs Priesthood.

FVLKE.1 First you doe blasphemously confound the office of a Priest, and an high priest, to establish your popish sacrificing priesthood. For it is not all one matter, to compare Christ with euery inferior priest of the lawe, and with the high priest, who was neuer but one at once, to signifie the singular priesthood of our Sauiour Christ. Christ our onely high Priest.

Secondly,

Secondly, where you say there can no person, people, or common wealth, appertaine to God without the soueraigne dueties of priesthood, it is true, but for that purpose we haue no neede of your popish sacrificing priesthood. For our high Priest hath perfectly accomplished whatsoeuer sacrifice was necessarie for our sinnes, and continueth to make intercession for vs for euer. Hauing no office of an externall sacrificing priesthood vnder him, but a ministerie of preaching of his word, and administration of his holy Sacraments here on earth. Thirdly, where you say that in al matters pertaining to God, the priest hath only charge and auctoritie, it is false. For although in preaching and administration of the Sacraments, &c. the chosen minister hath onely charge and auctoritie to execute them, yet the Prince hath charge and auctoritie to commaund them to be executed according to the word of God. Wherein as he is to be taught by the minister, so he is bound not to be ignorant thereof, though the minister neglect his dutie in teaching of him. For which, and for not executing his office according to the word of God, the Prince also hath charge and auctoritie to punish the minister of the Church.

Fourthly, we learne else where, that euery true Christian is a sacrificing Priest, to offer vp spirituall sacrifice acceptable to God by Iesus Christ, 1. Pet. 2. 5. But none is our high priest to offer vp sacrifice propitiatory for our sinnes, or to make intercession with God for vs, as our mediator and aduocate, but onely Iesus Christ, although there be priests, elders or ministers chosen and appointed for ministration of the word and Sacraments. For although it be the duetie of the minister, to conceiue or pronounce publike prayers in the name of the Church, yet he is not as a priest or aduocate to present them before God, to be acceptable by the worthinesse of his person or office, as the high Priest of the law was, as a figure of Christ. Therefore saith S. Augustine: If the Apostle had said so, These things haue I written vnto you, that you should not sinne, but if any man sinne you haue me for a mediatour, and I by my prayer obtaine pardon for your sinnes, as in a certaine place Parmenian placed the Bishop to be a mediatour betweene the people and God, what good or faithfull Christian could abide him? who would behold him as an Apostle of Christ, and not as Antichrist. Contra Parmen. lib. 2. c. 8. You see this godly father counteth it intolerable, and very Antichristianisme to place the Bishop or any other minister of the Church, as mediatour betweene God and the people, to deale in their sutes and causes with God as you meane, namely, as sacrificing priests, to obtaine pardon for the worthinesse of their office. Yet you are bolde to say, That we shew our selues not onely ignorant of the Scriptures, and of the state of the new Testament, but also to induce a plaine Atheisme into the world, by denying such a priesthood. But where be these Scriptures, that we might learne them of you? you are as mute as a stone for any Scripture you bring. Well, for lacke of Scriptures let vs see what reason you haue. You say for reason, That as long as men haue to doe with God, there must needs be some deputed to deale according to this declaration of the Apostle, in things pertaining to God, and those must be Priests. I answere, the Apostle speaketh onely of the high priests office, which is consummated and perfected in Christ, in whose person is accomplished, whatsoeuer was figured by the high priests office of the law, but of inferiour priests he speaketh not. You aske then what we doe with our ministers? I answere, we make them not mediatours and sacrificing Priests, (as Parmenian the heretike, and you doe) but we haue them for such puposes as Christ hath commaunded, to minister the word, Sacraments, publike prayers, discipline, &c. which is no part of the office of Christes eternall high priesthood, or chiefe sacrificers dignitie. You aske further, What we doe with Sacraments, seeing Christes death is as well sufficient without them as without sacrifice? Verily, we vse them as seales appointed of God, for confirmation of our faith in Christ death. But sacrifice we haue none appointed of God, But the sacrifice of praise and thankesgiuing which be the onely sacrifices (saith Iustinus) that Christians haue receiued to offer. Dialog. cum Tryphon.

Thirdly you aske, Why his death standeth not as well with sacrifices, as with Sacraments, and with priesthood, as with other Ecclesiasticall function? Because Christes sacrifice cannot bee the onely propitiatorie sacrifice, if there be any other beside it. As for Sacraments, as seales and memorials to certifie vs of the effect of his death may well stand with his sacrifice, as other functions that derogate nothing from his priestly dignitie. But the popish sacrificing priesthood, cannot stand with the death of Christ, because it vsurpeth the sacrificing priesthood of Christ, in offering his body which none could doe but hee himselfe, and therefore hee is an high Priest for euer, and hath no successours in that office. But sacrifice propitiatorie you say, (or else you say nothing to the purpose) Is the most principall acte of religion that man oweth to God, and therefore must be dayly offered. We answere, Christ hath most perfectly accomplished that sacrifice himselfe, by his oblation of himselfe once for all, as the Apostle doth often affirme in plaine termes, therefore that sacrifice propitiatorie, neither needeth, neither can bee offered dayly, or any more be repeated, the fruite whereof is eternall. And therefore the deuill by setting vp a new priesthood and sacrifice, seeketh nothing else, but to depriue men of the fruite and benefite of the singular sacrifice and priesthood of Christ. To whom it is not to be feared that we can attribute too much, seeing he is the sonne of God, to whom with God his father and his holy spirite, all that are saued ascribe their saluation, with all blessing, glory, wisedome, thankesgiuing, honour, power and might, for euer and euer, Apocalypse 7. And where you say, this definition of priesthood was true in the Patriarkes, Melchisedech and Aarons priesthood, as it is now in Christ, sauing that Christ onely was free from sinne, I say it is horrible blasphemie. For it was but figuratiue and a shadowe of a priesthood in all the rest, and in Christ onely it was true, as the Apostle prooueth manifestly, Capitulo 10. 1. &c. beside many other peculiar excellencies that the Apostle describeth to be true in Christ, which were figured in the priesthoode of Melchisedech, and excelled also by Christ, capitulo 7. 14. to the end of the Chapter.

Therefore Theodoret sayeth well vpon this text. These thinges the holy Apostle hath said, not meaning to shew vnto vs the rule of an high priesthood, but preparing a way to speake of the high priesthoode of our Lord. S. Ambrose sayeth: The Apostle placeth here certaine things common to Christ with the Priests, but certaine things higher. Among which he maketh more peculiar excellencies of Christ then that one which you doe. The same not onely in sense but also in words hath Chrysostome, hom. 13. the like hath Primasius. But what neede the testimonie of men where the Scripture is so plaine?

REM. 2 4 Taketh to himselfe.) A speciall prouiso for all Priests, Preachers, and such as haue to deale for the people in things pertaining to God, that they take not that honour or office at their owne handes, but by lawfull calling and consecration, euen as Aaron did. By which clause if you examine Luther, Caluin, Beza, and the like, or if all such as now a dates intrude themselues into sacred functions, looke into their consciences, great and foule matter of damnation will appeare.

All true priests and preachers must be lawfully called thereto.

LUKE. 2 Luther, Caluine, Beza, and such like, had both the inward calling by God, and the outward calling by the Church to their ministery. But if you examine the Pope and all his priests, which claime a priesthood equall to Christ in all things, saving that they offer for their owne sinnes, a great and foule matter of Antichristian vsurpation will appeare. For where haue they any testimonie of the Scripture, either for their papacie, or for their priesthood?

Lawfull calling.

RHEM. 3 5 Did not glorifie himselfe.) The dignitie of Priesthood must needs be passing high and soueraigne, when it was a promotion and preferment in the sonne of God himselfe according to his manhood, and when he would not vsurpe, nor take vpon him the same, without his fathers expresse commission and calling thereunto. An eternall example of humilitie, and an argument of condemnation to all mortall men, that arrogate vniustly any function or power spirituall, that is not giuen them from aboue, and by lawfull calling, and commission of their superiors. The dignitie and function of Priesthood is not to be vsurped.

FVLKE. 3 The Pope and his priests doe glorifie themselues, for their priesthood is not of Gods appointment, but of their owne vsurpation. For where hath God commanded them to sacrifice the body and bloud of Christ, for the sinnes of the liuing and of the dead? The popish priesthood.

RHEM. 4 6 A Priest for euer.) In the 109. Psalme, from whence this testimonie is taken, both Christes kingdome and Priesthood are set foorth. but the Apostle vrgeth specially his Priesthood, as the more excellent and preeminent state in him, our Redemption being wrought & atchieued by sacrifice, which was an acte of his Priesthood, and not of his kingly power, though he was properly a king also, as Melchisedec was both Priest and king, being a resemblance of Christ in both, but much more in his Priesthood. And our Lord had this excellent double dignitie (as appeareth by the discourse of S. Paul, and his allegations here out of the Psalmes) at the very first moment of his conception or incarnation. for you must beware of the wicked heresie of the Arians and Caluinists (except in these later it be rather an errour proceeding of ignorance) that sticke not to say, that Christ was a Priest, or did sacrifice, according to his Godhead. Which is to make Christ, God the father Priest, and not his sonne, and to doe sacrifice and homage to him as his Lord, and not as his equall in dignitie and nature. Therefore S. Augustine saith in Psal. 109. That as he was man, he was Priest: as God, he was not Priest. And Theodoret in Ps. 109. As man, he did offer sacrifice: but as God, he did receiue sacrifice. And againe, Christ touching his humanitie was called a Priest, and he offered no other host but his owne body, &c. Dialog. 1. circa med. Some of our new Masters not knowing so much, did let fall out of their pennes the contrary, and being admonished of the errour, and that it was very Arianisme, yet they persist in it of meere ignorance in the grounds of Diuinitie. Christ both priest and king: but his Priesthood more excellent of the two. Psal. 2. 109. Christ a Priest as he is man, not as he is God. Rem. test. pag. 89.

FVLKE. 4 Because this note specially noteth me, I will repeate that I haue answered vnto it else where. Firste note the intollerable pride of these popish interpreters, that chalenge to themselues all learning and knowledge in Diuinity, & condemne all other men of ignorance, and mere ignorance, in the grounds of diuinitie. So playeth Bristow with the Bishop of Sarum, whom in the place by them quoted, I reproued in these wordes. The like impudent cauill he bringeth against M. Iewell, whom no man I thinke without laughter can read, to be charged with ignorance by blundering Bristow, for affirming Christ to be a Priest according to his deitie, whom the Apostle expressly saith by his eternall spirite to haue offered himselfe. Heb. 9. 14. But that you may the better vnderstand this controuersie betweene vs, we deny not that Christ was a Priest according to his humanitie, but wee affirme, that whole Christ is a Priest, as hee is both God and man. For in the office of Priesthood, two things must be considered, A Ministerie, and an Auctoritie. In respect of the ministeriall part, our Saviour Christ performed that office, as man, but in respect of auctoritie of entring into the holiest place, and reconciling vs to God, and presenting vs vnto God, which was the principall part of his priesthood, he did performe it, as the sonne of God, as the Lord and maker of the house, and not as a seruant, but as God which hath created all things, Heb. 3. verse 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. and 6. Against this sound doctrine, let vs examine what the heretikes alleage. Firste, they charge it most odiously with Arrianisme, but without all sparke of reason, seeing we distinguish plainely, the auctoritie of God the sonne, which is equall with his father, from the ministery of the man Iesus Christ, inferiour to his father as touching his manhood. Secondly, they charge vs that we sticke not to say: Christ was a priest, or did offer sacrifice according to his godhead. But we say he was a priest, and did offer sacrifice, both according to his godhead, and according to his manhood. And the same sayeth the Apostle in effect, when he saith: The bloud of Christ, which by his eternall spirite, offered himselfe vnreproueable to God, shall purge your conscience, &c. Heb. 9. 14. For not the bloud of beasts, nor of any man, though he had beene innocent, but the bloud of that man which was God, was the price of our redemption, in which respect the Apostle, Act. 20. 28. saith, that God purchased his Church vnto himselfe by his owne bloud. For by the eternall spirit is vnderstoode that infinite power of the diuinitie, vnited to the humanitie, by which the sacrifice of Christ was consecrated, that by the same liuely or quickening vertue by which he created vs, he might also restore vs. Whereunto our Sauiour Christ had regard, when he said. Iohn 6. It is the spirite that giueth life, the flesh profiteth nothing. But this (say the Papists) is to make Christ God the fathers priest, and not his sonne. Nay rather, this is to acknowledge Christ to be both his fathers sonne and his priest, euen as the Apostle saith: The law appointeth Priests, men that haue infirmitie, but the word of the othe, which is after the law, the sonne for euer perfected. Heb. 7. 28. Where, by the opposition of men hauing infirmitie, with the sonne perfected for euer, it is most cleere, that the word of the othe maketh Christ, as he is the sonne of God a priest after the order of Melchisedech. Where I cannot omit the shamefull corruption of this text in your popish translation, which to hide this opposition betweene men, and God the sonne of God, hath altogether left out this word Man, although it be in the Latine expressed manifestly: Lex enim homines constituit, &c. which they translate thus: The lawe appointeth priests, them that haue infirmitie. But to proceede: our accusers adde further, that our assertion is to make Christ to doe sacrifice, and homage to God his father, as his Lord, and not as his equall in dignitie and nature. I answere, no more then when S. Paul sayeth, that Christ when he was in the fourme of God, and thought it no robberie to be equall with God, made himselfe of no reputation, tooke vpon him the shape of a seruant, and became obedient to the death, euen the death of the Crosse. For I haue sufficiently before distinguished, that all partes of his priesthood that required obedience, seruice, homage, ministerie, subiection, he performed as man: but the auctoritie of reconciling men to God, he wrought as God and man, euen as the Apostle writeth: God was in Christ, reconciling the world vnto himselfe. 2. Cor. 5. 19. Therefore, that he might be a priest, able and worthy to make atonement with God, he was God: That his reconciliation and satisfaction might extend to men, he was man, and so being God and man, he is a perfect mediator betweene God and man, and an high priest for euer after the order of Melchisedech. All this notwithstanding they oppose against vs the auctoritie of the fathers, who doubtlesse had none other meaning then we to keepe this distinction. Firste S. Augustine in ps. 109. is produced to say: that as he was man, he was priest, as God he was not priest. But S. Augustines words are somewhat otherwise: The Lord hath sworne &c. for to this end thou wast borne out of the wombe before the day starre, that thou mightest be a priest for euer after the order of Melchisedec. For according to that he is borne of God the father, God with God, coeternall with him that begetteth, he is not a priest, but a priest for his flesh assumpted, for the sacrifice, which being taken of vs, he might offer for vs. In these words Augustines meaning is plaine enough, that Christ according to his Slander.

diuine and eternall generation could not haue beene a prieſt for vs, except he had taken our fleſh, and beene borne a man, which we doe alwaies confeſſe. But that our redemption by his ſacrifice was the meere worke of his manhood onely, he ſaith not, but the contrarie if he be marked. For he ſaith that the ſonne of God was a prieſt for the fleſh, which he tooke of vs, that he might offer for vs that ſacrifice which he tooke of vs. Here it is plaine, that Chriſt as God offereth ſacrifice, but he offereth as a prieſt, for to offer ſacrifice pertaineth to a Prieſt, therefore Chriſt as God is a prieſt, yet not as God only, but as God and man. Wherupon the ſame Auguſtine ſaith afterward: O Lord which haſt ſworne and ſaid: Thou art a Prieſt for euer after the order of Melchiſedech. The ſame prieſt for euer is the Lord on thy right hand, the very ſame (I ſay) prieſt for euer, of whom thou haſt ſworne, is the Lord on thy right hand, becauſe thou haſt ſaid to the ſame my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand vntill I make thine enemies thy footeſtoole. Here he affirmeth that the eternall God, Dauids Lord as he is God, and Dauids ſonne as he is man, is that eternall prieſt. And to what end, but to performe thoſe parts of a prieſt which were proper to God, that is, to reconcile vs to God, to haue auctoritie of himſelfe and of his owne nature and worthineſſe, to come before God, and to remaine in the fauor of God alwaies, which no creature hath but through his worthineſſe and gratious gift. The next auctoritie brought againſt vs, is Theodoret in pſ. 109. who is cited thus: As man he did offer ſacrifice, but as God he did receiue ſacrifices. Verily we ſay as much and more alſo, that he offered ſacrifice as God alſo, reconciling the world to himſelfe. But in truth the words of Theodoret are otherwiſe, and to an other end, Chriſt (ſaith he) is now a prieſt, which is ſprong of Iuda, according to the fleſh, not offering any thing himſelfe, but is the head of them that offer, ſeeing he calleth the church his body, and therefore he exerciſeth the prieſthood as a man, and he receiueth thoſe offerings that are offered as God. And the church truly doth offer the tokens of his body & bloud, ſanctifying euery leuen by the firſt fruits. In theſe words Theodoret ſpeaketh not of the ſacrifice that Chriſt offered himſelfe, but of the ſpirituall ſacrifice of thankſgiuing which the Church offereth to him, in celebrating the memorie of his death. Not of the prieſthood which Chriſt did exerciſe in earth, but of the prieſthood which he doth exerciſe in heauen, not now offering any thing, but as God receiuing oblations. And where he ſaith that now he exerciſeth the prieſthood as man, he denieth not, but that he doth exerciſe it as mediator, God & man: which is more plaine in his expoſition of the Epiſtle to the Hebrues cap. 8. where he inquireth how Chriſt doth both ſit at the right hand of maieſtie, and yet is a miniſter of the holy things. For what prieſtly office doth he exerciſe (ſaith he) which hath once offered vp himſelfe, and doth no more offer any ſacrifice? And how can it be that the ſame perſon ſhould both ſit and exerciſe the prieſtly office? except perhaps a man will ſay, that the ſaluation which he prepareth as Lord, is a prieſtly office. Neither hath he any other meaning dialogo primo where his purpoſe is to proue that Chriſt had a body. If therefore it be proper for prieſts to offer gifts, and Chriſt concerning his humanitie is called a prieſt, and he offered none other ſacrifice but his owne body, therefore our Lord Chriſt had a body. He ſaith not here, that Chriſt is a prieſt according to his humanitie onely, whereas the excellencie of his perſon, being both God and man, cauſed his prieſthood and ſacrifice to be acceptable and auailable for the redemption of man. Therefore he ſaith alſo vpon the ſeuenth Chapter. It is the part of a man to exerciſe prieſthood, and of God to receiue thoſe things that are offered. But yet the onely begotten ſonne of God being made man, was made our prieſt alſo after the order of Melchiſedech, not with any increaſe of dignitie, but concealing his diuine dignitie, and taking vpon him a baſe eſtate for our ſaluation. You ſee in theſe words he acknowledgeth him to be a prieſt, as he is both God & man. So ſaith Primaſius vpon this chapter: It is the office of the high Prieſt to ſtand betweene God and the people, to intreate God for the ſins of the people, this did Chriſt, by that he is man and God alſo, offering vp himſelfe for our ſins, alwaies liuing to make interceſſion to God for vs. Ipſe verus Deus & pontifex, qui pro nobis non in ſanguine taurorum & hircorum, ſed in ſanguine ſuo ſemel introiuit in ſancta. Quod tunc Pontifex ille ſignificabat, qui cum ſanguine in ſancta ſanctorum per annos ſingulos introibat. Iſte igitur eſt, qui in ſe vno totum exhibuit, quod eſſe neceſſarium ad redemptionis ſciebat effectum, idem ſcilicet & ſacerdos & ſacrificium, idem Deus & templum. Sacerdos per quem ſumus reconciliati: ſacrificium quo reconciliati: Deus cui reconciliati. Solus tamen ſacerdos ſacrificium, & templum: & hæc omnia Deus, ſecundum formam ſerui. Fulg. de fide ad Petr. c. 2. Gregor. Bet. Per hoc ergo quod Ieſus factus eſt Chriſtus & Dominus, non tam ſubſtantiæ eius Diuinæ aliquid confertur, quam proſpectum eſt quibus Regni eius & Sacerdotij ac Dominij poteſtas velut munus ſalutare collatum eſt. But to make the matter clere, beſide that which the Apoſtle writeth cap. 3. & 9. theſe arguments may plainly be drawne out of the ſeuenth Chapter, where he ſpeaketh expreſly of his prieſthood after the order of Melchiſedech. Chriſt as he is without father and mother, is a prieſt after the order of Melchiſedech: Chriſt as he is God and man, is without father and mother, therefore Chriſt as he is God and man is a prieſt after the order of Melchiſedech. Againe, Chriſt according to his diuinitie hath no beginning of his daies, nor end of his life according to his whole perſon: therefore Chriſt according to his diuinitie, and according to his whole perſon, is a prieſt after the order of Melchiſedech. Againe, except you vnderſtand Chriſt to haue beene a prieſt according to his diuinitie, he was tithed in the loines of Abraham aſwell as Leui, but according to his diuinitie he was not in the loines of Abraham, and therefore paid no tithes in Abraham as God, though as man he was ſubiect to the law: but receiued tithes of Abraham in his prieſt and figure Melchiſedech. For the prieſt receiueth tithes in the name of God, as he bleſſeth in the name of God. Therefore if Chriſt giue prieſtly bleſſing in his owne name, he giueth it as he is God, and not as man onely. Finally, to ſay that Chriſt was a prieſt in reſpect of his manhood onely, ſauoureth ranckly of Neſtorianiſme, whereas our aſſertion that Chriſt is an high prieſt, both according to his Deitie, in which he is equall with his father, and alſo according to his humanitie, in which the father is greater then he, is as farre from Arrianiſme as Papiſts are from honeſtie and ſincerity, to charge us with ſuch open blaſphemie, which we deteſt more then they.

HEBR. 5 7 With a ſtrong crie.) Though our Sauiour make interceſſion for vs, according to his humane nature, continually in heauen alſo: yet he doth not in any externall creatures make ſacrifice, nor vſe the prayers ſacrificall, by which our redemption was atchieued, as he did in the time of his mortall life, and in the act of his Paſſion, and moſt principally, when with a loud voice, and with this prayer, In manus tuas commendo ſpiritum meum, he voluntarily depoſed his ſoule, yeelding it in moſt proper ſort for a ſacrifice. for in that laſt point of his death, conſiſteth ſpecially his high prieſtly office, and the very worke and conſummation of our redemption.

The ſacrifice on the croſſe was the principall act of Chriſtes prieſthood. Luc. 23. 46.

Obſerue more ouer, that though commonly euery faithfull perſon pray both for himſelfe and others, and offer his prayers to God, yet none offereth by office, and ſpeciall deputation, and appointment, in the perſon of the whole Church and people, ſauing the Prieſt. Whoſe prayers therefore be more effectuall in themſelues, for that they be the voice of all faithfull men together, made by him that is appointed and receiued of God for the peoples legate. And of this kinde were all Chriſts prayers, in all his life and death, as all his other actions were: his faſting, watching, preaching, inſtituting, miniſtring, or receiuing Sacraments: euery one being done as Prieſtlie actions.

Prieſts prayers more effectuall.

Chriſts Prieſtly actions;

to Christ in all things, saving that they offer for their owne sinnes, a great and foule matter of Antichristian vsurpation will appeare. For where haue they any testimonie of the Scripture, either for their papacie, or for their priesthood?

RHEM. 3 5 Did not glorifie himselfe.) The dignitie of Priesthood must needs be passing high and soueraigne, when it was a promotion and preferment in the sonne of God himselfe according to his manhood, and when he would not vsurpe, nor take vpon him the same, without his fathers expresse commission and calling thereunto. An eternall example of humilitie, and an argument of condemnation to all mortall men, that arrogate vniustly any function or power spirituall, that is not giuen them from aboue, and by lawfull calling, and commission of their superiors. The dignitie and function of Priesthood is not to be vsurped.

FVLKE. 3 The Pope and his priests doe glorifie themselues, for their priesthood is not of Gods appointment, but of their owne vsurpation. For where hath God commanded them to sacrifice the body and bloud of Christ, for the sinnes of the liuing and of the dead? The popish priesthood.

RHEM. 4 6 A Priest for euer.) In the 109. Psalme, from whence this testimonie is taken, both Christes kingdome and Priesthood are set foorth, but the Apostle vrgeth specially his Priesthood, as the more excellent and preeminent state in him, our Redemption being wrought & atchieued by sacrifice, which was an acte of his Priesthood, and not of his kingly power, though he was properly a king also, as Melchisedec was both Priest and king, being a resemblance of Christ in both, but much more in his Priesthood. And our Lord had this excellent double dignitie (as appeareth by the discourse of S. Paul, and his allegations here out of the Psalmes) at the very first moment of his conception or incarnation, for you must beware of the wicked heresie of the Arians and Caluinists (except in these later it be rather an errour proceeding of ignorance) that sticke not to say, that Christ was a Priest, or did sacrifice, according to his Godhead. Which is to make Christ, God the father Priest, and not his sonne, and to doe sacrifice and homage to him as his Lord, and not as his equall in dignitie and nature. Therefore S. Augustine saith in Psal. 109. That as he was man, he was Priest: as God, he was not Priest. And Theodoret in Ps. 109. As man, he did offer sacrifice: but as God, he did receiue sacrifice. And againe, Christ touching his humanitie was called a Priest, and he offered no other host but his owne body, &c. Dialog. 1. circa med. Some of our new Masters not knowing so much, did let fall out of their pennes the contrary, and being admonished of the errour, and that it was very Arianisme, yet they persist in it of meere ignorance in the grounds of Diuinitie. Christ both priest and king, but his Priesthood more excellent of the two. Psal. 109. Christ a Priest as he is man, not as he is God. Rem. pag. 3.

FVLKE. 4 Because this note specially noteth me, I will repeate that I haue answered vnto it else where. First note the intollerable pride of these popish interpreters, that chalenge to themselues all learning and knowledge in Diuinity, & condemne all other men of ignorance, and mere ignorance, in the grounds of diuinitie. So playeth Bristow with the Bishop of Sarum, whom in the place by them quoted, I reproued in these wordes. The like impudent cauill he bringeth against M. Iewell, whom no man I thinke without laughter can read, to be charged with ignorance by blundering Bristow, for affirming Christ to be a Priest according to his deitie, whom the Apostle expresly saith by his eternall spirite to haue offered himselfe. Heb. 9. 14. But that you may the better vnderstand this controuersie betweene vs, we deny not that Christ was a Priest according to his humanitie, but wee affirme, that whole Christ is a Priest, as hee is both God and man. For in the office of Priesthood, two things must be considered, A Ministerie, and an Auctoritie. In respect of the ministeriall part, our Saviour Christ performed that office, as man, but in respect of auctoritie of entring into the holiest place, and reconciling vs to God, and presenting vs vnto God, which was the principall part of his priesthood, he did performe it, as the sonne of God, as the Lord and maker of the house, and not as a seruant, but as God which hath created all things, Heb. 3. verse 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. and 6. Against this sound doctrine, let vs examine what the heretikes alleage. First, they charge it most odiously with Arrianisme, but without all sparke of reason, seeing we distinguish plainely, the auctoritie of God the sonne, which is equall with his father, from the ministery of the man Iesus Christ, inferiour to his father as touching his manhood. Secondly, they charge vs that we sticke not to say: Christ was a priest, or did offer sacrifice according to his godhead. But we say he was a priest, and did offer sacrifice, both according to his godhead, and according to his manhood. And the same sayeth the Apostle in effect, when he saith: The bloud of Christ, which by his eternall spirite, offered himselfe vnreproueable to God, shall purge your conscience, &c. Heb. 9. 14. For not the bloud of beasts, nor of any man, though he had beene innocent, but the bloud of that man which was God, was the price of our redemption, in which respect the Apostle, Act. 20. 28. saith, that God purchased his Church vnto himselfe by his owne bloud. For by the eternall spirit is vnderstoode that infinite power of the diuinitie, vnited to the humanitie, by which the sacrifice of Christ was consecrated, that by the same liuely or quickening vertue by which he created vs, he might also restore vs. Whereunto our Saviour Christ had regard, when he said. Iohn 6. It is the spirite that giueth life, the flesh profiteth nothing. But this (say the Papists) is to make Christ God the fathers priest, and not his sonne. Nay rather, this is to acknowledge Christ to be both his fathers sonne and his priest, euen as the Apostle saith: The law appointeth Priests, men that haue infirmitie, but the word of the othe, which is after the law, the sonne for euer perfected. Heb. 7. 28. where, by the opposition of men hauing infirmitie, with the sonne perfected for euer, it is most cleere, that the word of the othe maketh Christ, as he is the sonne of God a priest after the order of Melchisedech. Where I cannot omit the shamefull corruption of this text in your popish translation, which to hide this opposition betweene men, and God the sonne of God, hath altogether left out this word Men, although it be in the Latine expressed manifestly: Lex enim homines constituit, &c. which they translate thus: The lawe appointeth priests, them that haue infirmitie. But to proceede: our accusers adde further, that our assertion is to make Christ to doe sacrifice, and homage to God his father, as his Lord, and not as his equall in dignitie and nature. I answere, no more then when S. Paul sayeth, that Christ when he was in the fourme of God, and thought it no robberie to be equall with God, made himselfe of no reputation, tooke vpon him the shape of a seruant, and became obedient to the death, euen the death of the Crosse. For I haue sufficiently before distinguished, that all partes of his priesthood that required obedience, seruice, homage, ministerie, subiection, he performed as man: but the auctoritie of reconciling men to God, he wrought as God and man, euen as the Apostle writeth: God was in Christ, reconciling the world vnto himselfe. 2. Cor. 5. 19. Therefore, that he might be a priest, able and worthy to make atonement with God, he was God: That his reconciliation and satisfaction might extend to men, he was man, and so being God and man, he is a perfect mediator betweene God and man, and an high priest for euer after the order of Melchisedech. All this notwithstanding they oppose against vs the auctoritie of the fathers, who doubtlesse had none other meaning then we to keepe this distinction. First S. Augustine in ps. 109. is produced to say: that as he was man, he was priest, as God he was not priest. But S. Augustines words are somewhat otherwise: The Lord hath sworne &c. for to this end thou wast borne out of the wombe before the daystar, that thou mightest be a priest for euer after the order of Melchisedec. For according to that he is borne of God the father, God with God, coeternall with him that begetteth, he is not a priest, but a priest for his flesh assumpted, for the sacrifice, which being taken of vs, he might offer for vs. Slander. In these words Augustines meaning is plaine enough, that Christ according to his diuine and eternall generation could not haue beene a priest for vs, except he had taken our flesh, and beene borne a man, which we doe alwaies confesse. But that our redemption by his sacrifice was the meere worke of his manhood onely, he saith not, but the contrarie if he be marked. For he saith that the sonne of God was a priest for the flesh, which he tooke of vs, that he might offer for vs that sacrifice which he tooke of vs. Here it is plaine, that Christ as God offereth sacrifice, but he offereth as a priest, for to offer sacrifice pertaineth to a Priest, therefore Christ as God is a priest, yet not as God only, but as God and man. Wherupon the same Augustine saith afterward: O Lord which hast sworne and said: Thou art a Priest for euer after the order of Melchisedech. The same priest for euer is the Lord on thy right hand, the very same (I say) priest for euer, of whom thou hast sworne, is the Lord on thy right hand, because thou hast said to the same my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand vntill I make thine enemies thy footestoole. Here he affirmeth that the eternall God, Dauids Lord as he is God, and Dauids sonne as he is man, is that eternall priest. And to what end, but to performe those parts of a priest which were proper to God, that is, to reconcile vs to God, to haue auctoritie of himselfe and of his owne nature and worthinesse, to come before God, and to remaine in the fauor of God alwaies, which no creature hath but through his worthinesse and gratious gift. The next auctoritie brought against vs, is Theodoret in ps. 109. who is cited thus: As man he did offer sacrifice, but as God he did receiue sacrifices. Verily we say as much and more also, that he offered sacrifice as God also, reconciling the world to himselfe. But in truth the words of Theodoret are otherwise, and to an other end, Christ (saith he) is now a priest, which is sprong of Iuda, according to the flesh, not offering any thing himselfe, but is the head of them that offer, seeing he calleth the church his body, and therefore he exerciseth the priesthood as a man, and he receiueth those offerings that are offered as God. And the church truly doth offer the tokens of his body & bloud, sanctifying euery leuen by the first fruits. In these words Theodoret speaketh not of the sacrifice that Christ offered himselfe, but of the spirituall sacrifice of thanksgiuing which the Church offereth to him, in celebrating the memorie of his death. Not of the priesthood which Christ did exercise in earth, but of the priesthood which he doth exercise in heauen, not now offering any thing, but as God receiuing oblations. And where he saith that now he exerciseth the priesthood as man, he denieth not, but that he doth exercise it as mediator, God & man: which is more plaine in his exposition of the Epistle to the Hebrues cap. 8. where he inquireth how Christ doth both sit at the right hand of maiestie, and yet is a minister of the holy things. For what priestly office doth he exercise (saith he) which hath once offered vp himselfe, and doth no more offer any sacrifice? And how can it be that the same person should both sit and exercise the priestly office? except perhaps a man will say, that the saluation which he prepareth as Lord, is a priestly office. Neither hath he any other meaning dialogo primo where his purpose is to proue that Christ had a body. If therefore it be proper for priests to offer gifts, and Christ concerning his humanitie is called a priest, and he offered none other sacrifice but his owne body, therefore our Lord Christ had a body. He saith not here, that Christ is a priest according to his humanitie onely, whereas the excellencie of his person, being both God and man, caused his priesthood and sacrifice to be acceptable and auailable for the redemption of man. Therefore he saith also vpon the seuenth Chapter. It is the part of a man to exercise priesthood, and of God to receiue those things that are offered. But yet the onely begotten sonne of God being made man, was made our priest also after the order of Melchisedech, not with any increase of dignitie, but concealing his diuine dignitie, and taking vpon him a base estate for our saluation. You see in these words he acknowledgeth him to be a priest, as he is both God & man. So saith Primasius vpon this chapter: It is the office of the high Priest to stand betweene God and the people, to intreate God for the sins of the people, this did Christ, by that he is man and God also, offering vp himselfe for our sins, alwaies liuing to make intercession to God for vs. Ipse verus Deus & pontifex, qui pro nobis non in sanguine taurorum & hircorum, sed in sanguine suo semel introiuit in sancta. Quod tunc Pontifex ille significabat, qui cum sanguine in sancta sanctorum per annos singulos introibat. Iste igitur est, qui in se vno totum exhibuit, quod esse necessarium ad redemptionis sciebat effectum, idem scilicet & sacerdos & sacrificium, idem Deus & templum. Sacerdos per quem summus reconciliati: sacrificium quo reconciliati: Deus cui reconciliati. Solus tamen sacerdos sacrificium, & templum: & haec omnia Deus, secundum formam serui. Fulg. de fide ad Petr. c. 2. Gregor. Bet. Cum fungitur pro nobis sacerdotij officio, Christus verissimè factus est maxime defensor & aduocatus pro nobis semper assistens, interpellans quoque Patrem, qua solus purissimus sacerdos, vt expiata labe delinquentiæ, diuina eius propitiatione seruemur. Per hoc ergo quod Iesus factus est Christus & Dominus, non tam substantiæ eius Diuinæ aliquid confertur, quam prospectum est quibus Regni eius & Sacerdotij ac Dominij potestas vel nos munus salutare collatum est. But to make the matter clere, beside that which the Apostle writeth cap. 3. & 9. these arguments may plainly be drawne out of the seuenth Chapter, where he speaketh expresly of his priesthood after the order of Melchisedech. Christ as he is without father and mother, is a priest after the order of Melchisedech: Christ as he is God and man, is without father and mother, therefore Christ as he is God and man is a priest after the order of Melchisedech. Againe, Christ according to his diuinitie hath no beginning of his daies, nor end of his life according to his whole person: therefore Christ according to his diuinitie, and according to his whole person, is a priest after the order of Melchisedech. Againe, except you vnderstand Christ to haue beene a priest according to his diuinitie, he was tithed in the loines of Abraham aswell as Leui, but according to his diuinitie he was not in the loines of Abraham, and therefore paid no tithes in Abraham as God, though as man he was subiect to the law: but receiued tithes of Abraham in his priest and figure Melchisedech. For the priest receiueth tithes in the name of God, as he blesseth in the name of God. Therefore if Christ giue priestly blessing in his owne name, he giueth it as he is God, and not as man onely. Finally, to say that Christ was a priest in respect of his manhood onely, sauoureth rankly of Nestorianisme, whereas our assertion that Christ is an high priest, both according to his Deitie, in which he is equall with his father, and also according to his humanitie, in which the father is greater then he, is as farre from Arrianisme as Papists are from honestie and sincerity, to charge us with such open blasphemie, which we detest more then they.

ANIM. 5 7 With a strong crie.) Though our Sauiour make intercession for vs, according to his humane nature, continually in heauen also: yet he doth not in any externall creatures make sacrifice, nor vse the prayers sacrificall, by which our redemption was atchieued, as he did in the time of his mortall life, and in the act of his Passion, and most principally, when with a loud voice, and with this prayer, In manus tuas commendo spiritum meum, he voluntarily deposed his soule, yeelding it in most proper sort for a sacrifice. for in that last point of his death, consisteth specially his high priestly office, and the very worke and consummation of our redemption.

The sacrifice on the crosse was the principall act of Christes priesthood. Luc. 23. 46.

Obserue more ouer, that though commonly euery faithfull person pray both for himselfe and others, and offer his prayers to God, yet none offereth by office, and speciall deputation, and appointment, in the person of the whole Church and people, sauing the Priest. Whose prayers therefore be more effectuall in themselues, for that they be the voice of all faithfull men together, made by him that is appointed and receiued of God for the peoples legate. And of this kinde were all Christs prayers, in all his life and death, as all his other actions were: his fasting, watching, preaching, instituting, ministring, or receiuing Sacraments: euery one being done as Priestlie actions.

Priests prayers more effectuall.

Christs Priestly actions.

Christ

FVLKE.5 Christ offered but that one sacrifice propitiatory on the crosse, and that but once, neither doth he make any other sacrifice in any externall creatures. Neither hath he any sacrificing priests to be mediators betweene God and the people, as Parmenian the Heretike placed the Bishop betweene God and the people. Therefore the prayers of the minister of the Church, which he conceiueth or pronounceth in the name of the congregation are not more effectuall in themselues for any such office of mediation or legation, but they are acceptable because they are according to Gods ordinance, the prayers of the whole church vttered by a ministerthereunto appointed. For the prayer of one priuate man, praying with harty affection and true faith, is more agreeable to the will of God, then the prayer of a thousand priests void of faith and good affection, yea and shall haue better effect then the faithfull prayer of the minister, conceiued for a careleſſe and faithlesse people. Therefore Christs prayers and other actions of his priesthood were of another and a more excellent kinde, then the prayers of the best priest that euer was. His office of preaching and ministring of Sacraments, he hath by his word committed to the ministers of his Church, to exercise in his name, therefore they be as effectuall being done by his seruants, as by himselfe. But his high priests office he retaineth to himselfe, and hath not committed it to another. Therefore none may presume to offer sacrifice as he did, nor to pray, watch, fast, or doe any thing meritorious for other as he did. Christ our only high Priest.

RHEM. 6 7 For his reuerence.) These wordes haue our English Translators perniciously and most presumptuously corrupted, turning them thus, In that which he feared, contrary to the version and sense of all antiquitie, & to Erasmus also, and contrary to the ordinarie vse of the Greeke word, as Beza himselfe defineth it Luc. 2. v. 25: *and contrary to the proprietie of the Greeke phrase, as not onely the Catholikes, but * the best learned Lutherans doe shew and proue by many examples. They folow herein the singular presumption of Caluin, who was the first (as his fellow Beza confesseth) that euer found out this interpretation. Which neither S. Chrysostome, nor any other, as perfect Grecians as they were, could euer espie. Where onely to haue made choise of that impious and arrogant Sectaries sense, before the said fathers and all the Churches beſides, had been shamefull ynough: but to set the same downe for very Scripture of Gods blessed word, that is intolerable and passeth all impietie. And we see plainly that they haue no conscience, indifferencie, nor other purpose, but to make the poore Readers beleeue, that their opinions be Gods owne word, and to draw the Scriptures to sound after the fantasie of their heresies. But if the good Reader knew, for what point of doctrine they haue thus framed their translation, they would abhorre them to the depth of Hel. forsooth it is thus: they would haue this Scripture meane, that Christ was in horrible feare of damnation, and that he was not onely in paines corporall vpon the Crosse (which they hold, not to haue beene sufficient for mans redemption) but that he was in the very sorowes and distresses of the damned, without any difference, but that it was not euerlasting, as theirs is.* Notorious heretical translation to maintaine Caluins horrible blasphemie. Ὑπὸ δλαβείας Flac. Illyr. vpon this place.

For this horrible blasphemie (which is their interpretation of Christes descending into Hel) Gods holy word must be corrupted, and the sacrifice of Christs death (whereof they talke so presumptuously) must not be ynough for our redemption, except he be damned for vs also to the paines of Hel. Wo be to our poore Countrie, that must haue such bookes, and read such translations. See Caluin and Beza in their Commentaries and Annotations vpon this place, and you shall see, that for defense of the said blasphemies they haue thus translated this text. See the Annotations before, Act. 2. 27. and Mat. 27. 46. Caluins blasphemie that Christ suffered hel paines vpon the crosse, and that his death otherwise were insufficient.

FVLKE.6 The Greeke word signifieth both feare, reuerence, and pietie. Therefore that translation is not corrupt, which giueth that interpretation which the word will beare. But it is contrarie (say you) to the version and sense of all antiquitie. That is not so, for Beza allegeth a most ancient Latine version, which he calleth Claremontanus codex, where it is translated à metu, from feare. Primasius also allegeth the sentence of Cassiodorus, that the word is taken sometime for loue, and sometime for feare. Greg. Nazian. also orat. 2. de filio, reckoning τὸ δλαβὲς, that is, feare, among the infirmities of Christes manhood, declareth that he folowed this sense: seeing this word signifying feare, is no where in the Scripture applyed to Christ but in this text. Theodoret also manifestly foloweth this sense, writing vpon this text, and saith: who (except he were out of his wits) would say that these things are spoken of his diuine nature? For if blessed Paul feared not death, but desired to be dissolued and to be with Christ, and said to them which foreshewed vnto him those things which should befall vnto him at Ierusalem, and assayed to keepe him backe, why weepe you and afflict my hart? I am readie not onely to be bound, but also to die for the name of our Lord Iesus Christ: how did God the word, the creator of the world (which cannot be turned or changed, and is free from all affection) feare death? Againe, he interpreteth the prayer here spoken of, to be that which he made in his passion, saying, Father if it be possible, let this cup passe from me. The Syrian translation is also from feare. Idacius Clarus propter timorem lib. 3. Cant. Varimadum. By all which it is manifest, how vntruely you say, that our interpretation is contrarie to the version and sense of all antiquitie, as also to the ordinarie vse of the Greeke word, which not onely of prophane writers, but also in the holy Scripture, is taken for feare, Act 23. 10. and euen in this Epistle Heb. 11. 7. witnesse your owne Latine text, which for δλαβηθεὶς translateth timens & metuens, fearing. Neither doth Beza say otherwise, but bringeth many examples to the contrarie. Likewise, where you say it is contrary to the propertie of the Greeke phrase, you shew your great skill in the Greeke tongue. For our interpretation is most agreeable to the Greeke phrase, bicause the preposition ἀπὸ doth more commonly signifie out or from, then, for, as you translate it, though Illyricus helpe you with some examples, where it signifieth rather, pra then pro. That Beza confesseth Caluin to haue beene the first that found out this interpretation, he meaneth in these daies, for he allegeth that Nazianzen and other of the ancient fathers did follow this interpretation before Caluin. And although Chrysostome did not, yet Nazianzen and Theodoret did, which were as perfect Grecians as Chrysostome: and yet Chrysostome doth not altogether abhorre from it, though he preferre the other. Let the Heretikes be ashamed (saith he) the sonne of God was heard ἀπὸ τ δλαβείας from feare, and what could a man say more of the Prophets? And what order is it, that he saith he was heard from feare? and although he were the sonne, he learned of those things which he suffered, obedience, who would say these things of God. Here it appeareth plainely, that he vnderstood the word δλαβεία for feare, and not for reuerence, because it could not be said of the Prophets, that they were heard for their reuerence, but from their feare. Wherefore, seeing this commentary was not written by Chrysostome himselfe, but gathered out of his homilies and writings after his death, it may be the other interpretation was added by some other that liked better thereof then of Chrysostomes first sense. Wherefore (to omit all your vngodly rayling meete for such heretikes and traytors as Rhemes sendeth into England) as our translation is agreeable to the originall text and to the ancient versions and sense of some of the ancient fathers, so is our exposition honorable and glorious to God the father and Christ his sonne, and to the holy ghost, by whom this Epistle was indited, and agreeable to the analogy of faith, confirming an article of our faith, that Christ descended into hell, and suffered not onely bodily paines, but also great sorow and anguish of soule, which was necessary for our redemption, according to the manifest Scriptures: and obeyed, as the death of his body was a necessary part of his obedience and sacrifice. And therefore you doe as ignorantly as maliciously separate the sacrifice of his death from all other his passions, as though his sacrifice was no more but the separation of his body from his soule, and that all that he suffered beside in body and minde, was superfluous, seeing Cauilling.

ing his death onely should be enough for our redemption. Wo be to them therefore that are led by such blinde guides, that either see not so manifest light of truth, or else do so obstinately striue against it to their vtter condemnation. Where you exhort men to read Caluin and Beza in their Commentaries and Annotations vpon this place, I wish that all men either would or could follow your counsell, and they should see that they are farre from such blasphemies as you most blasphemously ascribe vnto them. And for this question of Christes descending into hell, I referre the Readers as you doe, to that which hath beene written before of this matter.

RHEM. 9 Consummate.) The full worke of his sacrifice, by which we were redeemed, was wholy consummate and accomplished, at the yeelding vp of his spirit to God the Father, when he said, Consummatum est. though for to make the same effectuall to the saluation of particular men, he him selfe did diuerse things, and now doth in heauen, and our selues also must vse many meanes, for the application thereof to our particular necessities. See the next Annotation. Christ yeelding vp the Ghost, accomplished our redemption. Io. 19. 30.

RHEM. 7 9 Was made to all.) The Protestants vpon pretence of the sufficiencie of Christs Passion, and his onely redemption, oppose them selues guilefully in the sight of the simple, against the inuocation of Saincts, and their intercession, and helpe of vs, against our penitentiall workes or suffering for our owne sinnes, either in this life or the next: against the merites of fasting, praying, almes, and other things commended to vs in holy writte, and against most things done in the Church, in sacrifice, Sacrament, and ceremonie. But this place and many other shew, that Christs Passion, though it be of it selfe farre more sufficient and forcible, then the Protestants in their basenesse of vnderstanding can consider, yet profiteth none but such, as both doe his commaundements, and vse such remedies and meanes to apply the benefite thereof to them selues, as he appointeth in his word, or by the Holy Ghost in his Church. And the Heretikes that say, faith onely is the thing required to apply Christes benefites vnto vs, are hereby also easily refuted. For we doe not obey him onely by beleeuing, but by doing whatsoeuer he commaundeth. Lastly, we note in the same wordes, that Christ appointeth not by his absolute and eternall election, men so to be partakers of the fruite of his redemption, without any condition or respect of their owne workes, obedience, or free will: but with this condition alwaies, if men will obey him, and doe that which he appointeth. See S. Augustine (or Prosper) to. 7. Respons. Prosperi. li. 2. articulo 1. ad obiectiones Vincentij, where he saith of the cup of Christes Passion, It hath in deede in it selfe, to profite all: but if it be not drunken it healeth not. Christes Passion sufficient for all, but profitable to them only which obey, not by faith only, but by doing as he and his Church commaund.

FVLKE. 7 We confesse that Christes Passion profiteth none but such as obey him, and vse such meanes to apply the benefit thereof to themselues, as he hath appointed by his word, without which, the Holy ghost hath appointed nothing in the Church of Christ. Though in the Church of Antichrist, that which cannot haue a shew or colour by wresting of the word of God, is blasphemously ascribed to the appointment of the Holy ghost But how are we confuted, that say faith is the onely thing required to apply Christes benefits vnto vs? You answere: For we doe not obey him onely by beleeuing, but by doing whatsoeuer he commandeth: ergo, it is not the proper office of faith to apply the benefits of Christes death vnto vs. How hangeth this together? For the Apostle saith not that obedience is the onely meane whereby we apply Christes benefits vnto vs, but that Christ is a cause of saluation to all that obey him, so that obedience is a fruite of saluation, not a cause thereof. Although if you would vnderstand the obedience of faith and trueth, whereof the Scripture speaketh, and from whence floweth all other obedience to Gods commaundements, we would not contend with you, but that obedience is the onely meane on our part, to apply the benefits of Christ vnto vs, but on Gods behalfe, the Holy Ghost is the onely meane. Theodoret saith: By this meanes he exhorteth them to whom he writeth to continue in faith, and to trust in the mercy and clemencie of the high Priest. S. Ambrose also vnderstandeth this obedience to be faith, saying: He sheweth what great gaine his Passion is, which sufficeth vnto all beleeuers for eternall saluation. The very same words hath Primasius. Finally, you cannot proue by this place that God chuseth men to saluation, with respect of the merit of their workes, obedience, free will or faith it selfe, but with condition, that he will giue them grace to obey him, and will to beleeue in him, and to doe that he appointeth. Not leauing it to the freedome of mans will, which auaileth to nothing but to sinne, as S. Augustine saith ad Bonifac. lib. 3. c. 8. And Prosper meaneth, that the cup of immortalitie is drunke by faith onely. For he said before, that they which depart out of the world without faith and the Sacrament of regeneration, are farre from their redemption. Signifying, that faith which is confirmed by the Sacrament of baptisme in all that be of yeeres, is the onely meane to drinke this cup of immortalitie. But to infants, the spirit of God which is also testified to be giuen by baptisme, is sufficient to make them partakers of it. Iustification by faith onely. Merit. Freewill.

RHEM. 8 11 Inexplicable.) Intending to treate more largely and particularly of Christes or Melchisedeks Priesthood, he forewarneth them that the mysterie thereof is far passing their capacitie, and that through their feeblenes in faith and weakenesse of vnderstanding, he is forced to omit diuerse deepe points concerning the Priesthood of the new law. Among which (no doubt) the mystery of the Sacrament and Sacrifice of the altar, called MASSE, was a principall and pertinent matter: which the Apostles and Fathers of the primitiue Church vsed not to treat of so largely and particularly in their writings, which might come to the hands of the vnfaithfull, who of all things tooke soonest scandal of the B. Sacrament, as we see Io. 6. He spake to the Hebrues (saith S. Hierom ep. 126.) that is, to the Iewes, and not to the faithfull men, to whom he might haue beene bold to vtter the Sacrament. And in deede it was not reasonable to talke much to them of that sacrifice which was the resemblance of Christes death, when they thought not right of Christes death, it selfe. Which the Apostles wisedome and silence our Aduersaries wickedly abuse against the holy Masse. The Apostle omitteth to speake of the B. Sacrament as a mysterie then to deepe for the Iewes capacitie.

FVLKE. 8 Those things that were hard to be vnderstood of them, concerning the Priesthood of Melchisedech, after he hath stirred them vp to attention in the sixt Chapter, are all expressed in the seuenth Chapter. And therefore here is no place to foist in the sacrifice of your popish masse, as one of the things inexplicable. For by as good reason the Valentinians, Carpocratians, Manichees, and such other heretikes might say, no doubt all their mysteries of wickednesse were principall and pertinent matters to the priesthood of Melchisedech, which were inexplicable. But if the Hebrues were vnmeete, in respect of their infirmitie, to heare of the mysteries of the masse, were all other Churches in the world in the same case, that no mention of that sacrifice is made in all the Scriptures? Of the blessed Sacrament of Christes Supper, the Apostles and Fathers of the most ancient Church, haue treated as sufficiently and largely as of any other matter, for the instruction of the church. And therefore you doe nothing but seeke a corner to hide the impietie and blasphemie of your masse which hath no ground in the holy Scriptures, nor testimonie of the auncient Fathers. For we ground not onely vpon the silence of the Apostle in this place, but of the silence of the Holy Ghost in all the Scriptures, and not onely of the silence of the Apostle, but vpon those speeches which the Holy Ghost hath vttered in this Epistle and elsewhere which vtterly ouerthroweth your blasphemous sacrifice of the Masse. Sacrifice of the Masse.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. VI.

RHEM. 1 9 We confidently.) It is euident by these wordes, against the Nouatians and the Caluinists, that S. Paul meant not precisely, that they had done, or could do any such sinne, whereby they should be put out of al hope of saluation, and be sure of damnation, during their life.

FVLKE. 1 S. Paul meant not, that the elect among the Hebrewes, either had or could fall away finally from Christ, but he declared before, that some might so fall away from Christ, as it was impossible for them to be renued by repentance v. 4. Certainty of election.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. VI.

RHEM. 2 1 The foundation of penance.) We see hereby, what the first grounds of Christian institution or Catechisme were in the Primitiue Church, and that there was euer a necessarie instruction and beleefe of certaine points had by worde of mouth and tradition, before men came to the Scriptures: which could not treat of things so particularly, as was requisite for the teaching of all necessarie grounds. Among these points were the 12 Articles conteined in the Apostles Creede: the doctrine of penance before baptisme: the maner and necessitie of Baptisme: the Sacrament of Imposition of hands after Baptisme, called Confirmation: the articles of the Resurrection, Iudgement, and such like. Without which things first laid, if one should be sent to picke his faith out of the Scripture, there would be madde rule quickely. See S. Augustine in exposit. inchoat. ep. ad Ro. versus finem. The Apostles forme of Catechisme, and the points thereof.

FVLKE. 2 The Primitiue Church had nothing in their Catechisme & instruction, that was taught by word of mouth, but that which was conteined in the holy Scripture, as all the articles of the Creede, the doctrine of repentance before baptisme, the maner and vse of baptisme, Confirmation by imposition of handes, and such like. Which doctrine must first be preached and taught ordinarily, yet some haue beene driuen to picke their faith out of the Scriptures, without such ordinarie instruction, and made no madde rule at all. Neither doth S. Augustine in the place cited, say any thing to the contrarie. Sufficiencie of the Scriptures.

RHEM. 3 4 Impossible.) Howe hard the holy Scriptures be, and how dangerous they be read of the vnlearned, or of the proud be they neuer so well learned, this one place might teach vs. * Whereat the Nouatians of old did so stumble, that they thought, and heretically taught, that none falling into any mortal sinne after Baptisme, could be receiued to mercie or penance in the Church: and so to a contentious man, that woulde folow his owne sense, or the bare wordes, without regard of the Churches sense and rule of faith (after which euery Scripture must be expounded) the Apostles speach doth here sound. Euen as to the simple, and to the Heretike that submitteth not his sense to the Churches iudgement, certaine places of this same Epistle, seeme at the first sight, to stand against the daily oblation or sacrifice of the masse: which yet in truth make no more for that purpose, then this text we now stand on, serueth the Nouatians: as when we come to the places, it shal be declared. The Nouatians (as al Heretikes) made Scripture the ground of their heresie. Other places make no more for the Protestants then this doth for Nouatus.

* Ambr. de pœnit. l. 1. c. 2.

And let the good Readers beware here also of the Protestants exposition, for they are herein worse then Nouatians, specially such as precisely folow Caluin: holding impiously, that it is impossible for one that forsaketh entirely his faith, that is, becommeth an Apostata or an Heretike, to be receiued to penance or Gods mercie. To establish which false and damnable sense, these fellowes make nothing of S. Ambroses, S. Chrysostoms, and the other fathers exposition, which is the holy churches sense, That the Apostle meaneth of that penance which is done before and in Baptisme, which is no more to say, but that it is impossible to be baptized againe, and thereby to be renouated and illuminated, to die, be buried, and rise againe the second time in Christ, in so easie and perfect penance and cleansing of sinnes, as that first sacrament of generation did yeeld: which applieth Christes death in such ample maner to the receiuers, that it taketh away al paines due for sinnes before committed: and therefore requireth no further penance afterward, for the sinnes before committed, all being washed away by the force of that Sacrament duely taken. S. Augustine calleth the remission in Baptisme, Magnam indulgentiam, a great pardon. Enchirid. c. 64. Caluins heresie vpon this place, worse then the Nouatians.

Anti. Iuc. Lit. 9 in ep. ad. Heb Chry. hom. 9. in c. 6. ad Hebr. The fathers exposition of this place.

The Apostle therefore warneth them, that if they fall from their faith, and from Christes grace and law which they once receiued in their Baptisme, they may not looke to haue any more that first great and large remedy applied vnto them, nor no man els that sinneth after baptisme: though the other penance, which is called the Second table after shipwracke, which is a more painefull medicine for sinne then Baptisme, requiring much fasting, praying, and other afflictions corporall, is open not onely to other sinners, but to al once baptized, Heretiks, or oppugners of the truth malitiously and of purpose or what way soeuer, during this life. See S. Cyprian ep. 52. S. Ambrose vpon this place. S. Augustine cont. ep. Parm. lib. 2. c. 13. and ep. 50. S. Damascene li. 4. c. 10. The Sacrament of penance is ready for all sinnes whatsoeuer.

Hieron. 8 ad Demetriad. c. 6.

FVLKE. 3 The wicked peruert al the Scriptures to their owne damnation, though they be neuer so plaine, much more if there be any difficultie in them. But hereof we may not gather, that al the holy Scriptures be hard, & dangerous to be read of the vnlearned. Chrysostome, exhorting the vnlearned to read the scriptures, saith: Al things are cleere and plaine by the holy Scriptures, what soeuer are necessary are manifest. In 2. Thes. hom. 3. Againe he saith: Our merciful Lord knowing the infirmitie of our will, and aptnes to fall, hath left vs great medicines in the reading of the holie Scriptures. In Gen. hom. 12. Againe: The holy scripture when it wil teach vs such a thing, expoundeth it selfe, and suffereth vs not to be deceiued. In Gen. hom. 13. Againe: The holy Scripture hath no neede of mans wisedome, that it may be vnderstoode, but of reuelation of the spirite, that the true sense being taken from thence, great gaine may grow vnto vs thereof. Therefore the Nouatians, if they had bene willing to vnderstand the truth, might both by the very wordes of the text, and by conference with other places haue seene, that not euery particular falling into sinne after baptisme, did exclude from mercy & repentance, but onely falling away cleane from Christ, which is sinne against the holy Ghost. There be many places in deed, that so stande against the sacrifice of the Masse, as it cannot stand with the only sacrifice of Christ, which you can neuer auoid by testimony of Scripture, but by impudent begging of the whole matter in question: that you are the Church, and this is your determination. But Caluines heresie (you say) is woorse then the Nouatians. For he holdeth, that it is impossible for him that is an The difficultie of the scripture.

Apostata or an Heretike, to be receiued to repentance or Gods mercie. Verely if he be such an Apostata and Heretike, as the Apostle here describeth, that falleth wholy away from Christ, not of ignorance nor infirmitie, but of wilfull malice, and in despite of God and his truth, he holdeth, as the Apostle doth, that it is impossible for him to be renued by repentance, and so to be partaker of Gods mercy, because God hath manifestly pronounced the contrarie. Neither is the exposition of any man to be receiued, that goeth directly against the wordes of the text, and the manifold testimonies of the Scripture, that the sinne against the holy Ghost, is irremissible. For it is in vaine to offer hope to them, which cannot hope, because God hath denied it vnto them. And the Ancient Fathers, by denying that baptisme can be repeated, doe meane also, that such can not be saued, as cannot be saued without a second baptisme, although repentance be open to all, that haue not so fallen cleane away, and humbly desire pardon of their sinnes. S. Cyprian ep. 52. by many arguments prooueth against the Nouatians, that such offenders as humbly desire to be receiued of the Church, are to be admitted by repentance. But Apostataes (saith he) and reuolters, or aduersaries, and enimies that waste the Church of Christ, although they be slaine without for his name, yet according to the Apostle, they cannot be admitted to the peace of the Church, seeing they haue kept neither the vnitie of the spirite, nor of the Church. The same thing in effect saith S. Ambrose, that it is not an hard matter, but an impossible thing, he hath put them out of hope, that they cannot be baptized the second time, and so in processe of the matter, alloweth sinners to repentance, but denieth such as fall away to be renued by repentance, as in baptisme. S. Augustine cont. Par. l. 2. ca. 13. speaking of Apostataes or reuolters that returne by repentance, meaneth such as haue reuolted of ignorance and infirmitie, not such of whome the Apostle speaketh, that wilfully and maliciously renounce Christ. Ep. 50. he sheweth his iudgement of the sinne against the holy Ghost, which can neuer be forgiuen. That is hardnes of heart to the end of a mans life, whereby a man refuseth to receiue forgiuenes of his sinnes, in the vnitie of the body of Christ, to which the holy Ghost doth giue life. And such hardnes of hart is in them, of whom the Apostle speaketh. For if any be truely penitent, and with faith and humilitie desire pardon, he hath not sinned against the holy Ghost. Damascene also, denying that Baptisme can be repeated vnto renouation, vnderstandeth, that they that are vtterly fallen from the grace of God testified in Baptisme, can neuer be saued. But so hath no man fallen, that is truely penitent for his fall, and humbly desireth forgiuenes of his sins, for such shall vndoubtedly obtaine pardon, according to the promises of God. Whereas they that are fallen cleane away, either repent not at all, or else repent as Iudas, without faith, or detestation of their sinne, but onely are sorowfull for the punishment, which they haue deserued by their sinne. As for your Popish penance that requireth satisfaction, and which you offer euen to them that sinne against the holie Ghost, is farre from the Apostles meaning. See chap. 10. sect. 11.

The sinne against the holy Ghost.

Popish penance satisfaction.

RHEM. 4 10 God is not vniust.) It is a world to see, what wringing and writhing the Protestants make, to shift themselues from the euidence of these words, which make it most cleere to al not blinded in pride and contention, that good works be meritorious, and the very cause of saluation, so far that God should be vniust, if he rendred not heauen for the same. Reuera grandis iniustitia Dei (saith S. Hierom) Si tantum peccata puniret, & bona opera non susciperet. That is, In deede great were Gods iniustice, if he would onely punish sinnes, and would not receiue good works. Li. 2. cont. Iouin. c. 2.

Gods iustice in rewarding meritorious works.

FVLKE. 4 These wordes make it so cleere that good workes be meritorious, that all the Logicians in Rhemes, Paris, Louane, Rome, (where I doubt not, but there be many good Logicians,) yet are they not able to conclude this proposition in a lawfull Syllogisme, out of this text. God should be vniust if he kept not his promise, which is to reward good works of his meere mercy, not of the merite of the workes. But that he should be vniust, if he rendered not heauen for the merite of good workes, neither the Apostle saith, nor S. Hierom, in the place by you cited.

Merite.

CHAP. VII.

To proue the Priesthod of Christ incomparably to excel the priesthod of Aaron (and therfore, that Leuitical priesthod now to cease, and that lawe also with it) he scanneth euery worde of the verse alleaged out of the Psalme, Our Lord hath sworne: thou art a Priest for euer, according to the order of Melchisedec.

Gen. 14, 18. FOR this ‖ Melchisedec, the king of Salem, Priest of the God most high, * who mette Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him:

2 To whom also Abraham deuided tithes of all: first in deede by interpretation, ‡ the king of iustice: and then also king of Salem, which is to say, king of peace,

3 ‖ Without father, without mother, without genealogie, hauing neither beginning of daies nor end of life, but likened to the son of God, cõtinueth a priest for euer.

4 And ‖ behold how great this man is, to whom also Abraham the Patriarke gaue ‖ tithes of the principal things.

Nu. 18, 21. Deut. 18, 1. Ios. 14, 4. 5 And certes * they of the sonnes of Leui that take the priesthod, haue commaundement to take tithes of the people according to the Law, that is to say, of their brethren: albeit themselues also issued out of the loines of Abraham.

FOR this * Melchisedech king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him, Gen. 14. 18.

2 To whom also Abraham gaue tithe of al things: first being called by interpretation king of righteousnes: and after that also, king of Salem, which is king of peace,

3 Without father, without mother, without kinne, hauing neither beginning of daies, neither end of life, but likened vnto the sonne of God, Num. 8. 12. continueth a Priest for euer.

4 Nowe consider how great this man was, vnto whom also the Patriach Abraham * gaue tithe of the spoiles.

5 And verily they which are of the children of Leui, which receiue the office of the Priesthod, haue a commaundement to take tithe of the people, according to the law, that is, of their brethren, though they came out of the loines of Abraham.

6 But

6 But

6 But he whose generation is not numbered among them, tooke tithes of Abraham, and blessed him that had the promises.

7 But without all contradiction, that which is lesse, ‖ is blessed of the better.

8 And here in deede, ‡ men that die, receiue tithes: but there he hath witnes, that he liueth.

9 And (that it may so be said) by Abraham Leui also, which receiued tithes, was tithed.

10 For as yet hee was in his fathers loines, when Melchisedec mette him.

11 If then consummation was by the Leuitical priesthod (for vnder it the people receiued the Lawe) ‖ what necessitie was there yet an other priest to rise according to the order of Melchisedec, and not to be called according to the order of Aaron?

12 For the priesthod being ‖ translated, it is necessarie that a translation of the Law also be made.

13 For he on whom these things be said, is of an other tribe, of the which, none attended on the altar.

14 For it is manifest that our Lord sprung of Iuda: in the which tribe Moyses spake nothing of ‖ Priestes.

‖ Priesthod

15 And yet it is much more euident: if according to the similitude of Melchisedec there arise another priest.

16 Which was not made according to the Lawe of the carnall commaundement, but according to the power of life indissoluble.

Ps.109,4.

17 For he witnesseth, That thou art ‖ a Priest for euer, according to the order of Melchisedec,

18 Reprobation certes is made ‖ of the former commaundement, because of the weakenesse and vnprofitablenesse thereof.

19 For the Law brought nothing to perfection, but an introduction of a better hope, by the which we approche to God.

20 And in as much as it is not without an othe (the other truely without an othe were made priests:

Ps.109,4.

The Epistle for a Confessor that is a Bishop.

23 And the other in deede were made priestes, ‖ being many, because that by death they were prohibited to continue:

24 But this, for that he continueth for euer, hath euerlasting Priesthod.

‖ them that goe

25 Whereby he is able to saue also for euer ‖ going by himselfe to God: ‡ alwaies liuing to make intercession for vs.

26 For it was seemely that we should haue such a high priest, holy innocent impolluted,

6 But he whose kinred is not counted among them, receiued tithe of Abraham, and blessed him that had the promises.

7 And without all controuersie, the lesse is blessed of the better.

8 And here men that die, receiue tithes: but there he receiueth them of whom it is witnessed that he liueth.

9 And (to say the truth) Leui also, which receiueth tithes, paied tithes in Abraham:

10 For he was yet in the loines of his father, when Melchisedech met Abraham.

11 If therefore perfection was by the priesthood of the Leuites, (for vnder that priesthood the people receiued the lawe) what needeth it furthermore that another Priest should rise after the order of Melchisedech, and not to be called after the order of Aaron?

12 For if the priesthod be translated, of necessitie also there is made a translation of the lawe.

13 For he of whom these things are spoken, perteineth vnto another tribe, of which no man gaue attendance of the altar:

14 For it is euident that our Lord sprung out of Iuda, of which tribe spake Moses nothing concerning priesthood:

15 And it is yet a farre more euident thing, if after the similitude of Melchisech there arise another Priest,

16 Which is not made after the law of the carnall commaundement, but after the power of the endlesse life:

17 For hee thus testifieth, * Thou art a priest for euer, after the order of Melchisedech. Psal.110.4. heb.5.6.

Apostata or an Heretike, to be receiued to repentance or Gods mercie. Verely if he be such an Apostata and Heretike, as the Apostle here describeth, that falleth wholy away from Christ, not of ignorance nor infirmitie, but of wilfull malice, and in despite of God and his truth, he holdeth, as the Apostle doth, that it is impossible for him to be renued by repentance, and so to be partaker of Gods mercy, because God hath manifestly pronounced the contrarie. Neither is the exposition of any man to be receiued, that goeth directly against the wordes of the text, and the manifold testimonies of the Scripture, that the sinne against the holy Ghost, is irremissible. For it is in vaine to offer hope to them, which cannot hope, because God hath denied it vnto them. And the Ancient Fathers, by denying that baptisme can be repeated, doe meane also, that such can not be saued, as cannot be saued without a second baptisme, although repentance be open to all, that haue not so fallen cleane away, and humbly desire pardon of their sinnes. S. Cyprian ep. 52. by many arguments prooueth against the Nouatians, that such offenders as humbly desire to be receiued of the Church, are to be admitted by repentance. But Apostataes (saith he) and reuolters, or aduersaries, and enimies that waste the Church of Christ, although they be slaine without for his name, yet according to the Apostle, they cannot be admitted to the peace of the Church, seeing they haue kept neither the vnitie of the spirite, nor of the Church. The same thing in effect saith S. Ambrose, that it is not an hard matter, but an impossible thing, he hath put them out of hope, that they cannot be baptized the second time, and so in processe of the matter, alloweth sinners to repentance, but denieth such as fall away to be renued by repentance, as in baptisme. S. Augustine cont. Par. l. 2. ca. 13. speaking of Apostataes or reuolters that returne by repentance, meaneth such as haue reuolted of ignorance and infirmitie, not such of whome the Apostle speaketh, that wilfully and maliciously renounce Christ. Ep. 50. he sheweth his iudgement of the sinne against the holy Ghost, which can neuer be forgiuen. That is hardnes of heart to the end of a mans life, whereby a man refuseth to receiue forgiuenes of his sinnes, in the vnitie of the body of Christ, to which the holy Ghost doth giue life. And such hardnes of hart is in them, of whom the Apostle speaketh. For if any be truely penitent, and with faith and humilitie desire pardon, he hath not sinned against the holy Ghost. Damascene also, denying that Baptisme can be repeated vnto renouation, vnderstandeth, that they that are vtterly fallen from the grace of God testified in Baptisme, can neuer be saued. But so hath no man fallen, that is truely penitent for his fall, and humbly desireth forgiuenes of his sins, for such shall vndoubtedly obtaine pardon, according to the promises of God. Whereas they that are fallen cleane away, either repent not at all, or else repent as Iudas, without faith, or detestation of their sinne, but onely are sorowfull for the punishment, which they haue deserued by their sinne. As for your Popish penance that requireth satisfaction, and which you offer euen to them that sinne against the holie Ghost, is farre from the Apostles meaning. See chap. 10. sect. 11.

The sinne against the holy Ghost.

Popish penance satisfaction.

RHEM. 4 10 God is not vniust.) It is a world to see, what wringing and writhing the Protestants make, to shift themselues from the euidence of these words, which make it most cleere to al not blinded in pride and contention, that good works be meritorious, and the very cause of saluation, so far that God should be vniust, if he rendred not heauen for the same. Reuera grandis iniustitia Dei (*saith S. Gods iustice in rewarding meritorious works.

FVLKE. 4 These wordes make it so cleere that good workes be meritorious, that all the Logicians in Rhemes, Paris, Louane, Rome, (where I doubt not, but there be many good Logicians,) yet are they not able to conclude this proposition in a lawfull Syllogisme, out of this text. God should be vniust if he kept not his promise, which is to reward good works of his meere mercy, not of the merite of the workes. But that he should be vniust, if he rendered not heauen for the merite of good workes, neither the Apostle saith, nor S. Hierom, in the place by you cited.

Merite.

CHAP. VII.

To proue the Priesthod of Christ incomparably to excel the priesthod of Aaron (and therfore, that Leuitical priesthod now to cease, and that lawe also with it) he scanneth euery worde of the verse alleaged out of the Psalme, Our Lord hath sworne: thou art a Priest for euer, according to the order of Melchisedec.

Gen. 14, 18. FOR this ‖ Melchisedec, the king of Salem, Priest of the God most high, * who mette Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him:

2 To whom also Abraham deuided tithes of all: first in deede by interpretation, ‡ the king of iustice: and then also king of Salem, which is to say, king of peace,

3 ‖ Without father, without mother, without genealogie, hauing neither beginning of daies nor end of life, but likened to the son of God, cōtinueth a priest for euer.

4 And ‖ behold how great this man is, to whom also Abraham the Patriarke gaue ‖ tithes of the principal things.

Nu. 18, 21. Deut. 18, 1. Ios. 14, 4. 5 And certes * they of the sonnes of Leui that take the priesthod, haue cōmaundement to take tithes of the people according to the Law, that is to say, of their brethren: albeit themselues also issued out of the loines of Abraham.

6 But

FOR this * Melchisedech king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him, Gen. 14. 18.

2 To whom also Abraham gaue tithe of al things: first being called by interpretation king of righteousnes: and after that also, king of Salem, which is king of peace,

3 Without father, without mother, without kinne, hauing neither beginning of daies, neither end of life, but likened vnto the sonne of God, Num. 8. 22. continueth a Priest for euer.

4 Nowe consider how great this man was, vnto whom also the Patriach Abraham * gaue tithe of the spoiles.

5 And verily they which are of the children of Leui, which receiue the office of the Priesthod, haue a commaundement to take tithe of the people, according to the law, that is, of their brethren, though they came out of the loines of Abraham.

6 But

6 But he whose generation is not numbered among them, tooke tithes of Abraham, and blessed him that had the promises.

7 But without all contradiction, that which is lesse, ‖ is blessed of the better.

8 And here in deede, ‡ men that die, receiue tithes: but there he hath witnes, that he liueth.

9 And (that it may so be said) by Abraham Leui also, which receiued tithes, was tithed.

10 For as yet hee was in his fathers loines, when Melchisedec mette him.

11 If then consummation was by the Leuitical priesthod (for vnder it the people receiued the Lawe) ‖ what necessitie was there yet an other priest to rise according to the order of Melchisedec, and not to be called according to the order of Aaron?

12 For the priesthod being ‖ translated, it is necessarie that a translation of the Law also be made.

13 For he on whom these things be said, is of an other tribe, of the which, none attended on the altar.

14 For it is manifest that our Lord sprung of Iuda: in the which tribe Moyses spake nothing of ‖ Priestes.

‖ Priesthod

15 And yet it is much more euident: if according to the similitude of Melchisedec there arise another priest.

16 Which was not made according to the Lawe of the carnall commaundement, but according to the power of life indissoluble.

17 For he witnesseth, That thou art ‖ a Priest for euer, according to the order of Melchisedec,

‖ Ps.109.4.

18 Reprobation certes is made ‖ of the former commaundement, because of the weakenesse and vnprofitablenesse thereof.

19 For the Law brought nothing to perfection, but an introduction of a better hope, by the which we approche to God.

20 And in as much as it is not without an othe (the other truely without an othe were made priests:

21 But this ‖ with an othe, by him that said vnto him: Our Lord hath sworne, and it shall not repent him: thou art a Priest for euer)

‖ Ps.109.4.

22 By so much, is IESVS made a suretie of a better testament.

23 And the other in deede were made priestes, ‖ being many, because that by death they were prohibited to continue:

‖ The Epistle for a Confessor that is a Bishop.

24 But this, for that he continueth for euer, hath euerlasting Priesthod.

25 Whereby he is able to saue also for euer ‖ going by himselfe to God: ‡ alwaies liuing to make intercession for vs.

‖ them that goe

26 For it was seemely that we should haue such a high priest, holy innocent impolluted,

6 But he whose kinred is not counted among them, receiued tithe of Abraham, and blessed him that had the promises.

7 And without all controuersie, the lesse is blessed of the better.

8 And here men that die, receiue tithes: but there he receiueth them of whom it is witnessed that he liueth.

9 And (to say the truth) Leui also, which receiueth tithes, paied tithes in Abraham:

10 For he was yet in the loines of his father, when Melchisedech met Abraham.

11 If therefore perfection was by the priesthood of the Leuites, (for vnder that priesthood the people receiued the lawe) what needeth it furthermore that another Priest should rise after the order of Melchisedech, and not to be called after the order of Aaron?

12 For if the priesthod be translated, of necessitie also there is made a translation of the lawe.

13 For he of whom these things are spoken, perteineth vnto another tribe, of which no man gaue attendance of the altar:

14 For it is euident that our Lord sprung out of Iuda, of which tribe spake Moses nothing concerning priesthood:

15 And it is yet a farre more euident thing, if after the similitude of Melchisech there arise another Priest,

16 Which is not made after the law of the carnall commaundement, but after the power of the endlesse life:

17 For hee thus testifieth, * Thou art a priest for euer, after the order of Melchisedech.

Psal.110.4. heb.5.6.

18 For there is truely a disanulling of the commaundement going before, for the weakenesse and vnprofitablenesse thereof.

19 For the lawe made nothing perfect, but was the bringing of a better hope, by the which we draw nigh vnto God.

20 And inasmuch as that was without an othe, (For those priestes were made without an othe:

21 But this priest with an othe, by him that sayd vnto him, * The Lord sware, and will not repent him, thou art a Priest for euer, after the order of Melchisedech,)

Psal.110.4.

22 By so much was Iesus made a suerty of a better Testament.

23 And among them many were made Priests, because they were forbidden by death to endure:

24 But this man, because he endureth euer, hath an vnchangeable priesthood.

25 Wherefore he is able also euer to saue them to the vttermost, that come vnto God by him, seeing he euer liueth, to make intercession for them,

26 For such an high Priest became vs, which polluted, separated from sinners, and made higher then the heauens.

27 Which hath not necessitie daily (as Leu.9,7,16,6. the priestes) first* for his owne sinnes to offer hostes, then, for the peoples. for ‖ this he did once, in offering him self.

28 For the Law appointeth priests them that haue infirmitie: but the word of the othe which is after the Law, the Sonne for euer perfected.

is holy, harmelesse, vndefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher then heauens.

27 Which needeth not daily, as those high Priestes, to offer vp sacrifice first for his owne Leuit.16,11. sinnes, and then for the peoples: for that did he once, when he offered vp him selfe.

28 For the lawe maketh men high Priestes which haue infirmitie, but the worde of the othe which was after the lawe maketh the sonne, which is perfect for euermore.

FVLKE. 1 When the Fathers, or any other, haue the same assurance of Gods spirite that the Apostle had, they may be as bold as he was. Otherwise, to leaue the plaine truth, and to follow vncertaine allegories, cannot be without reprehension, whosoeuer vseth it. Allegories.

RHEM. 2 8 Men that die.) The tithes giuen to Melchisedech were not giuen as to a mere mortal man, as all of the tribe of Leui and Aarons order were: but as to one representing the Sonne of God, who now liueth and reigneth and holdeth his priesthod and the functions thereof for euer.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. VII.

RHEM. 4 1 Melchisedec.) The excellencie of this person was so great, that some of the antiquitie tooke him to be an Angel, & some the holy Ghost. Which opinion not onely the Hebrues, that auouch him to be Sem the sonne of Noe, but also the cheefe fathers of the Christians do condemne: not doubting but he was a mere man and a Priest and a king, whosoeuer he was. for els he could not in office and order and sacrifice haue been so perfect a type and resemblance of our Sauiour, as in this Chapter and other is shewed.

RHEM. 3 Without father.) Not that he was without father and mother, saith S. Hierom epi. 126. for Christ him self was not without father, according to his diuinitie, nor without mother, in his humanitie: but for that his pedigree is not set out in the Genesis, as the genealogie of other Patriarches is, but is suddenly induced in the holy historie, no mention made of his stocke, tribe, beginning or ending, and therefore in that case also resembling in a sort the sonne of God, whose generation was extraordinarie, miraculous, and ineffable, according to both his natures, lacking a father in the one, and a mother in the other. his person hauing neither beginning nor ending, and his kingdome and Priesthod specially, in him selfe and in the Church, being eternall, both in respect of the time past, and the time to come: as the said Doctor in the same epistle writeth. The resemblance of Melchisedec to Christ in many points.

Fulke. The priesthod and sacrifice of the new Testament and of the Church, is the priesthod of Christ and the sacrifice of his death onely.

4 Behold.) To proue that Christes priesthod farre passeth the Priesthod of Aaron: and the Priesthod of the new Testament, the Priesthod of the old lawe: and consequently that the Sacrifice of our Sauiour and the sacrifice of the Church doth much excell the sacrifices of Moyses lawe, he disputeth profoundly of the preeminences of Melchisedec aboue the great Patriarch Abraham, who was father of the Leuites. By the sundry excellencies of Melchisedecks Priesthod is proued the excellencie of the Priesthod and sacrifice of the new Testament.

RHEM. 4 4 Tithes.) The first preeminence, that Abraham payed tithes, and that of the best and most cheef things that he had, vnto Melchisedec, as a duety and homage, not for him selfe onely in person, but for Leui, who yet was not borne, and so for the whole Priesthod of Leuies stock, acknowledging thereby, Melchisedec not only to be a Priest, but his Priest and Superior, and so of all the Leuiticall order. And it is here to be obserued, that whereas in the 14. of Genesis, whence this holy narration is taken, both in the Hebrue, and in the 70. it standeth indifferent or doubtfull, whether Melchisedec payed tithes to Abraham, or tooke tithes of him: the Apostle here putteth all out of controuersie, plainely declaring that Abraham payed tithes to the other, as the inferiour to his Priest and Superior. And touching paiment of tithes, it is a naturall duetie, that men owe to God in all lawes, and to be giued to his Priests in his behalfe, for their honour and liuelihod. Iacob promised or vowed to pay them, Gen. 28. Moyses appointed them Leuit. 27. Num. 18. Deut. 12. 14. 26. Christ confirmeth that duety Mat. 23. and Abraham specially here giueth them to Melchisedech: plainely thereby approuing them or their equiualent to be due to Christ and the Priesthod of the new Testament, much more then either in the law of Moyses, or in the law of Nature. Of which tithes due to the Clergie of Christes Church see S. Cyprian ep. 66. S. Hierom ep. 1. cap. 7. and ep. 2. cap. 5. to Heliodorus and Nepotianus. S. Augustine ser. 109 de tempore. He receiued tithes of Abraham, and consequent yof Leui and Aaron.

FVLKE. 4 The payment of tythes, as it was a ceremoniall duetie, is abrogated with other ceremonies, by the death of Christ. But as it is a necessarie maintenance and liuelihod of them that serue in the Church, it may be reteyned, or any other stipend appointed, that may be sufficient for their maintenance, be it more or lesse then the tenth part. But that there is any sacrificing priesthod, to whom it is due in the newe Testament, the old payment of tithes doth not proue. Neither did Christ himselfe our high priest, euer make claime vnto them: nor his Apostles the ministers of the Church, but only to a sufficient liuing by the gospel, to be allowed of their temporal goods, to whom they ministred spirituall goods. 1. Cor. 9. 14. Galath. 6. 6. Tithes.

RHEM. 5 7 Is blessed of the better.) The seconde preeminence is, that Melchisedec did blesse Abraham: which we see here S. Paul maketh a great and soueraine holy thing, grounding our Sauiours prerogatiue aboue the whole order of Aaron therein: and we see that in this sort it is the proper act of Priesthod: and that without all controuersie as the Apostle sayth, he is greater in dignitie, that hath auctorie to blesse, then the person that hath not, and therefore the priestes vocation to be in this behalfe farre aboue any earthly king, who hath not power to giue benediction in this sacred maner, neither to man, nor other creature. As here Melchisedec, so Christ blessed much more, and so haue the Bishops of his Church done, and doe. Which He blessed Abraham.

Blessing a great preeminence, specially in Priests.

no man can maruell that our forefathers haue so highly esteemed and sought for, if he marke the wonderfull mysteria and grace thereof here expressed. This Patriarch also which borowgaketh blessing of Melchisedec, him selfe (though in an inferior sort) blessed his sonnes, as the other Patriarches did, and fathers do their children by that example.

FVLKE. 5 If all kind of blessing were the proper act of priesthod, neither the patriarkes nor parents should lawfully blesse their children. But blessing with auctoritie, is not proper to Priesthod: yet to whomsoeuer God hath giuen auctoritie to blesse in his name it is doubtlesse a great prerogatiue. But the magicall blessing of Popish Byshops, with shaking their fingers a crosse, is a vaine thing, not onely because the persons haue no auctoritie to blesse in the name of God, being the ministers of Antichrist, & not of Christ: But also, because it is without inuocation of the name of God, by a superstitious ceremonie, whereunto God hath giuen no power of consecration or blessing.

Bishops blessings

RHEM. 11 If consummation) The principall proposition of the whole epistle and all the Apostles discourse, is inferred and grounded vpon the former prerogatiues of Melchisedec aboue Abraham and Leui: that is, that the end, perfection, accomplishment, and consummation of all mans duties and debts to God, by the generall redemption, satisfaction, full price and perfect ransome of all mankind, was not atchieued by any or all the Priestes of Aarons order, nor by any sacrifice or act of that Priesthod, or of all the lawe of Moyses, which was grounded vpon the Leuiticall Priesthod, but by Christ and his Priesthod, which is of the order and rite of Melchisedec.

The full accomplishment of mans redemption was not by Aarons, but by Melchisedecks Priesthod.

RHEM. 6 11 What necessitie.) This disputation of the preeminence of Christs Priesthod aboue the Leuiticall order, is against the erroneous persuasion of the Iewes, that thought their law, Priesthod, and sacrifices to be euerlasting, and to be sufficient in themselues, without any other Priest then Aaron and his successors, and without all relation to Christes passion or any other redemption or remission, then that which their Leuiticall offices did procure: not knowing that they were all figures of Christs death, and to be ended and accomplished in the same. Which point well vnderstood and kept in mind, will cleere the whole controuersie betwixt the Catholikes and Protestants, concerning the sacrifice of the Church. for, the scope of the Apostles disputation being, to auouch the dignitie, preeminence, necessitie, and eternall fruite and effect of Christs passion, he had not to treate at all of the order, which is a sacrifice depending of his Passion, specially writing to the Hebrues, that were to be instructed and reformed first touching the sacrifice of the Crosse, before they could fruitefully heare any thing of the other. though in couert and by most euident sequele of disputation, the learned and faithfull may easily perceiue whereupon the said Sacrifice of the Church (which is the Masse) is grounded. And therefore S. Hierom saith, epist. 126: that all those commendations of Melchisedec are in the type of Christ, cuius profectus Ecclesiæ sacramenta sunt.

The Apostle to confute the Iewes false persuasion of Aarons Priesthod and sacrifices, speaketh altogether of the sacrifice of the Crosse.

FVLKE. 6 You are not able to proue, that the Hebrues which were Christians, thought their law of priesthod and sacrifice to be sufficient in themselues, without all relation to Christes passion, or any other redemption or remission, then that which the Leuiticall office did procure: for if they had so taught, they coulde not haue been any wayes accompted for Christians. But their errour was, that although there were redemption and remission by the death of Christ, yet their lawe, ceremonies, and Leuiticall offices, might still continue. Therefore the Apostle, prouing that Christ is that onely true Prophet, King, and high Priest, vnto whom all the fathers looked by faith, and by whom it behoueth the whole Church to be taught, gouerned and sanctified, as it was by him saued and redeemed: doth thereupon inferre, that all those figures and shadowes ought to cease, and that the high priesthood resteth onely in the person of Christ. So that there is no neede of any other propitiatorie sacrifice, seeing Christ by his one sacrifice one offered, found eternall redemption, nor of any other high Priest, to be our Mediatour, seeing Christ continueth for euer a Priest after the order of Melchisedec. And therefore the scope of the Apostle, vtterly ouerthroweth the popish priesthood and sacrifice. And where you say (the Apostles scope, being to auouch the preeminence, dignitie, necessitie, and eternall fruite and effect of Christes passion, he had not all to treate of the other, which is a sacrifice depending vpon his passion:) You speake without all reason: For if your pretended sacrifice depend vpon his passion, and it was his scope to auouch the eternall fruite and effect of his passion, how could the Apostle omit your said sacrifice? but that your sacrifice of the masse is no fruite or effect of Christes passion. Howbeit, the Apostle doth not only omit to speake of it, but doth speake much against it, prouing by many reasons, that Christ offred himselfe but once, and that with blood, and at his death, and by that one oblation made perfect for euer all that are sanctified: whereupon it followeth, that there is no such sacrifice as you pretend. Your other reason why he omitteth to speake of it, (because he writeth to the Hebrues, that were to be instructed and reformed first touching the sacrifice of the Crosse, before they could fruitefully here any thing of the sacrifice of the Masse) is vaine also: except you will confesse, that there was no masse said among them since they were conuerted. For if they had the sacrifice of the masse among them, it was as necessarie for them to know the ground of it out of the law and the Prophets, as of the sacrifice of Christes passion: Which if order required to be first handled, yet reason would not, that the masse should haue beene altogether omitted: yea the other being so handled, as they could not see what neede they had of masse, but rather should be brought into detestation of it, if euer before they had vsed it. Of like absurditie it is that you say, the learned and faithful may easily perceiue in couert and by most euident sequell of disputation, whereupon the sacrifice of the Masse is grounded. For that which may easily be perceiued, and by most euident sequell, may be vnderstood of the vnlearned, and cannot be said to be perceiued in couert. But vnto this Laberinth or maze of wordes, you are driuen, while you seeke to stop the light of so cleare disputation, as the Apostle maintaineth against your blasphemous sacrifice of the masse. S. Hierom sayth, that all that followeth in the praise of Melchisedech, is referred vnto the type of Christ, the profite whereof are the sacraments of the Church: which nothing toucheth the sacrifice of the masse, but all the mysteries of Christian religion. And S. Hierom in the same Epistle speaketh of no sacrifice that Melchisedech offered in bread and wine: but sayth according to the trueth of the Hebrue text. He brought forth bread and wine, for the refreshing of Abraham and his souldiers. And rehearsing the opinions of Hyppolitus, Irenæus, Eusebius and others, he sayth, that with bread and wine, being a simple and pure sacrifice, he dedicated the sacrament of Christ. By which sacrifice, as it shall appeare afterward, they vnderstood not the sacrifice of the masse, but the sacrifice of praise and thankesgiuing, that the whole Church offereth to God for the redemption of the world, at and in the celebration of the Lords Supper.

Christ ouronly high Priest.

RHEM. 7 12 Translated.) Note well this place, and you shall perceiue thereby, that euery lawfull forme and manner of lawe, state, or gouernement of Gods people dependeth on Priesthod, riseth, standeth, falleth, or altereth with the Priesthod. In the lawe of Nature, the state of the people hanged on one kind of Priesthod: in the lawe of Moyses, of an other: In the state of Christianitie, of an other: and therefore in the former sentence the Apostle said, that the Iewish people or Common wealth had their lawe vnder the Leuitical Priesthod, and the Greeke more properly expresseth the matter, that they were legitemated, that is to say, made a lawfull people or communitie vnder God, by the Priesthod. for there is no iust nor lawfull Common wealth in the world, that is not made legall and Gods peculiar, and distinguished from vnlawfull Common weales that holde of falſe goddes, or of none at al, by Prieſthod. Whereupon it is cleere, that the newe law, and all Chriſtian peoples, holding of the ſame, is made lawfull by the Prieſthod of the new Teſtament, and that the Proteſtants ſhamefully are deceiued, and deceiue others, that would haue Chriſtian Common-weales to lacke an externall Prieſthod, or Chriſtes death to abolish the ſame. for, this is a demonſtration, that if Chriſt haue abolished Prieſthod, he hath abolished the newe law, which is the newe Teſtament and ſtate of grace, which al Chriſtian Common-weales liue vnder. Neither were it true, that the Prieſthod were tranſlated with the law, if al external prieſthod ended by Chriſtes death, where the new law began. for ſo the law ſhoulde not depend on Prieſthod, but dure when al Prieſthod were ended: which is againſt S. Paules doctrine.

External prieſthod neceſſary for the ſtate of the new Teſtament.

Furthermore it is to be noted, that this legitimation or putting Communities vnder lawe, and Prieſthod, of what order ſo euer, it is no otherwiſe, but by ioyning one with another in one homage of ſacrifice external, which is the proper act of Prieſthod. for, as no lawfull ſtate can be without Prieſthod, ſo no Prieſthod can be without ſacrifice. And we meane alwaies of Prieſthod and ſacrifice taken in their owne proper ſignification, as here S. Paul taketh them. for, the conſtitution, difference, alteration, or tranſlation of ſtates and lawes riſe not vpon any mutation of ſpiritual or metaphorically taken Prieſthod, or ſacrifice: but vpon thoſe things in proper acception, as it is moſt plaine.

Externall ſacrifice alſo neceſſarie for the ſame.

Laſtly, it foloweth of this, that though Chriſt truly ſacrificed himſelfe vpon the Croſſe (there is alſo a Prieſt according to the order of Melchiſedech) and there made the full redemption of the world, confirmed, and conſummated his compact, and Teſtament, and the lawe and Prieſthod of this his new and eternall ſtate, by his blood: yet that cannot be the forme of ſacrifice into which the olde Prieſthod and ſacrifices were tranſlated, whereupon the Apoſtle inferreth the tranſlation of the Law. For they al were figures of Chriſtes death, & ended in effect at his death, yet they were not altered into that kind of ſacrifice, which was to be made but once, and was executed in ſuch a ſort, that peoples and nations Chriſtened could not meete often to worſhip at it, nor haue their lawe and Prieſtes conſtituted in the ſame. though for the honour and duetie, remembrance and repreſentation thereof, not only we Chriſtians, but alſo al peoples, faithful both of Iewes and Gentiles, haue had their Prieſthod and ſacrifices, according to the difference of their ſtates. Which kind of ſacrifices were tranſlated one into another: and ſo no doubt is the Prieſthod Leuiticall properly turned into the Prieſthod and ſacrifice of the Church, according to Melchiſedecks rite, and Chriſtes inſtitution in the formes of bread and wine. See the next note.

The tranſlation of the olde prieſthod and ſacrifices, muſt needs be into the ſaid Prieſthod and ſacrifice of the Church.

FVLKE. 7 All externall Prieſthod that was before Chriſt, ordeined by God, was a figure of the eternall Prieſthod, of Chriſt, and of the ſpirituall Prieſthod of al his members. Therefore the tranſlation of the prieſthod, whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, is from Aarons order to Chriſt: where it reſteth, and from whom it is not tranſlated, or remoued vnto any other, by ſucceſſion or any other waies. And the new Teſtament is eſtabliſhed in the ſacrifice and prieſthod of Chriſt to be eternal, as he is an eternall prieſt, and the fruite of his owne ſacrifice, is euerlaſting. Then let vs ſee wherein the Proteſtants are ſhamefully deceiued, which will haue none other externall ſacrificing prieſthod, but of Chriſt, or of Chriſtes death to haue aboliſhed all other prieſthod offering bodily ſacrifice. Firſt, you giue vs a ſtrange kind of demonſtration, ſuch as Ariſtotle neuer taught. If Chriſt haue aboliſhed prieſthod, he hath aboliſhed the new teſtament. what conſequence is there in this demonſtration? Certeine it is by the text, that Chriſt hath tranſlated al external prieſthod of the law, vnto his owne perſon, whereby he hath eſtabliſhed the new teſtament to be eternal, as his prieſthod is eternal: and aboliſhed al other externall prieſthod, which cannot ſtande with his ſingular and eternall Prieſthod. Seeing therefore he hath aboliſhed all externall ſacrificing prieſthod that was before him, and hath inſtituted none other to ſucceede in the place thereof, but his owne ſingular prieſthod, how doth it follow that he hath aboliſhed the newe Teſtament, which could not haue beene eſtabliſhed, if that old prieſthod had not been aboliſhed? But here you ſeeme (for lacke of an inſtitution of your popiſh prieſthod) to ſay, that it is the olde Prieſthod, not aboliſhed by the death of Chriſt: for els, what aduantage is it to you, if Chriſt haue not aboliſhed al Prieſthod? We affirme according to the holy Scripture, that Chriſtes death hath aboliſhed the Iewiſh prieſthod, not that there ſhould no prieſthod ſucceede, but that all dignitie and holineſſe of that Prieſthod, is tranſlated vnto our ſauiour Chriſt only, where it ſhall remaine for euer. Therefore your popiſh prieſthod, ſuppoſeth an aboliſhing of the newe Teſtament, or an erecting of a third Teſtament, ſeeing you affirme, that there can be no lawe, teſtament, or gouernement without an externall prieſthod, nor no prieſthod without a law, teſtament or couenant. And your prieſthod hath no inſtitution in the old or new teſtament, therefore you muſt bring forth the tables of the thirde lawe or teſtament, by which your prieſthod is inſtituted or eſtabliſhed. For if it had any inſtitution in the old teſtament, it was aboliſhed by the newe Teſtament. If it had any inſtitution in the new teſtament, you could bring forth ſuch plaine words of inſtitution and conſecration thereof, as we ſee in the old teſtament of Aarons Prieſthod, and in the new teſtament of our Sauiour Chriſtes prieſthod, but that all the worlde knoweth you cannot doe. Therefore it remaineth that your popiſh prieſthod is grounded vpon a third lawe and teſtament, which is the lawe and teſtament of Antichriſt, that by your prieſthod laboureth to aboliſh the newe teſtament, and eternall prieſthod of our Lorde and Sauiour Chriſt. But let vs followe the reſt of your reaſons. You adde further, that if all externall prieſthod ended by Chriſtes death where the new law began, the prieſthod were not tranſlated with the law: for ſo the law ſhould not depend on prieſthod, but endure when al prieſthod were ended. I can ſee no light of reaſon in this miſhapen argument, except you make no account of the prieſthod of Chriſt. For the prieſthod of Chriſt whereupon the newe Teſtament dependeth, is neuer ended but continneth for euer: therefore there is no neede of your popiſh prieſthod, to eſtabliſh the new law and teſtament, which is perfect in the ſingular prieſthod of Chriſt. You proceed to proue, that externall ſacrifice, is as neceſſarie as externall prieſthod, becauſe it is the proper act of prieſthood. And we acknowledge that our high prieſt hath offered externall ſacrifice of himſelfe once for all, and found eternall redemption: therefore there remaineth nowe no ſacrifice propitiatorie for ſinne, but the ſpirituall ſacrifice of praiſe and thankeſgiuing, offered by the whole Church, and euery true member of the ſame. Neither is there any other homage of ſacrifice external, needeful for legitimation of the communitie of the Church, which to offer vp ſpirituall ſacrifices, is made a ſpirituall houſe, and holy prieſthod 1. Pet. 2. And you ſay well, that the conſtituiton, difference, or tranſlation of ſtates, riſeth not vpon any change of ſpirituall prieſthod or ſacrifice: for the Church of Chriſt euen vnder the law, was a ſpirituall prieſthod, to offer vp ſpirituall ſacrifices Exod. 19. 5. Yet had it an externall prieſthod, to offer vp bodily ſacrifices, both propitiatorie and euchariſticall. For all which our high prieſt Ieſus Chriſt hath offered one externall ſacrifice, to ſanctifie all his Church for euer, and to aboliſh all other externall ſacrifices propitiatorie and euchariſticall, and hath receiued onely ſpirituall ſacrifices, which are acceptable to God by his externall propitiatorie ſacrifice, in figure whereof, euen the externall ſacrifices that were euchariſticall of the lawe, were offered by the prieſt. Laſtly you ſay moſt blaſphemouſly, that the ſacrifice of Chriſtes death cannot be the forme of ſacrifice, into which the old prieſthod and ſacrifice were tranſlated, whereupon the Apoſtle inferreth the tranſlation of the lawe: But the Apoſtle beateth out the braines of this monſtrous blaſphemie verſ. 26. & 27. where he ſaith, that our high prieſt which is holy, innocent, impolluted, ſeparated from ſinners, and made higher then the heauens, hath no neede daily (as thoſe prieſtes) firſt first for his owne sinnes, then for the peoples to offer sacrifices, for this he did once for all, in offering himselfe. What can be more plaine? That which they did daily and vnsufficiently in offering the sacrifices of beasts, Christ did once and perfectly in offering himselfe. Therefore the priesthood and sacrifice of Christes death is that forme of sacrifice and priesthood, into which the olde priesthood and sacrifice was translated. Againe that sacrifice and priesthod, whereby the new Testament is established, is that whereunto the sacrifice and priesthod is translated, but the singular priesthood of Christ Iesus, which is made suretie of the new Testament, is that whereunto the multitude of priests of the law is translated vers. 22. 23. and which is established by the bloudshedding of Christ once for all, Heb. 9. Therefore the priesthod and sacrifice of Christs death is that sacrifice and priesthod, whereunto the old sacrifice and priesthod are translated. But let vs see what ground you dare open your mouth to such dishonour of Christes priesthod and sacrifice. Your reason why the sacrifice of Christs death cannot be that forme of sacrifice, into which the old priesthod and sacrifice was translated: is because the sacrifice of Christs death, was made but once, and was executed in such a sort, that people and nations christened, could not meete often to worship at it, nor haue their law and priests constituted in the same. But seeing all people and nations christened, were redeemed by that sacrifice once made for euer, what neede haue they that it should be repeated often? or what need haue they to be present at it, or to worship at it? when the time is now, that the true worshippers without externall sacrifice, must worship in spirit and truth Ioan. 4. 23. And Christ being lifted vp to the crosse, hath drawen all vnto himselfe Ioan. 12. 32. so that they need none other sacrifice to approch vnto God, but that onely sacrifice of Christs death. As for the honour, duetie, remembrance, and representation thereof, in respect of our infirmitie, we haue sacraments instituted by Christ, and ministers appointed to consecrate, and to deliuer the same vnto his people: but no sacrifice, nor sacrificing priesthod. Therefore the sacrifices, as they were sacrifices, were translated only into the singular sacrifice of Christs death, as they were sacraments, into the sacraments of the new Testament. And the sacrificing priesthod, was translated into the priesthod of Christ only, their ministration of the sacraments, into our ministration of the sacraments. But to say, that the Leuiticall priesthod is properly turned into the popish priesthod, & a sacrifice of the masse, according to Melchisedechs rite, is first to denie Christ in dying for vs, to be a priest properly, according to the order of Melchisedeh: secondly it is to arrogate diuinitie to euery hedge priest. For he onely is a priest after the order of Melchisedech, which is the eternall sonne of God, the king of righteousnes, the king of peace, without father, or mother, without generation, hauing neither beginning of his daies, nor end of his life, and is but one, and not many. Wherefore to say, that the popish priesthod, is properly the priesthod after Melchisedechs rite, is vtterly to deny all that the Apostle in this chapter, yea throughout this Epistle maketh peculiar to Christ. But for your popish priesthod or sacrifice of the Masse, you haue Christs institution in the formes of bread and wine: yet Christ neuer instituted any such priesthod or sacrifice in the formes of bread and wine, but a ministerie of a sacrament in bread and wine. Neither doth any ancient father speake of a sacrifice in the formes of bread and wine, although many doe call the sacrament which is celebrated in bread and wine, a sacrifice vnproperly, because it is a remembrance of the one only sacrifice of Christs death, and because the spirituall sacrifice of praise and thankesgiuing is offered therein, not by the minister onely, but by the whole Church that is partaker of it.

The popish priesthod.

REHEM. 8 17 A Priest for euer.) Christ is not called a Priest for euer, only for that his person is eternal, or for that he sitteth on the right hand of God, and perpetually praieth or maketh intercession for vs, or for that the effect of his death is euerlasting: How Christ is a Priest for euer.

for all this proueth not that in proper signification his Priesthod is perpetual: but according to the iudgement of al the fathers grounded vpon this deepe and diuine discourse of S. Paul, and vpon the very nature, definition, and proprietie of Priesthod, and the excellent act and order of Melchisedec, and the state of the new law, he is a Priest for euer according to Melchisedecks order, specially in respect of the sacrifice of his holy body and bloud, instituted at his last supper, and executed by his commission, commandement, and perpetuall concurrence with his Priestes, in the formes of bread and wine: in which things onely the said high Priest Melchisedec did sacrifice. For though S. Paul make no expresse mention hereof, because of the depth of the mysterie, and their incredulitie, or feeblenesse to whom he wrote: yet it is euident in the iudgement of all the learned fathers (without exception) that euer wrote either vpon this Epistle, or vpon the 14. of Genesis, or the Psalme 109. or by occasion haue treated of the sacrifice of the altar, that the eternitie and proper act of Christs Priesthod, and consequently the immutability of the new law, consisteth in the perpetuall offering of Christs body and bloud in the Church. Christs eternall priesthod consisteth in the perpetuall sacrifice of his body and bloud in the Church.

Which things is so well knowen to the Aduersaries of Christs Church and Priesthod, and so graunted, that they be forced impudently to camill vpon certaine Hebrue particles, that Melchisedec did not offer in bread and wine: yea and when that will not serue, plainely to deny him to haue beene a Priest: which is to giue checkmate to the Apostle, and to ouerthrow all his discourse. Thus whiles these wicked men pretend to defend Christes onely Priesthod, they in deede abolish as much as in them lieth, the whole order, office, and state of his eternall law and Priesthod. The Protestants camilling vpon particles against Melchisedecks sacrifice and priesthod, directly against the Apostle.

Arnobius saith, By the mysterie of bread and wine he was made a priest for euer. And againe, The eternal memorie, by which he gaue the food of his body to them that feare him. in psal. 109. 110. Lactantius, In the church he must needes haue his eternall priesthod according to the order of Melchisedec. Lib. 14 Institut. S. Hierom to Euagrius, Aarons priesthod had an ende, but Melchisedecks, that is, Christes and the Churches is perpetuall, both for the time past and to come. S. Chrysostome therefore calleth the Churches sacrifice, hostiam inconsumptibilem, an host or sacrifice that cannot be consumed. ho. 17. in. 9. Heb. S. Cyprian, hostiam qua sublata, nulla esset futura religio, an host which being taken away, there could be no religion, de cœna Domini. nu. 2. Emissenus, perpetuam oblationem & perpetuò currentem redemptionem, a perpetuall oblation & a redemption that runneth or continueth euerlastingly. ho. 5. de Pasch. And our Sauiour expresseth so much in the very institution of the B. Sacrament of his body and bloud: specially when he calleth the later kind, the new testament in his bloud, signifying that as the old law was stablished in the bloud of beasts, so the new (which is his eternal Testament) should be dedicated and perpetual in his own bloud: not only as it was shed on the Crosse, but as giuen in the chalice. And therefore into this sacrifice of the altar (saith S. Augustine lib. 17. de ciuit. c. 20. S. Leo. ser. 8. de passione, and the rest) were the old sacrifices to be translated. See S. Cyprian ep. 63. ad Cæcil. nu. 2. S. Ambrose de Sacram. lib. 5. 6. 4. S. Augustine in Psal. 33. Conc. 2. and li. 17. de ciuit. c. 17. S. Hierom epi. 17. c. 2. & ep. 126. Epiph, hær. 55. Theodoret in Psal. 109. Damascene lib. 4. c. 14. Christs eternall priesthod and sacrifice in the Church is proued out of the fathers. Epist. 126. * That is, from Adam to the ende of the world, represented by sacrifice.

Finally if any of the fathers, or all the fathers, had either wisedome, grace, or intelligence of Gods words and mysteries, this is the truth. If nothing will serue our Aduersaries, Christ Iesus confound them, and defend his eternall Priesthod, and state of his new Testament established in the same.

VLKE. 8 You might as wel say, that all the Apostle saith concerning the externall priesthod of Melchisedech, is nothing worth without the Popish Priesthood and sacrifice of the masse, whereof he maketh no mention. O Antichrist, the Lord, euen the Lord rebuke thee. But according to the iudgement of all the fathers (say you) Christ is a Priest for euer, according to Melchisedechs order, specially in respect of the sacrifice of his holy body and bloud, instituted at his last supper, and executed by his commission & perpetuall concurrence with his priests in the formes of bread and wine. The Popish priesthod.

As

As you neglect whatſoeuer the Apoſtle ſaith of the prieſthod of Chriſt, ſo you faine moſt impudently, that you report of the iudgement of all the fathers: for no one ancient father, before Antichriſt had ſet vp his prieſthod & ſacrifice euer was of that iudgement. Although many of the ancient fathers, without al ground of ſcripture, ſought a reſemblance of the bread and wine which Melchiſedech brought forth, vnto the bread and wine, wherein Chriſt inſtituted his ſacrament. But it ought to ſuffice vs againſt the iudgment of al the world, that the holy ghoſt examining al things moſt perfectly, that the ſcripture reporteth of the Prieſthod of Melchiſedech, would not leaue out that wherein the Prieſthod of Chriſt moſt eſpecially conſiſteth as you ſay. Therefore Melchiſedechs bread and wine perteined not to his Prieſtly office, neither did he offer it to God, but as S. Hierome ſaith, brought it foorth for the refreſhing of Abraham and his ſouldiers, and it perteined to his Kingly liberalitie. Wherein if you would make reſemblance vnto Chriſt, that hath not onely conſecrated vs as a Prieſt by his ſacrifice, but alſo hath fedde vs as a King, with the ſpiritual food of his body and bloud repreſented in bread and wine, whereby we are bound to giue him praiſe and thankes for euermore: You ſhould ſay that which all the ancient fathers doe meane, in their relation of Melchiſedechs bread and wine, to the Sacrament of the body and bloud of Chriſt. But let vs examine the Argoments, vpon which you ſay the aucient fathers grounded their iudgement. Firſt, you ſay, vpon this deepe and deuine diſcourſe of S. Paul, where there is no word of the Sacrament nor of Melchiſedechs bread and wine, but altogether he proueth Chriſt to be a Prieſt after the order of Melchiſedech, by thoſe reaſons, for which you ſay he is not called a Prieſt for euer without your Prieſthod and ſacrifice, whereof he ſpeaketh no word, but much againſt it. Therefore the fathers could ground no ſuch matter vpon the Apoſtles diſcourſe. Secondly, you ſay vpon the very nature, propertie, diffinition of Prieſthod. But either you giue another diffinition of Prieſthod then the Apoſtle knewe, or els the Apoſtle diſcourſeth of Chriſtes Prieſthod after the order of Melchiſedech, beſide the nature, propertie, and diffinition of Prieſthod, which none of the auncient fathers would ſay. Therefore they ground not any ſuch iudgement vpon any ſuch pretended diffinition, which the Apoſtle in all his diſcourſe toucheth not. Thirdly, vpon the excellent act and order of Melchiſedech, If the Apoſtle knew wherein the order of Melchiſedech conſiſted, his acte of bringing foorth bread and wine was no part of his Prieſthod, for if it had bene the principall part, (as you pretend he would neuer haue omitted it. Therfore thoſe fathers were deceiued, that iudged that act to pertaine to his Prieſthod, although none of them counted it the principall part of his order.

Laſt of all you ſay, they grounded their iudgement vpon the ſtate of the newe Law, but the couenant of the new lawe ſtandeth in forgiuenes of ſinnes by the onely ſacrifice of Chriſtes death, as the Apoſtle proueth at large Cap. 8. 9. and 10. Therefore the auncient fathers, nor any other after them, could iuſtly ground any ſuch Prieſthod and ſacrifice vpon the ſtate of the newe Lawe, which ouerthroweth the vertue of Chriſts onely Prieſthod and ſacrifice. Finally, where you ſay Chriſt inſtituted ſuch a ſacrifice and Prieſthod at his laſt ſupper, you are neuer able to proue it by any word, or conſequence of any word in the Scriptures. But Chriſt (you ſay) inſtituted this Sacrament in the formes of bread and wine, in which things onely the ſaid high Prieſt Melchiſedech did ſacrifice. Firſt, Melchiſedech brought forth bread and wine, and not the onely formes of bread and wine, therefore your ſacrifice in the onely formes of bread and wine, is not after his order. Secondly, he offered no ſacrifice of bread & wine, but brought it foorth (as S. Hierom ſaith) for the refreſhing of Abraham and his armie. So ſaith Ioſephus, Antiquit. lib. 1. cap. 10. Melchiſedech gaue liberall entertainment to the ſouldiers of Abraham, and ſuffred them to want nothing to their liuing. Which Petrus Comeſt. hiſt. ſchol. in Gen. 14. 45. approueth ſaying: Melchiſedech which was king of Salem, offered vnto him bread and wine, which Ioſephus as it wer expounding ſaith: he miniſtred to his armie the dueties of hoſpitalitie, and gaue him great plentie of things neceſſarie, and beſide the feaſt, or at the feaſt, he bleſſed God which had ſubdued to Abraham, his enemies. For he was a Prieſt of the higheſt God. This writer came not into your mind, when you ſaid all without exception doe ground the eternal Prieſthod of Chriſt vpon Melchiſedechs bread and wine. Nor yet Procopius a learned father of the Greeke Church, who groundeth not the eternall Prieſthood of Chriſt vpon Melchiſedechs bread and wine, but onely as the Apoſtle here doth.

Paulus Chriſti typum alio modo accipit. Hinc typum petit eumque ibi ſitum diſertè ponit quod dicitur, rex iuſtitiæ & pacis. In Chriſto enim iuſtificamur peccati onere abiecto. In hoc reconciliamur Deo patri quæ nobis Chriſtus & pacatiũ reddit. Quod autem benedictionem impertitur Abrahamo, ſignum eſt eius ſacerdotium exoluiſſe ſacerdotium Leuiticum. Nam & nos benedicimur à vero Chriſto vbi perdomuerimus ſpirituali militia principes ſæculi huius, non plurimũ rebus mundanis vt quibus omnia ſit Deus, addicti, omnia præ ſpiritualibus diuitijs contemnẽtes, quas nobis liberaliter largietur Deus. In Gen. 15. Thirdly, as you are not able to proue, that he ſacrificed bread & wine, ſo you can neuer proue, that he ſacrificed nothing but bread and wine. Becauſe there is no mention of his ſacrifice in the Scripture. Finally where as you ſay, that in the iudgement of all the learned fathers without exception, the eternity and proper acte of Chriſts Prieſthod, and the immutability of the new Teſtament, conſiſteth in the perpetual offering of Chriſts body & bloud in the Church: it is vtterly vntrue, for not one of the ancient fathers is of that iudgement, or that the naturall body and bloud of Chriſt is offered in the Church, but onely they ſpeake of a ſpiritual offering of praiſe and thankeſgiuing, and a memorial of that one ſacrifice of Chriſtes death, continued in the celebration of the Lords ſupper. Theodoret vpon the eight of this Epiſtle declareth this euidently in theſe words: If therfore both the Prieſthod which is of the Law hath taken an end, and alſo the Prieſt which is after the order of Melchiſedech, hath offered a ſacrifice, and cauſed that all other ſacrifices ſhould not be neceſſary, why do the Prieſts of the new Teſtament, celebrate the myſtical liturgie or ſacrifice? But it is cleare to them that are inſtructed in diuine matters, that we offer not another ſacrifice, but doe celebrate a remembrance of that one and healthfull ſacrifice. For that our Lord himſelfe hath commaunded vs: Do you this in remembrance of me, that by beholding of the types or tokens, we might remember thoſe things which he hath ſuffered for vs, and both continue loue towards our benefactor, and alſo wait for the fruition of the goood things to come. By this one amongſt ſo many, you may ſee how true it is, that all fathers without exception, iudge the proper note of Chriſts Prieſthod, to conſiſt in the ſacrifice of the body and bloud of Chriſt in the Maſſe. The ſame Theodoret vpon the Pſalme 109. ſaith, that Chriſt is now a Prieſt which is ſprong of Iuda according to the fleſh, not offering any thing himſelfe, but is called the head of them whith offer, ſeeing he calleth the Church his body, and therefore he exerciſeth the Prieſthod as a man, but he receiueth thoſe things that are offered, as God. And the Church offereth the tokens of his body and bloud, ſanctifying all the leauen by the firſt fruites. Marke here, that Chriſt after he hath accompliſhed the propitiatorie ſacrifice in his owne perſon, by offering himſelfe once on the Croſſe, is now a Prieſt on earth alſo in reſpect of his body, which is the Church, to offer the ſacrifice of thankeſgiuing in the Sacrament. Secondly, that the whole Church offereth this ſacrifice. Thirdly, that it is the tokens of his body and bloud, not the ſame in ſubſtance. Fourthly, that which they offer, is the firſt fruits of his creatures, (as Ireneus alſo ſaith) for a ſacrifice of praiſe and thankeſgiuing, Ireneus l. 4. cap. 32. & 34. The ſame Theodoret vpon the 14. of Geneſ. ſaith: Abraham the Patriarke offered to Melchiſedech the tenth of his ſpoiles, and being a iuſt man & the friend of God, receiued bleſſing of him. For he bare a figure of the Prieſthod of our Lord. And therefore on the otherſide, he gaue to Abraham bread and wine, and a lumpe of floure, as it was the maner for euery man, to offer ſuch things to the God of all. For he perceiued that herein alſo the figure was manifeſted. By this place it is euident, that his meaning is, that as Melchiſedech gaue bread and wine to Abraham, ſo Chriſt gaue to his Church the Sacrament in bread and wine, which as it was offred by euery man to God for a ſacrifice of thankeſgiuing, ſo in the ſacrament of the Church, the ſacrifice of thankeſgiuing is offered by euery true member of the Church. But here you ſay, we are inforced impudently to cauil vpon certaine Hebrue particles that Melchiſedech did not offer bread and wine. It is no enforcement nor impudent cauillation, to appeale to the originall text, that there is no mention that Melchiſedech offered bread and wine, but that he brought it forth. So doth S. Hierom tranſlate it, and ſo doth your owne vulgar latine turne it. S. Hierom ſheweth to what end he brought it foorth, and ſo do other of the ancient fathers. And whoſoeuer ſeemeth to ſay moſt for you, doe make onely a figure of the Sacrament, and a ſacrifice of thankeſgiuing in the bread and wine that he brought forth. But when that will not ſerue (you ſay) we are inforced plainly to denie him to haue been a Prieſt. Verely, the erueth of the Hebrue text wil ſerue to the worldes ende, to proue that Melchiſedech offered not bread and wine. But that we plainely deny him to haue bene a Prieſt, whom the Scripture ſaith ſo expreſly to haue bene a Prieſt of the higheſt God, without ſhame you do ſlander vs: we neuer denied it, neither will we euer by Gods grace denie it, although we affirme, that his Prieſthod conſiſted not in offering of bread and wine, neither doth the Apoſtle or any text of the Scripture teach any ſuch thing. Thus haue you nothing but monſtrous lies to bleare the eyes of the ignorant, that you may vpholde your blaſphemous ſacrifice and prieſthod, directly againſt Chriſt and the Apoſtles doctrine. But let vs ſee, what you can bring out of mans auctoritie: for you are vtterly forſaken of Gods word both for your prieſthod and ſacrifice. Firſt, Arnobius paſſing lightly ouer the Prieſthod of Chriſt, which is God eternall, meaneth, that he was declared to be a Prieſt for euer, among other things, by the myſterie of bread and wine, as Melchiſedech alone amongſt the prieſts offred bread and wine: he ſaith not, that the eternitie of Chriſts Prieſthod conſiſteth in the perpetual offring of Chriſts body and bloud, which is your expoſition. Slander.

Againe, if Chriſt were made a Prieſt for euer by the miſterie of bread and wine, your ſacrifice aboliſheth the Prieſthod of Chriſt: for you ſay, that Chriſt offered not bread and wine, therefore not that which Melchiſedech offred. The ſecond place of Arnobius, expoundeth plainly, what he vnderſtandeth by the myſterie of bread and wine, namely the Sacrament of bread and wine, celebrated in remembrance of the ſpiritual foode of Chriſtes body and bloud. Therefore his wordes are theſe in Pſ. 110. He hath made a memory of his marueloꝰ workes, ſaying: as often as you ſhal do theſe things, you ſhal do them in remembrance of me. When ſaid our merciful & gracious Lord this? Then without doubt when he gaue the food of his body to them that feare him, and this couenant the Lord wil remember for euer, by which he hath declared vnto his people the vertue of his works. And leaſt you ſhould yet dreame of the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, and Popiſh prieſthod whereof he ſpeaketh no word: he ſaith that al the lawes of the newe Teſtament are fulfilled in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord, and kept in his equity, when he ſent redemption to his people by his Apoſtles ſaying, go and baptiſe al nations, &c. Therefore you may as wel make Baptiſme a ſacrifice as the Lords Supper, and ſay that the eternal Prieſthod of Chriſt conſiſteth in Baptiſme. Lactantius Inſt. lib. 4. c. 14. ſpeaketh nothing that ſoundeth to the maintenance of your Popiſh prieſthod & ſacrifice: his words are theſe, ſpeaking of the churche This is the faithful houſe, this is the immortal temple, in which whoſoeuer hath not ſacrificed, he ſhal not haue the reward of immortalitie. Of which great and eternal temple, ſeeing Chriſt was the builder, it is neceſſary, that he haue therein an eternal Prieſthod. Neither can any man come to the entrance of the temple, and to the ſight of God, but by him which builded the temple. Dauid in the 109. Pſalme teacheth the ſame thing ſaying: Before the morning ſtarre, I haue begotten thee, the Lord hath ſworne, and it ſhal not repent him, thou art a Prieſt for euer, after the order of Melchiſedech. What other thing can be gathered out of theſe words? but that Chriſt hath an eternal Prieſthod in his Church, that al true Chriſtians by him may haue acceſſe to God, and offer there ſpiritual ſacrifices acceptable to God by him. For euery true Chriſtian, as he is a member of Chriſt, is a ſpiritual Prieſt, to offer ſacrifice in the Church, in which whoſoeuer hath not ſacrificed (ſaith Lactantius) ſhall not haue the reward of immortalitie. Therefore of the Popiſh prieſthod and ſacrifice of the Maſſe here is no mention, nor any thing that hath ſo much as any ſhadow of ſuch a matter. S. Hieroms words alſo you falſifie by detraction, as you do the reſt. For he ſaith: The Apoſtle affirmeth, that the Prieſthod of Aaron, that is of the people of the Iewes, had a beginning and an ende, but that the Prieſthod of Melchiſedech, that is of Chriſt and his Church, is eternall both for time paſt, and for time to come, and had no auctor of it. By theſe words it is manifeſt, that Chriſt onely is a Prieſt after the order of Melchiſedech, whoſe Prieſthod is the Prieſthod of his Church, as Aarons was of the Iewiſh temple. And is an eternall Prieſthod without beginning, and had none auctor of it, therefore cannot poſſibly be the Popiſh prieſthod. Chryſoſtom Hom. 17. ad Heb. ſheweth moſt plainly, that the celebration of the Supper is vnproperly called a ſacrifice, Our high Prieſt is he, which offered the ſacrifice which purgeth vs, the ſame we offer now alſo, which was then offered, and cannot be conſumed. But this which we doe, is done in remembrance of that which was done. For do ye this (ſaith he) in remembrance of me: we doe not offer another ſacrifice, as the high Prieſt, but the ſame alwaies, but rather we celebrate the remembrance of a ſacrifice. Therefore the Sacrament of the body & bloud of Chriſt is not a ſacrifice properly, but a remembrance of the ſacrifice of Chriſt. S. Cyprian ſpeaketh of the groſſe error of the Carpernaites, which thought they ſhould eat the fleſh of Chriſt roſted, or ſodden, and cut in pieces, Whereas the fleſh of his perſon (ſaith he) if it ſhould be cut in pieces, could not ſuffice all mankind, which being once conſumed, it might ſeeme that Religion were loſt, to which no oblation remained any more. What maketh this for the popiſh prieſthod, or ſacrifice? We know that Chriſts body was not cut in pieces, but offered vpon the Croſſe, to be a ſacrifice: whoſe vertue is alwaies ſufficient for the Religion of Chriſt, & hath no need of the Popiſh Prieſthod, or the ſacrifice of the Maſſe. The words of Emiſſenus are alſo falſly applied, for that he ſaith is of the vertue of Chriſts death, and not of the ſacrifice of the Maſſe, or of the celebration of the Lords Supper: Becauſe he would take away from our ſight his aſſumpted body, and carrie it into heauen, it was neceſſarie, that as this day he ſhould conſecrate vnto vs the Sacrament of his body and bloud, that it might be celebrated continually by a myſterie, which was once offered for a price, that becauſe the perpetuall and vnwearied redemption did runne or continue ſtil for the ſaluation of men, the oblation alſo of that redemption ſhould be perpetuall, and that eternall ſacrifice might liue in remembrance and alwaies be preſent in grace. You ſee therefore that the redemption which runneth or continueth euer, is the effect of Chriſts paſſion: and that the perpetuall oblation of that redemption, is but a memoriall and teſtimonie of the preſence of that ſacrifice in grace, not in ſubſtance. Neither doth Chriſt in the inſtitution of the Sacrament, expreſſe any ſuch matter as you pretende. For ſaying, the new Teſtament is dedicated in his bloud, he ſpeaketh expreſly of the ſacrifice of his death, where his bloud was ſhed, & not in the Chalice. S. Auguſtine ſaying, that the ſacrifice of bread and wine after the order of Melchiſedech, hath ſucceeded all the ſacrifices of the olde Teſtament, meaneth not that the Sacrament is that ſacrifice properly, but the bodie of Christ offered on the Crosse, wherof the Sacrament is a memorial in bread and wine. For cap. 17. he saith: That which Melchisedech offered when he blessed Abraham, is offered euery where vnder Christ our Priest. What is that I pray you but bread and wine, as a figure of Christs body and bloud? Therefore he speaketh of it most cleerely, Vtlogunta trium. quæst. q. 6. 1. He is our Priest for euer after the order of Melchisedech, which offered himselfe a whole sacrifice for vs, and hath commended the similitude of that sacrifice, to be celebrated in remembrance of Passion: so that we see that which Melchisedech offered to God, to be now offered throughout the whole world in the Church of Christ. Againe I say, what did Melchisedech offer, but bread and wine? not the natural body and bloud of Christ. Therefore S. Augustine meaneth plainly, that bread & wine is offred in the Church in remembrance of his passion, not the natural body & bloud of Christ. As also he saith, De ciuit. li. 10. c. 20. He is the Priest himself, he is the offerer, he is the oblation, whereof he would haue the daily sacrifice of the Church to be a sacrament, seeing that of her body he is the head, and of his head she is the body, as well she by him, as he by her, being accustomed to be offered. You see not onely, that this sacrifice is a Sacrament, (that is an holy signe and memoriall, of Christs death) but also that the Church is as wel offred therein by Christ, as Christ by the Church, which must needes be vnderstoode of a spirituall oblation of praise and thankesgiuing, not of propitiation. Leo speaketh manifestly of the death of Christ, and not of the Sacrament, as I haue shewed in Luk. 22. Sect. 5. where also I haue answered to the place of Cyprian. Ep. 63. S. Ambrose de sacramentis li. 5. c. 4. saith, So often as the sacrifice is offered, the death of our Lord, the resurrection of our Lord, the ascention of our Lord is signifyed and remission of sinnes. These words declare, in what sense he calleth the celebration of the sacrament a sacrifice: namely, because thereby is signifyed the death, resurrection, and ascension of Christ, and remission of sinnes. Not that Christes body is truely sacrificed for remission of sinnes. August. in Psal. 33. Con. 2. saith, that Christ did in his body and bloud, institute a sacrifice after the order of Melchisedech. What that was, you haue heard him explane himselfe in other places. Hierom. Epist. 17. saith in the person of Paula and Eustothium, That Melchisedech offered bread and wine in a figure of Christ, & dedicated the Christian mystery in the body and bloud of our Sauiour. Here is nothing, but that Melchisedechs bread and wine was a figure of Christ, and the Sacrament of his body and bloud giuen in bread and wine. Epiphanius Hæres. 55. saith of Christs Priesthod: He offereth to his father a Priesthod hauing receiued substance of mans nature, that he might be made a Priest for vs after the order of Melchisedech, which hath no succession. For he remaineth for euer, offering gifts for vs. And first he offered himselfe, that he might dissolue the sacrifice of the old Testament, seeing he hath offered a more perfect & liuing sacrifice for the whole world, himselfe being the temple, himselfe the sacrifice, himselfe the Priest, himselfe the altar, himselfe God, himselfe man, himselfe king, himselfe high priest, himselfe the sheepe, himselfe the lambe, being made all in all for vs, that he might be made life to vs by all meanes & might performe the immutable stedfastnes of his Priesthod for euer, no more diuiding successions according to seede or generation, but graunting it to be preserued according to iustice, or iustification in the holy Ghost. This place sheweth manifestly, that Christ is a Priest according to the order of Melchisedech, in his owne person onely, wherein he offred sacrifice propitiatorie for our redemption on the Crosse: and hath no succession in that office: although he say before, that from Christ vntill now, the translation of that Priesthod continueth in the Church, while the seede is not chosen according to succession, but a figure is sought according to vertue. Meaning, that the Ministerie of the Church, is not the Priesthod it selfe, but a figure of it, to dispense the vertue thereof by preaching of the word, and ministration of the Sacraments. The rest of the places quoted, be all examined and answered before. By all which you may see, how true it is, that these shamelesse heretikes affirme of all the auncient fathers, and what cause they haue to bestow their Popish priestly blessing vpon vs, because they can not satisfie vs with lies, and false wresting of the fathers from their true meaning. But their blessing shall returne into their owne bosome: and the eternal priesthod of Christ, & the state of the new Testament shal alwaies continue, when Antichrist with his blasphemous priesthod and sacrifice shall be abolished.

RHEM. 9 18 Of the former commandement) The whole law of Moyses conteining all their old Priesthod, sacrifice, sacraments, and ceremonies, is called the Old commandement: and the new Testament conteining the sacrifice of Christs body and bloud, and all the sacraments and graces giuen by the same, is named the New mandatum: for which our forefathers calleth the Thursday in the holy weeke: Maundy thursday, because that in it, the new law and Testament was dedicated in the Chalice of his bloud: the old mandatum, law, Priesthod, and sacrifices for that they were insufficient and vnperfect, being taken away: and this new sacrifice, after the order of Melchisedec, giuen in the place thereof. — The old commandement, and the new. Maundy thursday why so called.

FVLKE. 9 An high mysterie reueiled, why thursday before Easter is called Maunday thursday. And yet I thinke you are able to bring little proofe of it. For a more popish name it had, being called Sheare thursday, because Priests and Clearkes, must shaue their crownes at that day, as the English festiuall saith. That Charitie is called Christs new Commaundement we read often in the Scripture, that the institution of the Supper is so called, the Scripture saith not any where. Therefore whether the common people called that day Maunday thursday of the latine word Mandatum, or of Maundes & baskets, in which was brought to the Church the prouision of the feast which they had in the Church, or of the word mando or manduco that signifieth to eate, or of whatsoeuer, it skilleth not. But we are assured that our Sauiour Christ instituted his Supper, as a seale or pledge of the grace of the new Testament, which was confirmed by his bloud that was shedde on the crosse for remission of sinnes, whereof the cuppe is a Sacrament, and that the old lawe was not taken away by institution of the Sacrament, but by the sacrifice of Christ vpon the crosse. For in the bread and wine of Melchisedech, (although we should graunt it to haue beene a figure of the Sacrament,) there was no shedding of bloud, without which there is no remission of sinnes. Therefore Chriests Priesthod according to the order of Melchisedech, consisteth not in the institution or ministration of the Sacrament, but in blessing or consecrating of his Church, by the bloud of the sacrifice of his death. For other sacrifice propitiatorie, the Scripture doth not declare that Chrih offered. And yet the blasphemous Papists are not afraide to say and and write, that Christs sacrifice on the crosse was not after the order of Melchisedech, but after the order of Aaron. Heskin. lib. 1. c. 13. directly contrary to the whole discourse of the Apostle in this Chapter. Maunday thursday. — The Popish Priesthod.

RHEM. 10 19 The introduction.) Euer obserue, that the abrogation of the old law, is not an abolishing of all Priesthod, but an introduction of a new, conteining the hope of eternal things, where the old had but temporall. — The introduction of a new priesthod.

FVLKE. 10 The new Priesthod that succeedeth the olde, is the eternall Priesthod of Christ. The fathers that liued vnder the Law, had hope of eternall things as we haue, but not by the Law, but by faith in Christ, vnto whom the Law (euen then also) was an introduction.

RHEM. 11 21 With an othe.) This othe signifieth the infallible and absolute promis of the eternitie of the new Priesthod and state of the Church: Christ by his death, and bloud shed in the sacrifice of the Crosse, confirming it, sealing it, and making him selfe the suretie and pledge thereof. For though the new Testament was instituted, giuen, and dedicated in the Supper, yet the warrant, confirmation, and eternal operation thereof, was atchieued vpon the Crosse, in the one oblation and one generall and euerlasting redemption there made. — The eternitie of the new Priesthod confirmed by the fathers othe, and Christ passion.

This

FVLKE. 11 This othe confirmeth the eternall Priesthod of Christ onely, which is the eternall Sonne of God, sitting on the right hand of God the Father. And perteineth to none other, but onely to him of whom the Psalme 110. is made, where the Prophet saith: The Lord said vnto my Lord, sit thou on my right hand, vntill I make thine enemies thy footestoole. Wherefore Antichrist cannot vsurpe the Priesthod of Christ according to the order of Melchisedech, which is to be both a King and a Priest, except he will arrogate the whole Psalme to himselfe and his members. For to whom God sware and said, Thou art a Priest for euer, to him he said, sit thou on my right hand, and the rest that followeth in the Psalme, and he is Dauids sonne & Lord, which is none other, but our Sauiour Christ, of whom the Psalme is to be expounded. For although Dauid had many sonnes, yet Christ onely was his Lord, because he was God. Antichrist therefore granting to his shauelings the Priesthod of Melchisedech, which is proper to Christ both God and man, and preferring himselfe so much before those vile creatures of his, aduanceth himselfe aboue all that is called God, or worshipped. Finally, the sacrifice of Christs death was the act of his eternall Priesthod, whereby the new Testament was established, and no Popish Priesthod or sacrifice. And here marke the impudencie of these Heretikes, which so boldly auouch, that their pretended sacrifice in formes of bread and wine, was the proper acte of Christs Priesthod according to the order of Melchisedech, and that both it, and the immutabilitie of the new Lawe consisteth in it, yet now are driuen to confesse, that sacrifice to haue beene vnperfect, without the sacrifice of Christs death. Which when they affirme to be after Aarons order, it followeth, that a sacrifice after Aarons order, establisheth the sacrifice after Melchisedechs order, and so the newe Testament doth not take away the old, but the old giueth perfection, confirmation, and eternall operation vnto the new. But vnto these absurdities, and blasphemies, they must needes be driuen that maintaine their owne glorie, against the glorie of Christ.

The Popish and christian priesthod.

Antichrist.

RHEM. 12 23 Being many.) The Protestants not vnderstanding this place, seine very foolishly, that the Apostle should make this difference betwixt the old state and the new: that in the old, there were many Priests: in the new, none at all but Christ. which is against the Prophet Esay, specially prophecying of the Priests of the new Testament (as S. Hierom declareth vpon the same place) in these words, You shal be called the *Priests of God: the * ministers of our God, shal it be said to you: and it taketh away all visible Priesthod, and consequently the lawfull state that the Church and Gods people haue in earth, with all Sacraments and externall worship.*

By the comparison of many priests, and one, is not meant that there is but one Priest of the new Testament.

Esa. c. 16. ἱερεῖς ministri.

The Apostle then meaneth first, that the absolute sacrifice of consummation, perfection, & vniuersall redemption, was but one, once done, and by one onely Priest done, and therefore it could not be any of the sacrifices, or all the sacrifices of the Iewes law, or wrought by any or by all of them, because they were a number at once, & succeeding one another, euery of their offices and functions ending by their death, and could not worke such an eternall redemption as by Christ onely was wrought vpon the Crosse. Secondly, S. Paul insinuateth thereupon, that Christ neuer loseth the dignitie or practise of his eternall Priesthod, by death nor otherwise, neuer yeeldeth it vp to any, neuer hath successors after him, that may enter into his roome or right of Priesthod, as Aaron and all other had in the Leuitical Priesthod, but that himselfe worketh and concurreth with his ministers the Priests of the new Testament, in all their actes of Priesthod, as wel of sacrifice as Sacrament, blessing, preaching, praying, and the like whatsoeuer. This therefore was the fault of the Hebrues, that they did not acknowledge their Leuitical sacrifices and Priesthod to be reformed and perfited by Christs sacrifice on the Crosse: and against them the Apostle onely disputeth, and not against our Priests of holy Church, or the number of them, who all confesse their Priesthod and all exercises of the same, to depend vpon Christs only perpetuall Priesthod.

The meaning is that the absolute sacrifice of eternall redemption could not be done by those many Aaronicall priests but by one onely, Christ Iesus: who liueth a Priest for euer, hath no successor, and as chiefe priest, worketh & concurreth with all priests in their priestly functions.

FVLKE. 12 When the Scripture is most plaine and euident for vs, then these wise profound learned men of Rhemes doe impute vnto vs foolishnes, ignorance, want of learning, for applying them to the ouerthrowe of their heresies. But to the matter, we doe not faine, but the Apostle in plaine words doeth make this difference betweene the old Priesthod and the new: that in the old there were many, in the new there is but one, which continueth for euer. But that (say you) is against the Prophet Esay, specially prophecying of the priests of the new Testament. You might as well say, it is against S. Peter. 1. Pet. 2. and S. Iohn. Apoc. 1. affirming, that all true Christians as members of Christ their head, are a spirituall Priesthod, and are spirituall Kings and Priests. For of such speaketh the Prophet Esay, and not of Popish Priests, nor of the Ministers of the Gospell onely: except you will say, that none other appertaine to the Church of Christ, Neither doth Hierom declare, that he prophecieth of the Priestes of the new Testament, when he saith: It signifieth the Princes of the Churches, or at least wise it is to be vnderstood of the Apostles. For neither the Princes of the Churches are, nor the Apostles were sacrificing Priests: But as he saith afterward, You shall be called Priests and Ministers of God, such as the sonnes of Dauid were, of whom the Scripture saith: The sonnes of Dauid were Priests of God. Now it is well knowen, the sonnes of Dauid were no sacrificing Priestes. Therefore S. Hierom meaneth not by Priests, sacrificing Priests, but spirituall Priests, such as all true Israelites are, and the gouernours of the Church especially. So doeth Cyrillus expound the place of the whole Church generally, and particularly of the teachers thereof. This speach (saith he) is had as it were vnto the Church, whose sheepe may be vnderstood the whole multitude of them that are saued by faith. Your other fond petition of the principle, I haue answered before, Sect. 7. Then touching the Apostles meaning, you say, the absolute sacrifice of consummation, perfection, and vniuersall redemption, was but one, once done, & by one holy Priest. What need then haue we of any other sacrificing Priest, but that one?

Secondly you say, S. Paul insinuateth, that Christ neuer loseth the dignitie or practise of his eternall priesthod, by death, resignation, succession or otherwise. Then it followeth, that as he was first onely one, so he remaineth for euer onely priest, and seeing his sacrifice of redemption, was but one, and once done, the practise of his priesthod consisteth not, in repeating or often doing thereof. But (you say) himselfe worketh and concurreth with his ministers, the priests of the new Testament, in all their actes of priesthod, as wel of sacrifice as sacrament, blessing, preaching, praying, & the like whatsoeuer. In actes of their ministerie he concurreth, but priesthod and sacrifice, is the matter in question. For he cannot be the onely priest (if they be many) by concurring in the actes of their priesthod and sacrifice. For he did concurre in the actes of the priesthod, and all the sacrifices of the law, that were faithfully and rightly offred. Yet were the priests of the law many, beside him. So that if there be many priests of the new Testament, there is no difference betweene the new Testament and the old, the priesthod of Aaron, and the priesthod of Melchisedech, in that they were many, and Christ is but one. Therefore, this shift of concurrence, cannot shroud the multitude of popish priests from vsurpation of Christs office, and prerogatiue. For the Apostle writeth, not only against the error of the Hebrewes, but against all heresies, that go about to derogate any thing from the singular priesthod of our Sauiour Christ. Neither will it serue the popish priests to confesse, that there priesthod, and all exercises of the same, doth depend vpon Christes onely perpetuall priesthod. For the same might the Hebrewes iustly confesse, as wel of the Priesthod of Aaron, and all exercises of the same, which were not otherwise auailable, but as they depended vpon Christs onely perpetuall priesthod. Yet the Apostle maketh this difference. They were many, Christ is but one. Hesych. lib. 5. cap. 16. Vnde & saluare in perpetuum potest accedentes per se ad Deum. sic perfectio & omnimoda nostra salus, filius per sacrificium suum factus est.

RHEM. 13 27 This did he once.) This is the special preeminence of Christ, that he offereth for other mens sinnes onely, having none of his owne to offer for, as all other Priests both of the old and new law haue. And this againe is the speciall dignity of his owne person, not communicable to any other of what order of Priesthod soeuer, that he by his death (which is the onely oblation that is by the Apostle declared to be irreiterable in it selfe) paied the one full sufficient ransom for the redemption of all sinnes.

FVLKE. 13 Christ offered but once for sinnes, and found eternall redemption, therefore he offred not any sacrifice in his supper, for sinnes, nor instituted any such sacrifice to be reiterated. Wherefore it is vnpossible, for the popish priesthod and sacrifice of the masse, to stand with the truth of this text. Christs one sacrifice once offred.

CHAP. VIII.

Out of the same Psalme 109. he vrgeth this also, Sit thou on my right hand, shewing that the Leuiticall tabernacle on earth, was but a shadow of his true Tabernacle in heauen: without which he should not be a Priest at all: 6 Whereas he is of a better Priesthod then they, as also he proueth by the excellencie of the new Testament aboue the old.

BVt the summe concerning those things which be said, is: We haue such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the seate of maiestie in the heauens,

2 A minister of the holies, and of the true tabernacle, which our Lord pight and not man.

3 For euery high priest is appointed to offer gifts & hostes, wherefore it is necessary that he also haue some thing that he may offer.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. VIII.

RHEM. 1 2 Minister of the holies.) Christ liuing and reigning in heauen continueth his priestly function stil, and is minister not of Moyses Sancta and tabernacle, but of his owne body and bloud, which be the true holies, and tabernacle, not formed by man, but by Gods owne hand.

FVLKE. 1 Christ is not minister of his body and bloud, by offring the same any more for sinnes, seeing he performed that once for all c.7.v.27. but feeding vs continually, with the vertue of that sacrifice, that being incorporate vnto him, we might alwaies continne members of his body. The vertue of Christes sacrifice eternall.

RHEM. 2 If that former.) The promises and effectes of the Law were temporall, but the promises and effectes of Christes Sacraments in the Church be eternall.

FVLKE. 2 The promises and effects of the old testament, were imperfect (though they were of eternal things,) without the accomplishment of Christs priesthod in the new testament, whereunto they had relation.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. VIII.

RHEM. 3 3 Necessarie that he also.) Euen now being in heauen, because he is a Bishop and Priest, he must needes haue somewhat to offer, and wherein to do sacrifice: and that not in spiritual sort onely, for that could not make him a Priest of any certaine order. And it is most false and wicked, to hold with the Caluinistes, that Melchisedechs Priesthod was wholy spiritual. For then Christs death was not a corporal, external, visible, and truely named sacrifice: neither could Christ or Melchisedec be any otherwise a Priest, then euery faithfull man is: which to hold (as the Caluinists following their owne doctrine must needes do) is directly against the Scriptures, and no lesse against Christs one oblation of his body vpon the Crosse, then it is against the daily sacrifice of his body vpon the altar. Therefore he hath a certaine host in external and proper maner, to make perpetual oblation thereby in the Church: for, visible and external act of sacrificing in heauen he doth not exercise. Christs priesthod & sacrifice is external, not spiritual only. * Beza schol. Test. Graecolat. in c.7. Heb. num.3.

FVLKE. 3 The Apostle saith not, that Christ must offer sacrifice in heauen: but the truth of the text is, Seeing euerie priest hath gifts to offer, it is necessary, that he hath somewhat which he offred: for the verbe προσενεγκη is not of the present time, but of the time past, and signifieth the oblation which he offered but once c.7.27. So doth Theodoret expound the text, saying: It is the propertie of an high Priest, to offer gifts to God of all thinges. For this cause, the onely begotten sonne, being made man, when he had taken vpon him our nature, he offered the same for vs. Chrysostome also Hom.14.ad Heb. vpon this text, saith. Because some asked, wherefore he died, he saith, because he was an high priest. For an high Priest is not without a sacrifice. Christs onely, priesthod and sacrifice.

S. Ambrose likewise, referreth his offering to his onely oblation on the crosse, saying. It is necessarie that our Sauiour in the daies of his flesh, had something to offer for vs. For while in the eternal nature of his godhead he had nothing which he might offer he tooke of vs that which he might offer for vs, that is his mans flesh. For what is so apt for sacrifice as mortall flesh, for mortal men? The same wordes in effect, hath Primasius saying, he tooke of vs, that he offred for vs, that is mans flesh, namely himselfe, whom he offred in the aultar of the crosse. Oecumenius saith, He had his owne flesh, which also he offred. Theophylact saith. He hath all things proper to the high priests, as they offer, so he offred himselfe. Againe, Seeing he was a priest and a priest is not without sacrifice, it is necessarie, that he also had something to offer, And that was nothing, but his owne body, therefore it was necessarie, that he died. Against this generall consent of all the ancient interpretors, you faine, that Christ offreth a sacrifice propitiatory, now being in heauen. And you do vnhonestly slander Caluin, and Beza, to hold that Melchisedechs priesthod was only spiritual, as the spirituall priesthod of all the faithfull is, for they hold no such thing. But that Melchisedechs priesthod was figuratiue, hauing a spiritual relation, to Christes eternal priesthod. Finally, as Christ doth not exercise any visible or externall act of sacrificing in heauen, so much lesse, doth he exercise any visible or externall act of sacrificing on earth. Neither by this text, hath he any such certaine host, in external or proper maner, to make perpetuall oblation thereby in the Church. For that which he had to sacrifice for sinne, in offering himselfe he performed once vpon the crosse, the vertue whereof continueth alwaies, and therefore needs not, in any sort to be reiterated.

RHEM. 4 4 If vpon the earth.) It is by his death, and resurrection to life againe, that his body is become apt and fitte in such diuine sort to be sacrificed perpetually. For if he had liued in mortal sort still, that way of mystical representation of breaking his body and separating the bloud from the same, could not haue beene agreeable, and so the Church and Christian people should haue lacked a priesthod and sacrifice, and Christ himselfe should not haue beene a Priest of a peculiar order, but either must haue offered in the thinges that Aarons Priestes did, or els haue beene no Priest at all. For, to haue offered onely spiritually, as all faithfull men doe, that could not be enough for his vocation, and our redemption, and state of the newe Testament. How his flesh was made fit to be offered and eaten in the B. Sacrament, by his death, see Isychius li.1. in leuit. c.2. How Christs body is made fit to be sacrificed and eaten perpetually.

FVLKE. 4 After Christ by his one sacrifice, once offered, hath entred into the holiest place which is heauen, he exerciseth his continual priesthod, in presenting his Church before God, and in making continual intercession for vs: but not in offering any more sacrifice, for that he did once, and found eternall redemption. By the sacrifice of his death therefore, his flesh and bloud, are made meate and drinke to feede vs spiritually, both in the sacrament and without it, but not to be offered in the masse, neither doth Hesychius tell, how his flesh was made fit to be offered, but to be eaten in the B. sacrament, for these are his wordes. The crosse of Christ was so stronge, that it subdued euery creature to him that was crucified: and made his flesh meete for meate by his passion, which before his passion, was vnfit to be eaten, for who desired to eate the flesh of God? For if he had not beene crucified, we should not haue eaten the sacrifice of his body: But now we eate that meate, receiuing the memory of his passion: you see euidently, that he saith, by crucifying, the flesh of Christ is made apt to be eated, not to be sacrificed any more. But as in the old testament, after the beast was sacrificed, the people were partakers of the sacrifice by eating thereof, so we are partakers of the sacrifice of Christes bodie, by eating thereof continually, not by offering it any more. The sacrifice of Christ.

RHEM. 5 5 Heauenly thinges.) As the Church or state of the newe Testament is commonly called Regnum cœlorum & Dei, in the Scriptures, so these heauenly thinges be probably taken by learned men, for the mysteries of the new Testament. And it seemeth that the paterne giuen to Moyses to frame his tabernacle by, was the Church, rather then the heauens them- Kingdome of heauen, and heauenly thinges, spoken of the Church.

themselues: al S. Paules discourse tending to shew the difference betwixt the new Testament and the old, and not to make comparison betweene the state of heauen and the old law. Though incidently, because the condition of the new Testament more neerely resembleth the same, then the old state doth, he sometime may speake somewhat thereof also.

FVLKE.6 The Apostle cap.9.11.24. sheweth, that the paterne giuen to Moyses, to frame the tabernacle by, was Christ, and the kingdome of heauen it selfe, not the church which is not properly, but figuratiuely, called the kingdome of heauen: because Christ beginneth his raigne, in the faithfull therein, whom afterward he translateth actually, into the kingdome of heauen, where he is present in his humanitie. Therefore, those learned men, might learne of the Apostle, how to take these heauenly thinges principally of Christ, and his heauenlie throne, vnto which the heauenly mysteries of the Church do serue, and in that respect, are compted heauenly things, although they be done vpon the earth. And the excellencie of the newe Testament, consisteth principally, in the excellencie of Christs priesthood, whereby it is consecrated and established.

RHEM.7 10 Into their minde.) This also and the rest following is fulfilled in the Church, and is the proper effect of the new Testament, which is the grace and spirit of loue, graffed in the harts of the faithfull by the holy Ghost, working in the Sacraments and sacrifice of the new law to that effect. Grace the effect of the new Testament.

FVLKE.7 The sacrifice of Christes death, is sufficient to worke this effect by his holy spirit, when his word is preached, and his Sacraments are administred, without any other sacrifice. The sacrifice of Christes death.

RHEM.8 10 Their God.) This mutuall couenant made betwixt God and the faithful, is that which was dedicated and established, first in the chalice of his bloud, called therefore the new Testament in his bloud: and which was straight after ratified by the death of the testator, vpon the Crosse. The new Testament or couenant betweene God and man. Luc.22.

FVLKE.8 The new Testament was established, onely by the death and bloudshedding of Christ on the crosse, and not by the chalice or cuppe of the new Testament, which was onely a sacrament and figure thereof. Heb.9.11.12. The new Testament established by the death of Christ. Scriptures abused for phantastical inspirations.

RHEM.9 11 Shal not teach.) So it was in the primitiue Church, in such specially as were the first founders of our new state in Christ. And that which was verified in the Apostles and other principal men, the Apostle speaketh generally as though it were so in the whole, as S. Peter applieth the like out of Ioel, and our Sauiour so speaketh, when he saith that such as beleeue in him shall worke myracles of diuers sorts. Christian men then must not abuse this place to make challenge of newe inspirations and so great knowledge that they neede no Scriptures or teaching in this life, as some Heretikes doe: with much like reason and shew of Scriptures as the Protestants haue to refuse external sacrifice. And it is no lesse phantastical madnesse to denie external sacrifice, Sacraments, or Priesthod, then it is to abolish teaching and preaching. Act.2.10. 14.v.12.

FVLKE.9 The Prophet and the Apostle meane, that all true members of the Church, shal know God by his spirite, which is not otherwise to be knowen, not excluding the external ministerie of teaching, by which both the ignorant are brought to knowledge, and they that haue knowledge of God, do increase therein, but declaring that there shal be no more such grosse ignorance of God as possessed the world, commonly before the comming of Christ. But where you say the Anabaptists, and other like heretikes, do reiect the scriptures, & office of teaching, with much like reason and shew of scriptures, as the Protestants refuse externall sacrifice, it hath no colour of reason, or similitude. For the necessitie of the scriptures, and external ministerie of teaching, is established by very many most plaine testimonies of the Scripture, whereas your external sacrifice hath no testimony at all in the word of God, but many arguments against it.

CHAP. IX.

In the old Testament, that secular Sanctuarie had two parts: the one signifying that time, with the ceremonies thereof for the emundation of the flesh: the other signifying heauen, which then was shut, vntill our high priest Christ entred into it, and that with his owne bloud, shed for the emundation of our consciences. Whereupon he concludeth the excellencie of his tabernacle and host aboue the old. 25 Noting also the difference, that he entred but once (so effectual was that one blouddie offering of himselfe, for euer) whereas the Leuiticall High priest entred euery yeere once.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. IX.

RHEM. 1 8 Not yet manifested.) The way to heauen was not open before Christes Passion, and therefore the Patriarches and good men of the olde Testament were in some other place of rest vntill then.

FVLKE. 1 Heauen was not opened by the sacrifices of the first tabernacle, but by the passion of Christ, whose vertue as it extended to the beginning of the world, to take away the sinnes of the faithfull, and to iustifie them by faith: so it was auaileable to giue them rest in heauen in their soules. Which is the reward of righteousnesse, vntill the time came, when they shall wholy enter into it with their bodies also, as our Sauiour Christ did: which was the first that entred with his body into perfect glory of heauen. The soules of the faithfull in heauen.

RHEM. 2 19 Water.) Here we may learne that the Scriptures conteine not all necessarie rites or truthes, when neither the place to which the Apostle alludeth, nor any other, mentioneth halfe these ceremonies, but he had them by tradition.

FVLKE. 2 Here is nothing but that which is conteined in the Scripture. For the booke was doubtlesse laid vpon the aultar, which was sprinckled, from whence Moyses tooke it. Exod.24. Or at lest it was sprinckled with the resperſion that was cast vpon the whole people. Now for the vse of sprinckling, there must needes be some instrument, which is described by Moyses, Leuit.14. to be made of Cedar wood, and scarlet wooll, and hyssope, and the bloud to be powred vpon water. And this was the order of all such aspersions, which is described in the purging of the Leper. And that the bloud of Goates, is comprehended vnder the peace offerings mentioned Exod.24. you may see Leuit.3.12. Therefore here was no neede of tradition for any of these ceremonies. Vnwritten traditions.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IX.

RHEM. 3 4 A golden pot.) The Protestants count it superstitious to keepe with honour and reuerence the holy memories or monuments of Gods benefites and myracles, or the tokens of Christes Passion, as his Crosse, garments, or other things appertaining to him or his Saincts, and thinke it impossible that such things should dure so long: when they may here see the reuerent and long reseruation of Manna, which of it selfe was most apt to putrifie, and of Aarons rod, onely for that it sodenly florished by myracle, the tables of the Testament, &c. See a notable place in S. Cyrill li.6. cont. Iulian. where he defendeth against Iulian the Apostates blasphemie, the keeping and honouring of that Crosse or wood which Christ died on. See also S. Paulinus ep.11. and what reuerence S. Hierome and the faithfull of his time did to the sepulchres of Christ and his Martyrs, and to their relikes. We reuerence and worship (saith he) euery where Martyrs sepulchres, and putting the holy ashes to our eies, if we may, we touch it with our mouth also: and do some thinke, that the monument wherein our Lord was buried, is to be neglected? But our Protestants cannot skill of this. they had rather folow Vigilantius, Iulianus the Apostata, and such Maisters, then the holy Doctors and euident practise of the Church in all ages. They continue without putrefaction. The holy CROSSE. The sepulchres of Christ and his Saincts. Ep.17.c.5.

FVLKE. 3 When we haue a commandement for the reseruation of such things, as the Israelites had for Aarons rod, Num.17.10. and for the pot of Manna, Exod.16,34. we will likewise reserue them, and beleeue that they will continue to the worlds end. Yet will we not worship them nor shew them, which the godly Israelites did not because they had no commandement for it. But contrariwise, when the brasen serpent, which was a monument of a great miracle, and a figure of Christ was abused in being worshipped and made an idoll, it was broken in pieces by Ezechias, 2.Reg.18,14. and thought to be no more priuileged then the golden calfe which Moyses serued with the like sauce, Exod.32.20. Thus thinke we of the holiest reliques abused to idolatrie. But Cyrillus you say against Iulian, defendeth the keeping and honouring of that Crosse or wood which Christ died on, where he speaketh of neither of both: but defendeth the making of the signe of the Crosse on the foreheads, and painting it before their houses, whereby Iulian said, they adored the wood of the Crosse. Cyrillus saith, They vsed it onely to put them in remembrance of the death of Christ, and the fruites of his Passion. But as for keeping of the wood it selfe, or the honouring of it (which S. Ambrose saith to be an Heathenish errour, and vanity of the vngodly. De obitu Theodos.) Cyrillus speaketh nothing. But by that which Iulian obiecteth, you may well see, they had no images in their Churches, no not of the Crosse of Christ. For if they had, Iulian would not haue spared to haue charged them withall, as he doth with the signe of the Crosse painted before their houses. Paulinus in deede, if that Epistle be not counterfeit, was perswaded that he had a piece of that Crosse whereon Christ died, brought to him by Melania and sent by his wife Theoasia to his reuerend sister Bassula who was mother to the wife of Seuerus, of the gift of Iohn Bishop of Hierusalem, but of this matter, as of the other place quoted out of Hierome, I haue spoken sufficiently in other places, namely, In Ioan 19 sect.2. The crosse and signe thereof. Relikes. Images.

RHEM. 4 5 Cherubins.) You see it is a fond thing, to conclude vpon the first or second commandement, that there should be no sacred ſacred images in the Church, when euen among theſe people that were muſt prone to idolatrie, and groſſe in imagination of ſpirituall things ſuch as Angels are, and to whom the precept was ſpecially giuen, the ſame God that forbad them grauen idols, did commaund theſe images of Angels to be made and ſet in the ſoueraigne holieſt place of all the tabernacle or Temple. By which it is plaine, that much more the images of Chriſt and his Mother and Saincts, that may be more truely pourtered then mere ſpirituall ſubſtances can be, are not contrarie to Gods commaundement, nor againſt his honour, or repugnant to any other Scripture at all, which condemne onely the idols or pourtraitures of the Heathen made for adoration of falſe Gods.

Images in Salomons temple commaunded by God.

FVLKE. 4 It is a fond thing with you to conclude, that Gods commaundement is to be obſerued, which forbiddeth vs to make to our ſelues, any grauen images. Becauſe God himſelfe commaunded theſe Images of Angels to be made, and ſet in the ſoueraigne holieſt place of all the tabernacle or temple. As though God forbidding vs to make any images to our ſelues, that is, according to our owne fantaſie and appointment in his ſeruice, had reſtrained himſelfe to commaund and appoint ſuch figures or ſhapes as he thought meete for his tabernacle. Or as though by this particular commandement of God, men were diſcharged of the generall lawe, and were at libertie to doe at their pleaſure that which God expreſly forbiddeth to be done, except at his appointment onely. But it is not onely a fond, but a wicked concluſion, that becauſe theſe images of Cherubins were made and ſet vp by Gods commandement, therefore much more the images of Chriſt his mother and ſaints may be made and ſet in the Churches, which God hath not commaunded but forbidden to be made, to any vſe of religion. Againe, thoſe Cherubins were ſet in the holieſt place, where they were neuer ſeene of the people, therefore out of danger of idolatrie, your images are not onely ſet openly in Churches, but commaunded to bee worſhipped. That onely the idoles of the Heathen are forbidden, it is a vaine cauil: for the commaundement is generall. not onely againſt the images of the Heathen that were made for any vſe of religion, but alſo againſt the like images of all heretikes, as of Simon Magus, of the Carpocratians and Gnoſticks, which had the image of Ieſus and Paule, Homere, Pythagoras and others. Epiph. hær. 24. of the Melchiſedechians in Arabia, that worſhipped the image of Moyſes, Epiph. hær. 55. Hier.* and of the Papiſts which in idolatry by imagerie, exceede all other heretikes, and are as ill as the Paganes.

RHEM. 5 10 Vntill the time of correction.) All theſe groſſe and carnal ſacrifices, ceremonies, and obſeruations inſtituted to cleanſe and purifie the fleſh from legall irregularities and impurities onely, and not reaching to the purging of the ſoules and conſciences of men, being commaunded not for euer, but till Chriſtes comming, ceaſed then: and better, more forcible, & more ſpiritual Sacraments were inſtituted in their place. For we may not imagine Chriſt to haue taken away the old, and put none in their place: or to alter the ſacraments onely into other ſacraments externall, and not alſo to tranſlate the ſacrifices to ſome other more excellent. for it is called, Tempus correctionis, non abolitionis ſacrificij aut legis: the time of correction not of aboliſhing ſacrifice or law. Neither haue they more reaſon to affirme Chriſtes one oblation vpon the Croſſe to haue rather taken away al kind of ſacrifice, then al maner of Sacraments. The time and ſtate of the new Teſtament is not made lawleſſe, hoſtleſſe, or without ſacrifice, but it is the time of correction or reformation and abettering al the foreſaide things.

Sacrifice not taken away by the new Teſtament, but changed into a better.

FVLKE. 5 The one ſacrifice of Chriſtes death is ſucceeded in ſtead of all the legall ſacrifices, but not in ſtead of the old Sacraments, becauſe it is no Sacrament but the thing ſignified by al Sacraments. And this is a ſufficient reaſon why Chriſtes one oblation on the croſſe, doth not take away all kind of Sacraments, as it doth all kinde of propitiatorie ſacrifices for ſinne. Neither is the ſtate of the new Teſtament without ſacrifice, ſeeing that one ſacrifice once offred, is of eternall vertue to reconcile all the elect of God for euer. See the next ſection.

Sacrifice. Sacraments.

RHEM. 6 12 Eternal redemption.) No one of the ſacrifices, nor all the ſacrifices of the old law, could make that one generall price, ranſome, and redemption of all mankind, and of all ſinnes, ſauing this one higheſt Prieſt Chriſt, and the one ſacrifice of his bloud once offered vpon the Croſſe. Which ſacrifice of redemption cannot be often done, becauſe Chriſt could not die but once. though the figures alſo thereof in the lawe of nature and of Moyſes, were truely called ſacrifices, as ſpecially this high and maruelous commemoration of the ſame in the holy Sacrament of the altar, according to the rite of the new Teſtament, is moſt truely and ſingularly (as S. Auguſtine calleth it) a ſacrifice. But neither this ſort, nor the other of the old law, being often repeated and done by many Prieſts (all which were and are ſinners themſelues) could be the general redeeming and conſummating ſacrifice: nor any one of thoſe Prieſts, nor all the Prieſts togither, either of the law of Nature or of Aarons, or Melchiſedecks order (except Chriſt alone) could be the generall redeemers of the world.

One onely ſacrifice on the Croſſe the redemption of the world: and one onely prieſt (Chriſt) the redeemer thereof. Lib. de Sp. & lit. c. 11.

And this is the Apoſtles meaning in al this compariſon and oppoſition of Chriſtes death to the old ſacrifices, & of Chriſt to their Prieſts: and not that Chriſts death or ſacrifice of the Croſſe ſhould take away al ſacrifices, or proue that thoſe Aaronical offices were no true ſacrifices at all, nor thoſe Prieſts, verily Prieſts. They were true Prieſts and true ſacrifices, though none of thoſe ſacrifices were the high, capit all, and general ſacrifice of our price and redemption: nor none of them, or of thoſe Prieſts, could without reſpect of this one ſacrifice of Chriſtes death, worke any thing to Gods honour, or remiſſion of ſinnes, as the Iewes did falſely imagine, nor referring them at all to this general redemption and remiſſion by Chriſt, but thinking them to be abſolute ſacrifices in themſelues. And that to haue bene the errour of the Hebrues, you may read in S. Auguſtine, li. 3. doct. Chriſt. c. 5. And this, we tel the Proteſtants, is the onely purpoſe of the Apoſtle.

The Apoſtles diſputation being onely againſt the errour of the Iewes concerning their ſacrifices and prieſts: the Proteſtants applying it againſt the ſacrifice of the Maſſe and prieſts of the new Teſtament.

But they be ſo groſſe, or ignorant in the Scriptures, and ſo maliciouſly ſet againſt Gods and the Churches truth, that they perwerſly and fooliſhly turne the whole diſputation againſt the ſacrifice of the B. Maſſe, and the Prieſtes of the new Teſtament: as though he held, that the ſacrifice of the altar were the general redemption or redeeming ſacrifice, or that it had no relation to Chriſtes death, or that it were not the repreſentation and moſt lively reſemblance of the ſame, or were not inſtituted and done to apply in particular to the vſe of the partakers, that other general benefit of Chriſtes one oblation vpon the Croſſe. Againſt the Iewes then onely S. Paul diſputeth, and againſt the falſe opinion they had of their Prieſts and ſacrifices, to which they attributed all remiſſion and redemption, without reſpect of Chriſtes death.

FVLKE. 6 Seeing eternall redemption is found by that one ſacrifice on the croſſe, there remaineth now no more ſacrifice for ſinne, therefore the Lords ſupper is not a ſacrifice for ſinne, but a thankeſgiuing, for that onely ſingular ſacrifice, in which ſenſe the fathers often call it a ſacrifice, and S. Auguſtine moſt manifeſtly in the place quoted. For his wordes are theſe: The worſhip of God doeth conſiſt moſt of all in this, that the ſoule of man bee not vnthankefull to him. Therefore in that moſt true, and in that ſingular ſacrifice, we are admoniſhed to giue thankes to the Lord our God. You ſee plainly he calleth it a moſt true and ſingular ſacrifice of thankeſgiuing, for the onely true, and vnſacrificable ſacrifice of propitiation for ſinne, prouing thereby that religion or the worſhip of God, doeth now conſiſt moſt eſpecially in thankeſgiuing, which were not true if the Lordes ſupper were a ſacrifice propitiatory for ſinnes. But the fathers knew no ſacrifice propitiatory, but onely the ſacrifice of Chriſtes death, whereby all externall ſacrifices of the law are taken away with the prieſthood thereof, which is tranſlated slated into the person of our Sauiour onely: not as false sacrifices or priests, but as figures and shadowes of the onely priest and onely sacrifice. Therefore the Apostle doeth not dispute onely against the errour of the Iewes, that thought their priesthood and sacrifices to be absolute in themselues, and sufficient for redemption, without the sacrifice of Christ (for none of the christian Hebrewes, did so think) though many obstinate Iewes did, of whom S. Augustin speaketh, But he disputeth also & more properly against them, that thought the Iewish priesthood and sacrifice might stand still and be exercised as they were before, with relation vnto Christes death, and fetching their vertue from the only priesthood and sacrifice of Christ. And therfore you tel the Protestants a false tale, when you say, that is the only purpose of the Apostle. For he standeth not so much in prooving that the olde priesthood and sacrifices had no vertue but from Christ, as he doeth to declare, that they being figures and shadowes, must giue place and cease, now the body, truth, and light it selfe is come. Neither are we so grosse or ignorant in the Scriptures, to turne the whole disputation, against the popish priesthood and sacrifice of the masse as you imagine. But seeing these reasons and arguments by which the Apostle proueth, that the old priesthood and sacrifices are at an end, do as well (and much rather) exclude your false priesthod and sacrifice as they did, that lawfull priesthood with the sacrifices of the old Testament: we vse the Apostles arguments, as it is meete for them that know the right vse of the Scriptures, to ouerthrow your blasphemous priesthood and sacrifice. As our fathers by the like testimonies of Scriptures ouerthrew the foolish priesthood and sacrifice of the Collyridians, which they might as well say, were meant onely against the Gentiles, as you say the Apostles purpose is onely against the error of the Iewes. But you haue very good reasons to proue that this disputation of the Apostle toucheth not your priesthood and sacrifice. By which the Herbrewes might as well proue, that their priesthood and sacrifice might still continue. For you hold not that the sacrifice of the aultar is the generall redemption or redeeming sacrifice. No more did they that were Christians, nor any faithfull Iew before the comming of Christ in the flesh. Secondly, you hold, that your sacrifice hath relation to Christes death, so did the Christian Hebrewes and all the godly Iewes before them hold of their sacrifices. Thirdly, You hold that it is the representation and most liuely resemblance of the same. So were all the sacrifices propitiatorie of the law, in the iudgement of all faithfull and Christian Iewes. Fourthly, you hold, That it was instituted and is done to apply in particular to the vse of the receiuers, that other generall benefite of Christs one oblation vpon the crosse. And all faithfull Iewes and Christian Hebrewes held the same of the institution, practise and vse of the olde sacrifices, therefore they might still vse them, with as good and better reason then you may set vp a new sacrifice without any word of God to warrant it. But notwithstanding they helde in these pointes of their sacrifices, as you say yon doe of yours, yet the Apostles purpose is to proue, that those sacrifices must now no more be vsed, because Christ hath accomplished whatsoeuer was by them prefigured, by his one oblation on the crosse, hauing found eternall redemption, and made perfect for euer those that are sanctified. Therefore your vnderstanding is either very grosse, or you are maliciously blind in the Scriptures, that can see no arguments of the Apostle, for the abrogation of the Iewish priesthood, and sacrifices propitiatorie, (though they were vsed according to their right institution) by the priesthood and sacrifice of Christ: but affirme, that the Apostle disputeth onely against the incredulous Iewes, and their false opinion of their priesthood and sacrifices, to be sufficient without Christ.

RHEM. 7 15 Of those preuarications.) The Protestants do vnlearnedly imagine, that because all sinnes be remitted by the force of Christes passion, that therefore there should be no other sacrifice after his death. Whereas in deede they might as well say, there ought neuer to haue bene sacrifice appointed by God, either in the law of Nature, or of Moyses: as all their argu-ments made against the Sacrifice of the Church vpon the Apostles discourse, proue as well, or rather onely, that there were no sacrifices of Aarons order or Leuitical order at all. For against the Iewes false opinion concerning them, doeth he dispute, and not a word touching the sacrifice of the Church, vnto which in all this discourse he neuer opposeth Christs sacrifice vpon the Crosse: al Christian men wel knowing that the host and oblation of those two, though they differ in maner and external forme, yet is indeed al one.

The Apostle then sheweth here plainly, that al the sinnes that euer were remitted since the beginning of the world, were no otherwise forgiuen, but by the force and in respect of Christes Passion, Yet it foloweth not therepon, that the oblation of Abel, Abraham, Aaron, &c. were no sacrifices, as by the Heretikes fooliſh deduction it should do: S. Paul not opposing Christes Passion to them, for the intent to proue them to haue bene no sacrifices, but to proue that they were not absolute sacrifices, nor the redeeming or consummating Sacrifice, which could not be many, nor done by many Priests, but by one, and at one time, by a more excellent Priest then any of them, or any other mere mortal man.

And that you may see the blasphemous pride and ignorance of Caluine, and in him, of all his fellowes: read (so many as may read Heretical bookes) his commentarie vpon this place, and there you shall see him gather vpon this, that Christes death had force from the beginning and was the remedie for all sinnes since the creation of the worlde, therefore there must be no moe but that one sacrifice of Christes death. Which must needes by his deduction hold (as it doth in deede) no lesse against the olde sacrifices then the new sacrifice of the Church, and so take away all, which is against the Apostles meaning and all re-ligion.

Caluins argument against the sacrifice of the altar, maketh no lesse against the sacrifices of the old Law. Christes onely sacrifice for sins.

FVLKE. 7 The fooliſh Protestants which know nothing but Iesus Christ and him crucified, doe vnlearnedly, but yet truely beleeue, that because all sinnes are remitted by force of Christes sacrifice once offred on the crosse, that therefore there should be none other sacrifice propitiatorie for sinne after his death. But the wise and learned papists, which know much more of this matter then God hath reuealed in his word, doe thinke That we might as well say, that there ought neuer to haue bene sacrifice appointed by God. Yes say we, before that only propitiatory sacrifice was offered by Christ on the crosse, God thought meet to appoint diuers figuratiue sacrifices to foreshew the same. Which al were effectual by the death of Christ, to assure them of reconciliation and remission of sinnes. Neither doth any argument that we make against popish sacrifice, proue that there were no sacrifices of Aarons order, or the Leuitical law. And I haue proued before, that the Apostle doth not dispute, only against the false opinion which the vnbeleeuing Iewes had of them, but also against the false opinion that Christian Iewes might conceiue of their continuance after the death of Christ. But he doth neuer in all his discourse (say you) oppose Christes sacrifice vpon the Crosse, to the sacrifice of the Church, so you call the sacrifice of the masse. And that proueth very wel, that the Church had no such sacrifice in his time, for if it had, he ought in this discourse to haue declared how that sacrifice might stand with the onely sacrifice of Christes death. As the fathers that followed in those times when the Lordes supper was vnproperly called a sacrifice, do shew that it is a memorie of a sacrifice, rather then a sacrifice in deede, and a sacrifice of thankesgiuing, not a sacrifice propitiatorie. And although the Apostle doeth not name the sacrifice of the masse, which was not inuented manie hundred yeeres after his death, yet he doth so often and in so playne maner, proue that the sacrifice of Christes death is but one, and once offered by him selfe, and of eternall vertue for full redemption, that the holye

Ghost

Ghost directing his stile, he doeth as strongly arme the Church against that blasphemous priesthood and sacrifice of Antichrist, as he doth purposely prooue the abrogation and ceassing of the Iewish priesthood and sacrifices, by the onely priesthood and sacrifice of Christes death. As for the difference in maner of oblation will not helpe you, for the Apostle saith expresse, that that once sacrifice could be but once offered, and in that onely maner, by shedding of bloud, and death of the priest himselfe. And if Christ should haue offered himselfe often, he should haue died often, as it is most plaine in the fiue and twentith verse, and so to the end of this chapter. Therefore your fantastical maner of offering his body and bloud in the formes of bread and wine, can neuer stand with the Apostles words and plaine meaning. That the sacrifices of Abell, Abraham, Aaron, &c. were no sacrifices, it followeth not by any deduction of ours, for we confesse they were sacrifices, figuratiue of the sacrifice of Christ, and so doth Caluine alwayes acknowledge in his commentaries, and in the place whither you send men, as it were, to see a miracle. For what deduction is this in your logike? The sacrifice of Christes death is the onely true propitiatorie sacrifice whereby God was reconciled: ergo there were neuer any sacrifices that were shaddowes and figures thereof. It is not therefore your railing of Caluins blasphemous pride and ignorance, without al colour of reason, that will vphold your Antichristian priesthood, for which you haue no word of God, but many wordes of God against it. Therefore this argument of Caluine shall still holde against your popish sacrifice, and maketh nothing against the figuratiue sacrifices of the law.

Slander.

RHEM. 8 20 This is the bloud.) Christes death was necessarie for the full confirmation, ratification, and accomplishment of the new Testament, though it was begonne to be dedicated in the sacrifice of his last supper, being also within the compasse of his Passion. Which is euident by the wordes pronounced by Christ ouer the holy chalice, which be correspondent to the words that were spoken (as the Apostle here declareth) in the first sacrifice of the dedication of the old law, hauing also expresse mention of remission of sinnes therby, as by the bloud of the new Testament. Whereby it is plaine, that the B. Chalice of the altar hath the very sacrificall bloud in it that was shed vpon the Crosse, in and by which, the new Testament (which is the law of spirite, grace, and remission) was dedicated, and doth consist. And therefore it is also cleere, that many diuine things, which to the Heretikes or ignorant may seeme to be spoken onely of Christes sacrifice vpon the Crosse, be in deede verified and fulfilled also in the sacrifice of the altar. Whereof S. Paul for the causes aforesaid would not treate in plaine termes. See Isychius li. 1. in Leuit. c. 4 paulo post initium, applying al these things to the immolation of Christ also in the Sacrament.

The correspondence of words in dedicating both Testaments proueth the real presence of bloud in the Chalice.

FVLKE. 8 The Apostle ioyneth shedding of bloud with death, and therefore the new Testament was not dedicated by the sacrament of the bloud of Christ, but by the bloud of Christ shed at his death. And although the institution of the sacrament was within the compasse of his passion, in respect of the time, because it was in the same night in which he was deliuered after he had been betraied, yet was the sacrament no part of his passion, and therefore the new Testament was not begun to be dedicated by it. Neither do the words pronounced by our sauiour Christ of the cup, declare any such matter, but that the cup is a sacrament of the new Testament, which is established by the shedding of his bloud on the crosse. Therefore he saith, This is my bloud of the new testament, which is all one in sense with these words, This is the new testament in my bloud, which is shed for you. But neither the cup nor that which was conteined in it, was the new testament, which is the same that the Apostle expressed before chap. 8. but an holy signe, sacrament or memoriall of the same. So the sense is cleere, that the cup is a sacrament of the bloud of Christ, and of the new testament, confirmed therby, being no more the bloud of Christ it selfe, then it is the new testament it selfe, seeing the like speech is of the one and of the other, This is my bloud, This is the new testament in my bloud. The expresse mention of remission of sinnes is referred to the bloud of Christ shed vpon the crosse, and not to the sacrament of his bloud conteined in the cup. Therefore he saith, Which is shed for many vnto remission of sinnes. But the bloud of Christ was not shed in the supper, but in his passion. Againe, the supper was effectuall only to them that receiued it faithfully, the bloud of Christ shed on the crosse was auailable for the sinnes of all the elect, which were not yet borne. Therefore the cup did not conteine the bloud it selfe, but a sacrament of that bloud which was shed on the crosse. Finally, when the Apostle saith so expressly, that Christ offered not himselfe often, but once only, he offered not himselfe in the supper, except you will say he offered not himselfe on the crosse. And therefore that which is spoken of the sacrifice of Christs death, cannot be verified of any other sacrifice, nor of the supper, but sacramentally, as it is a figure and remembrance of that only sacrifice.

The sacrifice of Christs death.

Therefore Hesychius in the place quoted, meaneth no more but that Christ by institution of his supper, to be a memoriall of his death, declared that he did willingly offer himselfe to his father, to die for the people, and preuented the malice of his enemies which sought his death. And alluding to the phrase of filling their hands that were consecrated priests, he saith that Christes hands were filled, first in the mysticall supper, when he tooke bread and brake it, and after by the crosse, when he was nailed to the tree. For then (saith he) taking vpon him the dignitie of priesthood, or rather, then fulfilling it in worke, when he alwaies had it, he dedicated that sacrifice, which was for vs. Therfore as the filling of the priests hands was a signe of their consecration vnto the priesthod, so was the institution of the supper a sacrament of the consecration of Christs priesthod, which was in worke and deed accomplished only on the Crosse. Hesychius therefore doth not apply those things that were proper to the sacrifice of Christs death to his sacramentall offering of himselfe in the supper.

RHEM. 9 23 The examplers.) All the offices, places, vessels, and instruments of the old law, were but figures and resemblances of the state and sacraments of the new Testament, which are here called celestials, for that they are the liuely image of the heauenly state next ensuing: which be therefore specially dedicated and sanctified in Christs bloud, sacrificed on the altar, and sprinkled vpon the faithful, as the old figures and people were cleansed by the bloud of beasts. And therefore by a transition vsuall in the holy Scriptures, the Apostle sodenly passeth in the sentence immediately following, and turneth his talke to Christs entrance into heauen, the state whereof, both by the Sacraments of the old law, and also more specially by them of the new, is prefigured.

In the old Testament were figures of the new: in the new, is resemblance of the heauenly state.

FVLKE. 9 The offices, places, vessels, and ceremonies of the old law were figures of heauen & heauenly things, which are dedicated and consecrated in the new testament by the bloud of Christ shed and once sacrificed on the crosse (as it is manifest by that which followeth in the text) & not by any bloud sacrificed on the altar, wherof neither the Apostle in this place, nor the holy ghost in any place doth make any mention. And therefore the sudden passage that you ascribe vnto the Apostle, is a sudden passion of your owne braine, for the Apostle was neuer at your sacrifice of the masse, that he might suddenly passe from thence to Christes entrance into heauen by his death and bloudy sacrifice. Neither doth any of the ancient writers doubt, but that these better sacrifices wherwith these heauenly things are purified, are the only sacrifice of Christs death, which is in stead of al sacrifices. Therefore saith Primasius: The heauenly things themselues, that is, those spirituall things which are now in truth

See Iſychius* li. 1. in Leuit. c. 4 paulo poſt initium, applying al theſe things to the immolation of Chriſt alſo in the Sacrament. The correſpondence of words in dedicating both Teſtaments proueth the real preſence of bloud in the Chalice.

FVLKE. 8 The Apoſtle ioyneth ſhedding of bloud with death, and therefore the new Teſtament was not dedicated by the ſacrament of the bloud of Chriſt, but by the bloud of Chriſt ſhed at his death. And although the inſtitution of the ſacrament was within the compaſſe of his paſſion, in reſpect of the time, becauſe it was in the ſame night in which he was deliuered after he had been betraied, yet was the ſacrament no part of his paſſion, and therefore the new Teſtament was not begun to be dedicated by it. Neither do the words pronounced by our ſauiour Chriſt of the cup, declare any ſuch matter, but that the cup is a ſacrament of the new Teſtament, which is eſtabliſhed by the ſhedding of his bloud on the croſſe. But neither the cup nor that which was conteined in it, was the new teſtament, which is the ſame that the Apoſtle expreſſed before chap. 8. but an holy ſigne, ſacrament or memoriall of the ſame. So the ſenſe is cleere, that the cup is a ſacrament of the bloud of Chriſt, and of the new teſtament, confirmed therby, being no more the bloud of Chriſt it ſelfe, then it is the new teſtament it ſelfe, ſeeing the like ſpeech is of the one and of the other, This is my bloud, This is the new teſtament in my bloud. The expreſſe mention of remiſſion of ſinnes is referred to the bloud of Chriſt ſhed vpon the croſſe, and not to the ſacrament of his bloud conteined in the cup. Therefore he ſaith, Which is ſhed for many vnto remiſſion of ſinnes. But the bloud of Chriſt was not ſhed in the ſupper, but in his paſſion. Againe, the ſupper was effectuall only to them that receiued it faithfully, the bloud of Chriſt ſhed on the croſſe was auailable for the ſinnes of all the elect, which were not yet borne. Therefore the cup did not conteine the bloud it ſelfe, but a ſacrament of that bloud which was ſhed on the croſſe. Finally, when the Apoſtle ſaith ſo expreſſly, that Chriſt offered not himſelfe often, but once only, he offered not himſelfe in the ſupper, except you will ſay he offered not himſelfe on the croſſe. And therefore that which is ſpoken of the ſacrifice of Chriſts death, cannot be verified of any other ſacrifice, nor of the ſupper, but ſacramentally, as it is a figure and remembrance of that only ſacrifice. The ſacrifice of Chriſts death.

Therefore Heſychius in the place quoted, meaneth no more but that Chriſt by inſtitution of his ſupper, to be a memoriall of his death, declared that he did willingly offer himſelfe to his father, to die for the people, and preuented the malice of his enemies which ſought his death. And alluding to the phraſe of filling their hands that were conſecrated prieſts, he ſaith that Chriſtes hands were filled, firſt in the myſticall ſupper, when he tooke bread and brake it, and after by the croſſe, when he was nailed to the tree. For then (ſaith he) taking vpon him the dignitie of prieſthood, or rather, then fulfilling it in worke, when he alwaies had it, he dedicated that ſacrifice, which was for vs. Therfore as the filling of the prieſts hands was a ſigne of their conſecration vnto the prieſthod, ſo was the inſtitution of the ſupper a ſacrament of the conſecration of Chriſts prieſthod, which was in worke and deed accompliſhed only on the Croſſe. Heſychius therefore doth not apply thoſe things that were proper to the ſacrifice of Chriſts death to his ſacramentall offering of himſelfe in the ſupper.

RHEM. 9 23 The examplers.) All the offices, places, veſſels, and inſtruments of the old law, were but figures and reſemblances of the ſtate and ſacraments of the new Teſtament, which are here called celeſtials, for that they are the liuely image of the heauenly ſtate next enſuing: which be therefore ſpecially dedicated and ſanctified in Chriſts bloud, ſacrificed on the altar, and ſprinkled vpon the faithful, as the old figures and people were cleanſed by the bloud of beaſts. And therefore by a tranſition vſuall in the holy Scriptures, the Apoſtle ſodenly paſſeth in the ſentence immediately following, and turneth his talke to Chriſts entrance into heauen, the ſtate whereof, both by the Sacraments of the old law, and alſo more ſpecially by them of the new, is prefigured. In the old Teſtament were figures of the new: in the new, is reſemblance of the heauenly ſtate.

FVLKE. 9 The offices, places, veſſels, and ceremonies of the old law were figures of heauen & heauenly things, which are dedicated and conſecrated in the new teſtament by the bloud of Chriſt ſhed and once ſacrificed on the croſſe (as it is manifeſt by that which followeth in the text) & not by any bloud ſacrificed on the altar, wherof neither the Apoſtle in this place, nor the holy ghoſt in any place doth make any mention. And therefore the ſudden paſſage that you aſcribe vnto the Apoſtle, is a ſudden paſſion of your owne braine, for the Apoſtle was neuer at your ſacrifice of the maſſe, that he might ſuddenly paſſe from thence to Chriſtes entrance into heauen by his death and bloudy ſacrifice. Neither doth any of the ancient writers doubt, but that theſe better ſacrifices wherwith theſe heauenly things are purified, are the only ſacrifice of Chriſts death, which is in ſtead of al ſacrifices. Therefore ſaith Primaſius: The heauenly things themſelues, that is, thoſe ſpiritwall things which are now in truth Sacrifice of the maſſe. The ſacrifice of Chriſts death.

truth celebrated in the Church, are purified by better sacrifices then those legall sacrifices, namely by the bloud of the passion of Christ. Oecumenius saith vpon this text: Because these heauenly things had need of a better oblation and sacrifice, according to their worthinesse, the sonne of God himselfe was sacrificed. Therfore our Lords death did profit and had force not only to confirme the Testament, but also to this end that he might make a true purification of the soule. The same wordes hath Theophylact. Hesych. lib. 5. c. 16 Christi sacrificio expiantur & cælestia, ita vt Paulus diceret: differentiam legalium sacrificiorum & vnigeniti ostendere volens: necesse est ergo exemplaria &c. The other as Chrysostome, Ambrose, Theodoret, passe it ouer in generall termes, as a matter vndoubted, that the death of Christ is the only sacrifice, by which the heauenly things are purified.

RHEM. 10 25 Offer himselfe often.) As Christ neuer died but once, nor neuer shall die againe, so in that violent, painfull, and bloudy sort he can neuer be offered againe, neither needeth he so to be offered any more: hauing by that one action of sacrifice vpon the Crosse, made the full ransom, redemption, and remedy for the sinnes of the whole world. Neuertheless, as Christ died and was offered after a sort in all the sacrifices of the Lawe and Nature, since the beginning of the worlde (all which were figures of this one oblation vpon the Crosse) so is he much rather offered in the sacrifice of the altar of the new Testament, incomparably more neerely, diuinely, and truely expressing his death, his body broken, his bloud shed, then did any figure of the old law, or other sacrifice that euer was. as being in deede (though in bidden, sacramentall, and mysticall, and vnbloudy maner) the very selfe same B. body and bloud, the selfe same host, oblation and sacrifice, that was done vpon the Crosse.

Christ once offered in bloudy sort, but vnbloudily often, namely in the sacrifice of the altar.

And this truth is most euident by the very forme of wordes vsed by our Sauiour in the institution and consecration of the holy Sacrament, and by the profession of all the holy Doctors. Our sacrifice, saith S. Cyprian, is correspondent to the Passion of Christ. And, The sacrifice that we offer, is the Passion of Christ. ep. 63 nu. 4. & nu. 7. S. Augustine de fid. ad Pet. c. 19. in those carnall sacrifices was the prefiguring of the flesh of Christ, which he was to offer for sinnes, and of the bloud, which he was to sheade. but in this Sacrifice is the commemoration of the flesh of Christ which he hath now giuen, and of the bloud which he hath shed: in illis prænuntiabatur occidendus, in hoc annuntiatur occisus. In them he was foreshewed as to be killed: in these he is shewed, as killed. And S. Gregorie Nazianzene saith, orat. in morbum, that the Priest in this sacrifice, immisce te magnis Christi Passionibus. S. Ambrose lib. 1. Offic. c. 48, Offertur Christus in imagine quasi recipiens passionem. Alexander the first, ep. ad omnes Orthodox. nu. 4. to. 1. Conc. Cuius corpus & sanguis conficitur, passio etiam celebratur. S. Gregorie, ho. 37. in Euang. So often as we offer the host of his Passion, so often we renew his Passion. And, He suffereth for vs again in mysterie. And Isychius, lib. 2. c. 8. in Leuit. post med. By the sacrifice of the onely-begotten many things are giuen vnto vs, to witte, the remission or pardoning of all mankinde, and the singular introduction or bringing in of the mysteries of the new Testament.

The sacrifice of the altar and that on the Crosse, both one.

And the said fathers & others, by reason of the difference in the maner of Christs presence and oblation in respect of that on the Crosse, called this the vnbloudy sacrifice, as * Caluin himselfe confesseth, but answereth them in the pride of heretikall spirit, with these wordes: Nihil moror quòd sic loquantur vetusti scriptores. that is, I passe not for it, that the auncient writers do so speake: calling the distinction of bloudy and vnbloudy sacrifice, scholastical and friuolous, and diabolicum commentum, a diuelish deuise. With such ignorant and blasphemous men we haue to do, that thinke they vnderstand the Scriptures better then all the fathers.

Comment. in 9. Hebr.

The fathers call it the vnbloudy sacrifice of the altar. Caluins contempt of the fathers.

FVLKE. 10 The Apostles words are plaine, Christ could not offer himselfe any other way then by dying. Therefore he offered himselfe but once for all, by giuing himselfe to death: and not twise by any fantastic all, hidden, inuisible, mysticall or vnbloudy maner. But you say, as Christ died, and was offered after a sort in all the old sacrifices, so he is much rather offered in the sacrifice of the altar of the new Testament. I answere that in the old sacrifices Christ was not offered in truth, but in figure and signification, therefore in the sacrament he is not offered in truth, but a figure, signification, remembrance, and representation of his onely true sacrifice, is made in the sacrament more neerely and liuely expressing the same, then by any figure of the law it was expressed. Yet is not the sacrament a sacrifice properly, but a memorie of that sacrifice, and a figure of Christs body, not the very body it selfe, but to him that receiueth it spiritually by faith, as the olde sacrifices were to the faithfull Iewes. But what impudencie is it to say? that it is most euident by the very forme of words of our Sauiour, vsed in the institution of the sacrament, that it is the same host, oblation, and sacrifice that was done vpon the Crosse, whereas in the institution of the supper there is no word of oblation, host, or sacrifice. You shew as great impudencie in saying it is so, by the profession of all the holy doctors: when euen their wordes which you cite crie out against you, that they meane no such matter. For Cyprian in the former place, saith against them that ministred the sacrament without wine, We finde that the cup was mixed which our Lord offered, and that it was wine, which he called his bloud. Whereupon it appeareth, that the bloud of Christ is not offered if wine be wanting to the cup, and that the Lords sacrifice is not celebrated with lawfull sanctification, except our oblation and sacrifice do answere to his passion. He saith not, that the sacrament (which he calleth a sacrifice or holy seruice) is the selfe same body and bloud, the selfe same host, oblation and sacrifice, which was done on the crosse, for wine was not offered on the crosse. but that this sacrament is not rightly celebrated, except it doe answere to the passion of Christ, whereof it is a memoriall, that is, that it be celebrated with wine, which our Sauiour Christ did call his bloud figuratiuely, to expresse the shedding of his bloud vpon the crosse.

Christ offered himselfe but once.

In the second place his words are these: Because we make mention of his passion in all sacrifices (for the sacrifice which we offer is our Lords passion) we ought to doe none other thing then he did. For the scripture saith: So often as you shall eat of this bread, and drinke of this cup, you shall shew the Lords death vntill he come. Therefore as often as we offer the cup in remembrance of our Lord and his passion, let vs do that which it is certeine that our Lord did. What can be more euident then that Cyprian in this place calleth the sacrament, a sacrifice and the passion of Christ figuratiuely, because it is a commemoration of the sacrifice and passion of Christ, not the sacrifice and passion of Christ it selfe. For Christ is now impassible. Therefore no more properly then Christ is crucified in the sacrament, no more properly is he sacrificed therein. But as the Apostle saith figuratiuely, that Christ was crucified among the Galathians, so we may say he is crucified in the celebration of the sacrament, and sacrificed: because his death and passion, and the vertue thereof, is liuely represented by the worde that is preached, and the action that is celebrated: but properly we cannot say that Christ is sacrificed or crucified in the sacrament. The wordes of Augustine, or rather of Fulgentius De fide ad Petrum, be these: Holde stedfastly, and nothing doubt thou, that the same onely begotten God, the word being made flesh, offered himselfe a sacrifice, and host of sweet sauour to God for vs. To whom with the Father and the holy Ghost by the patriarchs, prophets and priests, in the time of the olde testament beasts were sacrificed, and to whom now, that is, in the time of the new Testament, with the Father and the Holy ghost, with whom he is one God, the holy Catholike church throughout the whole world doth not cease to offer the sacrifice of bread and wine in faith and charitie. For in those carnall sacrifices, there was a figuring of the flesh of Christ, which he being being without ſinne, was to offer for our ſinnes, and of the blond which he was to ſhed for the remiſſion of our ſinnes. But in this ſacrifice there is a thankeſgiuing & commemoration of the fleſh of Chriſt, which he offered for vs, and of the bloud, which the ſame God hath ſhed for vs: Of which S. Paule in the actes of the Apoſtles ſaith: Take heed to your ſelues, and to the whole flocke, ouer which the Holy ghoſt hath made you Biſhops, to rule the Church of God, which he hath purchaſed with his owne bloud. Therefore in thoſe ſacrifices it was ſignified figuratiuely, what was to be giuen vnto vs: but in this ſacrifice it is euidently ſhewed what is already giuen vnto vs. In thoſe ſacrifices the ſonne of God was foreſhewed, that he ſhould be ſlaine for vngodly men, but in this he is declared that he hath beene already ſlaine for vngodly men, as the Apoſtle witneſſeth, that Chriſt when we were yet weake, according to the time, died for vngodly men, and that when we were his enimies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his ſonne. In this ſaying, marke that he calleth the ſacrament the ſacrifice of bread and wine. Secondly, that the ſame is offered to Chriſt. Thirdly, by the whole Church. Fourthly, as a thankeſgiuing and commemoration of the death of Chriſt. Fifthly, that the death of Chriſt is ſhewed therein, and not that Chriſt is ſhewed as killed, but that he hath beene killed. All which is manifeſtly againſt the ſacrifice of the maſſe, in which neither bread nor wine is ſacrificed, nor to Chriſt, but Chriſt himſelfe is ſaid to be ſacrificed to his father, not by the whole Church but by the prieſts onely, not as a thankeſgiuing onely, and commemoration of Chriſtes death, but as the ſelfe ſame hoſt, oblation and ſacrifice that was done on the croſſe. By all which it is euident that he ſpeaketh not of the ſacrifice of the maſſe, but of the celebration of the Lordes ſupper, which is a ſpirituall ſacrifice of thankeſgiuing, and not the ſame ſacrifice that was done vpon the croſſe but figuratiuely, ſacramentally, and vnproperly. And what ſhould Gregorie Nazianzen meane by the prieſt mingling himſelfe with the great paſſions of Chriſt, but his contemplation of them to ſtirre vp himſelfe and his people vnto thankeſgiuing for them? For the ſacrifice of Chriſtes death he calleth that great and vnſacrificable ſacrifice, or which cannot be ſacrificed againe. Therefore he ſpeaketh directly againſt your popiſh ſacrifice, which you ſay to be the ſame that was done vpon the croſſe. The wordes of S. Ambroſe be theſe: Before time a lambe was offered, a calfe was offered, now Chriſt is offered, but he is offered as a man, as receiuing paſſion, and he offereth himſelfe as a prieſt, that he may forgiue our ſinnes. Heere in an image, there in truth, where he maketh interceſſion with the father, as an aduocate for vs. Is it not manifeſt in theſe wordes, that Chriſt is not now offered in truth, but in an image and repreſentation of his death, becauſe the ſacrament is a preaching or ſhewing of his death vntill he come?

As for the counterfect epiſtle of Alexander, although it deſerue none anſwere, yet the words you cite, doe not prooue your ſaying. For the paſſion of Chriſt is celebrated by the ſacrament of the body and bloud of Chriſt: yet the ſacrament is not the ſame ſacrifice that was done on the croſſe and can neuer be repeated. Gregorie meaneth none otherwiſe that Chriſt ſuffereth againe, then S. Paule when he ſaith Chriſt was crucified among the Galathians, Gal. 3. that is, his paſſion and death is plainely ſhewed, not actually renued, nor Chriſt ſuffering any thing in deed, but figuratiuely and vnproperly. Heſychius ſpeaketh vndoubtedly of the ſacrifice of Chriſts death, and his words are theſe: Not one ſinne onely but many ſinnes are forgiuen vs by the ſacrifice of the onely begotten ſonne, that is to ſay, the pardoning of all mankinde, liſe in perfect philoſophy or wiſedome, and a ſingular introduction of the myſteries of the new Teſtament, to the exemplars and figures of which, the ſacrifices which are aſſigned to the perſon of the high prieſt, were offered, moſt of all ſhewing the ſhadow of heauenly things, by thoſe things which were done vpon earth. Is it now the ſacrifice of the maſſe, or Chriſts death, by which all ſinnes are forgiuen, all mankinde pardoned, the myſteries of the new Teſtament are brought in? The ſame father, ſpeaking afterward of the ſacrament, ſaith, it is both bread and fleſh, meaning the one properly, the other figuratiuely, and ſacramentally. Wherefore I ſay againe, that you haue cited the ſayings of the fathers without all, which make againſt you very plainely. And that the fathers call the ſacrament an vnblouddy ſacrifice, they do plainely diſtinguiſh it in kinde, and not onely in maner of ſacrificing, from the bloudy ſacrifice of Chriſts death. For by that was remiſſion of ſins, by the other could be no remiſſion of ſins, becauſe without ſhedding of bloud there can be no remiſſion of ſinnes. Therefore the fathers calling the ſacrament an vnbloudy ſacrifice, did plainely declare that it was no propitiatorie ſacrifice, but a ſacrifice of thankeſgiuing, and remembrance of Chriſtes death. Which Caluin knew right well, and therefore ſaith, that the Papiſts did wickedly abuſe thoſe ſpeaches, to mainteine a ſacrifice of their owne inuention. Yea he ſaith it is a diueliſh inuention, that Chriſt ſhould be often ſacrificed, ſeeing he cannot die often, and without death there can be no ſacrifice for ſinne. Theſe things are ſo plaine in the Apoſtle, that they neede no expoſition, yet all the fathers agree, that there is but one ſacrifice propitiatorie for ſinnes, namely the death of Chriſt. Chryſoſtome ſaith therefore, that the ſupper is rather a remembrance of a ſacrifice then a ſacrifice in deed. Hom. 17. which is the meaning of the reſt of the fathers when they call it a ſacrifice. Or if they meant otherwiſe then the Apoſtle teacheth ſo plainely, we may without pride ſay with Caluin, it is not to be regarded what any man hath ſaid, but what the holy Ghoſt ſaith, of whom all men ought to learne to ſpeake.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. X.

RHEM. 1 FVLKE. 1 10 He hath dedicated.) To dedicate, is to be author and beginner of a thing. The Protestants translate, he hath prepared, for their heresie that Christ was not the first man that entered into heauen.

To dedicate, is not alwaies to be auctor and beginner of a thing. We read that diuers men haue beene auctors of the building of Temples, which other men haue dedicated. The Greeke word signifieth also To prepare, and so doth S. Ambrose translate it. And you falsely belie vs, to say we hold any such heresie, that Christ was not the first man that entred into heauen with his body, or whole humanitie, as the text is: and that dedicated and prepared the way for all his members to enter into heauen, both with their bodies and with their soules: by vertue of whole death, all the faithful from the beginning, were receiued into heauenly rest in their soules. Cauilling. Slander.

RHEM. 2 FVLKE. 2 35 ‘Confidence, which.) Good workes make great confidence of saluation, and haue great reward.

Good workes are good testimonies of faith, by which we haue confidence of saluation, by the onely grace of God, and not by the merite of our workes, yet haue good workes great reward, grounded vpon Gods promise, and not vpon the worthines of them. And confidence in this place, is stedfastnes of faith, not in the merite of good workes, but in the mercie of God, who hath giuen good workes to be fruites of faith. S. Ambrose vpon ver. 19. saith: Hauing confidence brethren, wherein? As sinnes cause shame, so forgiuenes of sinnes causeth confidence, both that we are made fellow heires, and that we enioy so great loue. And vpon this text, he saith: Nothing is necessarie for you, but that you stand fast, and continue in your strength, which hath great reward with God. Which words Primasius repeating, saith: Nothing is necessarie for you, but stedfastnes in your faith. Merite,

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. X.

RHEM. 3 1 A shadow.) The Sacrifices and ceremonies of the old law, were so far from the truth of Christs Sacraments, and from giuing spirit, grace, remission, redemption, and iustification, and therupon the entrance into heauen and ioyes celestiall, that they were but mere shadowes, vnperfectly and obscurely representing the graces of the new Testament and of Christes death: whereas all the holy Churches rites and actions instituted by Christ in the Priesthod of the new law, conteine and giue grace, iustification, and life euerlasting to the faithfull and worthy receiuers: and therefore they be not shades or darke resemblances of Christs passion, which is the fountaine of all grace and mercie, but perfect images and most liuely representations of the same specially the sacrifice of the altar, which because it is the same oblation, the same host, and offered by the same Priest Christ IESVS (though by the ministerie of man and in mysterie) is the most pure and neere image, character, and correspondence to the sacrifice of Christs passion, both in substance, force, and effect, that can be.

The old sacrifices obscurely shadowed, but the sacrifice of the altar most plainly representeth the sacrifice on the Crosse.

FVLKE. 3 The Sacraments and ceremonies of the old Law, were shadowes of Christs only Sacrifice and the vertue thereof, not of our Sacraments, as it is manifest in the 10. verse. Neither do the Sacraments of the new Testament, conteine or giue grace, iustification, and life, to the worthy receiuers, but are certaine testimonies of grace, iustification, and life, giuen by God reconciled to vs, by the only sacrifice of Christs death. And so were the sacrifices and ceremonies of the old Testament to the worthy receiuers, as effectuall to assure the fathers of grace, iustification, and life euerlasting, by the death of Christ, as our Sacraments are to vs. Although in respect of more cleere, plaine, and lightsome signification, our Sacraments doe farre excede the Sacraments of the old Testament. And so the Gospel, with the Sacraments thereof, may be called an expresse image or forme of good things, in respect of the Law with the ceremonies thereof, which was but a shadow of them. As for the Sacrifice of the Masse, which hath no ground in the word of God, and is so directly contrary to the only Sacrifice of Christs death, once offered for all, is no expresse forme or representation of Christs death, but an apish counterfecting of Christs actions concerning the ceremonies, and concerning the doctrine of it, a most horrible blasphemie against the perfection and sufficience of Christs only sacrifice.

Sacrifice of the Masse.

RHEM. 4 2 They should haue ceased.) If the hostes and offerings of the olde law had beene of themselues perfect to all effects of redemption and remission, as the Hebrewes (against whom the Apostle disputeth) did thinke, and had no relation to Christs sacrifice on the Crosse or any other absolute and vniuersall oblation or remedy for sinne, but by and of their owne efficacie could haue generally purged and cleansed man of all sinne and damnation: then they should neuer haue needed to be so often repeated and reiterated. For being both generally auaileable for all, by their opinion, and particularly applied (in as ample sort as they could be) to the seuerall infirmities of euery offender, there had beene no sinnes left. But sinnes did remaine, euen those sinnes for which they had offered sacrifices before, notwithstanding their sacrifices were particularly applied vnto them. For, offering yeerely they did not onely offer sacrifices for the new committed crimes, but euen for the old, for which they had often sacrificed before: the sacrifices being rather records and attestations of their sinnes, then a redemption or full remission, as Christs death is. Which being once applied to man by Baptisme, wipeth away all sinnes past, God neuer remembring them any more, nor euer any sacrifice or Sacrament or ceremonie being made or done for them any more, though for new sinnes other remedies be daily requisite. Their sacrifices then could not of them selues remitte sinnes, much lesse make the general redemption without relation to Christs Passion. And so you see it is plaine euery where, that the Apostle proueth not by the often repetition of the Iewish sacrifices, that they were no sacrifices at all, but that they were not of that absolute force or efficacie, to make redemption or any remission, without dependance of the one vniuersall redemption by Christ: his whole purpose being, to inculcate vnto them the necessitie of Christs death, and the oblation of the new Testament. As for the Churches holy sacrifice, it is cleane of an other kinde than those of the Iewes, and therefore he maketh no opposition betwixt it, and Christes death or sacrifice on the Crosse, in all this Epistle: but rather as a sequele of that one generall oblation, couertly alwaies inferreth the same: as being in a different maner the very selfe same host and offering that was done vpon the Crosse, and continually is wrought by the selfe same Priest.

The Iewes sacrifices were not absolute and independent, because they were often repeated.

The Apostle proueth by the often repeating of the Iewes sacrifices, not that they were none but that they were not absolute and sufficient.

FVLKE. 4 The Hebrewes to whom the Apostle writeth were Christians, and therefore could haue no such grosse opinion of the sacrifices of the Lawe, which no faithfull Iewe had before the comming of Christ. Therefore they beleeued that all those sacrifices tooke their effect, onely of the death of Christ. Yet they thought they might be still offered, to apply the vertue of his death vnto them. But the Apostle declareth, that after the sacrifice of Christ once offered, whereby all sinnes are taken away, there are meanes by God appointed, to apply the vertue thereof to euery person, but all sacrifices for sinne must needes cease. Howbeit you say: That Christes death being once applied to man by baptisme, wipeth away all sinnes, &c. though for new sins, other remedies be daily requisite. Where your speach is doubtfull, whether you meane other remedies then the death of Christ, or other remedies then Baptisme. In truth not the externall acte of Baptisme, but the inward working of Gods spirite, washeth away all sinnes in the elect, by the vertue of Christes death, which is testified and confirmed vnto vs, by the outward Sacrament of Baptisme. The vertue of which application by Gods spirite, in our regeneration, extendeth not onely to the sinnes past, but to all infirmities to come. And the Sacrament of Baptime is a seale for confirmation of our faith, of remission of our sinnes committed after Baptisme receiued, when we are penitent for them, as well as of sinnes committed before: seeing it hath relation to the death of Christ, whereby all our sinnes are forgiuen. Therefore, although the ceremonie of Baptisme ought not to be repeated, yet the vertue of Gods spirite testified thereby, that we are borne againe to be the sonnes of God, remaineth to our liues ende, and vnto eternall life. Although, for further confirmation our faith, and assurance of our perpetuall consettuation in the body of Christ, whereunto wee are engrafted by Baptisme, the mercy of God hath added another Sacrament of our spirituall nourishment and feeding, with the verie body and bloud of Christ crucified. Not as a new Sacrifice for sinne, nor as a reiteration of that only sacrifice of Christs death, but as an vndoubted pledge of his grace, wherby we are assured that we are not only borne againe to be his children, but also are fed with the foode of life and immortalitie, that we might alwaies continue in the state of Gods children, euen vntil we be put in possession of our heauenly inheritance. Therefore there is none other remedie for sinnes committed after Baptisme, but the sacrifice of Christs death: the vertue and force wherof, is inwardly applied vnto euery person, on Gods behalfe by his spirit, on mans behalfe, in them that haue vnderstanding by faith in his word preached, and testified outwardly, by the holy Sacraments of Baptisme, and the Lords Supper. That the Iewish sacrifices were no sacrifices, no man in his right wits would affirme, but the repeating of them argueth, that they were imperfect sacrifices, that did not take away sinne. So the repeating of the sacrifice of the Masse, declareth, that sinne is not taken away by it, yea it doth blasphemously emply, that sinne is not taken away by the death of Christ. For remission of sinnes once obteined, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sinne, ver. 18. If therefore remission of sinnes were obteined perfectly by the death of Christ, the Masse is no sacrifice for sinnes. If the Masse must needs be a sacrifice for sinnes, then remission remission of sinnes was not obtained by the death of Christ. But the Popish Churches sacrifice (you say) is of another kind, then those of the Iewes, and you say right. For they were ordeined by God to be holy sacrifices and sacraments of remission of sinnes, by the onely perfect sacrifice of Christs death, but your sacrifice hath no institution of God, and is blasphemous against the onely sacrifice of Christs death. Where you say. He maketh no opposition betwixt it and Christs death or sacrifice on the Crosse in all his Epistle. I answere, he maketh such opposition as is betweene contradictories, sacrifice, and no sacrifice. For Christes death being the onely sacrifice for sinne, there remaineth now no sacrifice for sinne, whereas betweene the sacrifices of the Law, and Christ sacrifice, he maketh such opposition, as is betweene Relatiues. Because all these sacrifices did signifie this onely perfect and absolute sacrifice. But rather (you say) as a sequele of that one generall oblation, couertly alwaies he inferreth the same. It is a very couert illation, that by no argument can be deduced out of his wordes or sentences. And it is a monstrous sequele, that one onely sacrifice but once offered, neuer to be reiterated, after which there remaineth no sacrifice for sinne, should draw after it another sacrifice, to be repeated ten thousand times euery day. But it is the selfe same host (you say) and offering, that was done vpon the Crosse in a different manner, and continually is wrought by the same Priest. But the text is plaine, that Christ offered him selfe but once, and that was vpon the Crosse, and by that one oblation, he made perfect for euer all that are sanctified. Therefore, your deuise of a different maner, cannot stand with the Scripture, by which it foloweth, that Christ offred not himselfe once onely, but twise in his owne person, and a thousand thousand times by Popish Priests. And seeing you haue no ground in the word of God, to warrant this your offering in a different maner, you may aswell inuent ten thousand different maners, in which Christ hath or doth offer him selfe so often, to elude that which the holy Ghost speaketh so plainely of Christes one oblation but once offred, as you haue inuented this one different maner. But seeing the Scripture testifieth, that perfect redemption is wrought by that one oblation of Christ on the Crosse, what neede or vse is there, that Christ should be often offred in any different maner? Againe, where was it euer heard in the Scripture, that one sacrifice should be offred by two Priests? For you say, that your Popish sacrifice is continually wrought by the selfe same Priest, Christ, and yet you stoutly defend, that it is offered by the Popish Priest that saith Masse, who is a Priest after the order of Melchisedech, to offer vp this sacrifice, as Christ him selfe was. How can these blasphemies and absurdities, with any conscience be mainteined?

RHEM. 5 4 Impossible.) The hostes and sacrifices of the old law, which the carnal Iewes made al the count of, without relation to Christes death, were not onely not perfect and absolute sufficient in them selues, but they did not, nor could not remit any sinnes at all, being but onely signes thereof, referring the offenders for remission in deede, to Christes Passion. For the bloud of bruit beastes could haue no other effect, nor any other element or creature, before Christes death, the fruite whereof, before it was extant, could be no otherwise properly applied vnto them, but by beleefe in him. The old sacrifices remitted not sinnes, but were onely signes thereof.

FVLKE. 5 The fruite of Christes death was neuer applied to the carnall Iewes, which made such accompt of their sacrifices, without relation to Christes death. But to them that esteemed rightly of the sacrifices of the Law, the fruite of Christes death was applied, as it is vnto vs by the spirite of God and faith, testified and confirmed by those Sacraments. The eternall fruit of Christ one Sacrifice.

RHEM. 6 5 Host and oblation.) He meaneth not that God would no host nor sacrifice any more, as the Protestants falsely imagin: for that were to take away not onely the sacrifice of Christes body vpon the altar, but the sacrifice of the same body vpon the Crosse also. Therefore the Prophet speaketh only of the legal and carnal sacrifices of the Iewes, signifying that they did neuer of them selues please God, but in respect of Christ, by whose oblation of his owne body they should please. God refuseth the Iewes sacrifices, not al sacrifice.

FVLKE. 6 He meaneth, that God would no host nor sacrifice for sinne, to worke satisfaction and reconciliation, but onely the Sacrifice of Christes body vpon the Crosse. Whereof the legal sacrifices were figures and shodowes. As for the Popish sacrifice of Christes body vpon the altar, is a blasphemous deuise of Antichrist, whereof the Scripture neuer speaketh. Sacrifice of the Masse.

RHEM. 7 5 "But a body.) If Christ had not had a body, he could not haue had any worthy matter or any matter at all to sacrifice in visible maner, other then the hostes of the old law. Neither could he either haue made the generall redemption by his one oblation vpon the Crosse, nor the dayly sacrifice of the Church: for both which, his body was fitted by the diuine wisedom which is an high conclusion, not vnderstood of Iewes, Pagans, nor the Heretikes of our time, that Christes humane nature was taken to make the Sonne of God (who in his diuine nature could not be either Priest or host) fitte to be the sacrifice & Priest of his father, in a more worthy sort, then all the Priests or oblations of the old law. And that this body was giuen him, not only to be the sacrifice vpon the Crosse, but also vpon the altar, S. Augustine affirmeth in these words: The table which the Priest of the new Testament doth exhibit, is of his body and bloud: for that is the sacrifice which succeeded al those sacrifices that were offered in shadow of that to come. For the which also we acknowledge that voice of the same Mediatour in the Psalme. BVT A BODY THOV HAST FITTED TO ME, because in steede of al those sacrifices and oblations his body is offered, and is ministred to the partakers or receiuers. Li. 17. Ciuit. Dei c. 20. And againe li. 4. de Trin. c. 14. Who so iust and holy a Priest, as the onely Sonne of God? What might so conueniently be offered for men, of men, as mans flesh? and what so fitte for this immolation or offering, as mortall flesh? what so cleane for cleansing the vices of mortall men, as the flesh borne of the Virgins wombe? and what can be offered and receiued so gratefully, as the flesh of our sacrifice, made the body of our Priest. That Christ should haue a body, was necessarie for his Priesthood, and sacrifice. The body of Christ is the sacrifice of the altar. Ps. 39.

FVLKE. 7 The Scripture testifieth, that Christs body was made for his one and only oblation vpon the Crosse, and not for any second oblation, or infinite repetitions of the same oblations vpon the altar. And the necessitie of his humanity, to be a Priest, & to haue a sacrifice, (God be thanked) we vnderstand sufficiently, as also the necessitie of his diuinitie, to make his ministerie and sacrifice acceptable. But that Christs body was giuen him, not only to be the Sacrifice vpon the Crosse, but also vpon the altar, S. Augustine affirmeth. If S. Augustine affirme that, for which he hath no warrant in the Scripture, his affirmation is no ground to build our faith vpon. But his wordes being rightly vnderstood according to his meaning, which he declareth at large in other places, doth nothing auaile to confirme the Popish sacrifice. For in the former place he meaneth, that the sacrifice of Christes body was but once offred by him selfe vpon the Crosse. Yet he instituted in the Sacrament a table, for participation of the same body then sacrificed, which continueth to the end of the world, wherein Christ is not properly sacrificed againe, but the feast of Christs onely sacrifice, for participation is continued in an holy memoriall. For we must not thinke that S. Augustine would apply that Scripture to the Lords Supper, which the Apostle so euidently & properly, applied to the death of Christ. Therfore he vseth the word sacrifice in such speaches, improperly, for a Sacrament or holy signe of that sacrifice, not for a sacrifice in deed. As he declareth De Ciuit. lib. 10. cap. 20. saying: By this he is a Priest, he him selfe offring, and he him selfe being the oblation. Of which thing, he would haue the dayly sacrifice of the Church to be a Sacrament, seeing he is the head of his owne body, and she is the body of her Christ one sacrifice once offered.

owne head, as well the by him, as he by her, being accustomed to be offred. In these words he declareth first, that the Lords Supper is vnproperly called a Sacrifice, when in deed it is a Sacrament of the only oblation of Christ. Secondly, that in this Sacrament is offred not a Sacrifice propitiatorie for sinne, but a spirituall Sacrifice of thankesgiuing, for the redemption of the Church, which is spiritually offred by Christ in this Sacrifice, as Christ is offred by the Church. His meaning also, of the vse of this terme Sacrifice, he sheweth Epist. 23. Bonifacio. Was not Christ offred but once onely in him selfe? and yet in a Sacrament, he is not onely offred for the people, at euery solemnitie of Easter, but euery day. Neither doth he lie, that being asked the question, doth answere, that he is offred. For if Sacraments had not a certaine similitude of those things, whereof they be Sacraments, they should not be Sacraments at all. And of this similitude, for the most part, they receiue the names of the things them selues. Therefore, as after a certaine manner, the Sacrament of the body of Christ, is the body of Christ, the Sacrament of the bloud of Christ, is the bloud of Christ, so the Sacrament of faith, is faith. It is most cleere by this saying, that the Sacrament was called a Sacrifice vnproperly, because it is a Sacrament or holy signe of the onely Sacrifice of Christes death, as also it is called the body of Christ, because it is a signe and Sacrament thereof. The second place of S. Augustine. De trinitat. lib. 4. c. 14. is most impudently alledged, to proue that Christs body was giuen him to be sacrificed vpon the altar, where Augustine speaketh onely of the Sacrifice of Christes death, whereof he spake in the Chapter before, where he saith: By his death, that one most true Sacrifice offered for vs, what sinnes soeuer there was, for which the principalities and powers held vs by right, to suffer punishment, be purged, abolished, extinguished, and by his resurrection into a new life, he called vs that are predestinated, and being called, he iustified vs, and being iustified, he glorified vs. Therefore it is true, that is cited in the decrees as out of Augustine de consec. dist. 2. c. Hoc est. That offering of his flesh, which is made by the priests hands, is called the passion, death, crucifying of Christ, not in trueth of the thing, but in a signifying mysterie.

RHEM. 8 8 Neither did they please thee.) By that he saith, the things offered in the Law, did not please God, and likewise by that he saith, the former to be taken away, that the second may haue place, it is euident, that all hostes and sacrifices be not taken away by Christ, as the Heretikes folishly conceiue: but that the old hostes of brute beastes be abrogated to giue place to that which is the proper host of the new Law, that is, Christs owne body. The Iewes sacrifices refused, not all sacrifice.

FVLKE. 8 By the Sacrifice of Christ once offered, all hosts and sacrifices are taken away: as the words of the text are manifest, seeing we are sanctified by the oblation of the body of Christ once offered, ver. 10. That which commeth in place therefore of the old sacrifices of the law, is the one onely oblation of Christs body, which was once offered, and neither can, nor neede euer to be offered any more. The one sacrifice of Christs death.

RHEM. 9 11 Often offering the same hostes.) As S. Paul is forced often to inculcate that one principle of the efficacie and sufficiencie of Christs death, because of the Hebrues to much attributing to their legall sacrifices, and for that they did not referre them to Christs onely oblation. So we, through the intolerable ignorance and importunitie of the Heritikes of this time (abusing the wordes of the Apostle spoken in the due defence and declaration of the valure and efficacie of Christes passion aboue the sacrifices of the Law) are forced to repeate often, that the Apostles reason of many Priests and often repetition of the selfe same sacrifices, concerneth the sacrifices of the Law onelie, vnto which he opposeth Christ sacrifice and Priesthood: and speaketh no word of or against the Sacrifice of the new Testament, which is the sacrifice of Christes own Priesthood, Law, and institution, yea the same sacrifice done dayly vnbloudily, that once was done bloudily: made by the same Priest Christ Iesus, though by his ministers handes: and not many hostes, as those of the olde Law were, but the very selfe same in number, euen Christes owne body that was crucified. And that you may see that this is the iudgement of all antiquitie, and their exposition of these and the like wordes of this Epistle, and that they seeing the very same arguments that the Protestantes now make so much a doe withall among the simple and vnlearned, yet well perceiued that they made nothing against the dayly oblation or sacrifice of the altar, and therefore answered them before the Protestants were extant, 1200. yeeres: we will set downe some of their words, whose authoritie and exposition of the Scriptures must preuaile in all that haue wisedome or the feare of God, aboue the false and vaine gloses of Caluin and his folowers. We must often note that the Apostles speach of many priests and often sacrificing, concerneth onely the Iewes priestes and sacrifices, not the priestes and sacrifice of the new Testament.

Thus then first saith S. Ambrose: Quid ergo nos &c. What we then? doe not we offer euery day? we offer surelie: but this sacrifice is an exampler of that: for we offer alwaies the selfe same, and not now one Lambe, to morowe an other, but alwaies the selfe same thing: therefore it is one sacrifice, otherwise, by this reason because it is offred in many places, there should be many Christes. not so, but it is one Christ in euery place, here whole, and there whole, one body. But this which we doe, is done for a commemoration of that which was done. for we offer not an other sacrifice, as the high Priest of the olde Lawe, but alwaies the selfe same &c. Primasius S. Augustines scholer doth also preoccupate these Protestants obiections thus: What shal we say then? do not our Priestes dayly offer sacrifice? they offer surely, because we sinne dayly, and dayly haue neede to be cleansed: and because he cannot die, he hath giuen vs the sacrament of his body and bloud: that as his Passion was the redemption and absolution of the world, so also this oblation may be redemption and cleansing to all that offer it in truth and veritie. So saith this holy father, to witte, that as the sacrifice of the Crosse was a generall redemption, so this of the altar is, to all that vse it, a particular redemption or application of Christs redemption to them. In which sense also V. Bede calleth the holy Masse, redemptionem corporis & animæ sempiternam, the euerlasting redemption of body and soule. lib. 4. cap. 22. histor. Against the same Primasius, The diuinitie of the word of God which is euery where, maketh that there are not many sacrifices, but one, although it be offered of many, and that as it is one body which he tooke of the Virgins wombe, not many bodies, euen so also one sacrifice, not diuers, as those of the Iewes were. The Caluinists arguments against Christs body often offered, and in many places, answered by the fathers long agoe. in 10. cap. hist. ibidem. The generall redemption vpon the Crosse is particularly applyed in the sacrifice of the altar. Primas. loco citato.

* S. Chrysostome also, and after him Theophylacte, and Oecumenius, and of the Latines, Haimo, Paschasius, Remigius, and others, obiect to themselues thus: Doe not we also offer euery day? we offer surely: but this sacrifice is an exampler of that, for we offer alwaies the selfe same: and not now one Lambe, to morowe an other, but the selfe same: therefore this is one sacrifice. Otherwise, because it is offered in many places, there should be many Christes. And a litle after, Not an other sacrifice, as the high Priest of the olde lawe, but the selfe same we doe alwaies offer, rather working a remembrance or commemoration of the sacrifice. See the Annotation Luke 22. 19. vpon these words, A commemoration. Thus did all the auncient fathers Greeke and Latine treate of these matters, and so they said Masse, and offered dayly, and many of them made such formes of celebrating the diuine sacrifice, as the Greekes and Latines doe vse in their Liturgies and Masses, and yet they saw these places of the Apostle and made commentaries vpon them, and vnderstood them (I trowe) as well as the Protestants. * hom. 17. in ep. ad Hebr.

FVLKE. 9 That the Hebrues, to whom the Apostle writeth, in that they were Christians, did referre their sacrifices to Christes only oblation, as al faithful Iewes did before Christs comming in the flesh I haue often proued: for els they should haue been no better then carnall Iewes. And this to deny is intollerable, both ignorance and impudence in these Rhemish Papists. The words of the Apostle spoken in defence and declaration of the value and efficacie of the sacrifice of Christes death once offered, and neuer to be repeated, doe of them selues ouerthrow your blasphemous sacrifice of the Masse: therefore we doe no way abuse them. Wherefore, where as you say, The Apostles reasons of many Priestes, and often repetition of the same sacrifices, concerneth the sacrifices of the lawe onely, it is false for they make also and much more, against all the false sacrifices of the Gentiles, and all other false sacrifices, whatsoeuer the deuil should afterward inuent by Heretikes. Therefore S. Augustine saith. To this highest and true sacrifice, all false sacrifices haue giuen place. De ciuit. lib. 10. c. 20. Againe the Apostles reasons doe so make against the many Priestes and often sacrifice of the lawe, that they must giue place to the onely Priest and sacrifice once offered by Christ: whereas if there be infinite Priests and sacrifices, or one sacrifice infinitely repeated in the new Testament, the Apostles reasons make nothing against the multitude of Priestes and sacrifices of the law. That he speaketh no word of the sacrifice of the Masse, it is because there is none such, but against that false fiction of such a blasphemous sacrifice, he speaketh often when he speaketh of the singuler Priesthood of Christ, and of his one oblation once offered, whereby eternall redemption is found, and of the impossibilitie of reiterating the same sacrifice; because Christ can die no more. Where you say your popish sacrifice and sacrificing priesthood, is of Christs institution to be done dayly vnbloudily, you haue no word of God to proue such institution or maner of oblation: wherefore it is nothing els but a blasphemous inuention of Antichrist, to deface the glory of Christs onely sacrifice. As for the iudgement of all antiquitie, if it were contrary to so cleare light of the trueth, as is expressed in plaine words and most euident reasons in this Epistle, it were nothing to be regarded. But as I haue often said and proued the auncient fathers, although they doe vnproperly vse the word of sacrifice for that which is but a sacrament and commemoration of the onely sacrifice of Christ once offered on the crosse: yet doe they expound them selues at one time or another, that they meane it to be onely a sacrament, not a sacrifice propitiatorie in deede, or else a spirituall sacrifice of praise and thanksgiuing. That you say our arguments were answered 1200. yeeres agoe, it is false: for none of the fathers of that age acknowledged your popish sacrifice of the masse. The words that are ascribed to S. Ambrose, are the same which are found in the Commentary of Chrysostome vpon the Hebrues, and doe plainely declare, that the celebration of the Lords Supper, is vnproperly called a sacrifice, being in deede a commemoration of the onely sacrifice of Christes death: and therefore it followeth, that it is rather a memorie of that sacrifice, then a sacrifice in deede. We offer not another sacrifice, as the high Priest, but the same alwaies, but rather we worke the remembrance of a sacrifice. Thus Ambrose and Chrysostome doe plainely confesse, that the sacrament is vnproperly called a sacrifice, which is rather an examplar, a remembrance, or memoriall of that sacrifice of Christ. The saying of Primasius also you doe falsifie, by gelding out these words, which doe expound his meaning. For these are his words. What then shall we say? doe not our Priestes the same thing dayly, while they offer sacrifice continually? they offer in deede but for the remembrance of his death. And because we sinne dayly, and haue neede dayly to be cleansed, because he cannot now die, he hath giuen vs this Sacrament of his body and bloud, that as his passion was the redemption and absolution of the world: so also this oblation may be redemption and cleansing, to all that offer it in true faith, and haue a good intention.

The sacrifice of Christ once offered.

Sacrifice of the masse.

First therefore he saith not, that the priestes offer a sacrifice propitiatory for sinne, but they are said to offer sacrifice vnproperly: for they offer not absolutely but vnto, or for the remembrance of Christes death.

Secondly he saith, that Christ hath giuen this sacrament of his body and bloud, that by true faith we might apply the benefite of redemption by Christes death vnto vs, seeing the sacrament is a seale of God added to his word, to confirme our faith. And this is the true meaning of Primasius, howsoeuer by leauing out and altering his wordes, you would enforce him to say another thing. Neither doth Bede (although he liued in a superstitious time, long after Antichrist did openly shew him selfe) call the masse, the euerlasting redemption of body and soule. But saith, that vpon the credite of the report of one Imma, (a meete argument for such a conclusion) which said he was deliuered of his bondes, wherein he was held prisoner, so often as his brother Tunna caused Masse to be said for him, supposing he had been dead: Men vnderstood, that the healthfull sacrifice auailed to redemption both of soule and body euerlasting. The like fable telleth Gregorie hom. 37. in Euang. The words of Primasius that folow doe shew, that Christ is daily receiued whole of euery one of the faithfull, that receiueth the sacrament worthely by his diuine power, not altering the nature of Christs body, but by feeding them with it spiritually through faith. The other saying borrowed out of S. Chrysostome by Theophylact, Oecumenius, and the rest, doth manifestly declare, that those fathers called the celebration of the Lordes Supper, by the name of a sacrifice vnproperly, which they confessed to be rather a remembrance of Christes onely once offered sacrifice, then a sacrifice in deede, as that was. Wherefore though they yeelded to the terme that was commonly receiued, yet as well in their commentaries vpon this epistle, as in other of their writings they declared, how they vnderstand that terme: the vnproper vse whereof is the onely colour that you haue in the auncient fathers for your propitiatorie sacrifice: but in the Scriptures you haue not so much as the shadowe or colour of the name of sacrifice, euer applied to the celebration of the Lords Supper. And as for the auncient Lyturgies, they haue not sacrifice in them of the very body and bloud of Christ, but onely a remembrance of the onely sacrifice of Christs death, for which they offer the spirituall sacrifice of praise and thankesgiuing, of them selues, and all that they haue. The multitude of places that are quoted, are for the most part answered alreadie in Luke cap. 22. Sect. 5. The rest haue nothing but the name of sacrifice, which how it was vnderstood, I haue often declared. But that which is quoted out of the first Nicen Councell out of the Greeke is this: In the holy table let vs not basely attend the bread and cup set before vs, but lifting vp our mindes, let vs vnderstand by faith, that lambe of God which taketh away the sinnes of the world, to be set on that holy table, to be vnbloudily sacrificed of the priestes, and that we truely taking his owne precious body and bloud, doe beleeue these to be mysticall tokens of our redemption. For this cause we take not much, but litle, that we may know we take not to fill vs, but for holinesse. The very wordes here vsed doe plainely declare, that Christ is not really offered in the sacrament, but ἀθύτως, without sacrifice, that is, by a commemoration of his death and onely sacrifice. The like wordes they haue of baptisme: Doest thou see water? vnderstand that the power of God is hidden in the waters. Where euery man seeth that the words must be vnderstood figuratiuely, as it is vsuall in sacraments. In the libell of accusation of Dioscorus, exhibited to the Councell of Chalcedon by Ischyrion a Deacon, it is declared, that whereas the Emperours owne head, aſwell ſhe by him, as he by her, being accuſtomed to be offred. In theſe words he declareth firſt, that the Lords Supper is vnproperly called a Sacrifice, when in deed it is a Sacrament of the only oblation of Chriſt. Secondly, that in this Sacrament is offred not a Sacrifice propitiatorie for ſinne, but a ſpirituall Sacrifice of thankeſgiuing, for the redemption of the Church, which is ſpiritually offred by Chriſt in this Sacrifice, as Chriſt is offred by the Church. His meaning alſo, of the vſe of this terme ſacrifice, he ſheweth Epiſt. 23. Bonifacio. Was not Chriſt offred but once onely in him ſelfe? and yet in a Sacrament, he is not onely offred for the people, at euery ſolemnitie of Eaſter, but euery day. Neither doth he lie, that being aſked the queſtion, doth anſwere, that he is offred. For if Sacraments had not a certaine ſimilitude of thoſe things, whereof they be Sacraments, they ſhould not be Sacraments at all. And of this ſimilitude, for the moſt part, they receiue the names of the things them ſelues. Therefore, as after a certaine manner, the Sacrament of the body of Chriſt, is the body of Chriſt, the Sacrament of the bloud of Chriſt, is the bloud of Chriſt, ſo the Sacrament of faith, is faith. It is moſt cleere by this ſaying, that the Sacrament was called a Sacrifice vnproperly, becauſe it is a Sacrament or holy ſigne of the onely Sacrifice of Chriſtes death, as alſo it is called the body of Chriſt, becauſe it is a ſigne and Sacrament thereof. The ſecond place of S. Auguſtine. De trinitat. lib. 4. c. 14. is moſt impudently alledged, to proue that Chriſts body was giuen him to be ſacrificed vpon the altar, where Auguſtine ſpeaketh onely of the Sacrifice of Chriſtes death, whereof he ſpake in the Chapter before, where he ſaith: By his death, that one moſt true Sacrifice offered for vs, what ſinnes ſoeuer there was, for which the principalities and powers held vs by right, to ſuffer puniſhment, he purged, aboliſhed, extinguiſhed; and by his reſurrection into a new life, he called vs that are predeſtinated, and being called, he iuſtified vs, and being iuſtified, he glorified vs. Therefore it is true, that is cited in the decrees as out of Auguſtine de conſec. diſt. 2. c. Hoc eſt. That offering of his fleſh, which is made by the prieſts hands, is called the paſſion, death, crucifying of Chriſt, not in trueth of the thing, but in a ſignifying myſterie.

RHEM. 8 8 Neither did they pleaſe thee.) By that he ſaith, the things offered in the Law, did not pleaſe God, and likewiſe by that he ſaith, the former to be taken away, that the ſecond may haue place, it is euident, that all hoſties and ſacrifices be not taken away by Chriſt, as the Heretikes fooliſhly conceiue: but that the old hoſties of brute beaſtes be abrogated to giue place to that which is the proper hoſt of the new Law, that is, Chriſts owne body. The Iewes ſacrifices refuſed, not all ſacrifice.

FVLKE. 8 By the Sacrifice of Chriſt once offered, all hoſts and ſacrifices are taken away: as the words of the text are manifeſt, ſeeing we are ſanctified by the oblation of the body of Chriſt once offered, ver. 10. That which commeth in place therefore of the old ſacrifices of the law, is the one onely oblation of Chriſts body, which was once offered, and neither can, nor neede euer to be offered any more. The one ſacrifice of Chriſts death.

RHEM. 9 11 Often offering the ſame hoſtes.) As S. Paul is forced often to inculcate that one principle of the efficacie and ſufficiencie of Chriſts death, becauſe of the Hebrues to much attributing to their legall ſacrifices, and for that they did not referre them to Chriſts onely oblation. So we, through the intolerable ignorance and importunitie of the Heretikes of this time (abuſing the wordes of the Apoſtle ſpoken in the due defence and declaration of the value and efficacie of Chriſtes paſſion aboue the ſacrifices of the Law) are forced to repeate often, that the Apoſtles reaſon of many Prieſts and often repetition of the ſelfe ſame ſacrifices, concerneth the ſacrifices of the Law onely, vnto which he oppoſeth Chriſt ſacrifice and Prieſthood: and ſpeaketh no word of or againſt the Sacrifice of the new Teſtament, which is the ſacrifice of Chriſtes own Prieſthood, Law, and inſtitution, yea the ſame ſacrifice done dayly vnblouddily, that once was done blouddily: made by the ſame Prieſt Chriſt Ieſus, though by his miniſters handes: and not many hoſtes, as thoſe of the olde Law were, but the very ſelfe ſame in number, euen Chriſtes owne body that was crucified. And that you may ſee that this is the iudgement of all antiquitie, and their expoſition of theſe and the like wordes of this Epiſtle, and that they ſeeing the very ſame argumentes that the Proteſtantes now make ſo much a doe withall among the ſimple and vnlearned, yet well perceiued that they made nothing againſt the dayly oblation or ſacrifice of the altar, and therefore anſwered them before the Proteſtants were extant, 1200. yeeres: we will ſet downe ſome of their words, whoſe authoritie and expoſition of the Scriptures muſt preuaile in all that haue wiſedome or the feare of God, aboue the falſe and vaine gloſes of Caluine and his folowers. We muſt often note that the Apoſtles ſpeach of many prieſts and often ſacrificing, concerneth onely the Iewes prieſtes and ſacrifices, not the prieſtes and ſacrifice of the new Teſtament.

Thus then firſt ſaith S. Ambroſe: Quid ergo nos &c. What we then? doe not we offer euery day? we offer ſurelie: but this ſacrifice is an exampler of that: for we offer alwaies the ſelfe ſame, and not now one Lambe, to morowe an other, but alwaies the ſelfe ſame thing: therefore it is one ſacrifice, otherwiſe, by this reaſon becauſe it is offred in many places, there ſhould be many Chriſtes. not ſo, but it is one Chriſt in euery place, here whole, and there whole, one body. But this which we doe, is done for a commemoration of that which was done. for we offer not an other ſacrifice, as the high Prieſt of the olde Lawe, but alwaies the ſelfe ſame &c. Primaſius S. Auguſtines ſcholer doth alſo preoccupate theſe Proteſtants obiections thus: What ſhal we ſay then? do not our Prieſtes dayly offer ſacrifice? they offer ſurely, becauſe we ſinne dayly, and dayly haue neede to be cleanſed: and becauſe he cannot die, he hath giuen vs the ſacrament of his body and bloud: that as his Paſſion was the redemption and abſolution of the world, ſo alſo this oblation may be redemption and cleanſing to all that offer it in truth and veritie. So ſaith this holy father, to witte, that as the ſacrifice of the Croſſe was a generall redemption, ſo this of the altar is, to all that vſe it, a particular redemption or application of Chriſts redemption to them. In which ſenſe alſo V. Bede calleth the holy Maſſe, redemptionem corporis & animæ ſempiternam, the euerlaſting redemption of body and ſoule. lib. 4. cap. 22. hiſtor. Againe the ſame Primaſius, The diuinitie of the word of God which is euery where, maketh that there are not many ſacrifices, but one, although it be offered of many, and that as it is one body which he tooke of the Virgins wombe, not many bodies, euen ſo alſo one ſacrifice, not diuers, as thoſe of the Iewes were. The Caluiniſts arguments againſt Chriſts body often offered, and in many places, anſwered by the fathers long agoe. in 10. cap. hebr. ibidem. The generall redemption vpon the Croſſe is particularly applyed in the ſacrifice of the altar. Primaſius citato.

* S. Chryſoſtome alſo, and after him Theophylacte, and Oecumenius, and of the Latines, Haimo, Paſchaſius, Remigius, and others, obiect to themſelues thus: Doe not we alſo offer euery day? we offer ſurely. but this ſacrifice is an exampler of that, for we offer alwaies the ſelfe ſame: and not now one Lambe, to morowe an other, but the ſelfe ſame: therefore this is one ſacrifice. Otherwiſe, becauſe it is offered in many places, there ſhould be many Chriſtes. And a litle after, Not an other ſacrifice, as the high Prieſt of the olde lawe, but the ſelfe ſame we doe alwaies offer, rather working a remembrance or commemoration of the ſacrifice. See the Annotation Luke 22. 19. vpon theſe words, A commemoration. Thus did all the auncient fathers Greeke and Latine treate of theſe matters, and ſo they ſaid Maſſe, and offered dayly. and many of them made ſuch formes of celebrating the diuine ſacrifice, as the Greekes and Latines doe vſe in their Liturgies and Maſſes, and yet they ſaw theſe places of the Apoſtle and made commentaries vpon them, and vnderſtood them (I trowe) as well as the Proteſtants. * hom. 17. in ep. ad Hebr.

FVLKE. That the Hebrues, to whom the Apostle writeth, in that they were Christians, did referre their sacrifices to Christes only oblation, as al faithful Iewes did before Christs comming in the flesh I haue often proued: for els they should haue been no better then carnall Iewes. And this to deny is intollerable, both ignorance and impudence in these Rhemish Papists. The words of the Apostle spoken in defence and declaration of the valure and efficacie of the sacrifice of Christes death once offered, and neuer to be repeated, doe of them selues ouerthrow your blasphemous sacrifice of the Masse: therefore we doe no way abuse them. Wherefore, where as you say, The Apostles reasons of many Priestes, and often repetition of the same sacrifices, concerneth the sacrifices of the lawe onely, it is false for they make also and much more, against all the false sacrifices of the Gentiles, and all other false sacrifices, whatsoeuer the deuil should afterward inuent by Heretikes. Therefore S. Augustine saith. To this highest and true sacrifice, all false sacrifices haue giuen place. De ciuit. lib. 10. c. 20. Againe the Apostles reasons doe so make against the many Priestes and often sacrifice of the lawe, that they must giue place to the onely Priest and sacrifice once offered by Christ: whereas if there be infinite Priests and sacrifices, or one sacrifice infinitely repeated in the new Testament, the Apostles reasons make nothing against the multitude of Priestes and sacrifices of the law. That he speaketh no word of the sacrifice of the Masse, it is because there is none such, but against that false fiction of such a blasphemous sacrifice, he speaketh often when he speaketh of the singular Priesthood of Christ, and of his one oblation once offered, whereby eternall redemption is found, and of the impossibilitie of reiterating the same sacrifice; because Christ can die no more. Where you say your popish sacrifice and sacrificing priesthood, is of Christs institution to be done dayly vnbloudily, you haue no word of God to proue such institution or maner of oblation: wherefore it is dothing els but a blasphemous inuention of Antichrist, to deface the glory of Christs onely sacrifice. As for the iudgement of all antiquitie, if it were contrary to so cleare light of the trueth, as is expressed in plaine words and most euident reasons in this Epistle, it were nothing to be regarded. But as I haue often said and proued the auncient fathers, although they doe vnproperly vse the word of sacrifice for that which is but a sacrament and commemoration of the onely sacrifice of Christ once offered on the crosse: yet doe they expound them selues at one time or another, that they meane it to be onely a sacrament, not a sacrifice propitiatorie in deede, or else a spirituall sacrifice of praise and thanksgiuing. That you say our arguments were answered 1200. yeeres agoe, it is false: for none of the fathers of that age acknowledged your popish sacrifice of the masse. The words that are ascribed to S. Ambrose, are the same which are found in the Commentary of Chrysostome vpon the Hebrues, and doe plainely declare, that the celebration of the Lords Supper, is vnproperly called a sacrifice, being in deede a commemoration of the onely sacrifice of Christes death: and therefore it followeth, that it is rather a memorie of that sacrifice, then a sacrifice in deede. We offer not another sacrifice, as the high Priest, but the same alwaies, but rather we worke the remembrance of a sacrifice. Thus Ambrose and Chrysostome doe plainely confesse, that the sacrament is vnproperly called a sacrifice, which is rather an exemplar, a remembrance, or memoriall of that sacrifice of Christ. The saying of Primasius also you doe falsifie, by gelding out these words, which doe expound his meaning. For these are his words. What then shall we say? doe not our Priestes the same thing dayly, while they offer sacrifice continually? they offer in deede but for the remembrance of his death. And because we sinne dayly, and haue neede dayly to be cleansed, because he cannot now die, he hath giuen vs this Sacrament of his body and bloud, that as his passion was the redemption and absolution of the world: so also this oblation may be redemption and cleansing, to all that offer it in true faith, and haue a good intention.

The sacrifice of Christ once offered.

Sacrifice of the masse.

First therefore he saith not, that the priestes offer a sacrifice propitiatory for sinne, but they are said to offer sacrifice vnproperly: for they offer not absolutely but vnto, or for the remembrance of Christes death.

Secondly he saith, that Christ hath giuen this sacrament of his body and bloud, that by true faith we might apply the benefite of redemption by Christes death vnto vs, seeing the sacrament is a seale of God added to his word, to confirme our faith. And this is the true meaning of Primasius, howsoeuer by leauing out and altering his wordes, you would enforce him to say another thing. Neither doth Bede (although he liued in a superstitious time, long after Antichrist did openly shew him selfe) call the masse, the euerlasting redemption of body and soule. But saith, that vpon the credite of the report of one Imma, (a meete argument for such a conclusion) which said he was deliuered of his bondes, wherein he was held prisoner, so often as his brother Tunna caused Masse to be said for him, supposing he had been dead: Men vnderstood, that the healthfull sacrifice auailed to redemption both of soule and body euerlasting. The like fable telleth Gregorie hom. 37. in Euang. The words of Primasius that folow doe shew, that Christ is daily receiued whole of euery one of the faithfull, that receiueth the sacrament worthely by his diuine power, not altering the nature of Christs body, but by feeding them with it spiritually through faith. The other saying borrowed out of S. Chrysostome by Theophylact, Oecumenius, and the rest, doth manifestly declare, that those fathers called the celebration of the Lordes Supper, by the name of a sacrifice vnproperly, which they confessed to be rather a remembrance of Christes onely once offered sacrifice, then a sacrifice in deede, as that was. Wherefore though they yeelded to the terme that was commonly receiued, yet as well in their commentaries vpon this epistle, as in other of their writings they declared, how they vnderstand that terme: the vnproper vse whereof is the onely colour that you haue in the auncient fathers for your propitiatorie sacrifice: but in the Scriptures you haue not so much as the shadowe or colour of the name of sacrifice, euer applied to the celebration of the Lords Supper. And as for the auncient Lyturgies, they haue not sacrifice in them of the very body and bloud of Christ, but onely a remembrance of the onely sacrifice of Christs death, for which they offer the spirituall sacrifice of praise and thankesgiuing, of them selues, and all that they haue. The multitude of places that are quoted, are for the most part answered alreadie in Luke cap. 22. Sect. 5. The rest haue nothing but the name of sacrifice, which how it was vnderstood, I haue often declared. But that which is quoted out of the first Nicen Councell out of the Greeke is this: In the holy table let vs not baselie attend the bread and cup set before vs, but lifting vp our mindes, let vs vnderstand by faith, that lambe of God which taketh away the sinnes of the world, to be set on that holy table, to be vnbloudily sacrificed of the priestes, and that we truely taking his owne precious body and bloud, doe beleeue these to be mysticall tokens of our redemption. For this cause we take not much, but litle, that we may know we take not to fill vs, but for holinesse. The very wordes here vsed doe plainely declare, that Christ is not really offered in the sacrament, but ἀναιμάτως, without sacrifice, that is, by a commemoration of his death and onely sacrifice. The like wordes they haue of baptisme: Doest thou see water? vnderstand that the power of God is hidden in the waters. Where euery man seeth that the words must be vnderstood figuratiuely, as it is vsuall in sacraments. In the libell of accusation of Dioscorus, exhibited to the Councell of Chalcedon by Ischyrion a Deacon, it is declared, that whereas the Emperours had appointed certaine corne to be giuen to the cities of Lybia, specially that of it the Sacrifice might be offered, and the rest be bestowed vpon the releefe of the poore, Dioscorus sold the said corne at excessiue prices, so that of it neither the reuerend and vnbloudie sacrifice was celebrated, nor the poore releeued. Here is nothing but the bare terme of host and sacrifice, by which is meant the celebration of the Lords Supper, whereof the multitude did often communicate. For else a small quantitie of corne would serue to offer the popish sacrifice of the masse. In the Councell of Ancyra, the first canon excludeth priestes from exercising their office, if they haue sacrificed to Idoles, among which offices offerre to offer, is named: whereby the celebration of the Lords Supper is signified. In the 4. canon there is no word of sacrificing, but to Idoles. In the 5. canon it is decreed, that they which in mourning garments and behauiour, haue come into the temple of Idoles, should after three yeeres repentance, be receiued to the communion without oblation: that is, their oblation should not be receiued, as was vsuall to be receiued of other Christians that had not fallen: although Balsamon thinketh it to be meant of the participation of the Lords Supper. In the councell of Neocæsarea it is decreed, that in presence of the Bishop, the priests should not offer, nor giue the sanctified bread, nor deliuer the cuppe: Which is nothing els, but to offer the sacrifice of praise and thankesgiuing in the ministration of the Lords Supper. In the councell of Laodicea it is decreede, that after the priest by a kisse hath giuen peace to the Bishop, and the lay men one to another, then the oblation should be offered. Which whether it be the distribution of the Lords Supper, or some other oblation: certaine it is, that it was not the sacrifice of the masse, which is done before the Paxe be giuen. In the 2. of Carthage, is nothing but the word sacrificing: which proueth no propitiatorie sacrifice of the body and bloud of Christ. In the 3. of Carthage it is decreed, that in the sacraments of the body & bloud of our Lord, nothing more be offered, then our Lord himselfe deliuered, that is, bread and wine mixt with water: and that nothing more be offered in the sacrifices, but of grapes and corne. This decree testifieth, that the sacrifice was of bread and wine, not of the naturall body and bloud of Christ: also, that Christ deliuered bread and wine, which ouerthroweth transubstantiation: as for the name of sacrifice, we haue sufficiently declared how it was vsed. In the 4. of Carthage, is nothing but the name of oblation, and the consecration of the oblation: which proueth, that the oblation was not the body of Christ: for the body and blood of Christ is not consecrated, but the bread and wine to be a sacrament thereof. The counterfect fables of S. Andrew and S. Martiall, are worthie of none answere. Origen speaking of the bread of proposition saith: If these things be referred to the greatnesse of the mysterie, thou shalt finde that this commemoration hath effect of great propitiation. If thou returne to that bread which came downe from heauen, and giueth life to this world, this bread of proposition, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation by faith in his blood: and if thou looke vnto that commemoration of which our Lord saith: Doe this in remembrance of me, thou shalt finde, that this is the onely commemoration, that maketh God mercifull to men. In these words he doth not call the Sacrament a sacrifice, but a commemoration: which as it is a Sacrament of Christes death, whereby onely God is reconciled vnto vs, so it confirmeth our faith in that reconciliation, and sacramentally reconcileth God to men. Finally the vnlearned are to be admonished, that the participle which they translate here in the present time offering, as though Christ still offered, is in the Greeke of the preter tense or time past, and should haue beene translated after he hath offered, or hauing offered.

RHEM. 10 18 Now there is not.) Christs death cannot be applied vnto vs in that full and ample sort as it is in Baptisme, but once: Christ appointing that large remission and application to be made but once in euery man, as Christ died but once. for it is not meant that all sinne shall cease after Christs sacrifice vpon the Crosse, nor that there should be no oblation for sins committed after Baptisme, or that a man could not sinne at all after Baptisme, or that if he sinned afterward, he could haue no remedie or remission by Gods ordinance in the Church, which diuers falsehods sundry Heretikes gather of this and such like places: but onely the Apostle telleth the Hebrues, as he did before chap. 6. and as he doth straight afterward, that if they fall now (whereunto they seemed very prone) to their olde lawe, and voluntarily after the knowledge and profession of the Christian faith by Baptisme, commit this sinne of incredulitie and apostasie, they can neuer haue that abundant remission applied vnto them by Baptisme, which can neuer be ministred to them againe. And that generall full pardon he calleth here, oblation, and afterward in the 26. verse hostiam pro peccato, an host for sinne.

When the Apostle seemeth to say, there is no remission or oblation for sinne, he alwaies meaneth that full remission by Baptisme.

FVLKE. 10 The Apostle concludeth, that seeing remission of sins is obteyned by the sacrifice of Christs death, there remaineth now no more sacrifice for sin. Thereof it followeth inuincibly, that the masse is not a sacrifice for sin: to auoide which most cleare consequence, you say most impudently, the full pardon obtained in Baptisme is called an oblation for sinne. So you will bring in the sactifice of baptisme, as yon doe the sacrifice of the masse. Such monstrous conclusions you inuent, to obscure the most cleere light of the trueth. For it is most manifest, that the Apostle out of the text of Scripture rehearsed immediately before concludeth, that all oblation is now taken away, because remission of sinnes it obteyned by Christs one oblation of himselfe vpon the Crosse. So doe the auncient fathers expound this text. Chrysostome saith: Therefore he forgaue sinnes, when he gaue the testament, he gaue the testament by his sacrifice: if therefore he forgaue sinnes by one sacrifice, now there is no neede of the second. Theodoret saith: Where there is remission of these things, now there is no oblation for sinne: for it is superfluous after remission is giuen. And he promised remission saying: Their sinnes and iniquities, I will no more remember. Primasius referreth it to the abolishing of the sacrifices of the law, but the text is general of all oblation: and the same reason extendeth to all other sacrifices that might be inuented. Photius vpon this text saith: What neede is there of many oblations, when that one which Christ offered is sufficient to take away sinnes? The sacrifice of the masse therefore, can neuer stand with the trueth of this text to be a sacrifice for sinne.

The sacrifice of the Masse.

RHEM. 11 26 If we sinne willingly.) As the Caluinistes abuse other like places against the holy sacrifice of the Masse, so they abuse this as the Nouatians did before them, to proue that an Heretike Apostata, or any that wilfully forsaketh the trueth, can neuer be forgiuen. Which (as is before declared in the 6. chap.) is most wicked blasphemie: the meaning hereof being, as is there said, onely to terrifie the Hebrues, that falling from Christ they cannot so easily haue the host of Christs death applyed vnto them, because they cannot be baptized any more, but must passe by sacramentall penance, and satisfaction, and other hard remedies which Christ hath prescribed after Baptisme in the Churches discipline. Therefore S. Cyril saith, lib. 5. in Io. cap. 17. Penance is not excluded by these words of Paul, but the renewing by the lauer of regeneration. He doth not here take away the second or third remission of sinnes (for he is not such an enemie to our saluation) but the host which is Christ he denieth that it is to be offered againe vpon the Crosse. So saith this holy Doctor. And by this place and the like you see, how perilous a thing it is for Heretikes and ignorant persons to read the Scriptures. Which by folowing their owne fantasie they peruert to their damnation.

The Caluinists heresie against remission of sinnes. All sinnes may be remitted by penance, but not so fully as by Baptisme. Perilous reading of the Scriptures. 2. Peter 3.

By that which followeth in amplification of this sinne it is manifest, that the Apostle speaketh not of euery voluntary trespasse, but of wilfull, obstinate, and contumelious falling away from Christ, which is sinne against the holy Ghost, and shall neuer be remitted, either in this world or in the world to come. Therefore this text fauoureth not the heresie of the Nouatians, which denied repentance after Baptisme for any offence. But it is most most wicked blasphemie (you say) to affirme, that wilfull and generall Apostasie can neuer be forgiuen. You must charge the Apostle then with blasphemie, and our Sauiour Christ: for their wordes are plaine to that effect. But the meaning (you say) is onely to terrifie the Hebrues, that falling from Christ, they cannot so easily haue the benefit of Christes death applied vnto them. His meaning in deede is to terrifie the Hebrue, but he faineth not the danger to be greater then it is, when he saith, it is impossible for them to be renewed, that haue sinned against the holy Ghost. He wanted not wordes to haue expressed his meaning, if it had beene onely of the hard sacramentall penance, satisfaction, and other hard remedies that Christ hath prescribed after baptisme, but neuer a word of them in the Scripture: He would not haue said, it is an impossible thing, but it is an hard matter. Yea if he had knowen how easily all that hard penance, satisfaction, and other hard remedies, may be released by a generall pardon of the Pope a pœna & culpa, he could not iustly haue terrified them with the difficultie of the remedies. For the benefit of Christes death is not more easily applied by baptisme, then all penance and satisfaction is released by a Popes pardon. Therefore all your doctrine of hard penance, satisfaction, and other hard remedies after baptisme, tendeth to none other ende but to aduance the Popes pardon aboue the Passion of Christ. That which you alleage as out of S. Cyril, (as I haue often told you of the same ouer-sight) is the saying of Iodocus Clictouæus, who is auctor of those foure bookes of the Commentaries vpon Iohn, that are inserted in his workes, to supplie the want of so many bookes of Cyrillus that are lost. Wherein you, that so often charge us to write and reason so vnlearnedly, so ignorantly, so foolishly, behaue your selues most ridiculously, ignorantly, foolishly, vnlearnedly, and declare what iudgement you haue in the writings of the auncient Fathers. But to the matter, we confesse with Clictouæus, that the Apostle doth not take away remission of sinnes, tenne thousand times committed after baptisme, but to them that are fallen away, he denieth renuing by repentance, such as is confirmed by the Sacrament of Baptisme. Which hauing relation to the onely sacrifice of Christes death, hath alwaies power to assure vs of remission of sinnes, if we doe not by wilfull falling away, and sinning against the holy Ghost, make the death of Christ vneffectuall vnto vs.

Sinne against the holy Ghost.

Popes pardon.

Finally, it is no perilous thing to reade the Scriptures (for then the Apostles that wrote them to be read, were auctors of the perill) but for ignorant and vngodly men rashly to follow their fancie, in expounding of the Scriptures, and to interprete them so as they be contrary one to another, which in the word of truth, is impossible.

Reading of the Scriptures to whom perilous.

RHEM. 12 29 The bloud of the Testement.) Whosoeuer maketh no more account of the bloud of Christes sacrifice, either as shed vpon the Crosse, or as in the holy Chalice of the aultar (for our Sauiour calleth that also the bloud of the new Testament) then he doth of the bloud of calues and goates, or of other common drinkes, is worthie death, and God will in the next life, if it be not punished here, reuenge it with grieuous punishment.

Contempt of Christs bloud in the Sacrament.

FVLKE. 12 Whosoeuer dishonoreth the bloud of Christ verilie shed on the Crosse, or the Sacrament thereof, which is the seale of the confirmation of the new Testament in the same bloud, is worthy of death temporall and eternall. Hesych. lib. 2 c. 16. Quia scientes & volentarie peccantes, etsi, se dicunt pœnitere, non pœnitent pure: blasphemia enim eorum ceciderunt est. Propter quid & Paulus dicebat, Voluntarie enim peccantibus &c. Origen. in Hier. hom. 10. Vnus quisque nostrum quando peccat, maxime cum peccat ingentia, in Iesum peccat. Si autem & recesserit a fide, hæc facit spiritualiter Christo, quæ corporaliter fecit Ierusalem. Quamobrem quanto plus arbitramini deteriora mereri supplicia eum qui filium Dei conculcauerit, & sanguinem Testamenti pollutum duxerit in quo sanctificatur, & spiritui gratiæ contumeliam fecerit? si conculcasti Iesum filium Dei, fetisti contitium spiritus gratiæ, quis parcet super te? quis contristabitur super te? quis reuertetur rogare ea quæ in pacem sunt tibi? Ipsum Iesum qui rogabat pariter, & præstabat ea quæ erant in pacem, prodidit anima peccatrix: quis potest, vltra rogare conuersus ad ea quæ sunt in pacem tibi? Scimus ergo quia impossibile est &c. Omni labore nitamur, ne & de nobis dicatur, Quis parcet super te Ierusalem? aut quis contristabitur super te? aut quis reuertetur rogare ea quæ in pacem sunt tibi? The same hath Robanus Maurus in Hier. lib. 7. cap. 15.

RHEM. 13 31 It is horrible.) Let all Christian people doe satisfaction and penance for their sinnes in this life, for the iudgements of God in the next life done by God himselfe, of what sort soeuer, whether temporall as in Purgatorie, or eternall as in Hell, be exceeding grieuous.

Penance.

FVLKE. 13 Let all Christian people be carefull not to commit sinne, and of such sinnes, as through frailtie and ignorance they haue fallen into, let them be truely penitent in this life, and obteine mercy by the onely satisfaction of Christ, or else looke for eternall damnation, by the terrible sentence of Gods iustice. As for the paines of purgatorie, are but a vaine terriculament, to make men pay deere for popish masses, merites, satisfactions and pardons.

Purgatory.

RHEM. 14 34 You had compassion.) To be mercifull to the afflicted for religion, and to be partakers of their miseries, is a very meritorious worke, and giueth great confidence before God in the day of repayment or remuneration for the same.

Mercie to the imprisoned for religion.

FVLKE. 14 To be mercifull to the afflicted for true religion, is a good worke, which God will doubtles largely reward of his promise, not of the merite thereof. Therefore no trust is to be reposed in the merite of good workes, but onely in the mercy of God, which forgiueth our sinnes, and rewardeth his gifts in vs, not our merits or deserts.

Merite.

RHEM. 34 With ioy.) If all Christian men would consider this, they would not thinke it so great a matter to loose their land or goods for defence of the Catholike faith.

Losse of goods for religion.

38 Liueth of faith.) Faithfull men afflicted in this life, haue their comfort in their assured faith and hope of Christs comming to deliuer them once from all those miseries: and so by that faith and comfort they liue, whereas otherwise this miserable life were a death.

Faith is the comfort of the afflicted.

CHAP. XI.

RHEM. 1 He exhorteth them by the definition of faith, to sticke vnto God, though they see not yet his reward: shewing that all the Saincts aforetime did the like, being all constant in faith, though not one of them receiued the promise, that is the inheritance in heauen: but they and we now after the comming of Christ receiue it together.

FVLKE. 1 The Apostle doth not giue here a perfect definition of faith, but describeth it so farre forth, as was necessarie for his purpose of exhortation to patience. The fulnesse of the promise, neither the fathers before Christ, nor any since Christ, haue yet receiued in heauen, nor shall before the generall resurrection, when all the elect shalbe made perfect together.

Gen.12,4. 13,1. 8 * By faith, he that is called, Abraham, obeyed to goe forth into the place which he was to receiue for inheritance: and he went forth, not knowing whyther he went.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XI.

RHEM. 2 5 Henoch was.) Here it appeareth that Henoch yet liueth and is not dead: against the Caluinists. See the Annot. Apocal. chap. 11.

RHEM. 3 6 Rewarder to them.) We muſt beleeue that God will reward all our good workes: for he is a rewarder of true iuſtice, not an accepter or imputer of that that is not.

FVLKE. 3 Seeing God hath promiſed to rewarde all our good workes, which be his graces and giftes in us, not for the merit of the works, but for Chriſts ſake: we muſt vndoubtedly beleeue that God will reward our good works: yet it followeth not that we are iuſt by them, but onely by faith in the iuſtice of Chriſt imputed to vs. Where you ſay, that God is not an accepter or imputer of that which is not. It is true, if you meane that the iuſtice of Chriſt which he accepteth and imputeth to vs through faith, is true iuſtice: but if you meane that God imputeth not iuſtice vnto vs except it be in us, you ſet your ſelfe directly againſt the Apoſtle Rom. 4. Who proueth by many Arguments, that God imputeth righteouſneſſe to the vngodly man, by faith without workes. FVLKE. 5 You falſly bely the Proteſtants. For they doe not deny that men may or ought to doe good, in reſpect of reward. But that the reſpect of Gods glory, and their duetie, ought to moue them to doe good, rather then reſpect of reward and feare of puniſhment. Slander.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XI.

RHEM. 6 1 Faith is.) By this deſcription of faith, and by all the commendation thereof through the whole Chapter, you may well perceiue that the Apoſtle knew not the forged ſpeciall faith of the Proteſtants, whereby euery one of theſe new Sect-maſters and there followers beleeue their ſinnes are remitted, and that them ſelues ſhall be ſaued, though their ſectes be cleane contrary one to an other. Not onely of a ſpeciall faith.

FVLKE. 6 It followeth of neceſſitie of the whole diſcourſe of the Apoſtle, that euery one of the fathers beleeued that his ſinnes were forgiuen, and that he ſhould be ſaued. For no ſinner can hope to haue reward of eternall life which God promiſeth, except he beleeue that God hath forgiuen his ſinnes, which deſerue eternal death. That Sectmaſters of contrarie ſects, beleeue that they ſhalbe ſaued, it is no true faith in them grounded vpon Gods word, but a vaine perſwaſion, as is in the Turkes, Papiſts, Anabaptiſtes, and ſuch like. Damaſc. Orthodor. fid. lib. 4. c. 1. This faith is a ſubſtance of things that are hoped, an argument of things that are not ſeene, an vndoubted and vnwauering hope aſwell of thoſe things which are promiſed vnto vs by God, as of the obteyning of our petitions. True faith.

RHEM. 7 1 Not appearing.) This is the praiſe of faith, ſaith S. Auguſtine, if that which is beleeued, be not ſeene. For what great thing is it, if that be beleeued, which is ſeene? according to that ſentence of our Lord when he rebuked his diſciple, ſaying: Becauſe thou haſt ſeene me Thomas, thou haſt beleeued: bleſſed are they that haue not ſeene and haue beleeued. Aug. in euang. Io. tract. 79. Which may be a rebuke alſo and a checke to all thoſe faithleſſe ſpeaches, I would ſee him, taſt him, touch him and feele his very fleſh in the Sacrament, otherwiſe I will not beleeue. Faith is of things not ſeene as in the B. Sacrament.

FVLKE. 7 Faith, is of ſuch things (as Gods word teacheth) that are not ſeene, therefore the Catholike Church, and the perpetuall continuance thereof, being an article of faith is not ſeene. But it is not ſufficient that a thing be inuiſible, to make it an article of faith: but it muſt be grounded vpon the word of God. Therefore that carnall maner of preſence, of Chriſts body an bloud in the Sacrament inuiſibly, being not taught in the Scripture, but confuted thereby, is no article of faith, but a groſſe hereſie. Yet in ſuch ſort as Chriſt ſaith, the Sacrament to be his body and bloud, ſacramentally, to aſſure vs that we are fedde ſpiritually, with the very body and bloud of Chriſt vnto euerlaſting life, becauſe it is taught in the word of God, though it be neither ſeene with the eye, nor to be conceiued with the carnall reaſon of man, yet we muſt vndoubtedly beleeue it. The Catholike Church inuiſible. The real preſence.

RHEM. 8 6 He that commeth.) Faith is the foundation and ground of all other vertues and worſhip of God, without which no man can pleaſe God. Therefore if one be a Iewe, a Heathen, or an Heretike, that is to ſay, be without the Catholike faith, all his workes ſhall profit him no whit to ſaluation. Nothing profitable or meritorious without faith.

FVLKE. 8 Faith cauſeth our workes to be good and acceptable to God of his mercie, but not meritorious of their worthineſſe, or of the worthineſſe of faith. Merite.

RHEM. 9 21 Adored the toppe of his rod.) *The learned may ſee here that the Apoſtle doth not tie him ſelfe to the Hebrue in the place of Geneſis whence it is alleaged, but foloweth the Septuaginta, though it differ from the Hebrue. as alſo the other Apoſtles and Euangeliſts and our Sauiour him ſelfe did: neither were they curious (as men now a daies) to examine all by the Hebrue onely, becauſe they writing and ſpeaking by the holy Ghoſt, knew very well that this tranſlation * is the ſenſe of the holy Ghoſt alſo, and as true, and as directly intended as the other: and therefore alſo that tranſlation continued alwaies authenticall in the Greeke Church, notwithſtanding the diuerſitie thereof from the Hebrue. Euen ſo we that be Catholikes, follow with all the Latin fathers the authentical Latin tranſlation, though it be not alwaies agreeable to the Hebrue or Greeke* Gen. 47. v. 31. that now is. But Caluin is not only very saucie, but very ignorant, when he saith that the Septuaginta were deceiued, and yet that the Apostle without curiosity was content to folow them: because it is euident, that *the Hebrue being then without points *might be translated the one way as wel as the other. Which they vnderstood so well (and therfore were not deceiued) that within three lines after, in the beginning of the next chapter, they translate the same word, as he would haue it in this place.

Againe obserue in those wordes, He adored the toppe of his rod, that adoration (as the Scripture vseth this word) may be done to creatures, or to God at and before a creature: as, at or *before the Arke of the Testament in old time, now at or before the crucifixe, relikes, images: & in the Psalmes 93. 131. Adore ye his footstole. Adore ye toward his holy mount. We wil adore toward the place where his feet stood: or (which by the Hebrue phrase is al one) Adore ye his holy mount. We wil adore the place where his feete stood. as also *the Greeke fathers, S. Damascene li. 1. de imaginibus, and Leontius cited of him, yea S. Chrysostom also do handle these places, & namely that of the Apostle which we now speake of, interpreting the Greeke as our Latin hath, and as we do, He adored the rod or the top of his rod, that is, the scepter of Ioseph now Prince of Egypt, so fulfilling Iosephs dreames which foretold the same Gen. 37: and withal signifying as it were by this prophetical fact, * the kingdom of Israel or of the ten tribes that was to come of Ioseph by Ephraim his yonger son in the first king Ieroboam, thus the Greeke fathers. Wherevnto may be added, that al this was done in type and figure of Christs scepter and kingdom, whom he adored by and in his Crosse, as he did Ioseph by or in his rod and scepter: and therfore the Apostle saith, he did it by faith, as hauing respect toward things to come. By al which it is euident, that it is false which the Caluinists teach, that we may not adore image, crucifixe, or any visible creature, that is, we may not adore God at or by such creatures, nor kneele before them: and therfore their corrupt translation of this place for the same purpose is intolerable, saying thus (LEANING) vpon his staffe he adored (GOD). adding no lesse then two wordes more then is in the Greeke, which though it might be the sense of this place, and S. Augustine so expounded it, yet they should not make his exposition the text of holy Scripture, specially whereas he only of al the auncient fathers (as Beza confesseth) so expounded it.

Corrupt translation against Dulia.

FVLKE. 9 The Apostle doth not here rehearse any text of the Scripture, and therefore this question of following the Septuaginta is vnseasonable moued. It is true that the Apostles doe alleadge the Scripture diuers times out of the Greeke text, that was in euery mans hands, which though it differed sometime in words frō the Hebrue, yet it did alwayes agree with it in sense. But that the Septuagintaes translation, where it differeth in sense from the Hebrue, or the Latine when it differeth in sense from the trueth of the Hebrue or Greeke, is to be receiued and followed, it is no better then to embrace errour in stead of trueth: and contrary to the minde of S. Augustine himself, De. Doct. Christ. lib. 2. c. 11. though a great patrone of the Septuaginta against S. Hierom, who acknowledged the manifold errors of that translation, and corrected many of them. Neither did all the latine fathers follow your vulgar latine translation, as I haue proued manifestly in answere to your Preface. Neither is the Hebrue and Greeke of the Canonical Scripture that now is, any other in sense then it was alwayes, though some corruption or alteration might be made by the Scribes or writers, which of the learned and diligent where it is any thing material, may easily be perceiued. But Caluin is not only very saucie, but very ignorant, where he saith the Septuaginta were deceiued. How much more saucie then was S. Hierom, that not in one, but in many hundred places, findeth that they were deceiued, and reformeth their errors? But wherein trow you, doth Caluine shew his ignorance? Because it is euident that the Hebrue being then without points, might be translated, as wel the one way as the other. In deed it is like, the translatour of that Greeke text, had the Hebrue without points, & so was deceiued; yet the Hebrue text from the beginning had vowels, without which there could be no certeintie in the reading or vnderstanding therof. Although they that be very wel exercised in the reading of the text with the vowels, can afterward reade it without vowels, and giue it the points if need be, by their knowledge of Grammar, and of the sense of the text, Wherupon many bookes were copied and written without points, which went abroad commonly among the Gentiles. But where you say, the Hebrue being without points, might be translated as wel the one way as the other (if it were possible for the English doctors of Rhemes to be deceiued) I would say you shew more ignorance then Caluine. For to omit that your vulgar latine translation interpreteth the text, wherof you speake Gen. 47. 31. Conuersus ad lectuli caput, Turning himself to the beds bed. Which he doth truly, according to the Hebrue, as you wil not deny, & there can be but one truth, (whereupon it foloweth, that the Grecian trāslating it otherwise was deceiued) yet it is manifest to them that haue but meane knowledge in the Hebrue, that the Greeke translation cannot be true, because it addeth a pronoune αὐτοῦ, where there is no affixe in the Hebrue. The Apostle therefore in this place doth not rehearse that erroneous translation, but as S. Augustine doth expound it Quæst. in Gen. q. 162. he saith that Iacob by faith worshipped God vpon the end of his staffe, that is, when through weakenes of age, and sicknes, he leaned on his staffe. So also doth the Syrian interpreter translate it. So also did diuers other ancient Fathers, as Procopius Gazeus testifieth, expound it, but that they meane of a ciuil adoration: who writing vpon the verse 31. of the 47. chap. of Genes. as it is in the Greeke, hath these words: And Israel adored, ἐπὶ τὸ ἄκρον τῆς ἐξουσίας αὐτοῦ. id est, adorauit insignia regni quod administrabat Iosephus. Alij aiunt Iacobum, more senum, tenuisse Scipionem. Adeunte igitur Iosepho caput inclinauit, & speciem præbuit adorantis. Capite igitur inclinato, peracta est Aegyptiaca adoratio in summitate scipionis. Nam scriptum est, Hebr. 11. Adorauit in summitate virgæ eius, To the same effect writeth Theodoret in Genes. q. 108. Quid est, Et adorauit Israel ἐπὶ τὸ, &c. Israel cum esset senex & infirmus, decumbebat in lecto: sed vbi filium aduentare audiuit, surgens sedit, & baculo innitebatur, dextra apprehendens summitatem eius, conuertens vultum versus filium, premissione de sepultura facta adorauit, inclinans caput ad virgam. Ac primum quidem somnium Ioseph completum est: vidit enim solem & lunam, & vndecim stellas adorantes eum. Præterea decem tribuum subiectionem indcat, quod & diuinus Apostolus dixit, Fide Iacob &c. But it is a perillous corruption, that for more plaine vnderstanding, we say in our translation, leaning vpon his staffe, making S. Augustines exposition, the text of holy Scripture. This is nothing els, but impudent wrangling, for we giue the true sense of the text, agreable to the words therof, which is not to be lyked the worse, because it is S. August. exposition. Your latin translation, as I haue shewed before, hath this word Conuersus which is more then the hebrue text, yet seeing it is included in the meaning of the hebrue text, it were extreme folly to cauill vpon that word. But you wil haue it obserued in these words, he adored the toppe of his rodde, that adoration may be donne to creatures. But that translation of the text, is false, for it leaueth out the præposition ἐπὶ which signifieth super, vpon, or at least as S. Hierome translateth it, ouer against, or towarde the top of his rodde. Therefore thus writeth Hierom against your obseruation In this place, some without cause, do faine, that Iacob adored the toppe of Iosephs scepter, meaning that honouring his sonne he adored his power, when in the hebrue, it is redde, farre otherwise. And Israel worshipped (saith he) toward the beds head: meaning, that after his sonne had sworne vnto him, being secure of his petition, he adored God ouer against his beddes. Quæst. Heb. in Gen.

But if the adoration of creatures, may not be proued by this text, you adde, that adoration may be donne to God, at or before a creature. Yet that wil not be proued by Iacobs worshipping towarde the beds head, or leaning vpon his staffe, which is the true sense of this text. But the scripture in other places sayth adore ye his foote- foote stoole, adore ye towarde his holy mount, or we wil adore towarde the place where his feete stoode, or which by the hebrue phrase (you say) is al one, Adore ye his holy mount, we wil adore the place where his feete stoode. But the true translation of these places, according to the hebrue phrase is: Bow downe at or before his foote stoole, bow downe, at or before his holy mount, we wil bow downe at his foote stoole. It is not all one therefore, to worship or bow downe, at, in, before, or towarde a place, where God hath appointed his worship to be kept, as in the tabernacle, temple, mount Sion, or before the arke, which in those places is called his foote stoole: and to bow downe to those places, or to worship those things. Neither doth it folow, that it is as lawfull to worship, at or before the crucifixe, reliques, and images, as it was to worship at, or before the arke. For that was commanded, and appointed by God, this other is expresly forbidden in the 2 commandement. And Chrysostome, Oecumenius, and the rest of the greekes, that suppose Iacob to haue worshipped Ioseph, they speake but of a ciuil kind of worship, in respect of the kingdome of Ephraim, which should be raised of the posteritie of Ioseph. Eucher. q. ad Hebr. Sceptri significatio est accipienda per virgam, & per hoc, Regni potestatis & fastigium in quo Christus intelligitur adoratus, qui videlicet futurus erat regni Hebreorum caput. Damascen (though he seeke a colour to defende the idolatrous worshipping of the crosse, out of this acte of Iacob) yet he denieth that he did worship it with Latria, or the honour due to God. But your Popes pontifical appointing the legates crosse, to be caried on the right hand of the Emperours sword rendreth this reason, quia debetur ei latria, because the honour proper to God, (so the papists define Latria,) is due vnto it: De ordin. ad recip. Imper. Processionaliter. So that if there were any moderation in the elder sort of them that were deceiued in this point, to auoid idolatry, it is al cleane taken away by the impudent doctrine of Antichrist. Adoration of creatures.

First Gregory allowed images to be in the church, but denyed all maner of adoration of them. lib. 7. Ep. 9. Damascen, allowed them a kinde of adoration, called Dulia, but in no wise Latria, the Pope will haue not only the images of God and Christ to be worshipped with Latria, but euen the image of the crosse. Thus by degrees, the deuill hath brought idolatry in the grossest maner, at length to be allowed for Gods seruice.

RHEM. 10 33 Wrought iustice.) Men are not iust by beleefe onely, as the Protestants affirme, but by working iustice. And wee may note that in al this long commendation of faith in the fathers and holy persons, their good workes are also specially recounted, as Rahabs harbouring the spies, Abrahams offering his sonne (which their workes S. Iames doth inculcate:) Noes making the Arke Gen. 6. Abels better oblation then Cains Gen. 4. & Heb. 11. ver. 4. and so forth. Therefore S. Clement Alexandrinus saith, that the said persons and others were iust by faith and obedience, by faith and hospitalitie, by faith and patience, by faith and humilitie. Not faith only. Iac. 2. Lib. 4. Strom. pag. 240.

The Apostles purpose then is nothing els, but to proue to the Hebrues (who made so great account of their Patriarches and forefathers and their famous actes) that al these glorious personages and their works were commendable and acceptable onely through the faith they had of Christ, without which faith none of all their liues and workes should haue profited them any whit: the Gentiles doing many noble actes (as heretikes may also do) which are of no estimation before God, because they lacke faith. And that is the scope of S. Paules Epistle to the Romanes, and of all other passages where he commendeth faith: further prouing especially in this Epistle to the Hebrewes, that all their sacrifices were nothing els but figures and attestations of Christian faith in Christ and his death. All which high resolution and conclusion against the Iewes and Gentiles, that the Christian faith is the true faith and religion, the Heretikes of our time ignorantly and brutishly abuse against Christian workes, sacrifice, and Sacraments, which the Apostle meant specially to commend and establish by his high commendation of the faith in Christ. No workes of the Patriarks or any other profitable, but by their faith in Christ. Which is alwaies the Apostles meaning in commending faith.

FVLKE. 10 The Apostle sayeth not, that men are iust in the sight of God by working iustice, but that by faith, they wrought iustice, that is, brought forth good and iust works, which through faith were acceptable to God. And that the good workes of the Patriarkes, are in all this commendation specially recompted, it proueth that faith by which men are iustified before God without workes (as Saint Paul proueth at large in the Epistle to the Rom. & Gal.) is alwaies as fruitefull of good works, and is no dead or idle faith against which S. Iames in his epistle speaketh. Neither doth Clemens Alexandrinus say, that the saide persons were iust in Gods sight by faith and obedience, faith and hospitality, faith and patience, faith and humilitie: but onely he sheweth, that faith is alwaies declared by good workes which followe it, therefore he saith: Let vs take Enoch, which being found iust in obedience was translated: and Noe which after hee had beleeued was preserued, and Abraham, which for faith and hospitality was called the friend of God and the father of Isaake. For hospitality and true religion Lot was preserued out of Sodom. For faith and hospitality Rahab the harlot was preserued. For patience and faith they walked in goates skinnes and sheepe skins and garments wouen of camels heare, preaching the kingdome of Christ. &c. Marke that he saith not, that Enoch was made iust by obedience, but in or by obedience, found and declared to be iust, so he meaneth of the rest whose workes God accepted, and rewarded through there faith. Iustification by faith only.

Where you acknowledge that the glorious patriarkes and all their workes, were commendable and acceptable onely through faith, we agree with you. For thereof it followeth, that they were not iust before God by their workes, but only by faith, whereby onely, both there persons and there workes, were commendable and acceptable to him. And S. Paul to the Romaines doth plainely auouch iustification by faith without works, by imputation of iustice, by remission of sinnes as it is manifest, Chap. 3. & 4. &c. What heretikes you meane, that ignorantly and brutishly abuse against christian workes, sacrifice and sacraments, the commendation of true faith and religion, I know not. We acknowledge good workes, to bee the necessary fruits of true faith, yet as Saint Augustine saith, to followe the iustified man, not to goe before vnto iustification. We acknowledge such christian sacrifices, as the Apostle teacheth to bee acceptable vnto god. The sacraments of Christs institution, wee acknowledge with due reuerence: wherefore, if your accusation be against vs, it is nothing els but malicious rayling. Slander.

RHEM. 11 40 Without vs should not.) The fathers before Christ could not be accomplished, that is, not admitted to the heauenly ioyes, vision, and fruition of God, till the Apostles and other of the newe lawe were associate to them, and the way to euerlasting glorie opened by our Lordes death and Ascension. Neither shall either they or we be fully perfected in glorie both of body and soule, till the generall resurrection: Gods prouidence being so, that we should not one be consummated without an other, all being of one faith, and redeemed by one Lord Christ. The Patriarkes and other iust men in heauen before Christ.

FVLKE. 11 By this wrested interpretation, it should follow, that the fathers were not admitted to the heauenly ioyes, till the Apostles were dead: not before the ascension of Christ. But the Apostle meaneth that they and all the elect together, shalbe consummated in glory at the second comming of Christ, when they shalbe receiued into heauen with their bodies, as they are now in the soules. Wherefore, this place proueth not, that the patriarks and other iust mens soules, were not in heauen, before Christ came in the flesh. Donum perfectum tunc omnibus dabitur, quando sanctis aeterna glorificatio tribuitur. Tunc sicut Veritas dicit, Iusti fulgebunt sicut sol in regno Patris sui Fulg. ad Monim. lib. 1. cap. 15. citans hunc locum. The soules of the Patriakes in heauen.

RHEM. 1 By the foresaid examples he exhorteth them to patience, 2 and by example of Christ himselfe crucified, 5 and because this discipline is an argument that they be Gods children, 9 with whose rodde they should be much more content then with that of their carnall fathers: and because it bringeth iustification: 12 Exhorting them therefore to plucke vp their hearts, and to take faster footing: 18 considering that all being nowe so sweete and not terrible as in the old Testament their damnation, if they refuse to heare, will be so much the greater.

FVLKE. 1 There is no word in the text, to proue, that Gods chastisement bringeth iustification, although it render to them that are exercised by it, the peaceable fruite of iustice, that is, teacheth them to feare God, and walke quietly in his commandements, whereby they are not iustified in Gods sight, but declared to be iust. Iustification.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XII.

RHEM. 2 6 He scourgeth) By this we proue that God often punisheth the sinnes euen of his louing children though not with eternall damnation, yet with temporall chastisement and correction: and that he doth not alwaies together with the remission of deadly sinnes and eternall punishment, exempt the offender receiued to his grace, from all fatherly correction either in this life or in the next. Neither haue the Heretikes of this time any reason or scripture in the world, why they should take away Gods chastisement of his children in the next life, more then in this world. Temporal punishment after remission of sins, either here, or in Purgatorie.

FVLKE. 2 God scourgeth his children, not for satisfaction of his iustice, but to bring them to repentance, and to cause them to stande in his feare and obedience. And this chastisement, he exerciseth only in this life, which is the only time of thre repentance, and reformation, which is a sufficient reason, why wee acknowledge no chastisement of Gods children in the next life. The ende of chastisement, set foorth in this scripture, extendeth not to the next life, therefore neitheir doth chastisement it selfe. This apostle also teacheth, that after euery mans death, followeth his eternall iudgement: Heb.9.27. and thereby proueth, that Christ being once dead, Satisfaction for sinne.

Seeing therefore, after the warrefare, which is onely in this life, followeth the iudgement, eyther of eternall rewarde, or eternall punishment, there can bee no temporall chaſtiſement after this life. And beſide all other reaſons, and ſcriptures, that are brought to proue it, this one reaſon is ſufficient, that the ſcripture teacheth not any chaſtiſement of Gods children after this life.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XIII.

RHEM. 1 9 Various and strange.) New, diuers, changeable, and strange doctrines to be auoided, for such be heretical. Against which the best remedie or preseruatiue is, alwaies to looke backe to our first Apostles, and the holy fathers doctrine.

FVLKE. 1 To preserue vs from new and strange doctrines, we must looke to Christ Iesus and his Apostles doctrine, not to the Popes apostles or any other fathers, that teach any thing diuers or different from Christ and his Apostles. Antiquitie.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XIII.

RHEM. 2 2 Hospitalitie.) Hospitalitie, that is receiuing and harbouring of poore pilgrimes, persecuted and desolate persons, is so acceptable to God and so honourable, that oftentimes it hath beene mens good happe to harbour Angels in stead of poore folke vnawares. Which must needes be euer a great benediction to them and their families, as we see by Abraham and Lot, Gen. 18. & 19. (and the like fell also to S. Gregorie, as Io. Diaconus writeth, to whose ordinarie table of poore men, not onely Angels but Christ also came in Pilgrimes weed. In vit. li. 1. c. 10. & li. 2. c. 22. 23.) whereof if he had not example and warrant by S. Paules wordes in this place, and many other expresse Scriptures of the old Testament, those scornefull miscreants of this time making so little account both of good workes and such miraculous entrance of Christ and his Angels into holy mens harbour, would make this also seeme fabulous, as they do other like things. Hospitalitie. Angels harboured.

FVLKE. 2 That Christ in person of his humanitie came to Gregories table, we count it an hereticall fable, being against the articles of our faith, concerning Christes ascension into heauen, sitting at the right hand of God, and second comming in glory. A fable.

RHEM. 3 4 Mariage honorable.) The Apostle (saith a holy Doctor) saith, Mariage honorable in all, and the bed vndefiled. And therefore the seruants of God in that they are not maried, thinke not the good of mariage to be a fault, but yet they doubt not perpetual continencie to be better then good mariage, specially in this time when it is said of continencie, He that can take let him take. De fid. ad Pet. c. 3. apud Aug. in fine. *Marke the doctrine of the fathers and of the Catholike Church concerning matrimonie, that it is honorable, and so honorable, that it is a holy sacrament, but yet * inferiour to virginitie and perpetual continencie: honorable in all, that is, all such as may lawfully marrie and are lawfully maried: not in brother and sister, not in persons that haue vowed the contrarie, to whom the same Apostle saith it is damnable.* 1. Tim. 5. v. 11. And this were the meaning of this place, if it were to be read thus, Mariage is honorable. How mariage is honourable in al, if the Apostle did so say, as he doth not. * 1. Cor. 7. v. 38.

But to see how the Protestants in al their translations, to abuse the simple, do falsifie this sentence of the Apostle, to make it serue for the mariage of Votaries, it is notorius. First, they vse deceit in supplying the verbe substantiue that wanteth, making it the Indicatiue moode thus, Mariage is honorable, &c. as though the Apostle affirmed all mariage to bee honourable or lawfull, where the verbe to be supplied ought rather to be the Imperatiue moode, Let mariage be honorable, that so the speach may be an exhortation or commmaundement to them that be or will be maried, to vse themselues in that state in all fidelitie, cleanlinesse, and coniugall continencie one toward an other: as when S. Peter also and this Apostle exhort maried men to giue honour to their wiues as to the weaker vessels, and to possesse their vessell in honour, not in the passions of ignominie and vncleanlinesse: this is honorable or chast mariage, to which he here exhorteth. And that it is rather an exhortation, then an affirmation, it is euident by the other parts & circumstances of this place both before and after: all which are exhortations in their owne translations, this onely being in the middes, and as indifferent to be an exhortation as the rest (by their owne confession) they restraine of purpose. Our text therefore and all Catholike translations One short place manifoldly corrupted by the Protestants. They restraine the sense to their Heretical fansie. 1. Pet. 3. 1. Thes. 4.

leaue the sentence indifferent as it is in the Greeke, and as true translatours ought to do, not presuming to addict it to one side, lest they should restraine the sense of the holy Ghost to their owne particular fantasie.*

* Τίμιος ὁ γάμος ἐν πᾶσι.

*Againe, * our new Translators corrupt the text in that they translate, in omnibus, among all men, because so they thinke it would sound better to the ignorant, that Priests, Religious, and al whatsoeuer may marrie: where they cannot tell either by the Greeke or Latin, that* in omnibus should be the masculine gender, rather then the neuter (as not only Erasmus, but the Greeke doctors also take it) to signifie that mariage should be honorably kept betweene man and wife in al pointes and in all respects.* See S. Chrys. and Theoph. in hunc locum. *For there may bee many filthy abuses in wedlocke, which the Apostle warneth them to take heede of, and to keepe their mariage bed vndefiled. But the third corruption for their purpose aforesaid, and most impudent, is, * that some of the Caluinists, for* in omnibus, translate, inter quosuis, with a marginall interpretation to signifie al orders: conditions, states, and qualities of men. So boldly they take away all indifferencie of sentences, and make Gods worde to speake iust that which themselues would, and their heresie requireth, in which kinde they passe all impudencie and all heretikes that euer were.

FVLKE. 3 Such prerogatiue as the Apostle 1. Cor. 7. ascribeth to virginitie aboue mariage, we acknowledge with the ancient fathers. To make mariage a Sacrament of the new Testament, which was instituted in the beginning of the worlde, it is against all reason. But you so honour it, in making it a Sacrament, as the Iewes honoured Christ, in clothing him with a purple robe, for you say notwithstanding, that by this holy Sacrament, The sacred order of Priesthod is prophaned You say it is honorable in all men, which may lawfully marry, or be married, therfore it is honourable in the ministers of the Church, whom the Scripture alloweth to be maried. But in vowed persons (you say) it is damnable, the Apostle saith not so, but that those widowes haue condemnation or iudgement, which haue forsaken the first faith, which is of christianitie, not of continencie. But to take it most strongly for your side, that they sinne damnably, which breake their vowe, yet mariage in them also is honorable, as Epiphanius testifieth, Haer. 61. Hierom. ad Demetr. August. de bono viduitatis, cap. 10.

The mariage of the ministers of the church.

But the Apostle (you say) doth not say that mariage is honourable in al men, and it is notorious to see how we do falsifie the Scripture. It is notorious to see how without all shame you doe raile and wrangle. For what saieth the Apostle if he say not so? You say First we vse deceit in supplying the verbe substantiue that wanteth, making it the indicatiue moode. If you had but halfe so much learning as you take vpon you, you might see that the participle ὤν, in the wordes following, declareth the first wordes to be meant affirmatiuely. Againe, the scope of the Apostle is plaine, to disswade men from fornication and adultery, and therefore sheweth the remedie which God hath prouided for mans infirmitie, to be honourable and voide of filthinesse, therefore the verbe of the Indicatiue is more meete then of the Imperatiue moode. For that which you inferre of the exhortation to vse mariage honourably and purely, followeth of the affirmatiue, whereby mariage is approoued by Gods ordinaunce to be such, as is also conteined therein, as though the Apostle should say, Vse the honourable and pure remedie of mariage honourably and purely, for God will iudge fornicators and adulterers. And this text is taken affirmatiuely by Theodoret, whose wordes are these. This law God made in the beginning. Let vs make (saith he) an helper for him. Therefore, when hee had fashioned her and brought her to him, hee ioyned them togither, and gaue the blessing of mariage, saying, increase and multiply, and fill the earth. But intemperate and vnchaste cogitation brought in adultery and fornication. So doth Chrysostome vnderstand the words affirmatiuely, saying: When he had set down mariage to be honourable in all, and the bed to be vndefiled, he sheweth that he doth rightly inferre those wordes which follow. First, if mariage be graunted, the fornicator is iustly punished. The like saying hath Oecumenius, to prooue that he taketh the wordes affirmatiuely. If mariage be permitted and is lawful to the satisfying of lust without sinne, what colour of excuse shall be to whoremongers and adulterers. Fulg. ad Gallam de statu vid. Ep. 2. cap. Sancta quidem sunt Christianorum coniugia, quia & coniugalis ibi castitas custoditur in corpore, & puritas fidei seruatur in corde. Nam & Apostolica dicit authoritas, Honorabile connubium in omnibus, & thorus immaculatus. Non est ergo connubium ex colluuione peccati, sed ex ea institutione Dei. Helych. lib. 5. c. 18. Honorabile est coniugium, & thorus immaculatus. Damasc. Orth. fid. lib. 4. cap. 26. οἰδέ μεν &c. We know our Lord that blessed Mariage with his presence, and him that said, Mariage is honourable &c. Si enim propter peccata in cælis præcedentia ad terras missæ sunt animæ, vt corporibus ligarentur, mentitur Paulus scribens, Honorabiles nuptiæ, & cubile immaculatum. Theoph. Alex. ep. Pasc. 3. Iunilius Afer in Gen. De homine facto hoc necessario iterare curauit dicens, Crescite & multiplicamini, & replete terram, ne quis honorabile connubio inesse peccatum, thorúmque fœditati ac fornicationi esse comparandum. Where it is to be noted also, that Hentenius a papist translateth the text, Honorabile est coniugium, mariage is honorable. How do we then restraine the sense to our heretical fantasie, when beside the particle in the later part of the sentence these auncient interpreters do all vnderstand it affirmatiuely? And how can you call it an hereticall fantasie, to affirme that mariage is honourable in all men, and the mariage bed vndefiled, when the same sense doth follow, if we should read it as wordes of exhortation: Let mariage be honourable in all, &c. Verily Chrysostome vnderstanding the text affirmatiuely, saith that the Apostle fighteth against heretikes. Primasius saith: There were some at that time which condemned mariage, saying that the coniunction of mariage is vncleane, and that a man cannot be cleane which riseth from his wiues bed. Therefore the blessed Apostle saith, that mariage is lawful which is made for loue of children, not to fulfil filthy lust, and he doeth not onely permit it, but also saith, that it pleaseth God. For it is honourable mariage to marrie a wife lawfully for loue of children. Againe he saith, The mariage bed is vndefiled, and they that rise from it are vndefiled, that is not drawing from thence any spot of sinne. It is manifest therefore, that you woul auoid the plaine sense of the Scripture, which euery way must be, that mariage is honourable, and the bed vndefiled to hide your hereticall and diuelish fantasie, whereby you hold that the sacred order of priesthod is prophaned thereby.

Cauilling.

An other corruption you note in our translations, That wee translate among all men, whereas the Greeke may bee as well of the Neuter, as of the Masculine gender, as Erasmus doth take it, and the Greeke Doctors also. But that which followeth of whoremongers and adulterers, declareth that it is to be referred to the persons, rather then the things. Although if you translate it in all things, it is more generall, comprehending all persons, all states and all offices and conditions of men. So doeth Theophylact vnderstand it in these wordes: Consider how great regard he hath of temperaunce and continence. For before making mention of holinesse, hee spake of it, and againe after those wordes he will speake of fornicators and adulterers. In all therefore is not onely in men of riper age, and not in young men also, but in all men or in all meanes and times, not in affliction onely and in rest otherwise: not honourable and precious in this part, in that part otherwise, but the whole throughout is honourable. Here heretikes are made to blushe, which slaunder matrimonie. For beholde he nameth mariage, precious, matrimonie honourable, which preserueth a man in temperance, but fornicatours and adulterers God will iudge. Here also with a penaltie adioined, fornication is prohibited, for God will iudge them, that is, condemne them, and not vnworthily. For if matrimonie be permitted, the fornicator and adulterer are iustly punished. The rest of the Greeke interpreters sayings are alreadie die set downe, by which you see what vaine quarelling and wrangling you make to denie the due honour to matrimonie.

But the third corruption you say is most impudent, that translate Inter quosuis, to signifie all orders, conditions, states and qualities of men. And yet that is the plaine meaning of the Apostle, as appeareth by the punishment of fornicators and adulterers that followeth, and so is the iudgement of all the auncient fathers that expound the text, when they saie, If matrimonie bee permitted, the fornicatour and adulterer are iustlie punished. Else howe can fornication and adulterie in all orders, conditions, states and qualities of men bee iustly punished, except mariage bee permitted in all orders, conditions, states and qualities? And what greater impudence can there be then this? to saie: Mariage is honourable in all thinges, and yet to except some orders, conditions, states and qualities of men, as though they were no things, because mariage is not honourable in them. The papistes therefore in their impudent quarrelling against the truth, to maintaine the doctrine of diuels against the honour and puritie of mariage, doe not onely passe all heretikes, but euen the deuils themselues: who because they haue vnderstanding, woulde bee ashamed to graunt an vniuersall, and denie the particulars thereof. And also in flying from the masculine gender to the neuter, they are as ridiculous as Æsops fishes, which lept out of the frying panne into the middest of the fire.

RHEM. 4 7 Remember your Prelates.) We be here warned to haue great regard in our life and beliefe, to the holy fathers, Doctors and glorious bishops gone before vs in Gods Church, not doubting but they being our lawfull Pastors, had & taught the truth of whom S. Augustine said, That which they found in the church, they held fast: that which they learned, they taught: that which they receiued of their fathers, the same they deliuered to their children. Cont. Iulian. li. 2. c. 10. Which respect to our holy forefathers in faith, is now in this wicked contempt of the Heretikes, so much the more to be had. See the said holy doctors second booke against Iulian the Pelagian throughout, what great account he maketh of them in the confutation of heresies, and how farre he preferreth them aboue the proud Sect maisters of that time: as wee must now do against our new doctors. This place also is rightly vsed to proue that the Church of God should keepe the memories of Saincts departed, by solemne holydaies and other deuout waies of honour.

We must haue regard to the faith & doctrine of the fathers,

Memories and feastes of Saincts.

FVLKE. 4 We acknowledge with the Apostle how great regard is to be had of those holy Doctors and Pastours that haue spoken the worde of God to vs or to our forefathers in the Church of Christ. But neither the Apostle, nor S. Augustine meaneth, that we should acknowledge any for lawfull bishops, that speake not the worde of God. Neither that wee shoulde admit whatsoeuer the auncient fathers that were lawfull pastours did saie or write, beside or against the worde of God. We vse them therefore for confutation of heresies as S. Augustine did, who also when their auctoritie was alleaged by heretikes, acknowledged that they were none otherwise to be receiued, but as they were consonant to the holy Scriptures. Therefore when S. Cyprians auctoritie was alleaged by the Donatistes, he saide: Nos nullam, &c. We doe no iniurie to Cyprian, when we distinguish any writings of his whatsoeuer, from the canonicall auctoritie of the holy Scriptures. For not without cause with such healthfull diligence, the ecclesiastical canon is appointed, to which certaine bookes of the Prophets and Apostles doe pertaine, which we dare not iudge at all, and according to which, wee may freely iudge of other writings either of faithful men or infidels. Contr. Cresc. lib. 2. c. 31. And when hee was pressed by his auctoritie out of his Epistles to Iubaianus, he answereth: I am not bound by the auctoritie of this Epistle, because I doe not account the writings of Cyprian, as canonicall Scriptures, but I consider of them out of the canonicall Scriptures, and what soeuer in them agreeth with the auctoritie of the holy scripture I receiue it with his praise, but whatsoeuer agreeth not, I refuse it with his leaue. So likewise when the Heretike Pelagius alleaged the auctoritie of S. Ambrose against him, hee saith: Blessed Ambrose the bishop (saieth the heretike) in whose booke especially the Romaine faith doth shine, which glistered as it were a certaine flower among the Latine writers: whose faith and most pure sense in the Scriptures, not so much as his enimie, durst reprehend. Behold, with what and how great praises, he setteth him foorth, who although hee was an holy and a learned man, yet is he not in any wise to be compared with the auctoritie of the canonical Scripture. De grat. Christi. contr. Pelag. cap. 43. And when he hath rehearsed the iudgement of diuers godly fathers concerning originall sinne, hee concludeth saying: I haue not rehearsed these things, because we leane to the opinions of any disputers, as vnto the canonicall auctoritie, but that it may appeere from the beginning vnto this time, in which this new sect sprung, that this article of originall sinne was kept with such constancie with the faith of the Church, that of them which handled the holy Scripture it was brought foorth as most certaine, rather to confute other errours, then that it was assaied to be confuted as false, by any man. De peccat. mer. & in remiss. lib. 3. cap. 7. Againe, against the Pelagians he saith he could vse the testimonies of the auncient fathers, more then hee doth, but that it woulde bee too long. And perhaps hee might bee thought not to haue presumed so much as he ought of the canonicall Scriptures from which we ought not to be remooued. De nupt. & concupis. lib. 2. c. 29. This iudgement of S. Augustine we hold and follow concerning the writings of holy doctors.

The fathers writings and auctoritie.

But this place also (you say) is rightly vsed to proue that the Church of God should keepe the memories of Saincts departed, by solemne holy daies and other deuout waies of honour. Indeede this place sheweth how we shoulde honour Saincts departed, namely by imitation of their faith, but that we ought to keepe holy daies or any other popish waies of honouring of them this place prooueth not, neither doth any of the auncient interpreters vse it to that end.

RHEM. 5 9 Not with meates.) He speaketh not of Christian fastes, but of the legall difference of meates which the Hebrues were yet proue vnto: not considering that by Christes fayth they were made free from all such obseruations of the Lawe.

Iudaicall abstinence from meates.

FVLKE. 5 Christian fastes are not meates. Hee speaketh not onely againste the Iewish distinction of meates, cleane and vncleane, but also againste all other heretical and diuelish prohibition of meates, and preferring one kinde of meat before another, for holinesse sake.

Prohibition of meates.

RHEM. 6 10 We haue an altar.) He putteth them in mind by these wordes, that in following to much their olde Iewish rites, they depriued themselues of an other maner and a more excellent sacrifice and meate: meaning of the holy altar, and Christes owne blessed body offered and eaten there, of which, they that continue in the figures of the old Law, could not be partakers. This altar (sayth Isychius) is the altar of Christes body, which the Iewes for their incredulitie must not behold. Li. 6. c. 21. in Leuit. And the Greeke word (as also the Hebrue answering thereunto in the old testament) signifieth properly an altar to sacrifice on, and not a metaphorical and spirituall altar. Whereby we proue against the Heretikes, that we haue not a common table or profane communion boord, to eate mere bread vpon, but a very altar in the proper sense, to sacrifice Christes body vpon: and so called of the fathers in respect of the sayd body sacrificed. Greg. FVLKE.6 The Apoſtle ſpeaketh expreſly of participation of the ſacrifice of Chriſtes death, as it is manifeſt in the two verſes next folowing, which is by chriſtian faith, and not in the Sacrament only, wher of none can be partakers that remaine in the ceremoniall obſeruation of the Leuitical ſacrifices. Therefore this place is brutishly abuſed, to proue that the chriſtians haue a material aultar, as the papiſts haue many. The Apoſtle meaneth, Chriſt to be this aultar who is our prieſt ſacrifice & aultar, and not the table wheron the Lordes ſupper is miniſtred, which is called an altar, but vnproperly, as the ſacrament is called a ſacrifice. For he ſaith, We haue an altar, which is but one, whereas the popiſh altars and communion tables are many. But Iſychius ſaith, This altar is the altar of Chriſts body. You abuſe Heſychius, for he ſaith that the altar is the body of Chriſt it ſelfe: Such an one (ſaith he) may not come neither to the veile nor to the altar, that is, to the body of Chriſt, to doe the miniſtery thereof. For that hath Paule, writing to the Hebrues, taught to be the veile and the altar. The ſame he ſaith lib. 1. c. 4. Know thou that S. Paul vnderſtandeth that the intelligible altar is the Lords body, for he ſaith: we haue an altar whereof they haue no power to eat, which ſerue the tabernacle, namely, the body of Chriſt, for it is not lawful for the Iewes to eate of it. This altar of neceſſity is in the entrance of the tabernacle of witneſſe, that is in the entrance of the heauens, becauſe we haue entrance into the heauens by him. It is manifeſt therefore that Heſychius meaneth not the popiſh altars, but the body of Chriſt in heauen, the myſterie wherof is celebrated on the Lordes table, which of the ancient fathers is called indifferently a table, as it is in deed, and an altar, as it is vnproperly. But that it is called of them a table, and was in deed a table made of boardes, and remoueable, ſet in the midſt of the people, not placed againſt a wall, I haue ſhewed ſufficiently, by the teſtimonies of the ancient fathers before. Aultar.

RHEM. 7 15 The hoſte of praiſe.) Though it may ſignifie the ſpiritual ſacrifices of praiſe and thankes-giuing of what ſort ſoeuer: yet it ſpecially may be thought to ſignifie the great Sacrifice of the Body and bloud of Chriſt, not as vpon the Croſſe, which was but once done in bloudy ſort, but as in the Church, and new Teſtament, where it is daily done vnbloudily, being the proper hoſt of laude and thankes giuing and therfore called the Euchariſt, and being the fruite and effecte of Chriſt and his Prieſts lippes or wordes, that is, of conſecration: becauſe this ſacrifice is made by the force of the holy wordes. And when we reade in the pſalme and other places of the olde Teſtament, of the hoſt of praiſe, it may be thought to be a prophecie of the new Sacrifice, and not of euery vulgar thankes giuing. And ſo the old fathers in the primitiue Church to hide the myſteries from the vnworthy or heathen, often ſpeake. What is (ſaith S. Auguſtine) a more holy ſacrifice of praiſe, then that which conſiſteth in thankes giuing, all which the faithfull do know in the ſacrifice of the Church. Li. 1. cont. aduerſ leg. & proph. c. 18. Againe, c. 20. The Church from the times of the Apoſtles by the moſt certaine ſucceſſions of Biſhops, offereth to God in the body of Chriſt the Sacrifice of praiſe. And a litle afterward, Now Iſrael according to the ſpirit, that is, the Church offereth a ſingular Sacrifice according to the ſpirit: of whoſe houſe he wil not take calues nor goates, but wil take the Sacrifice of praiſe, not according to the order of Aaron, but according to the order of Melchiſedec. See ep. 120 c. 19. & ep. 57. ad q. 1. in fine. Thus you ſee, when the holy fathers handle the Scriptures, they find Maſſe and ſacrifice in many places, where the ignorant heretikes or the ſimple might thinke they ſpeake onely of a common thankes giuing. The Sacrifice of the altar is the principal hoſt of praiſe and thanks giuing, therefore called Euchariſtia.

FVLKE.7 We acknowledge that among other ſacrifices of praiſe & thankſgiuing, the celebration of the Lords ſupper, is a ſpeciall ſacrifice of praiſe and thankſgiuing for the onely ſacrifice for ſinne, offered by Chriſt himſelfe vpon the croſſe, without the gates of Ieruſalem. And ſo did the ancient fathers meane, when they called it a ſacrifice, as appeareth by thoſe ſentences taken out of S. Auguſtine, which you recite, and many other in him and the reſt of the fathers. Who neuer meant that the naturall body of Chriſt was offered in ſacrifice for ſinne, or made preſent by the wordes of the prieſt, but vnto the woorthie receiuers ſpiritually by faith. Therfore they found neither the maſſe, nor the popiſh ſacrifice propitiatory in any text of the ſcripture, where they ſpeake only of a common thankeſgiuing, nor yet the popiſh order of ſacrificing prieſthood for ſinne, when S. Auguſtine ſaith that the ſacrifice according to the order of Melchiſedech is the ſacrifice of praiſe. And doubtleſſe, if Melchiſedech did ſacrifice that bread and wine which he brought foorth, it was not for ſinne, but a ſacrifice of praiſe for the victory granted to Abraham. So that theſe ſayings of S. Auguſtine do manifeſtly ouerthrow your popiſh propitiatorie ſacrifice of the maſſe, and doe expound his meaning in other places (where he calleth the communion a ſacrifice) that he meaneth not a ſacrifice for ſinne, but a ſacrament and a ſacrifice of praiſe or thankſgiuing onely. Sacrifice of Praiſe. The maſſe.

RHEM. 8 16 God is promerited.) This latin word promeretur, cannot be expreſſed effectually in any one Engliſh word. It ſignifieth, Gods fauour to be procured by the foreſaid workes of almes and charitie, as by the deſerts and merites of the doers. Which doctrine and word of merites the Aduerſaries like ſoil, that they flee both here and els where from the word, tranſlating here for, promeretur Deus, God is pleaſed, more neere to the Greeke, as they pretend. Which in deede maketh no more for them then the latin, which is agreable to moſt auncient copies, as we ſee by Primaſius S. Auguſtines ſcholer. For if God be pleaſed with good workes and ſhew fauour for them, then are they meritorious, and then only faith is not the cauſe of Gods fauour to men. The Proteſtants auoid the word merite. διαξεσεται. Good wokes meritorious, FVLKE.8 Promeretur paſſiuely taken, as it is by your vulgar interpreter, is no Latine word, but a barbarous terme; the Greeke word ſignifieth to be well pleaſed, and not Gods fauour to be procured by workes of almes or charitie, as by deſerts or merits of the doers. But the Greeke maketh no more for vs then the Latine (you ſay) for if God be pleaſed with good workes, and ſhew fauour for them, then are they meritorious. But where doth the text ſay that God ſheweth fauour for good workes. God is pleaſed with good workes, becauſe they are agreeable to his commandements, and he accepteth our obedience as an acceptable ſacrifice of praiſe and thankſgiuing, for Chriſts ſake, by whome we offer the ſame. And he rewardeth good workes for his promiſe ſake, but he ſheweth fauour or giueth grace freely, and for his owne mercies ſake in Chriſt our redeemer. The antiquitie of this terme cannot make it a true tranſlation, when it differeth from the originall tongue. Primaſius though he vſed the terme after the vulgar tranſlation, yet he vnderſtandeth it according to the truth, as among the vulgar people it was taken in his time. Therefore he ſaith: By ſuch ſacrifices and gifts of almes, Deus promeretur adipiſci, God is pleaſed to receiue them, that is, God vouchſafeth to accept ſuch ſacrifices of almes and beneficence: he ſaith not that Ghd ſheweth his fauour, or giueth his grace for ſuch, or that they be meritorious, or procure Gods fauour, as by the deſerts and merits of the doers. So that Primaſius hath your terme, but not in your hereticall meaning. Merits, RHEM. 9 17 Obey your Prelates.) There is nothing more inculcated in the holy Scriptures, then obedience of the lay people to the Prieſts and Prelates of Gods Church, in matters of ſoule, conſcience, & religion. Wherof the Apoſtle giueth this reaſon, becauſe they haue the charge of mens ſoules, and muſt anſwer for them: which is an infinite preeminence and ſuperiority, ioyned with burden, and requireth marueilous ſubmiſſion and moſt obedient ſubiection of all that be vnder them and their gouernment, The Apoſtle doth inculcate obedience to the Prieſts and Biſhops of Gods Church.

uernement. From this obedience there is no exception nor exemption of kings nor Princes, be they neuer so great. If they haue soules, and be Christian men, they must be subiect to some Bishop, Priest, or other Prelate. And whatsoeuer he be (though Emperour of all the world) if he take vpon him to prescribe and giue lawes of religion to the Bishops and Priests, whom he ought to obey and be subiect vnto in religion, he shal be damned vndoubtedly, except he repent, because he doth against the expresse word of God and law of nature. And by this you may see the difference of an heretical and a disordered time, from other Catholike Christian daies. For heresie and the like damnable reuoltes from the Church of God, is no more but a rebellion and disobedience to the Priests of Gods Church, when men refuse to be vnder their discipline, to heare their doctrine, and interpretation of Scriptures, to obey their lawes and counsels. This disobedience & rebellion from the Spiritual Gouernor vnder pretence of obedience to the Temporal, is the bane of our daies, and specially of our Countrie, where these new Sectes are properly maintained by this false principle, That the Prince in matters of soule and religion may commaund the Prelates: which is directly and euidently against this Scripture and all other, that commaund the sheepe of Christes fold to obey their spiritual Officers.

No person exempted from this obedience, in matters of religion.

FVLKE. 9 The obedience which the Apostle heere requireth, we acknowledge that it ought to be yeelded by emperors and kings to the ouerseers or pastors of their soules. But heereof it followeth not, that priests and prelates are exempt from obedience of ciuil powers, for if they haue soules, S. Paule biddeth euery soule submit himselfe to the higher powers. Rom. 13. Nor that emperors and kings may not prescribe and giue lawes of religion to bishops and priests, whom also in matters of religion they ought to obey. But the auctority and obedience of eech is established, and one ought not to hinder another. For neither the prince must prescribe such lawes of religion to bishops as he listeth, but such as may require the only true religion of God, to be exercised according to his word. And these lawes the bishop is bound to obey in paine of damnation. Neither must the bishop require what doctrine soeuer he teacheth to be accepted and beleeued of the prince, but onely that which is agreeable to the holy word of God: which true doctrine the prince is also bound to beleeue and folow, in paine of damnation. And if any priest or prelate teach, or doe otherwise, he is to be punished by the princes auctority, who hath charge to see both the tables of the law to be obserued and kept of all his subiects, and to punish the offenders. Therefore there is nothing more agreeable to the word of God, and the law of nature, then that the prince should be obeyed of all his subiects, specially in matters perteining to religion and godlinesse. For if he command or decree any thing against true religion, it is no more to be obeied, then the false doctrine of a priest or prelate is to be beleeued. That princes in matters of soule and religion may command prelates, we haue manifest examples in the scripture, of Moses, Dauid, Salomon, Iosaphat, Ezechias, Iosias, who all commanded the high priests, and other priests in matters of religion, according to the word of God. Therefore it is no heretical confusion of the different states, but the auoiding of Antichristian tyranny, that we teach, when we affirme that the prince is to be obeied in all causes, and of all persons, which notwithstanding, the obedience heere commanded remaineth wholly vntouched.

Prelats not exempt from obedience to princes.

THE ARGVMENT OF THE EPISTLE OF S. IAMES.

RHEM. 1 THIS Epistle (as the rest following) is directed specially, as S. Augustine saith, against the error of only faith, which some held at that time also, by misconstruing S. Paules wordes. Yea not onely that, but many other errours (which then also were annexed vnto it, as they are now) doth this Apostle here touche expressly.

He saith therfore, that not only faith, but also good workes are necessarie: that not only faith, but also good workes do iustifie: that they are actes of Religion, or seruice and worship of God: that to keepe al the commaundements of God, and so to abstaine from al mortal sinne, is not impossible, but necessarie: that God is not author of sinne, no not so much as of tentation to sinne: that we must stay our selues from sinning, with feare of our death, of the Iudgement, of hel: and stirre our selues to doing of good, with our reward that we shal haue for it in heauen. These points of the Catholike faith he commendeth earnestly vnto vs, inueighing vehemently against them that teach the contrary errors. Howbeit he doth withal admonish not to neglect such, but to seeke their conuersion, shewing them how meritorious a thing that is. Thus then he exhorteth generally to all good workes, and dehorteth from al sinne, but yet also namely to certaine, and from certaine: as, from accepcion of persons, from detraction and rash iudging, from concupiscence and loue of this world, from swearing: and, to prayers, to almes, to humility, confession and penance: but most copiously to patience in persecution.

Which Iames wrote this epistle.

Now, who this Iames was: It is not he, whose feast the Church keepeth the 25. of Iulie, which was S. Iohns brother, and whose martyrdome we haue Act. 12. but Ie, whom the Church worshippeth the first of Maie, who is called Frater Domini, our lordes brother, and brother to Iude, and which was the first Bishop of Hierusalem, of whom we reade Act. 15 & 21. and also Gal. 2. of whose wonderfull austerity and purity of life, the Ecclesiasticall stories do report. Euseb. li. 2. c. 22. Hiero. in Catologo.

Therfore as the old High-priest had power and charge ouer the Iewes, not only in Hierusalem and Iurie, but also dispersed in other Countries (as we vnderstand. Act. 9. v. 1, & 2.) so S. Iames likewise, being Bishop of Hierusalem, and hauing care not only of those Iewes with whom he was resident there in Iurie, but of al the rest also, writeth this Epistle, To the twelue tribes that are in dispersion. and in them, to al Christians vniuersally dispersed through the world. Iam. 1.

FVLKE. 1 The error of only faith, against which S. Augustine writeth, was of them that thought the profession of Christian religion, how wickedly soeuer they liued, was sufficient to saluation: against which this epistle and the other were written. But of Iustification by the mere grace of God, through faith without works, S. Augustine is a most earnest defender against the Pelagian heretikes that sprang vp in his time. And euen in that booke De fide & operibus, where he speaketh of the former error, when he saith cap. 14. that good workes doe follow him that is iustified, they doe not goe before him that is to be iustified, he sheweth plainly, that a man is iustified before God by faith onely, and not by good works. Neuertheless, we acknowledge that not faith, only, but good works also are necessary for them that are iustified, to declare that they are iust. In which sense the Apostle teacheth that good works doe iustifie before men, as faith onely doth iustifie before God. But that it is possible to keepe all the commandements of God, and to abstaine from all mortall sinne, the apostle saith not, it is the diuelish heresie of the Pelagians, against which S. Augustine writeth his booke De perfectione iustitiæ

contra Cœlestium, especially after the sixteenth reason. We denie God to be auctor of sinne, or of tentation to sinne, as the Apostle doth, yet as a iust iudge he leadeth the reprobate into tentation, from which Christ hath taught vs to pray. To conuert them that goe astray, it is a good work, greatly acceptable to God, but the Apostle doth not teach it to be meritorious. He exhorteth vnto repentance, and acknowledging of our sinnes one to another, but not vnto popish penance or auriculer confession. Finally, though S. Iames were bishop, or had speciall ouersight ouer the church of Ierusalem, yet he had not that power and charge ouer the Iewes that the olde high priest had, but such as Christ gaue to euery one of his Apostles. Yea the primacie of the circumcision was specially allotted to Peter, though Iames as bishop of Ierusalem, had also a fatherly care ouer all the Christian Iewes.

THE CATHOLIKE EPISTLE OF IAMES THE APOSTLE.

The Church readeth these Catholike or Canonicall Epistles in order at Matins, from the 4 Sunday after Easter vntill Whitsunday.

RHEM. 1 The Protestants abhorre the word Catholike.

Catholike Epistle.) The word Catholike though in the title of this Epistle & the rest folowing (called the Catholike Epistles) it be not wholy in the same sense, as it is in the Creede: yet the Protestants so feare and abhorre the word altogether that in some of their Bibles they leaue it cleane out, although it be in the Greeke, and in some they had rather translate ridiculously thus, The generall Epistle &c. whereas these are famously knowen and specified in antiquitie, by the name of Catholike Epistles, for that they are written to the whole Church, not to any peculiar people or person, as S Paules are. Euseb. lib. 2. hist. c. 22.

FVLKE. 1 This title is no part of the word of God, though it be in the Greeke copies, no more then that which is written vnder the Epistles of S. Paule, shewing from whence they were written, which sometimes is found to be vntrue, and is of your selues controlled in the argument vpon the first to the Thessalonians, where the Greeke postscript is from Athens, which you hold was from Corinth. Therfore the omission of this title is no offence at al. And seeing you confesse it is not wholy the same in sense as it is in the Creed, to translate it as we speake in the Creed, were wilfully to giue occasion of error to the ignorant, which by translating it truely, according to the meaning of the word, is easily auoided. But in truth it signifieth the same here which it doth in the Creed, that is, generall and vniuersall. So doth Oecumenius expound this title, saying: These epistles are called Catholike, that is, vniuersall or generall, because the company of our Lords disciples do not dedicate these Epistles to one nation or citie, distinctly (as Paule doth to the Romans or Corinthians) but vniuersally to the faithfull, either to the Iewes that were dispersed, as Peter also doth, or els to all Christians liuing vnder the same faith. By this it appeareth that this title is vnproperly giuen to the seuen Epistles, which agreeth only to fiue, for the two latter epistles of S. Iohn are inscribed to two singular persons, or vnto their families at the most. But where you say we abhorre the word of Catholike, it is a rotten and friuolous cauill: for how can we abhorre that word which we teach our children daily to say in their English Creed, and repeat so often in our daily common praiers?

Catholike.

CHAP. I.

We haue to reioyce in persecution (but if we be patient, & withal abstaine from al mortal sinne) 9 considering how he shal be exalted and crowned for it, when the persecutor (who enricheth him self with our spoiles) shal fade away. 13 But if any be tempted to fall, or to any other euil, let him not say God is the author of it, who is the author of al good onely. 19 Such points of the Cath. faith we must be content to learne without contradiction and anger, and to do accordingly. 26 Because otherwise we may talke of Religion, but in deed it is no Religion.

The translation of Rhemes.

IAMES the seruant of God & of our Lord Iesvs Christ, to the twelue tribes that are in dispersion greeting.

The Epistle for a martyr.

2 Esteeme it, my brethren, al ioy, when you shal fall into diuers tentations:

Ro. 5, 3. 3 Knowing that * the probation of your faith worketh patience.

4 And let patience haue a perfect work: that you may be perfect and entire, failing in nothing.

5 But if any of you lacke wisedome, let him aske of God who giueth to al men aboundantly, and vpbraideth not: and it shal be giuen him.

Mat. 21, 22. Mar. 11, 24. 6 But * let him ‖ aske in faith nothing doubting. for he that doubteth, is like to a waue of the sea, which is moued and caried about by the wind.

7 Therfore let not that man thinke that he shal receiue any thing of our Lord.

8 A man double of mind is inconstant in al his waies.

9 But let the humble brother glorie, in his exaltation.

10 And

The translation of the Church of England.

IAMES a seruant of God, and of the Lord Iesus Christ, to the twelue tribes which are scattered abroad greeting.

2 My brethren, count it all ioy when ye fall into diuers temptations:

3 * Knowing this that the trying of your faith worketh patience, Rom. 5. 3.

4 And let patience haue her perfect worke, that yee may be perfect, and sound, lacking nothing.

5 If any of you lacke wisedome, let him aske of God, that giueth to all men indifferently, and casteth no man in the teeth: and it shall be giuen him.

6 *But let him aske in faith, nothing wauering: For he that wauereth, is like a waue of the sea, tost of the wind, and caried with violence: Mat. 7. 7. mark. 11. 24. luk. 11. 9.

7 Neither let that man thinke that he shall receiue any thing of the Lord.

8 A double minded man is vnstable in al his waies.

9 Let the brother of low degree, reioyce in that he is exalted.

10 Againe,

Ps.102,15. Ecci.14,18. Es.4,6. 1.Pet.1,24. Iob.5,17.

10 And the rich, in his humilitie, because *as the floure of grasse shal he passe:

11 For the sunne rose with heat, and parched the grasse, and the floure of it fel away, and the beautie of the shape thereof perished: so the riche man also shal wither in his waies.

The Epistle for a Martyr that is a Bishop.

12 Blessed is the man that suffereth tentation: for when he hath beene proued, he shal receiue the crowne of life, which God hath promised to them that loue him.

13 ‖ Let no man when he is tempted, say that he is tempted of God. for ‖ God is not a tempter of euils, and he tempteth no man.

‡ The ground of tentation to sin, is our concupiscence, and not God.

14 But ‡ euerie one is tempted of his owne concupiscence abstracted and allured.

15 Afterward ‖ concupiscence when it hath conceiued, bringeth forth sinne. but ‖ sinne when it is consummate, ingendreth death.

The Epistle on the 4. Sunday after Easter.

16 Do not erre therefore my deerest brethren.

17 Euery best gift, & euery perfect gift, is from aboue, descending from the Father of lightes, with whom is no transmutation, nor shadowing of alteration.

18 Voluntarily hath he begotten vs by the word of truth, that we may be some beginning of his creature.

Prou.17,27.

19 You know my deerest brethren, And *let euery man be swift to heare: but slow to speake, and slow to anger.

20 For the anger of man worketh not the iustice of God.

21 For the which thing casting away all vncleanesse and abundance of malice, in meekenesse receiue the engrafted word, which is able to saue your soules.

The Epistle on the 5 Sunday after Easter. Mat.7,21. Rom.2,13.

22 But * be doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiuing your selues.

23 For if a man be a hearer of the word, and not a doer: he shall be compared to a man beholding the countenance of his natiuitie in a glasse.

24 For he considered him self, and went his way, and by and by forgat what an one he was.

25 But he that hath looked in ‖ the law of perfect libertie, and hath remained in it, not made a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the worke: this man shal be ‡ blessed in his deed.

26 And if any man thinke him self to be religious, nor bridling his tong, but seducing his hart: this mans religion is vaine.

27 ‖ Religion cleane and vnspotted with God and the Father, is this, to visite pupilles and widowes in their tribulation: and to keepe him selfe vnspotted from this world.

10 *Againe, the rich, in that he is made low: Esa.40.6. eccle.14.16. 1.Pet.1.14.
*Because as the flowre of the grasse he shall passe away.

11 For as the Sunne hath risen with heat, & the grasse hath withered, and his flowre hath fallen away, and the beautie of the fashion of it hath perished: so also shall the rich man fade away in his waies.

12 *Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receiue the crowne of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that loue him. Iob.5.17.

13 Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: For God cannot be tempted with euill, neither tempteth he any man.

14 But euery man is tempted, when he is drawen away, and entised with the bait of his owne concupiscence.

15 Then when lust hath conceiued, it bringeth forth sinne: and sinne, when it is finished, bringeth forth death.

16 Do not erre, my deare brethren.

17 Euery good giuing, and euery perfect gift is from aboue, and commeth downe from the father of lights, with whom is no variablenesse, neither shadow of turning.

18 Of his owne will begate he vs, with the word of truth, that we should be the first fruits of his creatures.

19 Wherefore, my deare brethren, *let euery man be swift to heare, slowe to speake, slowe to wrath. Pro.17.17.

20 For the wrath of man, worketh not that which is righteous before God.

21 Wherefore lay apart al filthinesse, and superfluity of naughtinesse, and receiue with meekenesse of the word that is graffed in you, which is able to saue your soules. † Or, malitiousnesse.

22 And *be ye doers of the word, & not hearers only, deceiuing your owne selues. Rom.2.13. mat.7.21.

23 For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like vnto a man beholding his bodily face in a glasse.

24 For he hath considered himselfe, and is gone his waies, and hath forgotten immediately what his fashion was.

25 But who so looketh in the perfect lawe of libertie, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetfull hearer, but a doer of the worke, shall be blessed in his deed.

26 If any man among you seeme to be † deuout, and refraineth not his tongue, but deceiueth his owne heart, this mans † deuotion is vaine. † Or, religious. † Or, religion.

27 Pure deuotion and vndefiled before God and the father, is this, To visite the fatherlesse and widowes in their aduersitie, and to keepe him selfe vnspotted of the world.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 1 25 Blessed in his.) Beatitude or saluation consisteth in well working.

FVLKE. 1 Vnto eternall beatitude or saluation, well working is necessarie, in them that heare the Gospel: yet Dauid saith, the beatitude of a man to be, to whom God imputeth iustice, without works. Rom. 4. 6.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 2 6 Aske in faith nothing doubting.) The Protestants would proue by this, that no man ought to pray without assurance that he shal obtaine that which he asketh. Where the Apostle meaneth nothing els, but that the asker of lawfull things may not either mistrust Gods power and habilitie, or be in diffidence and despaire of his mercie: but that our doubt be onely in our owne vnworthinesse or vndue asking. What faith is required in prayer.

FVLKE. 2 The Protestants proue, that men must pray for nothing, but according to Gods will and promise, and not to doubt of Gods truth, in performing his promise. But in respect of our owne worthines, we ought to aske nothing. Oecumenius vpon this text, saith: If he haue faith, let him aske, but if he doubt, let him not aske, for he shall not receiue, which distrusteth that he shall receiue. Againe, When thou askest any thing of God, doe thou not doubt at all, saying with thy selfe: how can I aske and receiue of the Lord any thing, which haue sinned so often against him? Thinke not these things, but be conuerted vnto the Lord, with thy whole heart, and aske of him without doubting, and thou shalt know the multitude of his mercies. Faith without doubting.

RHEM. 3 13 Let no man say that he is tempted of God.) We see by this, that when the Scriptures (as in the Pater noster and other places) seeme to say, that God doth sometimes tempt vs, or lead vs into tentation: they meane not, that God is any waies the author, causer, or mouer of any man to sinne, but onely by permission, and because of his gratious power he keepeth not the offender from tentations. Therefore the blasphemie of Heretikes, making God the author of sinne, is intolerable. See S. August. ser. 9. de diuers. c. 9. God is not author of euil.

FVLKE. 3 God is no way the auctor or mouer of men to sinne: but as a iust iudge he not onely permitteth, but also leadeth into temptation, those whom he giueth ouer vnto Satan, therefore he hath taught vs to pray, Lead vs not into temptation.

RHEM. 4 13 God is not a tempter of euils.) The Protestants as much as they may, to diminish the force of the Apostles conclusion against such as attribute their euil tentations to God (for other tentations God doth send to trie mens patience and proue their faith) take and translate the word passiuely, in this sense, that God is not tempted by our euils. Where more consonantly to the letter and circumstance of the words before and after, and as greatly *to the Greeke, it should be taken actiuely as it is in the Latin, that God is no tempter to euill. for being taken passiuely, there is no coherence of sense to the other words of the Apostle. Partial and wilful translation.

* ἀπείραστος κακῶν.

FVLKE. 4 The Apostles conclusion being plaine of it selfe, is more plaine, when the word is translated passiuely. For then a reason is giuen why God tempteth no man to euill, because he is so pure from euill, that he can not be tempted thereof, much lesse be a tempter and inciter of other men vnto it. Therefore this is nothing els but a diuelish surmise, that the Protestants translate the word passiuely, because they would diminish the force of the Apostles conclusion. But why then doth Hentenius a Papist, in his translation of Oecumenius, translate the word in the text passiuely? and Oecumenius out of the consent of the Greeke Fathers, interprete it passiuely? but that the right signification of the word, doth require it so to be vnderstood. God (saith he) can not be tempted of euill, according to that which is said of one, (although he be a stranger from vs, and a stranger from the faith) the diuine and blessed nature nether suffreth troubles, nor offreth to other. Beside this, except the worde be taken passiuely, the Apostle saith one thing twise, immediately together, without any cause of such vaine repetition. Whereas taking it passiuely, there is good reason and perfect coherence with the words going before and after. For God is so far from tempting vnto euill, as his diuine nature is vncapable of any temptation of euill. For temptation to euil can not come from God, except it were first in him, but seeing it cannot be in God, it can not proceed from him. Slander. Cauilling.

RHEM. 5 15 Concupiscence when it hath conceiued.) Concupiscence (we see here) of it selfe is not sinne, as Heretikes falsely teach: but when by any consent of the minde we do obey or yeld to it, then is sinne ingendred and formed in vs. Concupiscence of it selfe no sinne.

FVLKE. 5 We see there is distinction of concupiscence, from actuall sinne, as of the mother from her daughter, but yet as one serpent conceiueth and bringeth forth an other serpent, so both the mother and daughter are sinne, and S. Paul plainly testifieth, that concupiscence is sinne. Rom. 7. 7. Concupiscence is sinne.

RHEM. 6 15 Sinne consummate ingendreth death.) Here we see that not all sinne nor all consent vnto concupiscence is mortall or damnable, but when it is consummate, that is, when the consent of mans minde fully and perfectly yeldeth to the committing or liking of the acte or motion whereunto concupiscence moueth or inciteth vs. Not euery sinne mortall.

FVLKE. 6 It cannot be concluded out of this place, that concupiscence, or any other sinne deserueth not damnation: when of all sinne in generall, it is said: The soule that sinneth shall die, and the wages of sinne is death, Ezec. 18. Rom. 7. But that there be degrees of sinne, and that actuall sinne bringeth vnto more grieuous damnation, except there be repentance. Our Sauiour Christ condemneth lust of the eie for adultery, and anger for murther. Math. 5. Sinnes venial.

RHEM. 7 25 The law of perfect libertie.) The law of the Gospel and grace of Christ, is called the law of libertie, in respect of the yoke and burden of the old carnall ceremonies, and because Christ hath by his bloud of the new Testament deliuered al that obey him, from the seruitude of sinne and the Diuel. But not as the Libertines and other Heretikes of this time would haue it, that in the new Testament euery man may follow his owne liking and conscience, and may choose whether he will be vnder the lawes and obedience of Spiritual or temporal Rulers, or no. What is the law of libertie in the new Testament.

FVLKE. 7 The Pope is such a Libertine as refuseth to be vnder any temporall ruler, or spirituall, yea he refuseth to be vnder the whole Church of Christ on earth, but will be Head and Ruler thereof. The Pope a Libertine.

RHEM. 8 27 Religion cleane.) True religion standeth not only in talking of the Scriptures, or onely faith, or Christs iustice: but in puritie of life, and good workes, specially of charitie and mercie done by the grace of Christ. This is the Apostolical doctrine, and far from the Heretical vanitie of this time. Good works a part of mans iustice.

FVLKE. 8 We teach also, that pure religion standeth not only in words, but in faith, and in workes also, yet Christ only is our iustice, and through him we are iustified before God by faith without works. Rom. 3. Religion.

CHAP. II.

RHEM. 1 Against acception of persons. 10 From all and euery sinne we must abstaine, hauing in all our wordes and deeds, the iudgement before our eies: wherein works of mercie shall be required of vs, 14 and onely faith shall not auaile vs. 18 And that the Catholike by his works sheweth that he hath faith: whereas the Heretike hath no more faith then the Diuel, talke he of faith neuer so much, and of iustification thereby onely, by the example of Abraham Ro. 4 For Abraham in deed was iustified by works also, 25 and likewise Rahab.

FVLKE. 1 The Apostle teacheth in this Chapter, that such a faith as is voide of good workes, shall not iustifie any man, and that as a man is iustified in the sight of God by faith onely, so he must be declared to be iust or iustified before God and men by good works, which are the necessarie effects of a iustifying faith. Iustification.

Leuit.19,15. Deu.1,16. Pro.24,23. Eccl.42,1.

MY brethren, Haue not the faith of our Lord IESVS Christ of glory ‖ in acception of persons.

2 For if there shal enter into your assembly a man hauing a golden ring in goodly appareil, & there shal enter in a poore man in homely attire,

3 And you haue respect to him that is clothed with the goodly appareil, and shall say to him, Sitte thou here wel: but say to the poore man, Stand thou there: or sitte vnder my foote-stoole:

4 Do you not iudge with your selues, & are become iudges of vniust cogitations?

5 Heare my deerest brethren: hath not God chosen the poore in this world, riche in faith, and heires of the kingdom which God hath promised to them that loue him?

6 But you haue dishonoured the poore man. Do not the rich oppresse you by might: and them selues draw you to iudgements?

7 Doe not they blaspeme the good name that is inuocated vpon you?

Leu.19,18. Mat.22,39. Rom.1,18.

8 If not-withstanding you fulfil the roial law according to the scriptures, Thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy selfe, you doe wel:

9 But if you accept persons, you worke sinne, reprooued of the Law as transgressours.

Leu.19,37. Deu.1,18.

10 And * whosoeuer shal keepe the whole Law, but offendeth in one: ‖ is made guilty of al, 11 For he that said, Thou shalt not commit aduoutrie, said also, Thou shalt not kil. And if thou doe not commit aduoutrie, but shalt kil: thou art made a transgressour of the Law.

12 So speake ye, and so doe, as beginning to be iudged by the law of libertie.

13 For ‖ iudgement without mercie to him that hath not done mercie. And mercie ‖ exalteth it selfe aboue iudgement.

‖ κατακαυχᾶται.

14 ‖ What shal it profit my brethren, if a may say he hath faith: but hath not works? Shal faith be able to saue him?

Io.3.17.

15 And * if a brother or sister be naked, and lacke daily foode:

16 And one of you say to them, Goe in peace, be warmed and filled: but you giue them not the things that are necessarie for the bodie: what shal it profit?

17 So faith also, if it haue not workes, is dead in it selfe.

18 But

*MY brethren, * haue not the faith of our Lord Iesus Christ the Lord of glory, with respect of persons.* Leuit.19.15. pro.24.24.

2 For if there come into your † companie a man wearing a gold ring, in goodly apparell, and there come in also a poore man, in vile rayment: † Or, congregation.

3 And ye haue respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say vnto him, Sit thou here in a good place: and say to the poore, Stand thou there, or sit here vnder my footestoole:

4 Are ye not partiall in your selues, and are made iudges of euill thoughts?

5 Hearken, my deare beloued brethren, Hath not God chosen the poore of this worlde, that they might be rich in faith, and heires of the kingdome, which he promised to them that loue him?

6 But ye haue despised the poore, Doe not rich men oppresse you by tyrannie, and draw you before the iudgement seates?

7 Doe not they blaspheme that good name, by the which ye are named?

*8 If ye fulfil the roiall lawe according to the Scripture, * Thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy selfe, ye do well:*

9 But if ye regard one person more then another, ye commit sinne, and are rebuked of the law as transgressours.

*10 * Whosoeuer shall keepe the whole lawe, and yet faile in one point, he is guiltie of all.* Mat.22.39. Leuit.15.19.

11 For he that said, Doe not commit adulterie: said also, Doe not kill. Though thou doe none adulterie, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressour of the lawe.

12 So speake ye, and so doe, as they that shall be iudged by the law of libertie.

13 For he shall haue iudgement without mercie, that hath shewed no mercie: and mercie reioyceth against iudgement.

14 What profiteth it, my brethren, though a man say, he hath faith, and hath not deedes? can faith saue him?

*15 * If a brother or a sister be naked, and destitute of daily foode,* Luk.3.11. 1.iohn 3.17.

16 And one of you say vnto them, Depart in peace, be you warmed and filled: notwithstanding, ye giue them not those things which are needefull to the bodie: what shall it profite?

17 Euen so faith, if it haue not deeds, is dead in it selfe.

18 But

18 But some man saith, Thou hast faith, and I haue workes: shew me thy faith without workes: and I wil shew thee by workes my faith.

19 Thou beleeuest that there is one God. Thou doest wel: the diuels also beleeue and tremble.

20 But wilt thou know ‡ O vaine man, that faith without workes is ‖ idle?

21 ‖ Abraham our father was he not iustified by workes, * offering Isaac his sonne vpon the altar?

22 Seest thou that ‖ faith did worke with his workes: and by the workes the faith was consummate?

23 And the Scripture was fulfilled, saying, Abraham beleeued God, and it was reputed him to iustice, and he was called ‖ the freende of God.

24 Do you see that by workes a man is iustified: and ‖ not by faith only?

25 And in like maner also * ‖ Rahab the harlot, was not she iustified by workes, receiuing the messengers, and putting them forth an other way?

26 For euen as the body without the spirit is dead: so also ‖ faith without workes is dead.

18 But some man will say, Thou hast faith, and I haue deedes: shewe me thy faith by thy deedes, and I will shewe thee my faith by my deedes.

19 Thou beleeuest that there is one God, thou doest well: the diuels also beleeue and tremble.

20 But wilt thou know, O thou vaine man, that that faith which is without workes, is dead?

21 *Was not Abraham our father iustified through workes, when he had offered * Isahac his sonne vpon the altar?* Gen.22.10.

22 Seest thou not howe that faith wrought with his deedes, and through the deedes was the faith made perfect?

23 *And the Scripture was fulfilled, which saith, * Abraham beleeued God, and it was reputed vnto him for righteousnesse: and he was called the friend of God.* Gen.15 6. rom.4.3. galat.3.6.

24 Ye see then, how that of deedes a man is iustified, and not of faith onely.

25 *Likewise also, was not * Rahab the harlot iustified through workes, when she had receiued the messengers, and had sent them out an other way.* Iosu.2.1.

26 For as the body without the spirit is dead: euen so faith without workes is dead also.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 2 20 O vaine man.) He speaketh to all Heretikes that say, faith only without workes doth iustifie, calling them vaine men, and comparing them to Diuels.

FVLKE. 2 Then he speaketh not to S. Paule, which saith, a man is iustified by faith, without workes, Rom.3. Nor to all the ancient Fathers, which hold the same doctrine: among which, many haue affirmed in the same sense, that a man is iustified by faith onely. And so doe we say, therefore he speaketh not against vs. But he speaketh to those heretikes, and Libertines, old and new, that held, that a man was iustified by a faith void of good works, such as is in the Diuels, & such as Papists compt to be the Catholike faith, namely, to acknowledge all the articles of the Creede to be true, though a man haue no trust in the mercie of God, neither doth apply them to his owne benefite and comfort. Faith only. Popish faith the Diuels faith.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 1 In acception of persons.) The Apostle meaneth not, as the Anabaptists and other seditious persons sometime gather hereof, that there should be no difference in Commonweales or assemblies, betwixt the Magistrate and the subiect, the free man and the bond, the riche and the poore, betwixt one degree and an other. for, God and nature, and the necessitie of man, haue made such distinctions, and men are bound to obserue them. But it is meant onely, or specially, that in spirituall giftes and graces, in matters of faith, Sacraments, and saluation, and bestowing the spiritual functions and charge of soule, we must esteeme of a poore man or a bond man, no lesse then of the rich man and the free, then of the Prince or the Gentleman: because as Christ himselfe calleth all, and endueth all sorts with his grates: so in such and the like things we must not be partiall, but count al to be fellowes, brethren, and members of one head. And therefore the Apostle saith with a speciall clause, That we should not hold or haue the Christian faith with or in such differences or partialities. Scripture abused by the Anabaptists to make no distinction of persons. What the Apostle meaneth by acception of persons.

RHEM. 3 10 Is made guiltie of all.) He meaneth not, that whosoeuer is a theefe, is also a murderer, or that euery murderer is an aduouterer also: or that all sinnes be equall, according to the Stoikes and the Heresie of Iouinian: much lesse, that he shal haue as great damnation that transgresseth one commaundement, as if he had offended against euerie precept. but the sense is, that it shal not availe him to saluation, that he seemeth to haue kept certaine and not broken al the commandements: seeing that any one transgression of the Law, proueth that he hath not obserued the whole, which he was bound to do, so far as is required, and as is possible for a man in this life. S. Augustine disputing profoundly in his 29. Epistle to S. Hierom, of this place of S. Iames, expoundeth it thus: that he which offendeth in one, that is, against the generall and great commandement of loue or charitie (because it is in maner all, as being the summe of all, the plenitude of the Law, and the perfection of the rest) breaketh after a sort and transgresseth all, no sinne being committed but either against the loue of God, or of our neighbour. How he that offendeth in one commandement, is guilty of all.

FVLKE. 3 All men that looke to be iustified by the workes of the Law, are bound to keepe the law in such perfection, as Gods iustice requireth, which is not possible for any mortall man in this life to performe. Therefore by this text it is proued, that no man can be iustified by the workes of the Lawe, because no man can fulfill the Lawe perfectly. Aug. de pecc. merit. & remiss. lib. 2. c. 12. De sp. & liter. c. 2. Hesych. lib. 4. cap. 13. Qui legis precepta ex aliqua transgreditur parte nihil ex custodia mandati iuuatur alterius. Qui enim, &c. The Law can not be kept perfectly.

RHEM. 4 13 Iudgement without mercie.) Nothing giueth more hope of mercie in the next life, then the workes of almes, charitie, and mercie, done to our neighbours in this life. Neither shall any be vsed with extreme rigour in the next world, but such as vsed not mercie in this world. August. de pec. merit. lib. 2. c. 3. Which is true, not only in respect of the iudgement to euerlasting damnation, but also of the temporall chastisement in Purgatorie, as S. Augustine signifieth, declaring that our veniall Works of mercie exceeding grateful to God.

venial sinnes be washed away in this world with daily workes of mercie, which otherwise should be chastised in the next. See cp. 29. aforesaid in fine. and li. 21. de Ciu. Dei c. 27. in fine.

FVLKE. 4 Faith in the merits of Christ, giueth vs more hope of mercie in the next life, then the workes of almes, charitie, &c. although these workes being testimonies of true faith, shall vndoubtedly be rewarded in the life to come, with euerlasting saluation. And that is the meaning of S. August. De pec. mer. & rem. lib. 2. c. 3. But that the paines of purgatorie are to be auoided, or mitigated by such workes, he saith not in either of the places. And because you say, he declareth, that veniall sinnes be washed away in this world, with daily workes of mercie, you shall heare what he saith, De Ciuit. lib. 21. Cap. 27. against the perswasion of them, which thought, that no sinnes should hurt them, if they gaue almes, as though there were such merite therein. Euen those iust men, which liued in so great holines, that they receiue other into eternall Tabernacles, to whom they are made friendes of the mammon of iniquitie, that they should be such were deliuered of mercie, by him which iustifieth the vngodly man, imputing reward according to grace, and not according to debt. And as concerning the washing away of veniall sinnes, he saith: What maner of life that is, and what be those sinnes which doe so let the attaining to the kingdome of God, that yet by the merits of their holy friends they obtaine pardon, it is most hard to finde out, and most dangerous to define. I for my part, vnto this time, hauing busied my selfe much about them, could neuer come to the finding out of them. And perhaps they are vnknowne for this cause, lest the desire of going forward to auoid all sinnes, should waxe slouthfull. Purgatorie.

Thus you see S. Augustine teacheth neither Purgatorie, nor the merite of good works, in this place, nor yet the washing away of veniall sinnes by almes, when he can not define what sinnes they are that are purged by almes, or obtaine pardon by other mens deserts.

RHEM. 5 14 What shall it profite, if a man say he hath faith?) This whole passage of the Apostle is so cleere against iustification or saluation by onely faith, damnably defended by the Protestants, and so euident for the necessitie, merite, and concurrence of good workes, that their first author Luther and such as exactly follow him, boldly (after the maner of Heretikes) when they can make no shift nor false glose for the text, deny the booke Canonicall Scripture. But Caluin and his companions disagreeing with their Maisters, confesse it to be holy Scripture. but their shifts and fond glosses for answere of so plaine places, be as impudent as the denying of the Epistle was in the other. who would neuer haue denied the booke, thereby to shew them selues Heretikes, if they had thought those vulgar euasions that the Zuinglians and Caluinists do vse (whereof they were not ignorant) could haue serued. In both sortes the Christian Reader may see, that all the Heretikes vaunting of expresse Scriptures and the word of God, is no more but to delude the world. whereas in deed, be the Scriptures neuer so plaine against them, they must either be wrested to sound as they say, or else they must be no Scriptures at all. And to see Luther, Caluin, Beza, and their fellowes, sit as it were in iudgement of the Scriptures, to allow or disallow at their pleasures, it is the most notorious example of Hereticall pride and miserie that can be. See their prefaces and censures vpon this Canonicall Epistle, the Apocalipse, the Macabees, and other. The proud and impudent dealing of the Heretikes against this Epistle, because so plaine against only faith.

FVLKE. 5 The whole passage of the Apostle (that I may vse your French terme) maketh nothing against iustification by a liuely faith onely, which worketh by loue, but against a vaine perswasion of a dead faith, that is voide of good workes and not auaileable to saluation. Therefore, there was no cause why Luther should reiect this Epistle, as he did in a maner at the first, but afterward vpon better consideration, did acknowledge it, which fault was not so great in him, as in Eusebius, who doth absolutely reiect it, as a bastard, and none of the Apostles writing. Hist. Lib. 2. Cap. 29. Yet is Eusebius, notwithstanding that his errour, allowed for a Catholike writer. That Caluine followeth not Luther in this matter, it is because he acknowledgeth no maister of doctrine but Christ. It is for Papistes to defend all blasphemies of Antichrist, to whom they are sworne: true Catholikes loue truth onely in their deerest friends, and in their owne writings so well, that they are readie to retract them, if they finde by the worde of God, that they haue erred from the trueth. That we vse no impudent shifts or vaine glosses, but good & sound distinctions, to declare the doctrine of this Epistle not to be repugnant to the holy Scripture, in other places, it shall appeare, when we come to the matter. But the other (you say) would not haue denied the booke, if they had thought those vulgar euasions could haue serued. According to your owne wicked heartes, you iudge of other mens intentes which you know not. Might they not be deceiued by so cleere a censure of Eusebius, that it is a bastard, with other reasons that he alleageth? But by denying the Epistle you conclude, that they shewe them selues to be Heretikes: As though Eusebius by denying the Epistle, shewed him selfe to bee an Heretike, If Eusebius by denying the Epistle, did not shewe himselfe to bee an Heretike, why more they? S. Hierome did not receiue the Epistle to the Hebrewes absolutely, and many other of the Latine Church (as he saith) doubted thereof, Ergo they were Heretikes? In Euang. Math. chapter 26. If any man (sayeth he) will receiue that Epistle, which is written vnder the name of Paule to the Hebrewes, in Epist. ad Tit. Cap. 1. But it is not sufficient for you to amplifie the errour of Luther (which he himselfe afterward reformed) in refusing this booke, but you are offended also with Caluine, Beza and other, for defending the auctoritie thereof, and of the Apocalypse against them that alledge vaine reasons to discredit them. But why so I pray you? They sit as it were in iudgement of the Scriptures, to allow or disallow at their pleasures. So doeth Antichrist your king, not onely to giue auctoritie, but also to giue what sense it pleaseth him, to the bookes of holy scriptures. These men defend the Canonicall bookes, and discerne them from the Apocryphall, not onely by the consent and iudgement of the Church of God, both before Christ and after: but also by the spirite, where with the true bookes of God are iudighted, which when it is alwaies consonant vnto it selfe, discouereth the erroneous spirite of man in the Maccabees, and such other Apocryphall writings. The Epistle of S. Iames Canonicall.

RHEM. 6 12 Abraham was he not iustified by workes?) It is much to be noted that S. Augustine in his booke de fide & operibus cap. 14. writeth that the hereste of onely faith iustifying or sauing, was an olde Hereste euen in the Apostles time gathered by the false interpretation of some of S. Paules profound disputation in the Epistle to the Romanes, wherein he commended so highly the faith in Christ, that they thought good workes were not auaileable: adding further, that the other three Apostles, Iames, Iohn, and Iude, did of purpose write so much of good workes, to correct the saide errour of onely faith, gathered by the misconstruction of S. Pauls words. Yea when S. Peter (Epist. 2. cap. 3.) warneth the faithfull that many things be hard in S. Pauls writings, and of light vnlearned men misiaken to their perdition: the said S. Augustine affirmeth, that he meant of his disputation concerning faith, which so many Heretikes did mistake to condemne good workes. And in the preface of his commentarie vpon the 31. Psalme, he warneth all men, that this deduction vpon S. Pauls speech, Abraham was iustified by faith, therefore workes be not necessarie to saluation: is the right way to the gulfe of Hell and damnation. Onely faith an old hereste.

S. Iames and the rest inculcate good workes against the error of onely faith falsely gathered of S. Pauls words.

Locotitato.

And lastly, (which is in it selfe very plaine) that we may see this Apostle did purposely thus commend vnto vs the necessitie of good workes, and the inanitie and insuffiencie of onely faith, to correct the errour of such as misconstrued S. Paules

Lib. 83. q. 76. *wordes for the same: * the said holy Doctor noteth that of purpose he tooke the very same example of Abraham, whom S.*

Paul said to be iustified by faith, and declareth that he was iustified by good workes, specifying the good worke for which he was iustified and blessed of God, to witte, his obedience and immolation of his onely sonne. But how S. Paul saith that Abraham was iustified by faith, see the Annotations vpon that place. Rom. 4. vers. 1.

table, and directly against onely faith.

FVLKE. 6 The Apostle (as it is plaine by his whole discourse) writeth against them, that thought to be saued by such a faith as is voide of good workes, and so is dead and no true faith, but a fained faith, or els such a faith as is in deuils, namely an acknowledging that there is one God, & so likewise of al the rest of the articles of faith to be true, without trust or confidence in God. Their vaine errour therefore the Apostle confuteth, and sheweth that faith, whereby a man is iustified before God without workes, though it haue no good workes going before: yet it hath good workes following, by which the iustified mans faith is shewed, and he declareth to be iust, or iustified before men.

Heresies against good workes, Iustification by faith onely.

And therefore whereas S. Paul sheweth, that Abraham was iustified before God by faith without workes, S. Iames sheweth, that Abraham was iustified before men also through works, that is, declared to be iust when he offered his sonne. Where the Scripture saith, that God tempted or prooued Abraham, not that hee might know any thing whereof he was ignorant, but that Abraham might by his obedience and workes declare before all the worlde, that he was a iust man, and was iustified, that is, declared or shewed to be iust by workes, as he was before iust in the sight of God by faith, without workes.

Nowe that S. Augustine saith, that the heresie of onely faith iustifying or sauing, was in the Apostles time, &c. he declareth plainly, that the heresie was of them that thought they might be saued or sanctified by such a faith as is voide of good workes. Let vs see therefore that point (saith hee) which must be beaten from religious heartes, lest with cuill securitie they leese their saluation, if they shall thinke that onely faith doth suffice to obteine, and shall neglect to liue well, and to hold the way of God in good works. Behold this is the opinion of ony faith, against which S. Augustine writeth, and which we, as much as Augustine detest, and accurse vnto the deepest pit of hell. But that we are iustified before God, by faith onely without workes, in the same Chapter he teacheth most plainly: When the Apostle saith, that he thinketh a man to be iustified by faith, without the workes of the lawe, he meaneth not that after faith is receiued and professed, the workes of iustice should be contemned, but that euery man may knowe, that he may be iustified by faith, although the workes of the lawe haue not gone before: for they followe him that is iustified, they go not before him that is to be iustified. And this is the doctrine of iustification by faith onely, that we teach with S. Augustine.

Neither doe the Apostles, Iames, Iohn, Iude or Peter, require good workes as necessare to be done of all that shall be saued, more then S. Paule himselfe doeth in euerie one of his Epistles, and namely in the Epistles to the Romanes, Galathians, and Ephesians, where he treateth most of iustification, by the meere grace of God, and faith onely without workes: Therefore those Libertines wickédly tooke offence at his writings, where he gaue none. Abraham therefore was iustified before God by faith without workes, not that his faith was voide of good workes, but that God respected not the merite of his workes, but onely his mercie in Christ Iesus, imputing his righteousnesse to him through faith. Abraham was also iustified by good workes in the sight of men, when he brought foorth the fruites of Gods grace freely giuen vnto him, and of iustification before God by faith without workes. For in one kinde of iustification it cannot be sayde, that he was iustified both by faith and by workes, seeing the Apostle saith hee was iustified without workes. Therefore there be two seuerall kindes of iustification, whereof these two Apostles speake, the one whereby God iustifieth the vngodly man, imputing faith to him for iustice without workes, as he did to Abraham, the other whereby man declareth him selfe to bee iust by the fruites of faith, which are the workes of obedience.

RHEM. 7 22 Faith did worke with.) Some Heretikes holde, that good workes are pernitious to saluation and iustification: other, that though they be not hurtfull but required, yet they be no causes or workers of saluation, much lesse meritorious, but are as effectes and fruites issuing necessarily out of faith. Both which fictions, falshods, and slights from the plaine trueth of Gods worde, are refuted by these wordes, when the Apostle saith, That faith worketh togither with good workes: making faith to be a coadiutour or cooperator with workes, and so both iointly concurring as causes and workers of iustification: yea afterward he maketh workes the more principall cause, when he resembleth faith to the body, and workes to the spirit or life of man.

Heresies against good workes.

Works concurre with faith as cause of iustification.

FVLKE. 7 No man that I know, holdeth that good workes are pernitious to saluation or iustification. But that the trust and confidence in the merite of good works is pernitious to saluation, our Sauiour Christ teacheth, Luke 18. 9. Therefore they be not meritorious, nor the causes of iustification, yet necessarie to saluation, as the way wherein God hath prepared, that we shoulde trauell vnto saluation, and bee necessarie effectes and fruites of a godly faith.

Merite.

So saieth S. Augustine, Epist. 85. A godly faith will not be without hope and charitie. De fide & oper. cap. 23 Good life is inseperable from faith which worketh by loue: Faith and charitie cannot be seuered a sunder, saith Beda vpon this Chapter. But all these fictions, faishods, and slights are refuted by these words of the Apostle. How I pray you? he saith faith worketh together with good workes. Thereof we might rather conclude, that iustifying faith is neuer voide of good workes: but where you say both iointly concurring as causers and workers of the same kinde of iustification before God: You say it of your owne head, the Apostle saith it not, neither can it be concluded of his wordes. yet goe you on and say, that he maketh workes the more principall cause, when he resembleth faith to the body, and workes to the soule. But that the Apostle doth not, but resembleth workes to the fruite, which declareth the body to haue a soule in it: the life of our iustification therefore is faith, the fruites are good workes. The Apostle therefore saith not, that faith wrought with his deedes in the act of iustification before God, but that after he was iustified before God by faith imputed to him for iustice, his faith wrought by and with his deeds, declaring the same before men.

This sheweth Beda of the two kindes of iustification before God by faith without workes, and before men where faith is shewed by works writing vpon this text. Of this testimonie Paul to the Romanes reasoned most strongly, shewing manifestly, that the vertue of faith is so great, that it is able immediately after he hath vnderstoode the mysteries thereof, to make of an vngodly man a iust man: for because Abraham with great and feruent faith beleeued God, that he was ready in his minde to doe all things that God commanded, his faith was worthelie reputed of God, which knew his heart for iustice. And that we also might knowe his faith, by which he was iustified, God tempted him, commanding him to offer his sonne, and his faith was perfected by his deedes, that is to say, by perfect execution of works, it was prooued to bee in his heart. Oecumenius vpon this place saith, that Abraham was an image of iustification, which is by faith onely, when it was imputed to him for iustice that he beleeued, and of that iustification which is of works, when he offered his sonne vpon the altar. You see therefore, that the two Apostles speake of two diuerse kindes of iustification, the one by faith onely, the other by workes, which is a declaration and tryall of the other.

RHEM. 8 23 The freende of God.) By this alſo an other falſe and friuolous euaſion of the Heretikes is ouertaken, when they feyne, that the Apoſtle heere when hee ſaith, workes doe iuſtifie, meaneth that they ſhewe vs iuſt before men, and auaile not to our iuſtice before God. For the Apoſtle euidently declareth that Abraham by his workes was made or truely called the friende of God, and therefore was not (as the Heretikes ſay) by his workes approoued iuſt before man onely. Workes made vs iuſt in deed before God.

FVLKE. 8 The Apoſtle ſaith not, that Abraham by his workes was made the freende of God, but that hee was ſo knowen to men, and therefore truely called the freend of God. Neither doe we ſay, that Abraham by his workes was approued or declared to be iuſt before men only: for he was ſo approued by God alſo. But he was iuſtified or made iuſt by God through faith onely, and not by his workes, when God imputed faith to him for iuſtice without workes. Rom. 4. Anſelmus de excel. 6. Virg. Mariæ. Certe ſola fide Abraham fatur Deo placuiſſe, & hoc quia Deo credidit: ad iuſtitiam illi imputatum fuiſſe. Merite.

RHEM. 9 24 Not by faith onely.) *This propoſition of ſpeech is directly oppoſite or contradictorie to that which the Heretikes holde. For the Apoſtle ſaith, Man is iuſtified by good workes, and not by faith onely. but the Heretikes ſay, Man is not iuſtified by good workes, but by faith onely. Neither can they pretend that there is the like contradiction or contrarietie betwixt Saint Iames ſpeech and Saint Paul's. for though Saint Paul ſay, man is iuſtified by faith, yet he neuer ſaith, by faith onely, nor euer meaneth by that faith which is alone, but alwaies by that faith which worketh by charitie, * as hee expounded himſelfe. Though concerning workes alſo, there is a difference betwixt the firſt iuſtification, whereof Saint Paul ſpecially ſpeaketh: and the ſecond iuſtification, whereof Saint Iames doeth more ſpecially treate. Of which thing * els where there is ynough ſaid.* The Proteſtants ſay, by faith only: S. Iames cleane contrary, Not by faith only. * See the Annot. vpon the Epiſtle to the Romanes c. 2. v. 13.

The fathers in deede vſe ſometimes this excluſiue, ſola, onely: but in farre other ſenſe then the Proteſtants. For ſome of them thereby exclude onely the workes of Moyſes lawe, againſt the Iewes: ſome, the workes of nature and morall vertues without the grace or knowledge of Chriſt, againſt the Gentiles: ſome, the neceſſitie of externall good workes where the parties lacke time and meanes to doe them, as in the caſe of the penitent theefe: ſome, the falſe opinions, ſectes, and religions contrarie to the Catholike faith, againſt Heretikes and miſcreants: ſome exclude reaſon, ſenſe, and arguing in matters of faith and myſterie, againſt ſuch as will beleeue nothing, but that they ſee or vnderſtand: ſome, the merite of workes done in ſinne before the firſt iuſtification: ſome, the arrogant Phariſaicall vaunting of mans owne proper workes and iuſtice, againſt ſuch as referre not their actions and good deedes to Gods grace. To theſe purpoſes the holy Doctors ſay ſometimes, that onely faith ſaueth and ſerueth: but neuer (as the Proteſtants would haue it) to exclude from iuſtification and ſaluation, the cooperation of mans free will, diſpoſitions and preparations of our hartes by prayers, penance, and ſacraments, the vertues of hope and charitie, the purpoſe of well working and of the obſeruation of Gods commaundements: much leſſe, the workes and merites of the children of God, proceeding of grace and charitie, after they be iuſtified and are now in his fauour: which are not onely diſpoſitions and preparations to iuſtice, but the meritorious cauſe of greater iuſtice, and of ſaluation. The manifold meaning of certaine fathers, when they ſay, onely faith.

FVLKE. 9 This propoſition is not directly oppoſite or contradictorie to that which wee holde, no more then thoſe two ſayings of Chriſt. The father is greater then I, and I and the father are one. No more is this ſaying of Saint Iames: Abraham was iuſtified by workes, contrarie to that which Saint Paul ſaith, that he was iuſtified by faith without works. For both the ſayings are true in diuers reſpects, and we beleeue both: for where the reſpect is not the ſame, there is no oppoſition or contradiction. We ſay therefore with Saint Paul, a man is iuſtified by faith without workes, which is all one as if he ſaid, by faith onely. And we ſay with Saint Iames, A man is iuſtified of workes, and not of faith onely, which ſayings in diuers reſpects and acceptions of this worde, iuſtifying, are true. In S. Paul it ſignifieth to be made iuſt by Gods imputation. In S. Iames it ſignifieth to be declared iuſt, as well before men, as in the ſight of God: Faith onely.

Neither is it poſſible to reconcile the apparence of oppoſition, which is betweene the two Apoſtles ſayings, but in this maner. For to ſay (as the Papiſtes do) that a man is iuſtified both by faith and works, can not poſſibly ſtand with that which S. Paul ſaith, A man is iuſtified by faith without works. But S. Iames ſaith not, that a man is iuſtified by workes without faith, which he might as rightly ſay as S. Paul, without workes, if he meant of the ſame iuſtification: but he ſaith, a man is not iuſtified by faith onely.

Therefore he meaneth, that a man is not iuſtified before God by a ſolitarie faith, which is void of good works, but by a liuing and working faith, in ſo much that by works alſo, he is declared to be iuſt (which is one ſignification of that terme of iuſtifying vſuall in the Scriptures, Mat. 11. 19. Luc. 7. 29. &c.) and therefore is iuſtified by workes, and not by faith onely. But you ſay, there is not the like contradiction betweene the two Apoſtles, becauſe Saint Paul neuer ſaith: a man is iuſtified by faith onely. But when he ſaith, a man is iuſtified without works, it is the ſame that we meane when we ſay, by faith onely.

And theſe wordes of Iames, Abraham was iuſtified by workes, are in forme of ſpeech directly contradictorie to that Saint Paul defendeth: Abraham to be iuſtified by faith without workes, or not of workes, though in ſenſe they be not: becauſe the one vſeth the worde (iuſtifie) in one ſenſe, the other in an other ſenſe.

Where you ſay S. Paul neuer meaneth, that by faith which is alone a man is iuſtified, we agree with you: for we hold, that a man is iuſtified by faith which worketh by loue, yet not of the merite of workes, but of the free grace of God. But concerning workes alſo, you ſay there is a difference betwixt the firſt iuſtification whereof S. Paul ſpeaketh ſpecially, and the ſecond whereof S. Iames ſpecially treateth. This difference will neuer diſcharge the Apoſtles of contradiction, that a man is iuſtified by works, and that a man is iuſtified without workes: yea ſaued not of workes, but of grace, ſo long as you meane both theſe iuſtifications to bee before God in one acception of the word iuſtification. Beſide, that the ſcripture teacheth but one iuſtification vnto glorification and ſaluation, which is that which you call the firſt.

For that you alleadge out of the Apocalypſe 22. He that is iuſt, let him bee more iuſtified, though it were meant of the ſame kind of iuſtice, yet it cannot ſerue you to ground a ſecond kind of iuſtification vpon it, becauſe compariſon of greater or leſſer, doeth not make a ſeuerall kinde. It declareth therefore an increaſe in the ſame kinde of iuſtification, and not a new kinde of iuſtification. It is an exhortation therefore, that he which is iuſt declare himſelfe more and more to be iuſt, and increaſe in the works of iuſtice. No iuſtification to ſaluation.

The fathers you confeſſe doe ſometimes (in deede very often) ſay, we are iuſtified by faith onely, or faith onely doth iuſtifie &c. but they haue a farre other meaning then we: and then you ſay, they exclude this and that, which is true (for onely faith iuſtifying, excludeth all thoſe things:) but they exclude alſo the merite of good workes, which the Apoſtle doth exclude, and that is it which we would haue. But to followe you in particulars, they neuer exclude ſay you, from iuſtification and ſaluation, the cooperation of mans free will. Onely faith. Freewill.

To

To passe ouer your pelting sophistrie, in ioyning togither iustification and saluation: of which although the later do follow of the former, yet they are diuers things, and in reasoning are to be distinguished: I say onely faith doth not exclude the consent of our will. Which of vnwilling by the grace of God is made willing, to accept iustification and saluation, but it excludeth the merite or power of mans captiue will, which without the grace of God, auaileth to nothing, but to sinne, as S. August. often teacheth. And especially he handleth this point of purpose, that our will in beleeuing vnto iustification and saluation, is not of that naturall freedome of wil, but of Gods grace, de sp. & liter. cap. 33. & 34.

You say further, they do not exclude the dispositions and preparations of our harts by praiers, penance, and sacraments. I answere, they acknowledge but one iustification before God vnto saluation, euen that whereby God iustifieth the vngodly, which you call the first iustification: for of the second they neuer heard, nor any papist, till within these fewe yeeres: therefore they exclude al disposition, and preparation of mens harts by praier or any other meanes, of which nothing can be good that proceedeth from an vngodly man, therefore can haue no cooperation with God, in iustifying the vngodly man by faith onely without good workes.

You adde further, they doe not exclude the vertue of hope and charitie, the purpose of well working, and the obseruation of Gods commaundements: Neither do we exclude them from following iustification, and the iustified man, but they goe not before vnto iustification, or the man to be iustified (saith S. Augustine) as before is shewed, therefore in iustification they exclude them. Last of all you say, much lesse they exclude the workes and merites of the children of God proceeding of grace and charitie, after they be iustified, and are now in his fauour. Seeing they acknowledge iustification by grace, by faith onely without workes, although they exclude not the workes of Gods children to followe iustification, to the reward of eternall life, which God hath promised: yet in the very act of iustification, which goeth before such workes, they must needes exclude such workes from iustifying, or being meritorious of iustice, which is Gods free gift in Iesus Christ. A few sentences of the fathers I will rehearse, that their meaning may appeare to be clearely as ours is, against all your cauilles. Origines in Ep. ad Rom. l. 3. c. 3. The Apostle saith, that the iustification of faith alone doth suffice, so that he which beleeueth onely, is iustified, although he haue fulfilled no worke: wherefore it standeth vs vpon, that take in hand to defend the Apostles writing to be perfect, and al things therein to stand with good order, to enquire who hath been iustified by faith only, without worke. Therefore for examples sake, I thinke that theefe is sufficient, which being crucified with Christ, cried to him from the crosse, Lord Iesu remember me when thou commest in thy kingdome. Neither are there any good workes of his described in the Gospel, but for this faith onely, Iesus said vnto him, this day thou shalt be with me in Paradise. Where it is to be noted, that although this theefe had no good workes going before faith: yet proceeding of faith hee had as many, as the time and case wherein he was permitted, namely the feare of God, acknowledging of his sinnes, inuocation, reprehension of his fellow &c. Hilarius in Math. Can. 8. It mooued the Scribes, that sinne was forgiuen by a man: for they beheld a man onely in Iesus Christ, and that to bee forgiuen by him, which the lawe could not release: for faith onely doth iustifie. Here you see iustification by remission of sinnes: the like assertion he hath, Can. 21. Gregory Nazianzen affirmeth the same, or 22. de modest. in decept. And in car. de rebus suis, speaking in the person of the Publicane, that praied with the Pharise, saith, Workes shal not saue me, but let thy grace and thy mercie droppe vpon me profane man, which onely hope (O King) thou hast giuen to miserable sinners. Here you see, grace and mercy the onely hope of sinners. Basil. de Humil. Hom. 51. saith: This is a perfect and full reioycing in God, when a man doth not boast himselfe of his owne iustice, but knoweth himselfe to bee voide of true iustice, and to be iustified by onely faith in Christ. S. Ambrose among a great number of places hath these wordes, in 1 Cor. cap. 1. It is so appointed of God, that he which beleeueth in Christ, shall be saued without workes, receiuing forgiuenesse of sinnes by faith alone. S. Chrysostome also oftentimes affirmeth the same, and speaking of Abraham he saith, in Ep. ad Gal. cap. 3. If he before the time of grace were iustified by faith, and that when he florished in good works, much more we. In Timoth. Homil. 3. he saith: If thou trust vnto faith, why bringest thou in other things, as though faith alone sufficed not to iustifie? S. Hierome against the Pelagianes saith, lib. 1. We are iust, when we confesse our selues to be sinners, and our iustice consisteth not of our owne merite, but of Gods mercie. In the commentarie vpon S. Pauls Epistles ascribed to Hierome, iustification is often attributed to faith onely: and to shewe that he excludeth all merite of workes he saith in Epistle ad Galat. chapter 1. By grace alone you are saued through faith: and chapter 2. Grace is cast away, if faith onely suffice not.

RHEM. 10 25 Rahab.) This Apostle alleageth the good workes of Rahab by which she was iustified, and S. Paul (11. Hebr.) sayth she was iustified by faith. Which are not contrary one to another. for both is true, that she was saued by faith, as one sayth: and that she was saued by her workes, as the other saith. But it were vntruely said, that she was saued either by onely faith, as the Heretikes say: or by onely good workes, as no Catholike man euer said. But because some Iewes and Gentile Philosophers did affirme: they, that they should be saued by the workes of Moyses law: these, by their morall workes: therefore S. Paul to the Romanes disputed specially against both, prouing that no workes done without or before the faith of Christ, can serue to iustification or saluation.

S. Paul nameth faith, and S. Iames workes, causes of iustification: but neither the one, faith onely: nor the other, workes onely.

FVLKE. 10 Rahab was iustified as Abraham was, before God by faith onely, through which faith she brought foorth that worke which is here commended, whereby she was declared to be iust. S. Paul to the Romanes, Galathians, Ephesians, and other, writing to Christians, howe they are iustified and saued, doeth not onely confute the errours of the Iewes and Philosophers, but of the Pelagians, Papistes, and all other Heretikes, that teache a man to be iustified before God by his workes, and not by the onely grace of God through faith.

RHEM. 11 26 Faith without workes is dead.) S. Iames (as the Protestants faine) sayth that faith without good workes is no faith, and that therefore it iustifieth not, because it is no faith. for he saith that it is dead without workes, as the body is dead without the soule, and therefore being dead hath no actiuitie or efficacie to iustifie or saue. But it is a great difference, to say that the body is dead, and to say that it is no body. euen so it is the like difference, to say that faith without workes is dead, and to say that faith without workes is no faith. And if a dead body be not withstanding a true body, then according to S. Iames comparison here, a dead faith is not withstanding a true faith, but yet not auaileable to iustification, because it is dead, that is, because it is onely faith without good workes.

Faith without workes is a true faith, but not auaileable: as the body without the spirit is a true body though it be dead.

And therefore it is a great impudencie in Heretikes, and a hard shift, to say that the faith of which the Apostle disputeth all this while is no true or properly called faith at al. It is the same faith that S. Paul defined and commended in all the 11. chapter to the Hebrues, and the same which is called the Catholike faith, and the same which being formed and made alive by charitie, iustifieth. Mary true it is, that it is not that speciall faith which the Heretikes feine onely to iustifie, to wit, when a man doth firmely beleeue as an article of his faith, that himselfe shall be saued. this speciall faith it is not whereof the Apostle here speaketh. for neither he, nor S. Paul, nor any other sacred writer in all the holy Scriptures euer spake or knewe of anie such forged faith.

What faith the Apostle speaketh of: and that he knew no speciall faith.

FVLKE. II Wee faine no such fables, as you list to dreame of. Wee saie the Apostle speaketh partly of a fayned faith, which howe vaine it is, hee prooueth by fained charitie: partly of that faith which is an assent, that the principles of religion are true, which is a kinde of faith, but such as is in deuils, which tremble at Gods iustice, but doe not embrace his saluation, and this is voide of good workes, and is a dead faith, not a iustifying faith. It standeth you vpon to make much of this faith: for this is your popish faith, not differing from the deuils faith, therefore you charge vs with impudencie in saying that the faith of which the Apostle disputeth, is no true, or properly called faith. Whereunto I answere, that if a dead man may truely and properly be called a man, then this is a true and properly called faith, which the Apostle calleth a dead faith: yet is it not that faith, which S. Paul affirmeth to iustifie without workes, though it be not without workes after it haue iustified. But it is the same (you say) that S. Paul defined and commended Hebr. 11. and the same which is called the Catholike faith. That it is not the same that the Apostle commendeth, nor the true Catholike faith, it is manifest by this reason. That faith which the Apostle commendeth, is it by which all the Patriarkes pleased God, who pleased him not with a dead faith, nor with such a faith as is in deuils: therefore it is not the same faith. That faith hath trust and confidence in God, that he is a rewarder of them that seeke him, this faith hath not, nor without this trust can haue that information or life by charitie, which you speake of. For no man can loue God, except he first beleeue that he is, and that he will be good vnto him. And that faith in deed doth iustifie which worketh by loue: but loue or charitie is not the forme or life of it, but a fruit and effect of it. For the Apostle in this similitude doth not make faith the body, and works the soule: but works the Argument of the life & soule of faith, which is trust in God, that is lacking in the deuils, in whom is knowledge of the trueth, (that you call the Catholike faith,) which is the body onely without life, except there be trust and confidence, which is the life of it, declaring it selfe by the workes as the life of a tree by leaues, flowers, and fruites. Didymus Alex. vpon this text saith: It is to be noted, that when faith is dead without workes, it is also no faith: for a dead man is not a man. But here some men saying, that the spirit is the cause whereby the body liueth, say it is more honourable then the body, and consequently affirme, that works which giue life to it, are more honourable then faith, I haue studied more earnestly to set forth what I thinke. For though without doubt the spirit is better then the body, yet without controuersie, works are not to be preferred before faith, seeing a man is saued by grace, not of workes, but of faith. Out of this fragment of Didymus it appeareth, that he accompted that to be no true faith which was void of good workes, and that he esteemed not workes or charitie to be the soule or forme of faith. Damas. de. orthod. fid. lib. 4. c 9. Faith without works is dead, and so likewise works without faith are dead. For a true faith is tried & approoued by works. But you are wel assured, that the Apostle speaketh not of the special faith which we hold onely to iustifie. This confession (though from the deuils mouth) is true. For that faith which we teach to iustifie, is no dead faith, is not in deuils, is not void of good works. But neither S. Paul, nor any sacred writer (you say) euer spake or knew of any such forged faith. What say you, it is a forged faith for euery mā to beleeue the general promises of God to perteine vnto him? when Christ saith: He that beleeueth and is baptized, &c. Did not Peter and euery one of the Apostles that beleeued and were baptised, firmely beleeue that they should be saued? Yes verely they beleeued all, & euery one said with Dauid, I haue beleeued, therefore I haue spoken, and they taught all Christian men so to beleeue, and your generall faith is nothing better then infidelitie. Iudas after he had betraied Christ, beleeued that he was iust, the deuils beleeued that he was the sonne of God. What lacke is there in the deuils faith? You wil say loue, Which is true, but it is not al the truth. For how they loue him of whom they looke to receiue no benefite but condemnation? Therefore Iudas and the deuils lacke faith, that is trust and confidence in God, that hee is their mercifull father to saue them: which faith whosoeuer hath, cannot but loue God, and all that God hath commanded to be loued for his sake. This is therefore the onely true iustifying faith of all Christians, not onely to knowe God to bee, and Christ to be a Sauiour, but to beleeue that God is their God, and Christ is their Sauiour, according to whose most certaine and comfortable promises, they looke stedfastly to be saued.

True faith iustifying.

RHEM. 1 1 Many maisters) He meaneth principally Sect-maisters that make themselues seueral Ringleaders in sundry sorts of new deuised doctrines: euery one arrogating to himself to be maister, and none so humble as to be a scholer, either to Gods Church and true Fathers, or to other guides and authors of the said sectes. So did Zuinglius disdaine to be Luthers scholer, and Caluin to be the folower of Zuinglius. Many maisters are many proud Sect-maisters.

FVLKE. 1 Luther, Zuinglius, and Caluine, were all scholers of Christ, and therefore might not follow one another, further, then they followed Christ. They are not many maisters, who all reach the doctrine of Christ, at least in the chiefe and necessarie articles vnto saluation. Cauilling.

CHAP. IIII.

By concupiscence and loue of this world, we are made enemies to God: but we should rather humble vs to him, punishing our selues for our sinne. Against detraction, and rash iudging. 13 To remember alwaies the vncertaintie of our life.

FRom whence are warres and contentions among you? Are they not hereof? of your concupiscences which warre in your members?

2 You couet: and haue not. you kil, and enuie: and cannot obtaine, you contend and war: & you haue not, because you aske not.

3 You aske, and receiue not: because you aske amisse: that you may consume it on your concupiscences.

4 Aduouterers, know you not that the ‖ friendship of this world, is the enemie of God? Whosoeuer therfore wil be a friende of this world: is made an enemie of God.

‖ Ia. 2, 5.

FRom whence commeth warres and fightings among you? Come they not here hence, euen of your lustes that fight in your members?

2 Ye lust, and haue not: ye ennie, and haue indignation, and can not obtaine: Yee fight and warre, ye haue not, because ye aske not.

3 Ye aske and receiue not, because ye aske amisse, euen to consume it vpon your lustes.

4 Yee adulterers, and adulteresses. knowe you not howe that the friendship of the worlde is enimitie with God? whosoeuer therefore will be a friende of the worlde, is made the enimie of God.

5 Or

5 Or doe you thinke that the Scripture saith in vaine: To enuie doth the spirit couet which dwelleth in you?

6 And ‡ giueth greater grace. For the which cause it saith, God resisteth the proud, and giueth grace to the humble.

Prou.3,35. 1.Pet.5,5.

7 Be subiect therefore to God, but resist the Diuel, and he wil flee from you.

8 *Approche to God, & he wil approche to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners: and purifie your hearts, ye double of minde.

9 Be miserable, and mourne, and weepe: let your laughter be turned into mourning: and ioy, into sorrow.

10 *Be humbled in the sight of our Lord, and he wil exalt you.

1.Pet.5,6.

11 *Detracte not one from another my brethren. He that detracteth from his brother, or he that iudgeth his brother, detracteth from the Law, and iudgeth the Law. But if thou iudge the Law, thou art not a doer of the Law, but a iudge.

* μὴ καταλαλεῖτε ἀλλήλων
* He forbiddeth detraction, euill speaking, slandering.

12 For there is one law-maker, and iudge that can destroy and deliuer.

13 But thou, *what art thou that iudgest thy neighbour? Behold now you that say, To day or to morow we wil goe into that citie, and there certes wil spend a yeere, and wil traficke, and make our gaine.

Ro.14,4.

14 (Who are ignorant what shall be on the morow. For what is your life? It is a vapour appearing for a little while, and afterward it shal vanish away)

15 For that you should say, ‡ If our Lord will: and, If we shal liue, we wil doe this or that.

16 But now you reioice in your arrogancies. Al such reioicing, is wicked.

17 To one therefore knowledge to doe good, and not doing it: to him it is sinne.

‡ All promises & purposes of our worldly affaires are to be made vnder condition of Gods good liking and pleasure: and it becommeth a Christian man to haue vsually this forme of speach in that case, If God will, if God otherwise dispose not.

5 Either doe ye thinke that the Scripture saith in vaine, The spirite that dwelleth in vs lusteth to enuie?

6 But the Scripture *offereth more grace, and therefore saith, God resisteth the proud, but giueth grace vnto the lowly.

1,Pet.5.9. prou.3.34.

7 Submit your selues therefore to God: but resist the diuell, and he will flee from you.

8 Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you: cleanse your hands ye sinners, and purifie your hearts ye double minded.

9 Suffer afflictions, and mourne, and weepe: Let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your ioy to heauinesse.

10 Humble your selues in the sight of the Lord, and he shal lift you vp.*

1.Pet.5.6.

11 Backbite not one another, brethren: He that backbiteth his brother, and he that iudgeth his brother, backbiteth the Lawe, and iudgeth the Lawe: but and if thou iudge the Law, thou art not an obseruer of the Lawe, but a iudge.

12 *There is one lawe giuer, which is able to saue, and to destroy: * What art thou that iudgest another?*

Rom.14.4.

13 Goe to nowe yee that say; To day and to morowe let vs goe into such a citie, and continue there a yeere, and buye, and sell, and winne:

14 (And yet can ye not tel what shal happen on the morowe: For what thing is your life? It is euen a vapour that appeareth for a little time, and then it vanisheth away).

15 *For that ye ought to say, * If the Lord wil, and if we liue, let vs do this, or that.*

1.Cor.4.19.

16 But nowe ye reioice in your boastings: Al such reioycing is euill.

17 Therefore to him that knoweth how to do good, and doth it not, to him it is sinne.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 1 6 Giueth greater grace.) The boldnes of Heretikes adding here the worde Scripture to the text thus, And the Scripture giueth greater grace.

FVLKE.1 It is no heretic all boldnesse to adde a word to supply the sense, which needs must be vnderstoode. Cauilling.

RHEM.2 8 *Approche to God.) Free will and mans best endeuour necessarie in comming to God.

FVLKE.2 Man hath no free will to endeuour to come to God, without the grace of God. The Apostle speaketh to Christians, whose will by grace is begonne to be enlarged, that they may endeuour to come daily neerer and neerer to God. Although the will of man (as I haue often protested) is alway free from constraint, but not from thraldome and bondage to sinne. Free will.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IIII.

FVLKE.3 8 Purifie your hartes.) Man (we see here) maketh himselfe cleane and purgeth his owne hart. Which derogateth nothing to the grace of God being the principal cause of the same. Yet Protestants thinke we derogate from Christs Passion, when we attribute such effects to our owne workes, or to other secundaria helpes and causes. Mans working with Gods grace, is no derogation thereunto.

FVLKE.3 Man working by the grace of God, derogateth nothing from his honour. But he that thinketh he cleanseth his heart by any strength of his owne, and not by the grace of God onely, derogateth from the grace of God, which is the only auctour of goodnesse in vs: For of our selues, as of our selues, we are not apt to thinke any thing. 2 *Cor.*3.5. Therefore Papistes doe manifestly derogate from the glorie of Christs death, when they attribute such effects to their owne workes, or other helpes whatsoeuer, as the Scripture maketh the proper effects of Christs death: as satisfaction for sinnes by merites and penance, propitiation by Masses, releasse by pardons, &c. The grace of God.

RHEM. 1 By the denunciation of the vnmercifull rich, he exhorteth the persecuted to patience, and by their owne reward, and by examples. 12 Also to sincerity of his in common talke. 13 In affliction, to pray: in prosperitie, to sing: in sickenes, to call for the Priests, and that they pray ouer them and anoile them with oile: and that the sicke persons confesse their sins. 19 Finally, how meritorious it is, to conuert the erring vnto the Catholike faith, or the sinner to amendment of life.

FVLKE. 1 The Apostle exhorteth both sicke and whole persons, to acknowledge their trespasses one to another, which they haue committed one against another. He sheweth how excellent and good a worke it is to conuert a sinner, but of merite he speaketh nothing. Confession. Merite.

9 Grudge not brethren one against another, that you be not iudged. Behold, the iudge standeth before the gate.

10 Take an example, brethren, of labour and patience, the prophets: which spake in the name of our Lord.

11 Behold we account them blessed that haue suffred. The sufferance of Iob you haue heard, & the end of our Lord you haue seen, because our Lord is merciful and pitieful.

12 But before all things my brethren ‖ sweare not, neither by heauen, nor by earth, nor other othe whatsoeuer. But let your talke be, yea, yea: no, no: that you fall not vnder iudgement.

5 Ye haue lined in pleasure on the earth, and beene wanton: Ye haue nourished your hearts, as in a day of slaughter.

6 Ye haue condemned and killed the iust, and he doeth not resist you.

7 Bee patient therefore brethren, vnto the comming of the Lord, behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruite of the earth, and hath long patience thereupon, vntill hee receiue the early and later raine.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. V.

RHEM. 2 16 Confesse therefore.) The heretikes translate, Acknowledge your sinnes, &c. So little they can abide the very word of confession.

FVLKE. 2 Our translation is true, and agreeable to the Apostles meaning: as for the worde of confession, and the thing it selfe, when it signifieth true confession, we can well abide, and vse many times. But you imagine that the very word confession, is sufficient to proue the necessitie of auricular confession, with all the Popish tyrannie incident thereunto. Caulling. Popish confession.

RHEM. 3 20 Couereth a multitude.) He that hath the zeale of conuerting sinners, procureth thereby mercie and remission to him selfe: which is a singular grace.

FVLKE. 3 The Apostle saith not that he shall couer the multitude of his owne sinnes, but rather of his whom he conuerteth, in such sence, as he saueth his soule from death, namely, as a profitable instrument of Gods grace, and mercie, which properly conuerteth and saueth sinners, and coureth sinnes. Dorotheus doct.6. Charitas compatitur & conteritur cum proximorum peccata viderit vt dicitur quia Charitas operit multitudinem peccatorum.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. V.

RHEM. 4 The hire.) To withholde from the poore or labourer the hire or wages that is due or promised to him for his seruice or worke done, is a great iniquitie, and one of those fiue sinnes which in holy write be saide to call for vengeance at Gods hand, as we see here. They be called in the Catechisme, Sinnes crying to heauen. The other foure be Murder, Gen.18. v.20. Surie. Exod.22.v.27. The sinnes against nature, Gen.18.v.20. The oppression and vexation widowes, pupilles, strangers and such like. Ib. & Exod.3.v.9. The sinnes crying to heauen.

12 Sweare not.) He forbiddeth not all othes, as the Anabaptists falsely say. for in iustice and iudgement we may be by our lawful Magistrate put to sweare, and may lawfully take an othe, as also for the aduantaging of any necessarie truth when time and place require. but the custome of swearing, and all vaine, light, and vnnecessarie othes in our daily speech doe displease God highly, and are here forbidden by the Apostle, as also by our Sauiour. Mat.5. What othes are lawfull, what are not.

RHEM. 4 14 Let him bring in the Priests.) The Protestants for their speciall hatred of the holy order of Priesthood, as els where often, so here they corrupt the text euidently, translating Presbyteros, elders. As though the Apostle had meant men of age, and not such as were by the holy office, Priests. S. Chrysostom who knew the sense and signification of the Greeke word according to the Ecclesiasticall vse and the whole Churches iudgement, better then any Protestant alme taketh it plainely for Sacerdotes, that is, Priests li.3.de Sacerdotio prope initium. And if they confesse that it is a worde of office with them also, though they call them elders, and not Priests: then we demaund whether the Apostle meane here men of that function which they in their new Churches call Elders. If they say no, as they must needes (for Elders with them are not deputed specially to publike praying or administration of the sacraments, such as the Apostle here requireth to be sent for (then they must needs graunt, that their Elders answere not to the function of those which in the new Testament are called Presbyteri in Greeke and Latin, and therefore both their translation to be false and fraudulent, and also their naming of their new degrees or orders to be fond and incongruous. Heretical translation against Priesthod. Neither their Elders (so called) nor their Ministers, can be those whom the Apostle here calleth, Presbyteros.

If they say their Ministers be correspondent to such as were called Presbyteri in holy writ and in the Primitiue Church, and that they are the men whom the Apostle willeth to be called for to anoile the sicke and to pray for him, why doe they not then translate Presbyteros Ministers? Which they might do with as good reason, as call such as they haue taken in steede of our Catholike Priests, Ministers. Which words being in large acception common to all that haue to doe about the celebration of Diuine things, was neuer appropriated by the vse either of the Scripture or of the holy Church, to that higher function of publike administration of the Sacraments and Seruice, which is Priesthood: but to the order next vnder it, which is Deaconship. And therefore if any should be called Ministers, their Deacons properly should be so termed. And the Protestants haue no more reason to keep the ancient greeke word of Deacon, appropriated to that office by the vse of antiquitie, then to keepe the word Priest, being made no lesse peculiar to the state of such onely as minister the holy Sacraments, and offer the sacrifice of the Altar. But these fellowes follow neither Gods word nor Ecclesiasticall vse, nor any reason, but mere phantasie, popelrie, and hatred of Gods Church. And how little they follow any good rule or reason in these things may appeare by this, that here they auoide to translate Priests, and yet in their Communion booke, in their order of visiting the sicke they commonly name the Minister, Priest. They haue no reason to call their Ministers, by that name. Their Deacons should rather be called Ministers. They should keepe the name Priest, as well as Deacon.

FVLKE. 4 Wee translate the Greeke worde heere, as wee doe in other places truely, for the Elders by office, and not in age, as your owne vulgar latine translator calleth them diuers times Seniores and Maiores natu, which you call Ancients and Seniors. Therefore this is a rotten cauill, not worth a rotten nutte. And although Chrysostome following the vsuall maner of speaking, called them Sacerdotes, yet if he had translated this or any like text out of Greeke, into the Latine tongue, he ought not to haue vsed that worde Sacerdotes. Neither doth your vulgar Latine interpreter, whom you hold to haue knowen the sense and signification of that worde, as well as any Papist aliue, in any place translate the worde heere vsed by the Apostle, Sacerdotes, but either Seniores, or Maiores natu, or Presbyteri: and Beda in his commentarie on this place, calleth them Seniores. But admitting that we meane elders by office, you demaund, whether the Apostle meane heere, men of that function which in our Churches we call Elders. I answere yea, he meaneth such. But that you thinke can not be so: because Elders Caulling.

are not deputed specially to publike prayers and administration of the Sacraments. I answere, although in some churches there be some Elders appointed only to gouerne, yet is there no Church in which there bee no Elders appointed specially to publike prayers, and administration of the sacraments: and therefore our Elders are such as the Apostle requireth to be sent for, saeing that they haue not the gift of healing, as those had in the primitiue Church of the Iewes, and therefore your quarrelling as well at our orders, as at our translation is vaine. But admitting that the ministers of our Church be such as the Apostle speaketh of, you demaund why we translate not Presbyteros ministers, I answere, because the word signifieth Elders and not ministers: I might by as good reason demand of you, why ye translate not Seniores, priests, rather then Ancients. But wee might as well translate so, as call them so you thinke, but we knowe no: For in translation, we must looke as neere as the phrase of writing will beare, to the proper signification of wordes: else why call you them Priests, whome in translation you terme Ancients? In common speach we may vse common wordes, but when we are examined so straightly of our termes, we answere that we call them not ministers, meaning largely and absolutely, but ministers of God and of his Church, as S. Paul calleth himselfe and his fellow ministers. 1. Cor. 3. 5. & c. 4. 1. who was I trow of the highest oder. But the Deacons (you say) should more properly be called ministers. We call not the Elders ministers, as though the word were proper to them, which we acknowledge to be generall to all inferiour ministers and seruitors of the Church: but because they are the principall ministers of God & the Church. And yet we contend not for the terme, nor refuse the name Priest, when it signifieth the same whom the Apostle calleth Presbyterum: but when by abuse and vaine cauillation of Papists, it is taken to signifie a sacrificer. To conclude therefore, according to the true etymologie we confesse the name to be good, and doe vse it in our seruice booke and otherwise, knowing that it implyeth no sacrificing, as you most fondly and ridiculously would enforce out of it. But in translation, because by common speach a Priest was taken for a sacrificer, and the translators had no other name, whereby to call the sacrificers of the law but priests, to make & obserue that difference which the holy Ghost alwaies obserueth in the new testament, they call the one priests, the other Elders. But if they had called the one sacrifices, and the other priests, that priests might haue beene knowen to differ from sacrificers, it had beene a small matter, and perhaps hindered you of this vaine quarrell.

RHEM. 5 14 Anoiling with oyle.) Here is the Sacrament of extreme Vnction so plainely promulgated (for it was instituted, as all other Sacraments of the new Testament, by our Sauiour Christ himselfe, and, as Venerable Bede thinketh and other auncient writers, the anoiling of the sicke with oyle Marc. 6. pertaineth thereunto) that some Heretikes, for the euidence of this place also (as of the other for good workes) deny the Epistle. Other (as the Caluinists) through their confidente of cunning shifts and glosses, confessing that S. Iames is the author, yet condemne the Church of God for vsing and taking it for a Sacrament. But what dishonour to God is it (we pray them) that a Sacrament should be instituted in the matter of oyle, more then in the element of water? Why may not grace and remission of sinnes be annexed to the one as well as to the other, without derogation to God? The Sacrament of EXTREME VNCTION.

But they say, Sacraments endure for euer in the Church, this is but for a season in the Primitiue Church What Scripture telleth them that this generall and absolute prescription of the Apostle in this case, should endure but for a season? when was it taken away, abrogated, or altered? They see the Church of God hath alwaies vsed it vpon this warrant of the Apostles, who knew Christs meaning and institution of it better then these deceiued men, who make more of their owne fond ghesses and coniectures, grounded neither on Scripture nor vpon any circumstance of the text, nor any one authentical author that euer wrote, then of the expresse wordes of God. It was (say they) a miraculous practise of healing the sicke, during onely in the Apostles time, and not long after. We aske them whether Christ appointed any certaine creature or externall element vnto the Apostles generally to worke miracles by. Himselfe vsed sometimes clay and spittle, sometimes he sent them that were diseased, to wash them selues in waters. but that he appointed any of those or the like things for a generall medicine or miraculous healing only, that we read not. for in the beginning: for the better inducing of the people to faith and deuotion. Christ would haue miracles to be wrought by sundry of the Sacraments also. Which miraculous workes ceasing, yet the Sacraments remaine still vnto the worlds ende. The heretikes obiections against the said Sacrament, answered: and withal it is to be proued to be a Sacrament.

Againe we demaund, whether euer they read or heard that men were generally commaunded to seeke for their health by miraculous meanes. Thirdly, whether all Priests, or (as they cal them) Elders, had the gift of miracles in the primitiue church? No, it cannot be, for though some had, yet all these indifferently of whom the Apostle speaketh, had not the gift: and many that were no Priests, had it, both men and women, which yet could not be called for, as Priests were in this case. And though the Apostle and others could both cure men and reuiue them againe, yet there was no such generall precept for sicke or dead men, as thus, to call for the Apostles to heale or restore them to life againe. Lastly, had any externall element or miraculous practise, vnlesse it were a Sacrament, the promise of remission of all kinde of actuall sinnes ioyned vnto it? or could S. Iames institute such a ceremonie himselfe, that could saue both body and soule, by giuing health to the one, and grace and remission to the other? At other times these contentious wranglers raile at Gods Church, for annexing onely the remission of venial sinnes to the element of water, made holy by the Priests blessing thereof in the name of Christ, and his worde: and loe here they are driuen to hold that S. Iames prescribed a miraculous oile or creature which had much more power and efficacie. Into these straits are such miscreants brought that will not beleeue the expresse worde of God, interpreted by the practise of God vniuersall Church. Remission of sinnes annexed to creatures. Holy water.

Venerable Bede in 9. Luc. saith thus. It is cleere that this custome was deliuered to the holy Church by the Apostles themselues, that the sicke should be annointed with oyle consecrated by the Bishops blessing, See for this, and for the assertion and vse of this Sacrament, S. Innocentius ep. 1. ad Decentium Eugubinum cap. 8. to. 1. Conc. & Lib. 2. de visitatione infirmorum in S. Augustine cap. 4. Concil. Cabilonense 2. cap. 48. Conc. Wormatiense cap. 72. to. 3. Conc. Aquisgra. c. 8. Florentinum, and other later Councels. S. Bernard in the life of Malachie in fine. This holy oyle because the faithfull saw to haue such vertue in the primitiue Church, diuers carie it home and occupied it in their infirmities, not vsing it in the Sacramental sort which the Apostle prescribeth, as the Aduersaries vnlearnedly obiect vnto vs: but as Christians now do (and then also did) concerning the water of Baptisme, which they vsed to take home with them after it was hallowed, and to giue it their diseased to drinke. Holy oyle blessed by the Bishop. The peoples deuotion toward such hallowed creatures.

FULKE. 5 There is no cause, why any man should denie this Epistle, as mayntaining the Popish Sacrament of extreme vnction, for that it doeth not, but speaketh of the vse of the gift of healing, which was in the Primitiue Church, in the Elders of the Congregation, expressed by the outwarde signe of annointing with oyle, as it is manifest, Mark. 6. 13. Whereof as Beda thinketh came the custome of annointing them that were possessed with Diuels, and the sicke with oyle, which he confesseth might bee done not onely of the Priestes, but also of euery Christian in their necessitie, as Innocentius teacheth. Therefore, although hee allowe the ceremonie, yet hee alloweth not your Sacrament, which may be ministred by none but by a Priest, and vnto none, but them that bee in extremitie of sicknesse, when health is despayred: yea, Beda vnderstandeth it, to pertaine not onely to them that are sicke in bodie, but also to them that are weake in faith, though Extreme vnction.

though they be whole in body. Commaunding (saith hee) him that is weake in bodie, or in faith, that hee which hath susteyned a greater wound, should remember to cure himselfe with the ayde of more men, and them of the Elder sorte neither should referre the cause of his weakenesse, to the Younger sort and the lesse learned, least he receiue by them, any hurtfull speech or counsell. You see therefore, that euen the custome and vse of the Ceremonie, is greatly changed from the daies of Bede, which is but 7. or 8. hundred yeere agoe. For in the Popish Church one Priest is sufficient, young or olde, who commeth not to giue any ghostly counsell, but commonly when a man is past his senses. It is certaine therefore, that in Bedes time, this anoynting was not taken for a Sacrament. But you pray vs, (as though you would begge a Sacrament of vs,) What dishonour is it to God that a Sacrament should be instituted in oyle more then in water &c? Verely if God had instituted any such perpetuall Sacrament in oyle, as he hath done in water, we would nothing doubt of it. But this signe of annoynting was temporall, as the gift of healing whereunto it was annexed was but for a season, and that doeth this Scripture tell vs sufficiently, seeing experience testifieth, that the gift of healing doeth not nowe remaine. Where you say the Church of God hath alwaies vsed it, it is false: for the Greeke Church neuer receiued it to this day as a Sacrament, and for many hundred yeeres it was counted a free Ceremonie in the Latine Church, as appeareth by the Epistle of Innocentius, and that which Beda writeth, that it was lawfull for all Christians to vse it. But when we say, it pertayned to the gift of healing, you aske whether Christ appointed any certaine creature or externall element vnto the Apostles generally to worke miracles by. I answere no: for with externall signe and without, they did miracles. Yet it appeareth, Mark. 6. 13. that he appointed them to annoint the sicke with oile that they might recouer health, though it were not necessarie so to doe at all times, when they healed the sicke. Where you say, that Christ would haue miracles in the beginning wrought by sundry sacraments which remaine, the miracles ceassing, we finde no such matter, which if it were so, the institution and commaundement of the perpetuitie of them were sufficient for their continuance. Againe you demaunde, whether euer we redde or heard that men were generally commaunded to seeke for their health by miraculous meanes, We read that men were commaunded generally to seeke all spirituall and miraculous gifts, as long as God gaue them: and not health onely, but the gift of healing also. 1. Cor. 12. 31. cap. 14. 1. yet vnder the generall rule of submitting all our requests, and whole will to Gods will.

Thirdly, you demaund, whether all Priests or Elders had the gift of miracles in the primitiue Church. We answere, it is not necessarie that euery one had the gift of healing, yet among the companie of Elders, that were in euerie Church, some doubtlesse had, when other had which were not Elders of the Church. Or the gift might be giuen to the whole number, which euery one had not, as S. Paul speaketh of the gift of prophecie, giuen by laying on of the handes of the Elders. 1. Tim. 4. 14. Neither would the Apostle promise health, if the gift of healing, had not beene generall in euery congregation. But though the Apostles had the gift to cure men and reuiue them, yet there was no such generall precept, to call for the Apostles, to heale men or restore them: So long as that gift continued in the Church it was all mens duetie to seeke the vse of it, so farre as it would stand with Gods pleasure: Therefore as S. Paule setteth downe an order for the right vse of the gift of tongues, 1. Corinth. 14. 27: so doeth S. Iames heare for the gift of healing. Lastly, you aske if any externall elements, or miraculous practise, vnlesse it were a sacrament, had promise of the remission of all kinde of actuall sinnes, ioyned to it? But neither hath the element of oyle any such promise annexed vnto it, but the prayers of the faithfull. as 1. Iohn 5. 6. Againe you aske whether S. Iames could institute such a ceremonie of himselfe, &c. We say he did not institute any such ceremonie as you speake of, nor mentioneth any such, but willeth the gift of healing, to be vsed according as God had appointed. As for the promise of remission of sinnes, he annexeth not to the element, but out of the generall doctrine of prayer, he sheweth the fruit thereof to be the obtaining of remission of sinnes. But at other times you say, we raile at the popish Church, for annexing remission of veniall sinnes, to the element of water. Heere we are driuen to hold that S. Iames prescribed a miraculous oyle, which had much more power and efficacie. Concerning your popish holy water, although it be coniured to be health of body and soule, which includeth not onely veniall but all sinnes; yet euen your doctrine of veniall sinnes, is intollerable. For who gaue you auctoritie, to annexe any remission of sinnes, to that or any other creature? But that you say, wee are driuen to holde, is false, for wee holde no such thing, either that S. Iames of his owne auctoritie, prescribed a miraculous oyle, or that any such power or efficacie to remitte sinnes, was in the oyle, or annexed to it. Therefore you are driuen to the streights, that without shame faine a sacrament, of a ceremonie vsed onely for health of bodie and are bolde to slander the vniuersall Church of Christ, with such a practise as neuer was receiued in the Church of Christ, for a sacrament. Howe the ceremonie was vsed in Bedes time, I haue shewed before. The testimonie of Innocentius and de visitat infirm. I haue answered before Galathians 4. sect. 2. Bernard writeth no more, but that Malachie was annointed, according to the ceremonie vsed in his time. The other Councels that followe being of later yeeres, are according to the Epistle of Innocentius. Who because hee saieth, that this annointing may bee vsed not onely of the Priestes, but also of all Christians, you are driuen to a poore shift, in saying they vsed it not in that sacramentall sort which the Apostle prescribeth: but Innocentius saith plainely they might vse it lawfully, without any distinction of sacramentall sorte, as his words are manifest, which with small learning, may easily bee vnderstood. But where you say, they vse it as Christians doe now the water of baptisme, to take it home with them after it was hallowed, and to giue it to their diseased to drinke. No doubt, an holy and wholesome medicine, or rather a vile superstitious abusing of the sacrament of baptisme, as there haue beene many by coniurers and idolaters, but neuer vsed of well instructed Christians.

Holy water.

As for the hallowing of the water of baptisme, is in Gods Church but to the onely vse of baptisme, and for the onely time of the ministration thereof, as is manifest by Iohn baptizing in Iordan, and the Apostles of Christ in euery water, without any superstitious hallowing or estimation of the water, after it had serued for the vse of baptisme.

Hallowing of the fonte.

RHEM. 6 15 The praier of faith.) He meaneth the forme of the Sacrament, that is, the words spoken at the same time when the partie is anoiled, which no doubt are most auncient and Apostolike. Not that the word or prayer alone should haue that great effect here mentioned, but ioyned with the foresaid vnction, as is plaine.

The sacramental wordes.

FVLKE. 6 Chrysostome vnderstandeth it generally of prayer. De sacerdot. lib. 3. So doth Hesychius in Leu. lib. 1. cap. 2. saying, Prayer worketh many things, for especially it healeth the passions of the soule, it cureth the woundes of the intelligible or mysticall eies, absoluing from ignorance and that which is sickenesse in deed, that is, it saueth the teares that come out of sinne. For is any sicke among you? (saith Iames,) let him call for &c. rehearsing this whole text. Wherefore these ancient fathers know neither your sacrament, nor the formall words thereof.

RHEM. 7 15 Shall saue.) The first effect of this Sacrament is, to saue the soule, by giuing grace and comfort to withstand the terrours terrours and tentations of the enemie, going about (specially in that extremitie of death) to driue men to desperation or distresse of minde and other damnable inconueniences, the which is signified in the matter of this Sacrament specially.

FVLKE.7 The Apostle ascribeth no sauing to any sacrament, but to the prayer of the faithfull, which how effectuall it is, he declareth afterward.

RHEM. 8 15 Shall lift him vp.) When it shall be good for the saluation of the partie, or agreeable to Gods honour, this Sacrament restoreth also a man to bodily health againe, as experience often teacheth vs. Which yet is not done by way of miracle, to make the partie suddenly whole, but by Gods ordinarie prouidence and vse of the second causes which otherwise should not haue had that effect, but for the said Sacrament. This is the second effect. The three effects of this Sacrament.

FVLKE.8 This perteyneth to the gift of bodily healing, for which end your anoynting is not vsed, but in desperation of bodily health, when death is euen at hand, neither is any man healed by your anoynting.

RHEM.9 15 They shall be remitted him.) What sinnes so euer remaine vnremitted, they shal in this Sacrament and by the grace thereof be remitted, if the persons worthily receiue it. this is the third effect. S.Chrysostome of this effect saith thus: They (speaking of Priests) doe not onely remitte sinnes in baptisme, but afterward also, according to the saying of S.Iames. If any be sicke, let him bring in the Priests &c. Li.3. de Sacerd. prope initium. Let the Protestants marke that he calleth Presbyteros, Sacerdotes: that is, Priests, *and maketh them the only ministers of this Sacrament and not elders or other lay men. By all which you see this Sacrament of all other to be marueilous plainely set forth by the Apostle. Onely sicke men and (as the Greeke word giueth) men very weake must receiue it: onely Priests must be the ministers of it: the matter of it is holy oyle: the forme is prayer, in such sort as we see now vsed: the effects be as is aforesaid. Yet this so plaine a matter and so profitable a Sacrament, the enemie by Heretikes would wholy abolish. Priests (and not Elders) are the ministers of this Sacrament. *ἀσθενεῖ τίς.

FVLKE.9 Chrysostome ascribeth not this effect to your Sacrament, nor to the ceremonie of annoynting with oyle, but to the prayers of the Priests, as is manifest by his wordes going before, wherein hee preferreth Priestes as spirituall fathers before bodily fathers. These (sayeth hee) haue often saued the soule that was sicke, and readie to perish, causing to some a more gentle punishment, other some not suffering at the first to fall: and thus not onely by teaching or admonition, but also by helping with prayer. For they haue auctoritie to forgiue sinnes, not onely when they regenerate vs, but afterwarde also: For is any sicke among you, saith the Apostle, &c. as it followeth in the text.

You see Chrysostome (euen as the Apostle) doth referre this effect onely to prayer and not to the anoynting with oyle, whereof there was no vse in his time. For the name of Priests, I haue answered sufficiently before. Beda acknowledgeth that this ceremonie of anointing with oyle, might bee done not onely by priests, but by all Christians: but the remission of sinnes, hee referreth to the priests, after they be confessed by the sicke with purpose of amendment. For sinnes (saith he) cannot be remitted without confession of amendment: whereby it is certaine that Beda seperating remission of sinnes, from the ceremonie of annoynting with oyle, did not acknowledge the annoynting with oyle to bee a Sacrament. His wordes of it are these: Thus we reade in the gospell, that the Apostles did, and now the custome of the Church holdeth, that the sicke may be anoynted by the Priests with oyle consecrated, and prayer going with all, that they may be healed. Neither is it lawfull for the Priests only, but as Pope Innocent writeth, it is lawfull for all Christians, to vse the same oyle by anoynting, in the necessitie of themselues or other friends: which oyle yet ought not to be made, but by the Bishops. For that he saith with oyle in the name of the Lord, signifieth the oyle consecrated in the name of the Lord, or at least, that when they anoynt the sicke, they ought to call vpon the Lords name ouer him.

RHEM. 10 16 Confesse therefore.) It is not certaine that he speaketh here of sacramentall Confession: yet the circumstance of the letter well beareth it, and very probable it is that he meaneth of it: and Origen doth so expound it ho.2. in Leuit. & Venerable Bede writeth thus, In this sentence (saith he) there must be this discretion, that our daily and little sinnes we confesse one to an other, vnto our equals, and beleeue to be saued by their daily prayer. but the vncleanesse of the greater leprosie let vs according to the law open to the Priest, and at his pleasure in what manner and how long time he shall commaund, let vs be carefull to be purified. But the Protestants fleeing from the very word confession in despite of the Sacrament, translate thus, acknowledge your faults one to an other. They doe not well like to haue in one sentence, Priests, praying ouer the sicke, anoyling them, forgiuing them their sinnes, confession, and the like. Confession. In hunc locum.

FVLKE.10 The Scripture neuer speaketh of Sacramentall confession, as you call it, and the Apostle here speaketh of mutuall confession or acknowledging of our trespasses one against another, not of our sinnes to a priest. Neither doth Origen expound this text of confession, but the two verses before of remission of sinnes by heartie repentance, and confessing of sinnes before God, or at least openly before the Church. There is yet (saith he) the seuenth kinde of remission of sinnes, though very hard and laboursome, when the sinner washeth his bed with teares, and his teares are made his bread day and night, and when he is not ashamed to declare his sinnes to the priest of the Lord, and to seeke medicine according to him which saieth: I haue said, I will pronounce mine vniustice against my selfe to the Lorde, and thou hast remitted the impietie of my heart. In whom also that is fulfilled which the Apostle saith: If any bee sicke, let him call the Elders of the Church, and let them lay their handes on him, anointing him with oyle in the name of the Lord, and the prayer of faith shall saue the sicke, and if he haue beene in sinnes, they shall be remitted to him. That which Beda saieth of opening our greater leprosie vnto the Priest, and abiding his iudgement, prooueth not the necessitie of auricular confession to be of Gods lawe, nor of this text, which he acknowledgeth to pertaine to mutuall confession. And so the word ἀμήλοις doth plainely signifie, whereby we may as well proue, that the Priestes are bound to confesse themselues to the lay men, as you can proue, that the lay men are bound to confesse themselues to the Priestes. Therefore this text pertaineth to mutuall acknowledging of mens trespasses and reconciliation and prayer. Finally, wee like well the text, when it is not poysoned with your hereticall glosses, of Sacraments, of anoyling and shrift, which are farre from the Apostles wordes and meaning. Popish confession.

RHEM. 11 17 He prayed.) The Scriptures to which the Apostle alludeth, make no mention of Elias prayer. therefore he knewe it by tradition or reuelation. Whereby we see that many things vnwritten be of equall truth with the things written. Truthes vnwritten and knowen by tradition.

FVLKE.11 When Elias denounceth to Achab that there shall be neither raine nor dewe, but according to his worde, 1.Reg.17.1. It is easie to gather his prayer both before and after the drought: And although many things are true that are not written, yet those things that are written in the Scripture are sufficient for our instruction. Vnwritten verities.

RHEM. 20 Maketh to be conuerted.) Here we see the great reward of such as seeke to conuert Heretikes or other sinners from errour and wickednes: and how necessarie an office it is, specially for a Priest. Conuerting of soules.

RHEM. 12 20 Shall saue.) We see it derogateth not from God, to attribute our saluation to any man or Angell in heauen or earth, as to the workers thereof vnder God, by their prayers, preaching, correction, counsell, or otherwise. Yet the Heretikes Our saluation attributed to men, without derogation to Christ.

are so foolish and captious in this kinde, that they cannot heare patiently, that our B. Lady or others should be counted meanes or workers of our saluation.

FVLKE. 12 We can not abide your blasphemies, ascribing to the B. virgine Mary that which is proper to Christ. So far foorth as she was a meane of our saluation, by conceiuing and bringing foorth the Sauiour of the world, we do acknowledge it, as in these speaches. But that she or any other creature, is now Our life, our saluation, our hope, our Mediatour, or any such thing, we abhorre as blasphemous against the glory of our onely Mediator and aduocate, life, hope and saluation Iesus Christ. Wherefore, when you cannot proue, that God hath made her or any other Saint, instruments of our saluation by their intercession, these formes of speach will not serue to excuse your idolatrie and blasphemie. Blasphemie. Inuocation of Saints.

THE ARGVMENT OF BOTH THE EPISTLES OF S. PETER, THE FIRST, AND THE SECOND.

RHEM. 1 OF S. Peter we read at large, both in the Gospels and in the Actes of the Apostles: and namely, that Christ designed him, and also made him his vicar (as S. Mathew for that cause in the catalogue of the Apostles, calleth him Primus, the first, and all antiquitie, Princeps Apostolorum, the Prince of the Apostles) and that he accordingly executed that office after Christes departure, planting the Church first among the Iewes in Hierusalem and in all that countrey and coastes about, as Christ also himselfe before had preached to the Iewes alone. c.10.v.2.

*But preaching at length to the Gentiles also, according to Christes commission (Math.28.v.19.) and being now come to Rome, the head citie of the Gentiles, from thence he writeth this Epistle to his Christian Iewes, hauing care of them in his absence, no lesse then when he was present: and not to the Iewes that were at home, (belike because they had S. Iames, or his successour S. Simon Cleophæ, resident with them) but * to them that were dispersed in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, and Bithynia.* 1.Pet.1.

And that he writeth it from Rome, himselfe signifieth, saying: The Church that is in Babylon saluteth you. 1.Pet.5.

 Where by Babylon he meaneth Rome, as all antiquitie doth interprete him: not, that he so calleth the Church of Rome, but the heathen state of the Romane empire, which then, and 300. yeeres after, vnto the conuersion of Constantinus the Emperour, did persecute the elect Church of Rome, in so much that the first 33. Bishops thereof vnto S. Siluester, were all Martyrs.* *See the Annotation 1. Pet.5.v.13.

For the matter whereof he writeth, himselfe doth signifie it in these words: This loe the second Epistle I write, to you, my deerest, in which (Epistles) I stirre vp by admonition your sincere minde, that you may be mindfull of those wordes, &c. So he saith thereof both together. And againe of the first to the same purpose, in an other place: I haue briefly written, beseeching and testifying that this is the true grace of God wherein you stand. *For there were at that time certaine Seducers (as * S. Augustine also hath told vs) who went about to teach* Onely faith, as though good workes were not necessarie nor meritorious. there were also great persecutions, to compell them with terrour to deny Christ and all his religion. He therefore exhorteth them accordingly, neither for persecution, neither by seduction to forsake it: though in the first, his exhortation is more principally against persecution: and in the second, more principally against seduction. The first epistle is noted to be very like to S. Pauls epistle to the Ephesians, in wordes also, and so thicke of Scriptures, as though he spake nothing els. 2.Pet.3. 1.Pet.5. * See the Annotation vpon S. Iames epistle c.2.v.21.

The time when the first was written, is vncertaine: the second was written a litle before his death, as is gathered by his wordes in the same.c.1.v.14.

FVLKE. 1 We neuer read that Christ made S. Perer his vicar. S. Mathew calleth him first, in order of the catalogue not in auctoritie or dignitie. The ancient fathers also ascribe to him a primacie of order among the Apostles, not of power or auctoritie. And all the Apostles ioyned together in planting the Church among the Iewes in Ierusalem, and the Gentiles abroad according to Christs commission. Math.28. But whether from Rome, (as it is not like) or from Babylon (as the words, either in Syria or Ægypt) being the chiefe Apostle of the Iewes, he writeth to them that were dispersed in the East partes of the world, in such prouinces as he nameth. To proue that he writeth from Rome, it is a simple argument, that he sendeth salutation from Babylon, and as simple a commendation of Rome to be figuratiuely called Babylon. True it is, that most of the ancient writers are of that minde, following the receiued opinion, that Peter was at Rome, but there is no reason why Peter writing from Rome, should send salutations from Babylon, seeing Paul writing to the Romanes, did not call them Babylonians, but Romanes, or the Saincts at Rome. The Seducers whereof S. Augustine speaketh, taught that good workes were altogither needlesse for Christian men, as though they might be saued by a vaine profession of faith. But he neuer findeth fault with them that hold good works not to be meritorious of saluation. But contrariwise writeth many bookes against the Pelagians that hold that error. Peters primacie. Rome, Babylon. Only faith.

THE

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PETER THE APOSTLE.

CHAP. I.

RHEM. 1 He comforteth them in their persecutions (being now by Baptisme made the children of God) with the hope of their heauenly inheritance: 6 shewing how meritorious it is for them to be so constant in faith, 10 and confirming them therein with the authoritie of the Prophets and of the Holy Ghost. 15 Exhorting them to liue also accordingly in all holinesse, 15 considering the holinesse of God, the rightnesse of his iudgement, the price of their redemption by Christ, 22 and the vertue of the seede in them (Which is grace regenerative in Baptisme) foretold by the Prophet also.

FVLKE. 1 The Apostle neuer teacheth the constancie of faith, nor any fruite of faith to be meritorious, but he sheweth the reward of constancie to be according to Gods promise, by the merite of Christ onely. Merite.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 2 9 ‘ Kingly Priest.) The Protestants can no more gather of this, that all Christians be Priests: then, that all be Kings: as is most plaine Apocalyp.1, 6. and 5,10. Thou hast made vs a kingdome (or Kings) and Priests.

FVLKE. 2 We acknowledge that all Christians be alwell spirituall Kings as spirituall sacrificing Priests, vnder Christ their head, the onely king of glory, and eternall Priest after the order of Melchisedech. The kingdome and priesthood of all Christians.

RHEM. 3 13 Humane creature.) So u the Greeke. but the Protest. in fauour of temporall lawes made against the Cath. religion, translate it very falsely thus, to all maner ordinance of man: them selues boldly reiecting Ecclesiasticall decrees as mens ordinances.

FVLKE. 3 The Protestants meane not by all maner ordinances of man, euery law made by a man, but euery ordinance or creation of the Prince, or the Prince by what ordinance or humane creation soeuer he doe raigne, as you your selues interpret it, either by succession, election, or howsoeuer.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 4 5 Spirituall hostes.) Here we see, that as he speaketh of spirituall hostes, which euery Christian man offereth, so he speaketh not properly of priesthood, when he maketh all Priests, but of a spirituall Priesthood. which spirituall priesthood was also in all the Iewes: but the Priesthood (properly so called) was onely in the sonnes of Aaron, and they offered the sacrifices (properly so called) which none besides might offer. Spirituall hostes and Priests.

FVLKE. 4 He speaketh of the sacrificing priesthood which remayneth now in the Church, not of the ministring or gouerning priesthood of the Church, which is not properly the office of sacrificing, but of preaching, ministring of the Sacraments, praying and such like exercises. Spirituall priesthood.

RHEM. 13 Be subiect.) *Not onely our Master Christ, but the Apostles and all Christians were euer charged by such as thought to bring them in hatred with Princes, with disobedience to kings and temporall Magistrates, therefore both * S. Paul and this Apostle doe specially warne the faithfull, that they giue no occasion by their ill demeanure to secular Princes, that the Heathen should count them disobedient or seditious workers against the States of the world.* Obedience to temporall Princes. Ro. 13.

RHEM. 5 13 To euery humane creature.) *So he calleth the temporall Magistrate elected by the people, or holding their Soueraintie by birth and carnal propagation, ordained for the worldly wealth, peace, and prosperity of the subiects: to put a difference betwixt that humane Superioritie and the spirituall Rulers and regiment, guiding and gouerning the people to an higher end, and instituted by God him selfe immediatly, for Christ did expresly constitute the forme of regiment vsed euer since in the Church. He made one the cheefe placing Peter in the Supremacie: he called the Apostles and Disciples, giuing them their seuerall authorities. Afterward * God guided the lot for choice of S. Matthias in Iudas place: and the Holy Ghost expresly and namely seuered and chose Paul and Barnabas vnto their Apostolicall function: and generally the Apostle saith of all spirituall Rulers,* The holy Ghost hath placed you to rule the Church of God. God instituted the Spirituall gouernement in more excellent maner then the temporall. Act.1. Act.20.

And although all power be of God, and Kings rule by him, yet that is no other wise, but by his ordinary concurrence, and prouidence, whereby he procureth the earthly commoditie or wealth of men, by mainteining of due superioritie and subiection one towards an other, and by giuing power to the people and Common wealth to choose to them selues some kinde or forme of Regiment, vnder which they be content to liue for their preseruation in peace and tranquillitie. But Spirituall Superioritie is farre more excellent, as in more excellent sort depending, not of mans ordinance, election, or (as this Apostle speaketh) creation, but of the Holy Ghost, who is alwaies resident in the Church (which is Christs body mysticall, and therefore an other manner of Commonwealth then the earthly) concurring in singular sort to the creation of all necessarie Officers in the said Church, euen to the worlds end, as S. Paul writeth to the Ephesians. Eph.4.

*Lest therefore the people, being then in so precise sort alwaies warned of the excellencie of their Spirituall gouernors * and of their obedience toward them, might neglect their dueties to Temporall Magistrates, specially being infidels, and many times tyrants and persecutors of the Faith, as Nero and other were then: therefore S. Peter here warneth them to be subiect, for their bodies and goods and other temporall things, euen to the worldly Princes both Infidels and Christians, whom he calleth humane creatures.* Hebr.13.

FVLKE. 5 Although there be great difference betweene the gouernment of princes, and of Ecclesiasticall gouernors, yet the Apostle calleth not Princes humane creation, as though they were not also of Gods creation (for there is no power but of God) but that the forme of their creation is in mans appointment: the other is onely of Gods aſſignement, and according to his inſtitution. But that Chriſt made one chiefe in authoritie ouer all the Church, and placed Peter in that ſupremacie, it is falſe and can neuer be prooued out of the holy Scripture. And the power of Princes is ſo of God, that beſide his ordinarie concurrence and prouidence, it is by his law commaunded to be obeyed, and the Prince appointed how he ſhould gouerne. Not onely to procure the earthly commoditie of his ſubiectes, but much rather to extend his authoritie to the ſpirituall benefite of their ſoules, in eſtabliſhing by his power and lawes, the true religion, and the right exerciſes thereof, and puniſhing the offenders. As all Godly Princes, of whom we reade in the Scripture, haue done to Gods glorie, and their immortall praiſe. And although the ſpirituall ſuperioritie be in an other kinde much more excellent, yet euen all ſpirituall ſuperiours are bound to obey the Prince, not onely in things temporall, but much more in matters of religion, ſo long as they be agreeable to the Law of God. Againſt which if any thing be decreed or commanded, either in the common wealth or in the Church, it is not to be obeyed of any man. But if ciuill Princes (though they be heathen) command any thing agreeable to Gods Law, as Cyrus, Darius, Artaxerxes, they are to be obeyed, much more being Chriſtians, as Conſtantine, Valentinianus, Theodoſius, &c.

Peters primacie.

The power of ciuill Princes.

RHEM. 6 13. To the king as excelling.) Some ſimple heretikes and others alſo not vnlearned, at the beginning, for lacke of better places, would haue proued by this, that the king was head of the Church, and aboue all Spirituall rulers: and to make it ſound better that way, they falſly tranſlated it, To the king as the chiefe head. in the Bible of the yeere 1562. But it is euident that he calleth the king, the precellent or more excellent, in reſpect of his Vicegerents, which he calleth Dukes or Gouernours that be at his appointment: and not in reſpect of Popes, Biſhops, or Prieſts, as they haue the rule of mens ſoules: who could not in that charge be vnder ſuch kings or Emperours as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of: no more then the kings or Emperors then, could be heads of the Church, being Heathen men and no members thereof, much leſſe the chiefe members. See a notable place in S. Ignatius ep. ad Smyrnenſes, where he exhorteth them firſt to honour God, next the Biſhop, and then the King.

Heret. tranſlation.

The Kings excellencie of power is in reſpect of the nobilitie and lay magiſtrates vnder him.

This is an inuincible demonſtration, that this text maketh not for any ſpirituall claime of earthly kings, becauſe it giueth no more to any Prince then may and ought to be done and graunted to a Heathen Magiſtrate. Neither is there any thing in all the new Teſtament that proueth the Prince to be head or cheefe gouernour of the Church in ſpirituall or Eccleſiaſticall cauſes, more then it proueth any heathen Emperour of Rome to haue been, for they were bound in temporall things to obey the heathen being lawfull kings, to be ſubiect to them euen for conſcience, to keepe their temporall lawes, to pay them tribute, to pray for them, and to doe all other naturall dueties: and more no Scriptures binde vs to doe to Chriſtian kings.

Chriſtian Princes haue no more right to be ſupreame heads in ſpirituall cauſes, then the Heathen.

FVLKE. 6 The king is called moſt excellent, not only in reſpect of his dukes or other gouernours his vicegerents, but alſo in reſpect of all his ſubiects, and therefore might be called chiefe head of them, although the tranſlation be more proper, The chiefe or moſt excellent. Therefore S. Peter calling the king the chiefe, ſubmitteth himſelfe alſo, and all his fellow Apoſtles, vnder his auctoritie, neither doth he write to the people onely, but to all the Church in generall. Therefore neither Popes, Biſhops, nor any Prieſts, can haue exemption from the obedience due to their ciuill Princes and ſupreame Lords. But you thinke to haue a ſtarting hole, that the clergie could not be vnder ſuch Princes as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of: as though he ſpake not of all Princes that then were, and ſhould be to the end of the world. Or elſe, belike, becauſe he ſpeaketh onely of heathen Princes, there is nothing due by this text to Chriſtian Princes. But he ſpeaketh of the auctoritie, not of the perſons, or their vertues or vices. But the kings and Emperors then (ſay you) could be no heads of the Church, being heathen men, and no members thereof, much leſſe the chiefe members. I anſwere, although the metaphoricall name of heads did not agree to them, becauſe they were no members, yet were they by Gods ordinance, and ought to haue beene gouernors and protectors of the Church, as all Chriſtian Kings are, and ought to be. But Ignatius ad Smyrnenſes exhorteth to honour the King after the Biſhop, correcting the ſaying of Salomon, which he alleageth, Pou. 24. 21. as though Salomon had forgotten the high Prieſt. My ſonne (ſaith he) Honor God and the King. But I ſay, honor God in deede, as the cauſe and Lord of all, and the Biſhop, as high Prieſt, bearing the image of God, according to gouernement, of God, but according to prieſthood of Chriſt: and after him, it behoueth alſo to honour the King. Theſe words ſhew out of what ſhoppe this Epiſtle of Ignatius came, who was a man of greater religion, then that he would haue corrected the Scripture in Salomon or in Peter: both commanding the King to be honored next vnto God.

The Kings ſupremacie.

And although it might ſeeme to be excuſed by the different auctoritie and excellencie of the Biſhop, yet it is not tollerable, after the Holy Ghoſt hath ſaid, Honor God and the King, to ſay, but I ſay, Honor God and the Biſhop, and after him the King. But this is (as you write) an inuincible demonſtration that this text maketh not for any ſpirituall claime of earthly kings, becauſe it giueth no more to any Prince then may or ought to be done vnto an Heathen magiſtrate. As though obedience is not to be giuen to an heathen magiſtrate, if he command or decree any thing, euen in religion, agreeable to the true honor and ſeruice of God. as Cyrus did for building vp the temple Ezra. 1. Darius, both for continuing of the building, and for ſacrifice to be offered in it. Ezra. 6. As Artaxerxes did for reformation of the Church, according to the Law of God, by the miniſterie of Ezra the learned and godly Prieſt. Ezr. 7. & cap. 8. As Nabuchadnezer, for the glory of God, after he was reſtored to his kingdome. Dan. 4. As Darius the Median did, that men ſhould reuerence the God of Daniel. Dan. 6. Maximianus and Diocletian, that Chriſtians ſhould exerciſe their religion, build oratories and poſſeſſe them. Euſeb. lib. 8. 19. Licinius, that Chriſt ſhould be worſhipped. lib 9. c. 9. So inuincible be Popiſh demonſtrations. But there is not any thing in the new Teſtament (you ſay) that proueth the Chriſtian Prince to be ſupreame gouernour in Eccleſiaſticall cauſes more then heathen Emperors. What if there were not? is not the auctoritie of the Scripture of the olde Teſtament ſufficient? where both the duetie of a king is deſcribed, to gouerne according to the Law of God, and the practiſe is declared in Dauid, Salomon, Ioſaphat, Ezechias, Ioſias, which exerciſed ſupreame gouernment in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall, and ouer the high Prieſts themſelues: beſide ſo many prophecies of the auctoritie of Kings to be Protectors of the Church, and ſetters forth of true religion. But euen thoſe places of the new Teſtament, that require obedience to Princes, doe propue their ſouereigne auctoritie in all cauſes, and ſpecially the prayers appointed to be made for Kings, that vnder them we may lead a peaceable life in all godlineſſe and honeſtie, declare that it is their duetie to procure religion by their auctoritie, as well as ciuill honeſtie. Therefore though Heathen Princes abuſed their auctoritie, to perſecute the Church and religion of Chriſt, yet were they ſet vp of God, aſwell to mainetaine by their lawes and auctoritie true religion and the Church, as publike honeſtie and the commonwealth. For they are appointed for the praiſe of them that doe well, and for the puniſhment of euill doers, therefore for the aduancement of true religion and the ſuppreſſion of hereſies. S. Auguſtine alſo teſtifieth, that Chriſtians Kings ſerue God, both as they are Chriſtians and alſo as they are Kings, in making lawes of Eccleſiaſticall matters. Ep. 50. And ſo held all the ancient godly Fathers, as we haue declared in other places.

RHEM. 7 16 Not as hauing.) There were some Libertines in those daies, as there be now, that vnder pretence of liberty of the Gospell, sought to be free from subiection and lawes of men as now vnder the like wicked pretence, Heretikes refuse to obey their spirituall rulers and to obserue their lawes. Libertines.

FVLKE. 7 The Popes lawes that are contrary not onely to Christian libertie, but also to Gods commandement, are not to be obeyed of any man.

RHEM. 8 18 But also the wayward.) The Wieleffistes and their followers in these daies, sometimes to moue the people vnto sedition, bold and teach that maisters and magistrates lose their authoritie ouer their seruants and subiects, if they be once in deadly sinne, and that the people in that case neede not in conscience obey them. Which is a pernitious and false doctrine, as is plaine by this place, where we be expresly commanded to obey euen the ill conditioned. which must be alwaies vnderstood, if they commaund nothing against God. for then this rule is euer to be folowed. We must obey God rather then men. Act. 5.29. Deadly sinnes of Princes or Superiors exempt not the subiects from obedience, as Wickleffe held.

FVLKE. 8 This was a leud slander against Wickleffe, who held no such doctrine. For both he obeyed, and taught obedience to the kings, Edward the third and Richard the second, in whose time he liued, which two princes all men know to haue committed deadly sinne, yea some heinous and notorious sinnes. So is it a detestable slander against vs, whom you call followers of Wickleffe, for none of vs euer held or taught any such seditious & traiterous opinions. But your heresie commeth neerest to this opinion, which hold that the pope hath auctoritie to depose lawfull kings from their thrones at his pleasure: which hold them for no princes de iure, that by the Popes bull are declared to be depriued: which finally, send and suborne dayly most hellish traitors to murther their souereigne and most lawfull princes, and sturre vp forrein states to inuade their dominions. ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. III.

RHEM. 1 19 To them that were in priſon.) S. Auguſtine in his 99 Epiſtle in principio, confeſſeth in this place to be exceeding hard to vnderſtand, and to haue many difficulties which he could neuer explicate to his owne ſatisfaction. Yet vnto Heretikes this and al other textes be eaſie, not doubting but that is the ſenſe, which them ſelues imagine, whatſoeuer other men deeme thereof. S. Auguſtine onely findeth him ſelfe ſure of this, that Chriſtes deſcending into Hel in ſoule after his death, is plainely proued hereby. Which thing he declareth there, to be conformable to diuers other expreſſe words of holy Write, and namely to this ſame Apoſtles ſermon Act.2. And at length he concludeth thus, Quis ergo niſi infidelis negauerat fuiſſe apud inferos Chriſtum? that is, Therfore who but an infidel, wil deny that Chriſt was in Hel? Caluin then (you ſee) with al his folowers are infidels, who in ſteede of this deſcending of Chriſt in ſoule after his death, haue inuented an other deſperate kinde of Chriſts being in Hel, when he was yet aliue on the Croſſe. S. Athanaſius alſo in his epiſtle cited by S. Epiphanius hær.77. in principio, and in his booke de Incarnatione Verbi propius initio, S. Cyril de recta fide ad Theodoſium, Oecumenius, and diuers others vpon this place, proue Chriſts deſcending to Hel. As they likewiſe declare vpon the words folowing, that he preached to the ſpirits or ſoules of men deteined in Hel or in Priſon.

Chriſt in ſoule deſcended vnto hell, whiles his body lay in the graue.

The Caluiniſts denying the ſame, are (by S. Auguſtines iudgement) infidels.

But whether this word Priſon or Hel be meant of the inferiour place of the damned, or of Limbus patrum called Abrahams boſome, or ſome other place of temporal chaſtiſement: and to whom he preached there, and who by his preaching or preſence there were deliuered, and who they were that are called, Incredulous in the daies of Noe: al theſe things S. Auguſtine calleth great profundities, confeſſing him ſelf to be vnable to reach vnto it: onely holding faſt and aſſured this article of our faith, that he deliuered none deputed to damnation in the loweſt hel, and yet not doubting but that he releaſed diuers out of places of paines there. which can not be out of any other place then Purgatorie. See the ſaid Epiſtle, where alſo he inſinuateth other expoſitions for explication of the manifold difficulties of this hard text, which were to long to rehearſe, our ſpecial purpoſe being onely to note briefely the things that touche the controuerſies of this time.

Certaine difficulties whereof S. Auguſtine doubteth.

Purgatorie.

FVLKE.2 The place we confeſſe to be hard, but yet not ſo hard of it ſelfe, as it is to them that haue a preiudicate opinion in their mindes, of Chriſtes deſcending into Hell after his death. But firſt here is no mention of the ſoule of Chriſt, nor of deſcending, but of his ſpirite, comming and preaching: not to the godly that were in priſon, but to them that were ſometimes diſobedient, which are ſtill in priſon: not to their deliuerance, but to their deſtruction. The Apoſtle therefore meaneth by this moſt auncient example, to ſhewe that Chriſt had alwaies care of his church, and therefore in the ſame ſpirite, by which he was raiſed to life after he was dead, he came of olde time, and preached deſtruction to the reprobate, euen in the daies of Noe, who for that they contemned his preaching, are now damned ſpirites in priſon. And at the ſame time appointed Noe to make the Arke for ſafegard of him ſelfe, and the ſmal companie of the Church, and in the ſame preſerued his Church from deſtruction by water, wherein is alſo a notable figure of our ſaluation by Baptiſme. And that he ſpeaketh of Chriſtes diuine ſpirite, and not of his humane ſoule, it is manifeſt by that he ſaith, he came in the ſame ſpirite by which he was made aliue, or reſtored to life, which was not his humane ſoule, but his diuine power, by which his ſoule was ioined againe to his body. As S. Paule concludeth, that he was declared to be the ſonne of God in power, according to the ſpirite of ſanctification, by his reſurrection from the dead, that is by raiſing him ſelfe from death by his diuine ſpirite and eternall power. For his humane ſoule did not returne to his bodie of it ſelfe, but by power of his diuine and eternall ſpirite. But now, let vs ſee what you bring to cleere the place from difficultie. Firſt, you ſay, S. Auguſtine confeſſeth the text to be hard to vnderſtand, ſo we doe: but his doubtes and other ancient Fathers iudgement, haue helped vs ſomewhat to the right vnderſtanding. But where you ſay, that S. Auguſtine findeth him ſure of this, that Chriſtes deſcending into Hell in ſoule after his death, is plainly proued thereby, it is falſe. Rom. 1.

For although he doe acknowledge, that the ſoule of Chriſt after his death was in Hell, yet that he was ſo in Hell, as you define, and for that purpoſe, to deliuer the Patriarkes, he doth not affirme. But contrariwiſe he ſayth: I could neuer finde the word Hell in the Scripture, taken in good part, which if it be neuer read in the diuine auctorities, verely that boſome of Abraham, that is, that habitation of quiet reſt, is not to be beleeued to be any part of Hell. The deſcending of Chriſt into Hell, to be according to the Scriptures, there is no doubt, but in what ſenſe and ſort, and to what ende or benefite of the Church, the queſtion is. Therefore Caluine and his followers are no Infidels, which both acknowledge the deſcending of Chriſt into Hel, and ſhew the vſe and ende thereof, to extend to the whole Church of God.

Athanaſius apud Epiphanium ſaith: That the word him ſelfe went and preached to the ſpirites, that is, the diuine nature of Chriſt, & not his humane ſoule. And De incar. verbi Dei, he ſayth: That wicked one the Deuill, which is wont to aſſault vs with the force of death, the ſorowes of death being looſed, is left alone altogether dead.

Cyrillus in deede vpon this place, gathereth Chriſtes deſcending not by power of his diuinitie only, but alſo in ſoule vnto Hell. But Oecumenius doth not ſo conclude: but ſheweth, that the effect of Chriſts death and reſurrection, extended to all that were dead before Chriſt. But whereas it ſeemeth he doth hold that Chriſtes preaching to them after their death, ſupplied that which they lacked in their life, it hath no ground in the text, which ſpeaketh only of Chriſtes preachmg in ſpirite to the diſobedient.

S. Auguſtine therefore doth better no doubt of the vnderſtanding of the text, then to gather more then the wordes thereof will yeelde. And yet where he ſayth, he doubteth not, but that Chriſt performed the benefite of ſaluation, to ſome that were in the paines of Hell, he affirmeth not Purgatorie, whereof he affirmeth in other places that it may be doubted of, and either be founde, or els be ſtill vnknowne. Enchir. Cap. 69. But Beda (no doubt, out of more ancient Fathers, peraduenture out of Athanaſius, whoſe iudgement of this text alſo he citeth) thus interpreteth theſe wordes of S. Peter. He which in our times comming in the fleſh, preached the way of life to the worlde, euen he himſelfe alſo came before the floode, and preached to them which then were vnbeleeuers, and liued carnally. For euen he by his holie ſpirite, was in Noe, and the reſt of the holie men which were at that time, and by their good converſation, preached to the wicked men of that age, that they might be converted to better maners. You ſee therefore that our expoſition is not new, which ſo many hundred yeeres agoe, was deliuered by that reuerent Father Beda, who though in ſome thinges he were caried away with the errours and corruptions of his time, yet had he a care to interprete the Scriptures as neere as he could, according to the writings of the elder Fathers that were before him.

RHEM. 3 20 Incredulous ſometime.) They that take the former wordes, of Chriſtes deſcending into Hel, and deliuering certaine there detained, do expound this, not of ſuch as died in their infidelitie or without al faith in God, for ſuch were not deliuered: but either of ſome that once were incredulous, and afterward repented before their death: or rather and ſpecially of ſuch as otherwiſe were faithful, but yet truſted not Noes preaching by his worke and word, that God would deſtroy the world by water. Who yet being otherwiſe good men, when the matter came to paſſe, were ſorie for their errour, and died by the flood corporally, but yet in ſtate of ſaluation, and being chaſtiſed for their fault in the next life, were deliuered by Chriſts deſcending thither, and not they onely, but al others in the like condition. For the Apoſtle giueth theſe of Noes time but for an example. What were the incredulous perſons of whom the Apoſtle here ſpeaketh.

FVLKE. 3 They that take theſe wordes of Chriſtes deſcending into Hell, and adde further, that Chriſt by his diſcending, deliuered the captiue ſoules, are driuen to inuent many things beſide the booke, of their owne head. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh only of the vnbeleeuers and diſobedient in the daies of Noe, not to ſhew their deliuerance, but their iuſt damnation, affirming that 8 perſons only were ſaued by water, the reſt periſhing, which is to bee vnderſtood both of their bodies and of their ſoules. For Beda reiecteth the opinion of one man, that thought ſome comfort ſhould come to them that had been vnbeleeues in the daies of Noe, as contrary to the Catholike faith: becauſe Chriſt by his deſcending to Hell, deliuered none but the faithfull, neither preached to the ſoules that are out of their bodies, and ſhut vp in Hell priſon, for their wickednes, but in this life, either by him ſelfe, or by the examples and wordes of the faithfull, he daily ſheweth the way of life. Oecumenius alſo out of Gregorie, ſheweth, that their diſobedience and condemnation was teſtified by the Scripture, before Chriſt came in the fleſh, and that ſaluation was preached to men from the beginning, but deſpiſed, becauſe of their declining vnto vanitie and pleaſure.

RHEM. 4. 21 Of the like forme.) The water bearing vp the Arke from ſinking, and the perſons in it from drowning, was a figure of Baptiſme, that likewiſe ſaueth the worthie receiuers from euerlaſting periſhing. As Noe (ſaith S. Auguſtin) with his, was deliuered by the water and the wood, ſo the familie of Chriſt by Baptiſme ſigned with Chriſtes Paſſion on the Croſſe. Li. 12, Cont. Fauſtum c. 14. Againe he ſaith, that as the water ſaued none out of the Arke, but was rather their deſtruction: ſo the Sacrament of Baptiſme receiued out of the Catholike Church at Heretikes or Schiſmatikes hands, though it be the ſame water and Sacrament that the Catholike Church hath, yet profiteth none to ſaluation, but rather worketh their perdition. Which yet is not meant in caſe of extreme neceſſitie, when the partie ſhould die without the ſaid Sacrament, except he tooke it at an Heretikes or Schiſmatikes hand. Neither is it meant in the caſe of infants, to whome the Sacrament is cauſe of ſaluation, they being in no fault for receiuing it at the hands of the vnfaithful, though their parents and frendes that offer them vnto ſuch to be baptized, be in no ſmal fault. S. Hierom to Damaſus Pope of Rome, compareth that See to the Arke, and them that communicate with it, to them that were ſaued in the Arke: al other Schiſmatikes and Heretikes, to the reſt that were drowned. Noes Arke & the water, a figure of Chriſts Croſſe & Baptiſme. Ibid. c. 17. Baptiſme reteined of Heretikes or Schiſmatikes, when damnable, when not.

FVLKE. 4 There is no neceſſitie ſo extreme, that ſhould driue men to ſeeke Baptiſme of Heretikes, that be out of the Church. For we muſt not doe euill, that good may come thereof. Neither is baptiſme an efficient cauſe of ſaluation vnto infantes, but a ſeale of Gods ſpirite, regenerating them to eternall life. S. Hierome in the place quoted, compareth the Church, and not the See of Peter, to the Arke of Noe. And that he deſi- Baptiſme of Heretikes.

red them to communicate with the See of Rome, it was becauſe Damaſus was a true Catholike. The See of Rome.

RHEM. 5 21 The examination of a good conſcience.) The Apoſtle ſeemeth to allude here to the very forme of Catholike Baptiſm, conteining certaine interrogatories and ſolemne promiſes made of the articles of the Chriſtian faith, and of good life, and of renouncing Satan and al his pompes and workes, which (no doubt) howſoeuer the Caluiniſts eſteeme of them, are the very Apoſtolike ceremonies vſed in the miniſtration of this Sacrament. See S. Denys in fine Ec. hierarchiæ. S. Cyril li. 12. in Io. c. 64. S. Auguſtine ep. 23. S. Baſil de Sp. ſancto c. 12. and 15. S. Ambroſe de iis qui miſterijs initiantur c. 2 3. 4. FVLKE. 5 Beza acknowledgeth, that the Apoſtle alludeth to the interrogatories of the Catechiſtes, and the anſweres of them that were to be baptiſed. Which ſtipulation & ſolemne promiſes, are neceſſarie to be acknowledged, that Baptiſme be effectuall in them that are of age. And although they be not alwaies neceſſarie to be expreſſed in the forme of Baptiſme, yet are they included in the doctrine thereof.

FVLKE.1 As Christ shall iudge all that are dead, so the Gospel hath been preached to them that are dead in all ages, vnto mortification of the flesh, and renouation of the spirite. Beda vnderstandeth it of them that are spiritually dead. So great care, so great loue, and so great desire, hath God to mortifie vs in the flesh, and to quicken vs in the spirite, that he commaunded to preach the word of faith to them also, which haue been wrapped in greater crimes, and are worthily to be named among the dead, in riot, lust, drunkennes, gluttonie, bibbing, and vnlawfull worshipping of idols, that they which haue iudged, that is, contemned, and cast away carnall desires, may liue spiritually, and wait for life euerlasting with them, whom the grace of the Gospell found liuing innocently. The same interpretation of diuerse ancient Fathers, hath Oecumenius.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM.2 9 Charitie couereth.) Faith onely cannot iustifie, seeing that charitie also doth cause remission of sinnes. And saying charitie, he meaneth loue and charitable workes toward our neighbours, vnto which workes of mercie the Scriptures do specially attribute the force to extinguish all sinnes. See S. Augustine c.69. Enchiridij and tract.1. in epist.1.Io.cap.1. and venerable Bede vpon this place. And in the like sense the holy Scriptures commonly commend vnto vs almes & deedes of mercie for redemption of our sinnes. Prouerb.c.10. Ecclesiastici 12.v.2. Danielis c.4.v.24. Not onely faith. Works of mercy.

FVLKE.2 The Apostle sayth not, that Charitie doth cause remission of sinnes, but that it is the propertie of Charitie (as Salomon sayth) to hide and couer the multitude of our neighbours offences, as on the contrary side of hatred, to stirre vp brawling and discouering or opening of many offences, that otherwise should be hidden. Ea omnia Charitas cumpatitur & conteritur cum proximorum peccata viderit vt dicitur quia Charitas operit multitudinem peccatorum Dorotheus doctrin.6. Prouerb.10.12. S. Augustine Ench.c.69. sayth no more, but that Christ pronounceth, that he will impute the fruite of almes onely, in the last iudgement, which is nothing to the question of iustification, seeing men come to the last iudgement, iustified or condemned: the effects whereof appeare in their liues, charitable or vncharitable. The same meaneth Beda, that they shall obteine mercie which haue shewed mercie, as we are taught to pray: Forgiue vs as we forgiue. Neither doth the Scripture any where commend almes or mercie, for redemption of our sinnes by the merite thereof. The saying of Salomon is plaine of an other matter, as I haue shewed before. The text of Daniel is not, Redeeme, but Breake of thy sinnes, that is, change thy crueltie into mercie. The sonne of Syrach promiseth reward vnto Charitie and mercie, but no redemption from sinne by the merite of the worke: therefore these places were idlie quoted. Merite.

RHEM. 17 That iudgement beginne.) In this time of the newe Testament, the faithful and al those that meane to liue godly (specially of the Clergie) must first and principally be subiect to Gods chastisement and temporall afflictions, which are here called iudgement. Which the Apostle recordeth for the comfort and confirmation of the Catholike Christians, who were at the time of the writing hereof, exceedingly persecuted by the heathen Princes and people. The beter men most afflicted in this life.

RHEM. 3 18 If the iust.) Not that a man dying iust and in the fauour of God, can afterward be in doubt of his saluation, or may be reiected of God: but that the iust being both in this life subiect to assaults, tentations, troubles, and dangers of falling from God and loosing their state of iustice, and also oftentimes to make a strait count, & to be temporaly chastised in the next life, cannot be saued without great watch, feare, and trembling, and much labouring and chastisement. And this is farre contrary to the Protestants doctrine, that putteth no iustice but in faith alone, maketh none iust in deede and in trueth, teacheth men to be so secure and assured of their saluation, that be that hath liued wickedly all his life, if he onely haue their faith at his death, that is, if he beleeue stedfastly that he is one of the elect, he shall be as sure of his saluation immediatly after his departure, as the best liuer in the world. The iust man him selfe is hardly saued. Against the vaine securitie of onely faith.

FVLKE.3 The iust, though he be assured of the fauour of God through faith in his promises, yet cannot be saued without great labour and contention against sinne, which he knoweth to be necessarie for him. Not that he is in danger to fall from God, or the state of iustice, or afraide of purgatorie: but because God hath made the way to eternall life streight and hard, through continuall mortification of the flesh, and bearing of the crosse of Christ patiently. And this is nothing contrary to the doctrine of the Protestants, who although they thinke a man Certeintie of saluation.

man to be iuſtified before God by faith without workes, as the Scripture teacheth Rom.3: Yet they acknowledge, that there is alſo a iuſtice of workes (though vnperfect) which is a neceſſarie fruite and effect of iuſtification by faith onely. They teache alſo, that men are iuſt indeed and in truth, yea and perfectly in the ſight of God by Chriſtes iuſtice imputed to them by fayth, & giuen vnto them by God, by vertue of which gift they claime it as their owne: and that men are in part declared to be iuſt by good workes, or iuſtice inherent. They teache none other aſſurance of ſaluation, but that which is grounded vpon the promiſes of God, which can neuer faile. Concerning him that hath liued wickedly, and repenteth at his death, they teache according to the Scripture, that if he beleeue with his heart, and confeſſe with his mouth, he ſhalbe ſaued Rom.10.

And as our Sauiour Chriſt ſayth, he that beleeueth in me, commeth not into condemnation, but is tranſlated from death to life Ioan.5.24. Yet they teache no man to deferre repentance which is the gift of God, and therefore men cannot be aſſured that God will giue it at their death: ſeeing commonly as men liue, ſo they die, and it is a rare example (as of the theefe on the croſſe) that men ſhall haue repentaunce and faith at their death, which haue neglected them in their life. But to imagine purgatorie for ſuch without the auctoritie of the Scripture, they dare not: ſeeing they knowe the Lord of the vineyard may do with his owne what he will, and giue vnto thoſe laſt, as much as vnto the firſt, though the hipocriticall papiſtes repine neuer ſo much at it, Math 20.

1 Seniors.) Though the Latine, Senior, be not appropriated to holy order by vse of speache, neither in the Latine nor in our language: yet it is plaine that the Greeke worde Presbyter, which the Apostle here vseth, is here also (as commonly in other places of the newe Testament) a word of Ecclesiasticall office, and not of age, and is as much to say as Priest or Bishop. For the Apostle himselfe being of that order, speaketh (as by his words it is plaine) to such as had charge of soules saying, Feede the flocke of God which is among you. Because we folowe the vulgar Latine translation, we say Seniors and Senior: whereas otherwise we might and should say according to the Greeke, The Priests therefore I beseech, my selfe a fellow-priest with them. So doth S. Hierom reade (Presbyteros compresbyter) and expound Ep.85. So translateth Erasmus, and Beza himselfe.

Senior in the vulgar translation is often Priest or Bishop See Act.15.

FVLKE.1

We know that the Apostle speaketh of Elders by office: & yet your vulgar Latin interpreter calleth them Seniores, that is, Elders. Which iustifieth our translation, from your childish cauilling, which is to no end, but that vnder the vaine shadowe of applying the word Priest, to signifie a Sacrificer, you might beare the ignorant in hand, that the Elders or Priests of the new Testament, be Sacrificers as your popish Priests are.

3 Ouerruling.) Not superioritie, preeminence, soueraintie, or rule on the one side, nor obedience, subiection, and inferioritie on the other side, be forbidden in the Clergie: but tyrannie, pride, and ambitious domination be forbidden, and humilitie, meekenesse, moderation are commended in Ecclesiasticall Officers, the Greeke word here of ruling or ouerruling, being the same that our Sauiour vseth in the Gospel of the tyrannicall rule of secular heathen Princes, saying to his Apostles, that it shall not be so among them: according as here the prince of the Apostles teacheth his brethren the Ecclesiasticall rulers.

Not superiority but tyranny, and lordlinesse is forbidden in the Clergie,

RHEM. 2

3 The Clergie.) Some of the English new translations turne it corruptly, Parishes: others, heritages: both, to auoide the most knowen, true, and common word in all Christian languages, to wit, Clergie, a worde, by vse of all antiquitie, and agreeably to the holy Scriptures, made proper to the Spirituality or Clergie: though in an other more vulgar acception it may agree to all Christes chosen heritage, as well of lay people as Priestes. which the Protestants had rather folowe, because they will haue no difference betwene the laity and the Clergie. But the holy fathers farre otherwise euen from the beginning. Whereof see S. Cyprian ep.4.5.6. &c. And S. Hierom ep.2. to Nepotianus c.5. where he interpreteth this worde. Therefore (sayth he) Clericus, that is, a Clergie man, which serueth the Church of Christ, let him first interpret his name, and the signification of the name being declared, let him endeuour to be that which he is called. If κλῆρος (Clerus) in Greeke, be called in Latine, Sors, therefore are they called Clerici, that is, Clergie men, because they are of the lot of our Lord, or because our Lord himselfe is the lot or portion of Clergie men &c.

FVLKE.2

The word signifieth properly the heritages or lottes, and the Apostle meaneth the seuerall diuisions ouer which the Elders had charge, and not the ministers of the Church onely, commonly called the Clergie. As for the name of Clergie, and Clerke, when it is not a proud excluding of the rest of Christians from the Lords inheritance, but signifieth the speciall lot and charge of them, that serue in the ministerie of the worde and sacraments, we can well abide and vse it often. But where you say, we will haue no difference betweene the laity and Clergie, it is an impudent slander without any collor: But that the Apostle meaneth the whole congregation committed to their charge, by this worde, Bede declareth plainely. Oecumenius sayth it signifieth the holy company or Congregation, and the text is plaine, adding that they should be an example to the flocke, and not exercise tiranny ouer it.

Slander.

Concerning the shauen crowne, Beda in the place quoted, rehearseth an Epistle of one Coelfrid an Abbot vnto Naitan king of the Pictes, wherein without any great contention, he reasoneth of the diuersitie of shauing vsed in the Romish Church, and in the Scottish Church, before it receiued the Romish rites. Calling the Romish fashion, the forme of S. Peter, the Scottish, of Simon Magus, without any testimonie of antiquitie to warrant that he sayth, eyther of the one or the other: But that any such shauing is necessary for distinction of the Clergie or the laity, neither Bede nor Colefrid doth teach in that place, nor sheweth any good causes why it shal so be.

31 That is in Babylon.) The Protestants shewe themselues here (as in all places where any controuersie is, or that maketh against them) to be most vnhonest and partiall handlers of Gods worde. The auncient fathers namely S. Hierom in Catalogo de scriptoribus Ecclesiasticis, verbo Marcus: Eusebius li.2.c.14. hist. Oecumenius vpon this place: and many moe agree, that Rome is meant by the word Babylon, here also as in the 16. and 17. of the Apocalypse: saying plainely, that S. Peter wrote this Epistle at Rome, which is called Babylon for the resemblance it had to Babylon that great citie in Chaldæa (where the Iewes were captiues) for magnificence, Monarchie, resort and confusion of all peoples and tongues, and for that it was before Christ and long after, the seate of all Ethnike superstition and idolatrie, and the slaughter house of the Apostles and other Christian men, the heathen Emperours then keeping their chiefe residence there. See S. Leo. Ser.1. in Nati. Patri & Pauli.

S. Peter writeth from Babylon, that is, Rome.

This being most plaine, and consonant to that which folloeth of S. Marke, whom all the Ecclesiasticall histories agree to haue been Peters scholer at Rome, and that he there wrote his Gospell: yet our aduersaries fearing hereby the sequele of Peters or the Popes supremacie at Rome, deny that euer he was there, or that this Epistle was written there, or that Babylon doth here signifie Rome: but they say that Peter wrote this Epistle at Babylon in Chaldæa, though they neuer reade either in Scriptures or other holy or prophane history, that this Apostle was euer in that towne. but see their shameles partiality here

Babylon

Babylon (say they) is not taken for Rome, because it would folow that Peter was at Rome &c. but in the Apocalypse where all euill is spoken of Babylon, there they will haue it signifie nothing els but Rome, and the Romane Church also, not (as the fathers interpret it) the temporall state of the heathen Empire there. So doe they folow in euerie word no other thing but the aduantage of their owne heresie. See the Annot. vpon the last to the Romanes v. 16. and vpon the 17. of the Apocalypse. v. 5.

And as for their wrangling vpon the supputation of the time of his going thither, and the number of yeares that he was there. and the diuersitie that seemeth to be in the Ecclesiasticall writers concerning the same, reade B. Fisher and other that substantially answere all such cauils. And if such contentions reasoning might take place, we should hardly beleeue the principall things recorded either in Ecclesiasticall histories, or in the Scriptures themselues. Concerning the time of Christes fleeing into Aegypt, of the comming of the Sages to adore him, yea of the yeeres of his age, and time of his death, all ancient writers doe not agree. and concerning the day of his last supper and institution of the holy Sacrument, there is diuersitie of opinions. Shall we therefore inferre that he neuer died, and that the other things neuer were? Can the Heretikes accord all the histories that seeme euen in holy Scripture to haue contradiction? Can they tell vs certainely, when Dauid first came to Saul, and the like? doubt they whether the world was euer created, because the count of the yeeres is diuers? Doe they not beleeue that Paradise euer was, because no man knoweth where it is? and such other like things infinite to rehearse? Which when they were done, were plaine and knowen things in the world: and now for vs to call them to an account after so many yeeres, ages, and worldes, is but sophistication and plaine infidelitie. And the sect of the Protestants standing onely vpon destruction, and negatiues, and dealing with our religion euen as Iulian, Porphyrie, and Lucian did, it is an easie thing for them to bestow their time in picking of quarrels.

The Protestants wrangle about the time of Peters being at Rome.

Many things most true (euen in the scriptures) are not agreed vpon concerning the time.

FVLKE. 4 The Protestants are more your friends then they haue thankes for their labour, that would deliuer Rome from so infamous a name: But you are content that Rome be the See of Antichrist, so you may haue Peter at Rome. Concerning which point we striue not much, but yet we must needs say that the Scripture proueth it not, nor this place, although the auncient writers agree, that Babylone is here (as in the Reuelation) taken for the Citie of Rome. For why should not Peter date his Epistle at Rome? or send salutations from the Church of Rome: as S. Paul writeth his Epistle to Rome. But seeing you will needes haue Rome to be Babylon in this place, as Apoc. 16. and 17. you cannot auoid the See of Antichrist from the Citie of Rome. For the holy Ghost in the Reuelation, speaketh not onely of the persecution of the heathen Emperours, but also of the whorish inticements vnto false doctrine, and of the persecution raised by the false prophet from Babylon, which without controuersie signifieth the cruelcie and craft of Antichrist, sitting in the temple of God. That Peter was at Rome, it maketh nothing to proue his supremacie, which you cannot ascribe to the Pope, more then to the Bishop of Antioch, if Peter had any such in his person. As for the vncertainetie of the time of Peters comming to Rome, and his continuance there, must needes make the matter doubtfull, and no article of our beleefe. But you obiect, that there is as great vncertainetie of principall things contained in the Scriptures: as of the time of Christs fleeing into Aegypt: yet may we not thereof inferre, that those things neuer were. No Syr, because the Scriptures doth plainely testifie, that those things were, but the time when, is not materiall. But of Peter the Scripture doth not testifie that he was there, for if it did, we would not regard the diuersitie of opinions concerning the time when. Where you aske whether we can accord all the histories of the holy Scripture that seeme to haue contradiction? God be praysed we can. Where you further aske, whether we can tell when Dauid came first to Saul, we can tell so much as the holy Ghost hath set downe of his comming to Saul: if he came to him before, we haue not to doe with it. Your other questions of the creation of the world, of Paradise, and such like, are vaine and friuolous, when we haue the most certaine testimonies of Scripture that they were. Shew vs the like that Peter was at Rome, and we will as certainely beleeue that Peter was at Rome, as we beleeue that Christ is in heauen. But if you haue nothing but this allegoricall surmise, to proue a matter of fact and storie, you must pardon vs for taking it as an article of our faith: and yet as an indifferent matter we admit it for the testimonie of auncient writers. That our religion standeth onely vpon destructiou and negatiues, it is a senseleese selander: for it standeth as true religion ought to doe, in affirming and building of all that is true, and in destruction and deniall of all heresie and falsehood.

RHEM. 2 10 By good workes.) *Here we ſee,that Gods eternall predeſtination and election conſiſteth with good works: yea that the certaintie and effect thereof is procured by mans free will and good works, and that our well doing is a meane for vs to attaine to the effect of Gods predeſtination,that is,to life euerlaſting. & therefore it is a deſperate folly and a great ſigne of reprobate perſons,to ſay,If I be predeſtinate,doe what I will,I ſhall be ſaued.Nay,the Apoſtle ſaith,If thou hope to be one of the predeſtinate(for know it thou canſt not)do wel,that thou maiſt be the more aſſured to attaine to that thou hopeſt, or, make it ſure by good works. The Proteſtants in ſuch caſes not much liking theſe words,*by good works, though the Latine haue it vniuerſally,& ſome Greeke copies alſo,as Beza confeſſeth,leaue the out in their tranſlations, by their wonted policy. Good workes muſt concurre with Gods predeſtination to the effect thereof. διὰ τῶν καλῶν ἔργων.

FVLKE. 2 There is no queſtion but Gods eternall predeſtination conſiſteth with good works, though God predeſtinated vs freely without regarde of the merite of our workes, which are an effect and ende of Gods election, not the cauſe that mooued him to chuſe vs. For he choſe vs (ſaith S. Paul) that we might be holy. Epheſ. 1. Not for that we were or ſhould be holy. And this place ſheweth,that the election of God, (which is moſt certaine in him,and in it ſelfe,) is made knowen and certaine to vs by good works,whereunto God hath appointed vs. Not that it is grounded vpon our will,or workes, which are good becauſe God of his grace before the world was made hath choſen vs, and in time called vs, and giuen his Spirite by which we are not onely willing, but moſt thankefully embrace his grace, and know his fatherly loue toward vs. For if by his Spirit we know that God is our Father, as the Apoſtle teacheth Rom. 8. we know alſo, that we are predeſtinate to his inheritance in Chriſt, which knowledge is confirmed by the workes of obedienee,which are the fruites of the ſpirit of adoption. But if we can not know it, (as you ſay) but onely hope with ſuch an hope, as is vncertaine and may be confounded, in vaine ſhould the Apoſtle exhort vs to make our election ſure by good workes. If in any tranſlation good workes be left out, it is becauſe they were left out of the text which we tranſlated, yet we alwaies confeſſe, that the circumſtance of the place, doeth of neceſſitie require, that good workes be vnderſtood,though they be not expreſſed in the text. Certaintie of ſaluation.

RHEM. 3 15 · After my deceaſe alſo.) *Theſe wordes though they may be eaſily altered by conſtruction into diuers ſenſes not vnlike, yet the correſpondence of the partes of the ſentence going before and following, giue moſt plaine this meaning,that,as during his life he would not omit to put them in memory of the things he taught them,ſo after his death(which he knew ſhould be ſhortly)he would not faile to endeuour that they might be mindefull of the ſame. Signifying that his care ouer them ſhould not ceaſe by death,and that by his interceſſion before God after his departure,he would doe the ſame thing for them, that he did before in his life by teaching and preaching. This is the ſenſe that the * Greeke Scholers ſpeake of, and this is moſt proper to the text,and conſonant to the old vſe of this Apoſtle and other Apoſtolike Saincts and Fathers of the primitiue Church.* The Heretikes (according to their cuſtome) exclude this ſenſe altogether by their falſe tranſlation. *Oecum in hunc loc. Iames our Lords brother,witneſſeth that S.Peter encouraging him to take after his deceaſe the charge of the Apoſtolike Romane See, promiſed that after his departure he would not ceaſe to pray for him and his flocke, thereby to eaſe him of his Paſtorall burden. We are much bound (ſaith he) to giue thankes to our Lord and Redeemer Ieſus Chriſt, that hath giuen ſo great power to him whom he made the Prince of the whole Church: that if in our time alſo any thing be done well and be rightly ordered by vs, it is to be imputed to his workes and his gouernement, to whom it was ſaid, And thou being conuerted, confirme thy brethren: and to whom our Lord after his reſurrection ſaid thriſe, Feede my ſheepe. Which now alſo without doubt the godly Paſtor doth execute, confirming vs with his exhortations,and not ceaſing to pray for vs,that we be ouercome with no tentations,&c. Yea it was a common thing in the primitiue Church among the auncient Chriſtians,& alwaies ſince among the faithful,to make couenant in their life time,that whether of the went to heauen before the other,he ſhould pray for his friend and fellow yet aliue. See the Eccleſiaſticall hiſtorie of the holy virgine and Martyr Potamiæna,promiſing at the houre of her Martyrdome,that after her death ſhe would procure mercie of God to Baſilides one of the ſouldiars that ledde her to execution, and ſo ſhe did, Euſeb. li. 6. c. 4. *Alſo S. FVLKE.3 The Apostles meaning is plaine, and need not to be drawen into diuers senses, that he perfourmeth in writing this Epistle, that they may haue remembrance of these things after his departure, and not that he wil make intercession to God for them after his death. Neither doeth Oecumenius speake of such a sense, but rehearseth onely the opinion of him, that would shew out of this place, that the Saincts after their death doe remember those things, which they haue done here for them that are aline. Where it is manifest, that he speaketh no word of intercession. For of the true sense of the text it foloweth. Other men handling that which is spoken simply, doe thus vnderstand it? I wil doe my diligence, that you may haue alwaies after my departure, to remember these things. That is, marueile ye not, neither thinke much of the continuall mention of these things. For I do it not condemning your rudenes, but by continual doctrine of these things, I giue you a continuing and vnmoueable ayde of them, that being confirmed therewith, you may haue euen after my death, a liuely and indeleable or perpetual doctrine of them. Now whether the saincts in heauen do pray for vs, the Scripture doth no where teach vs, and therefore it is a point whereof without danger we may be ignorant. That the counterfect Clement writeth of the matter, it is as much to be regarded, as his charge in the second Epistle, that mise donge be not found in the Pixe. For who would thinke, that Clemens would write of such bables to so high Apostle, of whom he was more meete to learne and to be admonished? Leo in deede 500. yeers after, ascribeth much to the prayers of S. Peter for him, which argueth more his humilitie, then it proueth the matter whereof the Scripture doeth not informe vs. That many of the auncient fathers helde this opinion, that the saincts departed doe pray for vs, we deny not: but we require vpon what auctoritie of the holy Scripture, they grounded this their opinion? For the opinion of good men without the word of God, is not sufficient for vs to builde our faith vpon, seeing it is certaine, that euery one of those fathers, held some one priuate opinion or other, which all men confesse to be erronious. As Cyprian his opinion of rebaptisme. Hierom of Peter vniustly reprehended. Augustine of the necessitie of the Communion for infants. Chrysostome of procuring helpe to the damned, &c. All which errors may be defended with the Argument of yours, they know the meaning of the Scriptures and the sense of the holy Ghost, better then these new interpreters. But if it were proued that the saincts departed doe pray for vs, yet haue we no warrant out of the Scriptures to pray to them. Neither can it be proued that any of the fathers for 300. yeeres after Christ, did make their prayers to any, but onely to God by Iesus Christ. But in them of later time, there is some mention of praying vnto them. Yet doeth not S. Augustine pray to S. Cyprian in that place, where you say he desireth to be holpen by his prayers, but desiring to be ioyned to his charitie, he hopeth that being ayded by his prayers, he shall learne by his writings, in what great peace God gouerned his Church by him. Hilary in ps. 124. speaketh neither of saincts praying for vs, nor of praying to them, but saith: that the Church hath no small aide in the Apostles or in the Patriarkes and Prophets, or rather in the Ange's, which compasse about the Church with a certaine garde. The ayde therefore he meaneth, is the example and doctrine of the saincts departed, and the ministerie of the Angels. In Nazianzen, Basil, and Chrysostome, there is some mention of the inuocation of saincts, to helpe with their prayers: But that which is alleaged for Athanasius and Ephrem, is false and counterfect stuffe. Theodoret also speaketh of prayers vnto martyrs: But where is either commaundement, example or allowance of such prayers out of the Scripture? Therefore this is nothing else, but a litle drosse of humane fragilitie, which can be no preiudice against the trueth. And it is no marueile, if those fathers being exercised in confuting both of the Gentiles, and also of great heresies, did not at the first espie what the spirit of Antichrist went about, in those matters of inuocation of saincts & prayer for the dead, which had a shew of pietie, and yet proceeded of the efficacie of error: when our Sauiour Christ prophecieth, that the illusions of Antichrist should be so great, that if it were possible, the very elect should be deceiued. It is a small glory for the Papists, to ioyne with some of the fathers, in one or two errors not of the greatest weight, when they haue all the fathers against them, in so many articles of chiefest importance, as is declared throughout these Annotations. As not onely Prophets, but also false-prophets were in the old Testament, so now likewise there shall be Maisters of Heresie, to the damnation of them selues, and of their followers. 4 And of their damnation he pronounceth by examples (as he comforteth the vertuous Catholikes or true beleeuers with the example of Lot) because of their railing at their Superiors and Prelates, their blaspheming of Catholike doctrine, their voluptuous liuing, their lecherie, their couetousnes, their maner of seducing, and the persons seduced, 20 for whom it had been lesse damnable, if they neuer had been Christians.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. II.

RHEM.1 2 Many shall follow. Heretikes (of whom he prophecieth here) doe gaine scholers, by preaching libertie, and by their owne licentious life, which is specially ioyned to the heresie of these daies.

FVLKE.1 Our doctrine is farre from carnall libertie, which dayly teacheth mortification, euen of our lustes and sinnefull desires. What our life is, God and the world doth know. If it were not honester then the liues of many Popes and Cardinalles, it were pittie we liued. But Popish doctrine that teacheth the sinfull lust of the flesh to be no sinne, and great sinnes to be veniall sinnes, that hath so many easie waies to purge and pardon mortall sinnes, yea the sinne against the holy Ghost, and generall apostasie, and obstinate contumelie of God, not onely in this life, but after men be dead, is the very doctrine of carnall libertie: and their life agreeth thereunto. For to whom treason, rebellion, and murther of their naturall soueraigne Lady and Queene is not onely lawfull, but also meritorious, what kinde of impietie will their cauterized conscience be afraide of? Carnall libertie in Poperie.

RHEM. 2 3 With feined wordes.) All the sweete wordes of heretikes, speaking much of the word of the Lord, the Gospell, IESVS, CHRIST &c. are but termes of art to bie and sell poore mens soules.

FVLKE.2 The wordes of Papists, the holy Church, the Catholike Church, orders of religion, chastitie, fasting, &c. are such sweete words.

RHEM. 3 19 Promising them libertie.) Who euer promised more libertie to their followers then Luther, Caluin, and the like, taking away penance, fasting, continencie or chastitie, keping of vowes, necessitie of good workes (because faith doeth all) obedience to Ecclesiasticall pastors and Councels, and such like?

FVLKE.3 Who euer taught lesse carnall libertie, then Luther and Caluine? which taught mortification according to the Scriptures, whereof the people neuer heard in poperie. Who take not away repentance, but require it to be continuall. Who exhort to fasting, though they teach not the doctrine of deuils by prohibition of meates. Who require chastitie of all men, either in holy matrimony, or in true and not fayned continencie. Who take away no keeping of vowes that be lawfully made, and possible to be kept. Who teach good works to be necessarie effects of a iustifying faith, without which, no man shall be saued, that is iustified by faith onely. Who teach obedience vnto Ecclesiasticall pastors and Christian Councels, and teach Ecclesiasticall pastors, also, to be obedient to ciuill powers, stirre not vp the people to sedition, treason and murther of their soueraigne, as the Papists of Rhemes haue done, following there forefathers the ancient Heretikes, that despise auctoritie, and would be rulers them selues, but subiect to no man. Carnall liberty.

CHAP. III.

These two Epistles he writeth to confirme them in the Apostles doctrine, and warneth them of scorners that shall come, and deny Domesday. 5 Whose vaine argument he answereth, and giueth the reason of Gods so long patience, 10 exhorting to all holinesse of life in respect of that terrible day. 16 Finally giuing warning of such as misinterpret S. Paules Epistles and the other Scriptures, and that we must not for any thing fall from the true faith.

THis Ioe the second Epistle I write to you my deerest, [c] in which I stirre vp by admonition youre sincere minde:

[c] in quibus.

2 That you may be mindefull of those wordes which I tolde you before from the holy Prophets, and of your Apostles of the precepts of our Lord and Sauiour:

2.Tim 4. 1.Iude,18. 3 Knowing this first, that *in the last daies shall come mockers in deceit, walking according to their owne concupiscences,

4 Saying, Where is his promise or his comming? For since the time that the fathers slept, all things doe perseuere from the beginning of creature.

5 For they are wilfully ignorant of this, that the heauens were before, and the earth, out of water, and through water consisting by the word of God:

6 By the which, that world then, being ouerflowed with water perished.

7 But

THis is the second Epistle that I now write vnto you, dearely beloued, wherewith I stir vp and warne your pure mindes,

2 To be mindefull of the words which were tolde before of the holy Prophets, and also the ‖commandement of vs, which be Apostles of the Lord and Sauiour: ‖Or, doctrine

*3 * Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last daies mockers, walking after their owne lustes,* 1.Tim.4.1. 2.Tim.3.1.

4 And saying, Where is the promise of his comming? for since the fathers fell a sleepe, all things continue alike from the beginning of the creation.

5 For this they know not (and that wilfully) how that the heauens were of olde, and the earth consisting of the water and by the water, by the word of God:

6 By the which things the world that then was perished, being then ouer runne with water.

7 But

7 But the heauens which nowe are, and the earth, are by the same word kept in store reserued to fire vnto the day of iudgement and of the perdition of the impious men.

8 But this one thing be not ignorant of, my deerest, that * one day with our Lord is as a thousand yeeres, and a thousand yeeres as one day. Psal.89,4.

9 Our Lorde slacketh not his promis, as some doe esteeme it: but hee doth patiently for you, * not willing that any perish, but that al returne to penance. Ezec.33, 1.Tim.2. Mt.24.

10 And * the day of our Lord shall come as a theefe in the which the heauens shall passe with great violence, but the elements shall be resolued with heate, and the earth and the works which are in it, shal be burnt. 1.Thes.5. Apoc.3.

11 Therefore wheras all these things are to bee dissolued: what maner of men ought you to be in holy conuersations and godlinesses,

12 Expecting and hasting vnto the comming of the day of our Lorde, by which the heauens burning shal be resolued, and the elements shal melt with the heate of fire?

13 But we expect * new heauens and a newe earth according to his promises, in which iustice inhabiteth. Esa.65,17. Apo.21,1.

14 For the which cause my deerest, expecting these things, labour earnestly to be found immaculate and vnspotted to him in peace.

15 And * the longanimitie of our Lorde, doe yee account saluation, as also our most deere brother Paul according to the wisdom giuen him hath written to you: Ro.2,4.

16 As also in al epistles, speaking in them of these things, in the which are ‖ certaine things hard to bee vnderstoode, which the vnlearned and vnstable depraue, as also the rest of the Scriptures to their own perdition.

17 You therfore brethren, foreknowing, take heede lest ledde aside by the errour of the vnwise you fall away from your owne stedfastnes.

18 But growe in grace & in knowledge of our Lorde and sauiour IESVS Christ. To him be glorie both now and vnto the day of eternitie. Amen.

7 But the heauens and earth which are now, be kept by his word in store, and reserued vnto fire against the day of iudgement and perdition of vngodly men.

*8 Dearely beloued, bee not ignorant of this one thing, * howe that one day is with the Lorde as a thousande yeeres, and a thousand yeeres as one day,* Psalm.90.4.

RHEM. 1 16 Certaine things hard.) This is a plaine text to conuince the Protestants, who (as all heretikes lightly doe and did from the beginning) say the Scriptures be easie to vnderstand, and therefore may bee not onely read safely, but also expounded boldly of all the people, as well vnlearned as learned: and consequently euery one by himselfe and his priuate spirit, without respect of the expositions of the learned fathers, or expectation of the Churches, their Pastors and Prelates iudgement, may determine and make choise of such sense as himselfe liketh or thinketh agreeable. For this is partly their saying, partly the necessarie sequele of their foolish opinion, which admitteth nothing but the bare Scriptures. And Luther said that the Scriptures were more plaine then all the fathers commentaries: and so all to bee superfluous but the Bible. Præfat.assert. art.damnat. The hereticall proud spirite of priuate interpretation of Scriptures.

*Against all which Diuelish and seditious arrogancie, tending to make the people esteeme them selues learned or sufficient without their Pastors and spirituall rulers helpe, to guide themselues in all matters of doctrine and doubtes in religion, the holy Apostle here telleth and forewarneth the faithfull, that the Scriptures be full of difficultie, and specially S.Paules epistles of all other partes of holy write, and that ignorant men & vnstable or phantastical fellowes puffed to and fro with euery blast of doctrine and heresie, abuse, peruert, and misconster them to their owne damnation. And * S.Augustine saith, that the speciall* The Scriptures be hard, namely S.Pauls epistles specially where he speaketh of iustification by faith De fid.& op.c.14;

cult difficultie in S. Pauls epiſtles, which ignorant and euill men doe ſo peruert and which S. Peter meaneth, is his hard ſpeach and much commendation of that faith which he ſaith doth iuſtifie. which the ignorants euen from the Apoſtles time and much more now, haue and do ſo miſconſter, as though he had meant that onely faith without good workes could iuſtifie or ſaue a man. Againſt which wicked collection and abuſe of S. Pauls wordes, the ſaid father ſaith, all theſe Canonicall or Catholike epiſtles were written.

But the Heretikes here to ſhift of the matter, and to creepe out after their faſhion, anſwere, that S. Peter ſaith not S. Pauls epiſtles be hard, but that many things in them are hard. Which may be to the Catholikes an example of their ſophiſticall euaſions from the euidence of Gods word. As though it were not all one to ſay, Such an author or writer is hard: and There be many things in that writer hard to be vnderſtood. For, whether it be that the argument and matter be high and paſt vulgar capacitie, as that of prædeſtination, reprobation, vocation of the Gentiles, and iuſtifying faith: or whether his manner of ſtile and writing be obſcure: all proue that his epiſtles be hard, and other Scriptures alſo: becauſe S. Peter here affirmeth that by reaſon of the difficulties in them, whether in the ſtyle or in the depth of the matter, the ignorant and vnſtable (ſuch as Heretikes be) do peruert his writings, as alſo other Scriptures, to their owne damnation. Whereby it is plaine that it is a very dangerous thing for ſuch as be ignorant, or for wilde witted fellowes, to reade the Scriptures. For ſuch conditioned men be they that become Heretikes, and through ignorance, pride, and priuate phantaſie, meeting with hard places of S. Pauls epiſtles or other Scriptures, breede Hereſies.

And that not onely the things treated of in the holy Scriptures, but alſo that the very manner of writing and enditing thereof, is high and hard, and purpoſely by Gods prouidence appointed to be written in ſuch ſort, ſee S Auguſtine li. 2. de Doct Chriſt. c. 6 and ep. 119. The Heretikes ſay the fathers did commonly erre. and howe could ſuch great wiſe learned men be deceiued in reading and expounding the Scriptures if they were not hard? and if they were hard to them, howe are they eaſie to theſe new maiſters the Hæretikes? finally, why doe they write ſo many newe gloſſes, ſcholies, commentaries, as a cart cannot carrie? Why do Luther, Zuinglius, Caluin, and their Companions agree no better vpon the interpretation of the Scriptures, if they be not hard? whereat ſtumbled all the olde heretikes and the new, Arius, Macedonius Vigilantius, Neſtorius, Eutyches, Berengarius, Wicleffe, Proteſtants, Puritanes, Anabaptiſts, and the reſt, but at the hardnes of the Scriptures? They be hard then to vnderſtand, and Heretikes peruert them to their owne damnation.*

Act. 8.

Leu. 24. v. 45.

FVLKE. 1 This is a plaine matter, to conuince the papiſts of impudent lying and ſlandering. For which of the Proteſtants doth not acknowledge, that there be certaine places in the ſcripture hard to be vnderſtoode? and who doth ſay that the ſcriptures may be expounded boldly, as well of the vnlearned as the learned? Finally howe impudent a ſlander it is, that we expounde the ſcriptures without reſpect of the expoſition of the learned fathers, (beſide al other experience) let theſe annotations teſtifie, wherein it is plaine, that the ancient fathers do auowe in a manner, all interpretations of ours, that you miſlike. That all the people ſhould haue no regard of there paſtors iudgement, or the Churches auctoritie, it is a falſehoode, without any colour or ſhew of truth. Yet all this you ſay is partly our ſaying, partly the neceſſary ſequel of our fooliſh opinion, which admitteth nothing, but the bare ſcriptures. We admit nothing in deede of man, as æqual in auctoritie with the holy ſcriptures, which are the word of God. But his holy ſpirite, by which they were written, and which ſpeaketh in the ſcriptures, and in the godly interpreters agreable to the ſcriptures we humbly admitte. Alſo we admitte no doctrine which hath not auctoritie and ground, and which may not bee proued, either by manifeſt wordes, or by neceſſarie concluſion out of the wordes, of the holy ſcriptures. And in this our fooliſh opinion, which we haue gathered of the fooliſhnes of preaching of the Goſpel, we eſteeme to be more true wiſdome, then in all vaine knowledge falſely ſo called of infidels & heretikes. And of this opinion we are ſure, that ſuch abſurdities, as you obiect againſt vs, you are neuer able to conclude, in any good and lawfull forme of argument. If Luther ſayd the ſcriptures be more cleare then all the fathers commentaries, he ſaid no more then the ſcriptures ſay of themſelues, which in themſelues, are light and not darkeneſſe, to our feete. Yet it followeth not, that all commentaries of the fathers are ſuperfluous, which are framed to take away the darkeneſſe from our eyes, that we may ſee the light of the ſcriptures. But concerning the hardnes or eaſineſſe of the ſcriptures, we ſay. There are many things in the ſcriptures hard to bee vnderſtoode, yet whatſoeuer is neceſſarie to bee knowen, is plainely ſet forth and eaſily to be vnderſtood, of them that will reade diligently, marke attentiuely, pray heartily, and iudge humbly. Againſt this opinion, if you can ſay any thing, let vs heare it in your next replye, for heare you ſay nothing. You ſlander vs of diueliſh and ſeditious arrogancie, to make the people eſteeme themſelues learned, or ſufficient without there Paſtors to guide them in all matters, and doubtes of religion: but the Lorde knoweth that you ſlander vs. For wee plainely proteſt, that whoſoeuer deſpiſeth the ordinarie miniſterie of the word, which God hath eſtabliſhed in his church for the direction of vs in trueth and loue: ſhal neuer attaine to true knowledge, no, though he were otherwiſe neuer ſo well learned, much leſſe, if he be ignorant and vnlearned. And yet ye ſay vntruely, that the Apoſtle here affirmeth all the ſcriptures, or euen Pauls epiſtles to be full of difficulty, or that hee would in reſpect of the difficultie of them, diſcourage or diſſwade the people, from reading and ſtudying of them. For in the firſt chapter, he commended the faithfull, for their diligent attention vnto the ſcriptures of the olde teſtament, which are more obſcure in the chiefe myſteries of ſaluation then theſe of the new teſtament, and yet hee compareth them to a candle, ſhining and giuing light in a darke place. Hee forbiddeth not therefore the right vſe, but the raſhe abuſe of the ſcriptures, by proud, vnlearned, and vnconſtant men, which peruert them when they are neuer ſo plaine, to their owne deſtruction. But S. Auguſtine (you ſay) ſayth, that the ſpeciall difficultie in S. Pauls epiſtles, which S. Peter meaneth, is his hard ſpeach, and much commendation of that fayth which he ſayth doth iuſtifie, as though he ment that only fayth, without good workes could iuſtifie, or ſaue a man. But in trueth S. Auguſtine ſayth not ſo. But that S. Peter knowing that ſome wicked men, tooke occaſion of certaine ſomewhat darke ſentences of the Apoſtle Paul, that, (as though they were ſecure of ſaluation which is by faith,) they cared not to liue well, he ſayth that certaine things in his epiſtles, are very hard to be vnderſtoode, which men peruerted, as they did other ſcriptures to their owne deſtruction: whereas that Apoſtle was of the ſame minde, that the reſt of the Apoſtles were concerning ſaluation, which is not giuen, but to them that liue well. By this it is manifeſt, that S. Auguſtine ſpeaketh not againſt the doctrine of iuſtification before God, by faith without workes, which the Apoſtle Paul doth ſo largely, ſo purpoſely, ſo diligently ſet forth, and confirme firme by ſo many arguments, that no doctrine is more cleare in all the Scriptures: but hee ſpeaketh againſt the peruerſeneſſe of them that abuſed this doctrine, as though the Apoſtle had meant, that good workes were needeleſſe for a iuſtified man, and that the faith whereof he ſpake, were ſuch a fayth as is in diuels, which is, or may be voide of good workes. For he himſelfe in the ſame chapter acknowledgeth, that a man is iuſtified by fayth without workes, as his wordes are manyfeſt. When the Apoſtle ſayth, he thinketh a man to be iuſtified by faith without the works of the law, he meaneth not that fayth being receiued and profeſſed, the workes of iuſtice ſhould be contemned, but that euery man may knowe that he may be iuſtified by fayth, although the workes of the lawe haue not gone before. For they follow the man that is iuſtified, they goe not before to iuſtifie him. Wherefore to roote out the error of them that thought a dead faith which is without works, was ſufficient to iuſtifie, he ſaith, theſe general epiſtles of Petes, Iames, Iohn and Iude were written, which we doe not denie. But yet it followeth not thereof, that thoſe hard places whereof S. Peter here ſpeaketh, were his harde ſpeech and much commendation of fayth, vnto which euery one of the apoſtles doth aſcribe as much as he, and S. Paul to good workes, as much as they. But you ſay we ſhift of the matter, in anſwering that S. Peter ſayth not that S. Pauls epiſtles be harde, but that many things in them are hard, wherein you vſe your accuſtomed maner of creeping away, by impudent lying and ſlandering. For we ſay not, that S. Peter affirmeth, that many things in them are hard, but ſome things, which may be true of a fewe things. And it is not all one to ſay: Such a writer is harde, and there be ſome things in that writer hard to be vnderſtood. And as concerning the argument and matter of the ſcriptures, we confeſſe, that for the moſt and cheefeſt matters, it is not onely hard, but vnpoſſible to be vnderſtood of the naturall man: yet to the ſpirituall man, which is taught of Gods ſpirit, all the deepe myſteries of God are opened and made plainely knowen. 1. Cor. 2. But we ſpeake of the vnderſtanding of the wordes, which in ſome places is hard, yet in many very plaine and eaſie to be vnderſtood (though not beleeued,) euen of the naturall man that ſeeketh not wilfully to peruert them to his owne deſtruction. Wherefore it is no dangerous thing, for ignorant men or for wilde wicked fellowes to reade the ſcriptures, out of the which they may learne to haue true knowledge, and become ſtayed in their wits. But it is dangerous for ſuch, proudly, raſhly, and vnreuerently to iudge of the ſcriptures, and to draw them to their owne fantaſies, for that breedeth hereſies euen in the learned. But that not onely the matter, but the ſtile of the ſcriptures is hard, you quote diuerſe ancient fathers, which proueth not that all the ſcriptures are harde, though ſome be, or that they are all written in ſo high a ſtile, as the vnlearned cannot atteyne to the vnderſtanding of any of them. Where as contrariwiſe, they are for the moſt part written in a lowe and vulgar ſtile, the holy ghoſt condeſcending to the weakeneſſe of our vnderſtanding, ſo that the great and high myſteries of God are often expreſſed in very playne, baſe and ſimple phraſes of wordes. But to come to your teſtimonies. S. Auguſtine ſpeaketh directly againſt you, ſaying. The holy ghoſt hath magnificently and holſomely, ſo tempered the holy ſcriptures, that by open and plaine places, he might prouide againſt hunger, by more obſcure places hee might wipe away lotheſomeneſſe. For nothing almoſt is found out of thoſe darke places, which is not founde elſe where to bee vttered moſt plaine. Againſt which ſaying, it is not contrary, that in his epiſtle to Ianuarius which ſuppoſed that he knew all things, he ſayth humbly of himſelfe, there were more things in the ſcriptures which he knew not, then which he knew. For he meaneth not of things neceſſary to ſaluation (of which he could not profeſſe ſo great ignorance) but of other by-queſtions which may be mooued infinitely, and not alwayes eaſie to bee determined out of the Scriptures. S. Ambroſe ſayth, The ſcriptures is a ſea hauing in it deepe ſenſes, the height of propheticall myſteries, into which ſea many riuers haue runne. Therefore there be alſo ſweete riuers and cleare, there be alſo faire ſprings that yeeld forth water vnto eternall life, there be alſo good ſpeaches, as hony combes, acceptable ſentences, which may refreſh the minde of the hearers with ſpirituall drinke, and delight them with the ſweeteneſſe of morall precepts, Diuers therefore are the ſtreames of the holy Scripture. Thou haſt that thou mayeſt drinke firſt, and ſecond, and laſt. It is manifeſt therefore that S. Ambroſe acknowledgeth not onely the hardneſſe of ſome things, but alſo, the eaſines and clearenеſſe of all things neceſſary to eternall life. Hierome to Paulinus noteth certaine difficult places in the Prophets: and who will miſlike him, that he deſired to learne of Didymus? the beſt learned may encreaſe in knowledge. Dauid praied for vnderſtanding. The Eunuch required an interpreter. And we alſo affirme, that prayer is neceſſary for all men, and an interpreter requiſite for the vnlearned, that will come to the right vnderſtanding of the Scripture. Finally, that ſtudie, watching, faſting and praying, be good and neceſſary meanes to attaine to the vnderſtanding of ſuch matters as be difficult in the Scriptures. But further you obiect that we ſay, The fathers did commonly erre: We ſay in deed they did ſometimes erre, and except you ſay they did commonly erre in expoſition of the Scriptures, you muſt acknowledge that you doe commonly erre in expounding them, for their expoſitions are commonly contrary to yours, and agreeable to ours, as I haue ſhewed in very many of theſe annotations. But hereof you inferre, that the Scriptures were hard, or elſe they beeing ſo wiſe and learned, could not haue erred. We deny not but the Scriptures are in ſome places very hard, yet all error ariſeth not of the hardneſſe of the Scriptures, but oftentimes of the weakeneſſe of mens vnderſtanding, eſpecially when they will not ſeeke the meaning of the Scriptures in the Scriptures, but bring a preiudicate opinion not grounded on the Scriptures, to expound them according to that opinion, and ſo the fathers ſometimes doe erre. But if they were hard to the fathers, how are they eaſie to vs? They are made ſo much the more eaſie to vs, as they haue ſearched out the true ſenſe of them before vs. Sometimes alſo by their going awry, we may better ſee the right pathe. In ſome things the knowledge of the tongues which many of them lacked, helpeth vs. Finally, we ſee how dangerous it is to follow mans iudgement in the Scriptures, we build vpon no ſenſe, as certaine in the Scriptures which is not proued by the very text it ſelfe, or conference of other places of Scripture, to be the true and proper ſenſe of the holy ghoſt: So are we ſcholers of the Scriptures, and not arrogant maſters, which commaund the ſenſe of the Scriptures to ſerue their owne fantaſtical opinions. As the Pope doth, who neither acknowledgeth the ſufficiencie of the Scriptures, nor will haue them expounded any otherwiſe, but that he may retaine his Antichriſtian auctoritie, though it be neuer ſo contrary to the plaine and euident ſenſe of them, yea to the very expreſſe wordes, which be ſo plaine, as that they neede no interpretation. As for the multitude of commentaries (though ſome might well be ſpared) it is not becauſe the Scriptures are hard in all places, but becauſe Gods gifts are diuers in many men, all which conferring their ſtudie to the interpretation of difficulties, doe the more explane the Scriptures to the vnlearned or vnexerciſed: and alſo in profitable collection out of places eaſie to be vnderſtood, doe confirme the faith, and inſtruct the faithfull in many particularites, which are not alwayes obſerued of euerie one that readeth the text, and yet are neceſſarilie deduced out of it. Concerning the diſagreement betweene Luther and Zuinglius, it is not in many things, nor thoſe the principall, ſo that if it grew vpon ſome difficultie of the wordes of the Scripture, as partlie it did, the whole Scripture is not thereby prooued to bee difficult, although a preiudicate opinion did more hurt in that caſe, then the difficultie of the Scriptures. Finallie, the hardeneſſe of the Scriptures, is

No danger to reade the Scriptures.

THE ARGVMENT OF S. IOHNS THREE EPISTLES.

OF S. Iohn was sayd in the Argument before his Gospel. Now here folow his three Epistles: one to all Catholikes (though *some auncients do call it, Ad Parthos:) the other two being very short, vnto a certaine Ladie, and to one Gaius. The effect of all is, to witnesse vnto them the certaintie of the Catholike faith, and to exhort them to continue still in it: also to loue the Catholike Church, and so, neither to become heretikes, nor Schismatikes: but rather to auoide all such, as the forerunners of Antichrist, and to remember, that Catholikes need not to goe to schole to any such Masters, hauing at home in the Catholike Church, the doctrine of the holy Ghost himselfe, who was giuen to the Church visibly in the beginning, to lead her into all truth, and to continue with her for euer. Therefore he sayth: That which you haue heard from the beginning, let it abide in you. Likewise a litle after, v. 27. and ep. 2. v. 6. This is the commaundement, that as you haue heard from the beginning, you walke in the same, because many seducers are gone out into the world, and v. 8. and 9.

*Higinus ep. 1. to 1. Concil. August li 2. Euang quest q 39.

1. Ioh. 2. v. 24

And not only thus in generall, but also in particular he expresseth the pointes which the heretikes did then call in question. Some were about Christ himselfe, for they denied that IESVS Christ, that he is the very sonne of God, that he is incarnate. Ep. 1 c. 2. v. 22. and Ep. 2. v. 7. And against such it was that he wrote his Gospel also, as he there signifieth, Ioh. 20. v. 31. Other points are about our iustification, against onely faith, and for good workes, as also S. Aug. noted, whose wordes were cited before. Hereupon he sayth: If we say, we haue societie with God, and walke in darknes, we lie. Epist. 1 c. 1. Againe, He that sayth he knoweth God, and keepeth not his commandements, is a liar. Againe, This is the charity of God, that we keepe his commaundements, and his commaundements are not heauie. Finally, Children let no man seduce you, he that doth iustice, is iust, euen as he is iust. Epist. 1. c. 3. v. 7. 8. 9. Likewise c. 2. v. 29. and in deed in all the three Epistles throughout, he doth inculcate good workes and keeping the commandements against the heresie of only faith.

FVLKE. 1 S. Iohn in none of his Epistles, doth speake any word against iustification by faith only, as we teach it according to the Scriptures, but against the impietie of them, that thought a iustifying faith, could be seperated from good workes. Which he declareth to be impossible, yet ascribeth our saluation wholy, to the mercy of God in Iesus Christ apprehended by faith, which ouercommeth the world, whereby we know that we haue eternall life, which beleeue in the name of the sonne of God, 1. Iohn 5. And therefore are iustified before God by faith only without workes, not by faith which is void of good workes, (from which the iustifying faith can neuer be seperated) but because works which follow a iustified man, cannot be the cause of his iustification.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. 1.

RHEM. 2 3 You haue societie) S. Iohn sheweth manifestly, that whosoeuer desire to be partakers with God, must first be vnited to the Church societie, learne that faith, and receiue those Sacraments, which the Disciples receiued of the truth it selfe, conuersant with them in flesh. So saith venerable Bede vpon this place. Whereby we see there is no societie with God in sectes or schismes, nor any where but in the vnitie, fellowship, and communion of that Church which can proue it selfe to discende from the Apostles. No saluation but in the Society of the Church.

FVLKE. 2 That Church can proue it selfe to descend from the Apostles, which can prooue, that it holdeth the doctrine and faith of the Apostles, and none other. But that Church hath no communion with the Apostles, which hath onely succession of persons and places, without continuance in the doctrine of the Apostles. Such is the popish church and all heretical assemblies, what other descent from the Apostles so euer, they vaunt that they can proue. And if the popish church could iustifie her faith and doctrine by the scriptures, she would neuer flie to such vaine arguments, of succession of persons, and apostolike chaires, which she knoweth well to be in other churches, which yet she doth not acknowledge to be catholike or true churches. Succession, RHEM. 3 7 The blood of Iesus.) Whether sinnes be remitted by praiers, by fasting, by almes, by faith, by charitie, by sacrifice, by Sacraments, and by the Priests (as the holy Scriptures do plainly attribute remission to euery of these) yet none of al these do otherwise remit, but in the force, by the merite and vertue of Christes bloud: these being but the appointed meanes and instruments by which Christ will haue his holy bloud to worke effectually in vs. which meanes whosoeuer contemneth, depriueth himselfe of the commoditie of Christes owne bloud, and continueth still in sinne and vncleannesse, vaunt he himselfe neuer so much of Christes death. Which point let the Protestants marke well, and cease to beguile their poore decriued folowers, perswading them that the Catholikes derogate from Christes bloud, or seeke remission otherwise then by it, for that they vse humbly the meanes appointed by Christ to apply the benefit of his holy bloud vnto them. Many meanes and instruments hf remitting sinne, but al by the force and merite of Christs blood applied by them.

FVLKE. 3 The scripture doth no where ascribe the purging or cleansing vs from our sinnes to any of these things which you name, but onely to the merite of Christ his death and bloodshedding, the benefit whereof is applied to vs by fayth only, and not by fastings, almes, or any worke of charitie. Our fayth is planted and confirmed (as by Gods instruments) by the preachers of his word, who testifie and assure vs in his name, that our sinnes are forgiuen vs for Christes sake, and for more confirmation of our fayth, doe adde the Sacraments, which are the seales of his grace, by which fayth we call vpon God (now that we are reconciled by Christ) our most mercifull father to obteine remission of our sinnes, and all other his benefites in the merites and worthinesse of Christes death onely. As for all other workes proceeding of fayth, as loue, almes, fasting, and all the spirituall sacrifices that we offer, be acceptable to God by Iesus Christ, and not by merite of the workes. But as for sacrifice for sinne, we haue none, but the lambe of God once offered, whose blood purgeth vs from all sinnes. And therefore the papists setting vp an other sacrifice then that which Christ himselfe did offer once for all, and beside seeking remission of sinnes, by so many other meanes as God hath neuer appoynted, to apply the benefite of Christes death by them: can neuer excuse themselues of derogating from Christes bloud, or seeking remission otherwise then by it. To omit al other blasphemies, what christian heart doeth not tremble, to heare them defend this prayer of their popish church? By the bloud of Thomas which hee for thee did spend, make vs Christ to climbe whether Thomas did ascend. Is this nothing els but humblie to vse the meanes appoynted by Christ to applie the benefite of his blond vnto them? But of these matters more at large in other places. Merite. The sacrifice of Chtists death.

RHEM. 4 7 From al sinne.) From original and actual, venial and mortal, a culpa & pœna, that is, from the fault and the paine due for the same. V. Bede saith, that Christes passion doth not onely remit in Baptisme the sinnes before committed. but al other afterward also done by frailtie: yet so, if we vse for the remission of them, such means as be requisite & as Christ hath appointed, whereof he reckoneth some. Bede vpon this place. See S. Augustine also vpon this place to.9. and S. Hierome, li. 2. con. Pelag. c. 3. Al remission of sinnes is by the Passion of Christ though by secundary meanes also.

FVLKE. 4 If the bloud of Christ doe cleanse vs from all sinne not onely commited before baptisme, but also committed of frailtie since baptisme (as Bede sayth rightly) where be your satisfactions by workes or paines suffered in this life, or in purgatory after this life, to purge men of their sinnes, or to satisfie Gods iustice? But you adde a con- Satisfaction. Purgatory.

a condition: Yet so, if we vse for the remission of them, such meanes as be requisite, and as Christ hath appoynted, whereof Beda reckeneth some. To apply the remission of our sinnes by Christes death, are not required any merites or satisfactions of our works, nor Sacraments of the worke wrought, but the sacraments to confirme faith, of which followeth necessarily repentance and fayth. The wordes of Beda are these, Whatsoeuer after baptisme by daily frailty we haue committed, the grace of the same our redeemer remitteth vnto vs: especially when among the works of light which we doe, we doe humbly euery day confesse our errours vnto him, when we receiue the Sacraments or mysteries of his bloud, when forgiuing our debters we pray that our debts may be forgiuen vs, when being mindfull of his passion, we do willingly suffer any aduersitie. These doth not Beda say to be meanes for the remission of sinnes, but to be vsed of all them that obteine remission of sinnes by the blood of Christ, as dueties of thankfulnesse, not as merites of forgiuenesse. S Augustine also vpon this text acknowledgeth alll sinnes committed before baptisme, and after to be purged by the bloud shedding of Christ vpon the crosse, but of the meanes to apply the same vnto vs he speaketh not. S. Hierome sayth: That which is written: And the bloud of Christ doth cleanse vs from all our sinnes, is to be vnderstood, as well in the confession of baptisme, as in the mercy of repentance. Therefore the bloud of Christ without our merite and satisfaction, or other purgation doth cleanse vs from sinne, as well in repentaunce, as in baptisme. The contrary of which doctrine, is the ground of your meritorious and satisfactorie workes, popish penance, satisfaction, purgatory, popes pardons, masses and such like matters derogatorie to the blood of Christ.

RHEM. 5 8 That we haue no sinne.) We gather by these wordes and the former, that there be two sortes of sinnes: one mortal, excluding vs from light and the societie of God: an other venial, which is found euen in those that walke in the light, and are in the societie of God. Also we note against the Pelagians, that we be truely called the sonnes of God, and so iust in deede, though we be not without all sinnes, euery one of vs, as well iust as vniust, being taught and bound to confesse our offences, and to aske pardon daily of God, by this petition of the Pater noster, Forgiue vs our debtes. Therefore S. Augustine li. de natura & grat. c. 36. reckeneth vp all the holy Patriarches, Prophets, and renowmed iust persons, to haue bene sinners, euen when they were in grace and iustice: excepting alwayes our B. Ladie, De qua propter honorem Domini, nullam prorsus, cùm de peccatis agitur, habere volo quæstionem. of whom, sayth he, for the honor of our Lord, when we talke of sinnes, I will haue no question. *And Pelagius asking what sinnes Abel and such iust men did commit, S. Augustine answereth, that they might laugh sometime immoderately, or iest to much, or conet somewhat intemperately, or plucke fruit ouer greedily, or in eating take somewhat more then afterward was well digested, or haue their intention in time of payer somewhat distracted, and such like, thus in sense S. Augustine. Whereby we may learne which be veniall sinnes, that consist with true iustice, and cannot alwayes be auoided euen of holy men in this life. In the booke* De fide ad Petrum, cap. 41. are excepted from this common rule of sinners, the children which be newly baptized and haue not yet vse of reason to sinne either mortally or venially.

Some sinnes veniall.

A man may be truely iust, no withstanding venial sinnes.

FULKE. 5 The scripture saith plainly that the reward of all sinne is death, and the curse of God, therefore as heretikes you gather, to confirme your heresie, that which the Scripture teacheth not. For all sinnes are pardonable to the penitent and faithfull, and without fayth and repentaunce, euen the least and lightest sinnes are damnable and deadlie. Therefore by workes no man can be iust, but by faith onely in Christ, and though remission of sinnes, seeing all haue sinned and are iustified freely: and that doth S. Augustine teach of all that euer were iust before God, not excepting the virgine Mary, although in contention with the heretikes, he will haue no question concerning her, for the honor of Christ. For he acknowledgeth the Scripture to be true without exception, that sayth, All haue sinned, cap. 39. And De Gen. ad liter. 10. cap. 18. he affirmeth that her body came of the Propagation of sinne. And where as Pelagius affirmed that Abel is called iust in the Scriptures, and no sinne is mentioned that he committed. S. Augustine proueth that it is a vayne argument against the Scripture which pronounceth generally that all men haue sinned, and are destitute of the glory of God, to say, Abel had no sinne because there is none particularly mentioned. Therefore although he had no hainous sinnes, yet he might haue lesse sinnes, such as he rehearseth, which prooue that he was not iust by workes before God, but by fayth. For seeing the loue of God is the onely iustice of the law, and that was not perfect in Abel, because it might be increased, Augustine concludeth, that Abel was not perfectly iust, and therefore it is the onely grace of God, whereby Abel was iust in his sight, and not by the merite of his workes. By which the rest of the Patriarkes also were iust, whose great sinnes are rehearsed, that you can not deny to be mortal, as drunkennesse in Noe, lying in Abraham and Isack, infidelitie in Moses, cursing of his day in Iob, adulterie in Dauid, denying his maister in Peter, and forsaking of him in all the rest of the Apostles. Augustine therefore doth not serue your pelting distinction, by rehearsing what small sinnes might be in Abel although the Scripture calleth him iust, because he was a man, in whom the flesh did rebell against the spirite. For although by the grace of God hee absteined from the most grieuous sinnes, yet declareth that he was not void of sinne, and therefore not iust by workes before God, but by grace and faith in Christ. Therefore he affirmeth, That this is the onely hope of all the godly, groning vnder this burden of corruptible flesh, and in the infirmitie of this life, that we haue one mediatour Iesus Christ the iust, and he is the propitiation for our sinnes. Cont. 2. epist. Pel. ad Bonifac. lib. 3. c. 5. Therefore he setteth downe as one of the three principles which the catholike Church doeth hold against the Pelagians. That no man doth liue in this corruptible body, in how great iustice soeuer, without any sinnes what soeuer. De bono vel dono perseuer. c. 2. S. Augustine therefore acknowledgeth that there be some sinnes greater then other, as we doe, but he acknowledgeth no sinne so small, but it deserueth death, if God should deale in iustice against vs. For why did the Catholike Church hold, that no man in what iustice so euer, was void of sinne? but to confute the Pelagians which taught iustification before God by good workes. Which they did with more shew of reason then the papistes, when they held that a man might liue without sinne. Where as the papistes confessing that a man cannot liue without sinne, doe neuertheless affirme, that he is iust before God by his workes, which are euery one imperfect, and short of the loue of God, in which onely that kind of iustice doeth consist, as S. Augustine saith. And thinke to shift of the matter by a vaine distinction of mortal and venial sinnes, which the scriptures know not, and it is inuented for nothing els, but to obscure the grace of God, by which onely we are iustified through faith in the death and merites of Christ. Fulgentius in his booke De fide ad Petrum, excepting infants newly baptized, as liuing without sinne, meaneth of such sinnes, as are committed by deliberation and purpose, not such as rise of their corrupt nature, which are also sinne, though not imputed to the elect: but of the distinction of mortalitie or venialitie, he speaketh nothing.

CHAP. II.

If any sinne mortally, he must not despaire. 3 To know God rightly, is not to beleeue only, but to keepe his commandements: 7 and that this is no new doctrine, but the very primitiue, though a new life it is. 9 Therefore he that beleeueth must also loue his brethren: 12 and that men must not loue the world, but doe that which God willeth. 18 Many are gone out of the Church & become Seducers, al the ministers of Antichrist: but true Christians must continue in their old faith, considering the reward, and that the need not go to schole to any heretike, the holy Ghost himselfe being the schoolemaster of the Church: he doth earnestly inculcate iustice and good workes.

MY litle children, these things I write to you, ‖ that you sinne not. But & if any man shal sinne, we haue ‖ an [a] aduocate with the Father, IESVS Christ the iust.

[a] παράκλητον.

2 And hee is the propitiation for our sinnes: and not for ours onely, but also ‖ for the whole worlds.

3 And in this we knowe that we haue knowen him, if we obserue his commandements.

4 ‖ Hee that saith he knoweth him, and keepeth not his commanndements: is a lier the truth is not in him:

5 But he that keepeth his word, in him in very deede the charitie of God is perfited: in this we know that we be in him.

6 He that saith he abideth in him: ought euen as he walked, himself also to walke.

7 My deerest, I write not a new commandement to you, but an old commandement which you had from the beginning. The old commaundement is the word which you haue heard.

8 Againe [a] a new commandement write I to you, which thing is true both in him and in you: because the darknesse is passed, and the true light now shineth.

[a] Io.13,34. 15,12.

9 He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother: is in the darknes euen vntil now.

10 [a] He that loueth his brother, abideth in the light, and scandal is not in him.

[a] 1Io.3,14.

11 But he that hateth his brother: is in the darknesse, and walketh in the darknesse, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because the darknesse hath blinded his eies.

12 I write vnto you litle children, because your sinnes are forgiuen you for his name.

13 I write vnto you fathers, because you haue knowen him which is from the beginning. I write vnto you yong men because you haue ouercome the wicked one.

14 I write to you infantes, because you haue knowen the Father. I write vnto you yong men, because you are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and you haue ouercome the wicked one.

15 Loue not the world, nor those things which are in the world. If any man loue the world, the charitie of the Father is not in him, [†] How al sinne and tentation proceed of the three, see S. Thomas Summe 8. 2. quæst. 77. art. 5.

MY little children, these things write I vnto you, that ye sinne not. And if any man sinne, we haue an aduocate with the father, Iesus Christ the righteous.

2 And he is the atonement for our sinnes, not for our sinnes onely, but also for the sinnes of all the world.

3 And hereby we are sure that we know him, if we keepe his commandements.

4 He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandements, is a liar, and the ‖ veritie is not in him.

‖ Or, truth.

5 But who so keepeth his word, in him is the loue of God perfect in deed: Heereby know we that we are in him.

6 He that saith he abideth in him, ought him selfe to walke, euen as he walked.

7 Brethren, I write no new commandement vnto you, but an olde commandement which yee haue heard from the beginning. The olde commandement, is the word which yee haue heard from the beginning.

8 Againe, a newe commandement I write vnto you, that is true in him, and the same is true also in you, for the darkenesse is past, and the true light now shineth.

9 He that saith that he is in the light, and yet hateth his brother, is in darkenesse euen vntill this time.

10 [a] Hee that loueth his brother, abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of euill in him.

[a] 1.Ioh.3.14.

11 He that hateth his brother, is in darkenesse, and walketh in darkenesse: and cannot tell whether he goeth, because that darkenesse hath blinded his eies.

12 Babes I write vnto you, because your sinnes are forgiuen you for his names same.

13 I write vnto you fathers, because ye haue knowen him that is from the beginning. I write vnto you yong men, because ye haue ouercome the wicked.

14 I write to you litle children, because yee haue knowen the father, I haue written to you fathers, because ye haue knowen him that is from the beginning, I haue written vnto you yong men, because ye are strong, and the worde of God abideth in you, and ye haue ouercome the wicked.

15 See that ye loue not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man loue the world, the loue of the father is not in him.

16 For all that is in the world, as the lust of piscence of the eies, and the pride of life, which is not of the Father, but is of the worlde.

17 And the world passeth and the concupiscence therof. But he that doeth the wil of God, abideth for euer.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 1 19 Were not of vs.) They were of vs for the time, that is, of and in the Church: otherwise they could not haue gone out. but they were not of the constant sort, or of the elect and predestinate: for then they had taried within, or returned before their death.

FVLKE. 1 The text saith, they were not of vs, you say, they were of vs, which the scripture neuer saith, but to mainteine your heresie of the sacraments giuing grace ex opere & operato, euen to the reprobate, you dare speake contradictorie to the Holy Ghost. The reprobate therefore are in the visible church, but neuer be members of the body of Christ, which is the catholike church. They should not haue gone out (saith S. Augustine) if they had beene of vs, before they went out: therefore they were not of vs. Againe, many that are not of vs, receiue the sacraments with vs.

RHEM. 3 29 Which doth iuſtice.) We ſee it is Apoſtolical doctrine, that men may do or worke iuſtice, and that ſo doing they be iuſt by their workes proceding of Gods grace, and not by faith or imputation onely.

FVLKE. 3 We ſee that no man doth iuſtice but he that is borne of God, that is, which is iuſtified by faith, and regenerated by Gods ſpirit, without his merite or works. But we ſee not, that by the merite of this iuſtice, any man is iuſt before God, but only by the iuſtice of Chriſt imputed to him, of whoſe grace he hath power to doe this iuſtice. Of both theſe iuſtices S. Auguſtine ſpeaketh vpon this text. Our iuſtice is now of faith: perfect iuſtice is not but in angels. Againe: The beginning of our iuſtice is the confeſſion of our ſinnes. Haſt thou begun not to defend thy ſinne? now thou haſt begun iuſtice, and it ſhal be made perfect in thee, when thou ſhalt delight to do nothing els, when death ſhal be ſwallowed vp in victorie. Merit.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 4 1 That you ſinne not.) S. Iohn (ſaith V. Bede vpon this place) is not contrarie to himſelfe, in that he ſeeketh here to make them without ſinne, whom he ſaid in the laſt chapter could not be without al ſinnes. but in the former place he warned vs only of our frailetie, that we ſhould not arrogate to our ſelues perfect innocencie: here hee prouoketh vs to watchfulneſſe and diligence in reſiſting and auoiding ſinnes, ſpecially the greater, which by Gods grace may more eaſily be repelled.

FVLKE. 4 The wordes of Beda are theſe: He is not contrary to himſelfe, which ſaide before, that we could not liue without ſinne, and now ſaith, he writeth vnto vs that we ſhould not ſinne. But there he admoniſhed vs neceſſarily, prouidently, and wholeſomely of our frailty, leaſt any man ſhould pleaſe himſelfe, as though he were innocent, and by extolling himſelfe of merits, ſhould the rather periſh: here conſequently he exhorteth, that if we cannot be without all fault, yet we ſhould endeuour as much as we are able, leſt we our ſelues ſhould liue negligently, after the frailtie of our condition: but ſhould fight watchfully and manfully againſt all vices, eſpecially the greater and more open vices, which by the Lords helpe we may more eaſily ouercome or auoide. Merit. All ſinners.

RHEM. 5 1 An aduocate.) The calling and office of an Aduocate, is in many things proper to Chriſt, and in euery condition more ſingularly and excellently agreeing to him then to any Angel, Saint, or creature liuing, though theſe alſo be rightly & truely ſo called, and that not onely without al derogation, but much to the honour of Chriſts aduocation. To him ſoly and onely it agreeth to procure vs mercie before Gods face, by the general ranſom, price, and paiment of his blond for our deliuerie, as is ſaid in the ſentence folowing, And he is the propitiation for our ſinnes, and not for ours onely, but for the whole worlds. In which ſort he is our onely aduocate, becauſe he is our onely redeemer. and hereupon he alone immediatly, by and through himſelf, and without the aide or aſſiſtance of any other, man or Angel, in his owne name, right, and merites, confidently dealeth in our cauſes before God our iudge, and ſo procureth our pardon, which is the higheſt degree of aduocation that can be. How Chriſt is our onely Aduocate.

Al which notwithſtanding, yet the Angels, and Saints, and our fellowes aliue, may and do pray for vs, and in that they deale with God by interceſſion to procure mercie for vs, may iuſtly be called our aduocates: not ſo as Chriſt is, who demaundeth al things immediatly by his owne merits, but as ſecondary interceſſors, who neuer aske or obtaine any thing for vs, but per Chriſtum Dominum noſtrum, by and through Chriſt our common Lord, Aduocate, and Redeemer of mankinde. And behold how S. Auguſtine (tract. 1. in ep. Io. vpon theſe very words) preuented the heretikes cauillations. Sed dicit aliquis &c. But ſome man wil ſay, Do not the Saints then praie for vs? doe not Biſhops then or Prelates & Paſtors pray for the people? Yea, ſaith he: Marke the Scriptures, and you ſhall finde that the Apoſtles praied for the people, and againe deſired the people to pray for them, and ſo the head praieth for al, and the members one for an other. And likewiſe (leſt the Heretikes ſhould ſay, there is a difference betwixt the liuing & the dead in this caſe) thus the ſame holy father writeth vpon the 85. Pſalme in fine. Our Lord Ieſus Chriſt doth yet make interceſſion for vs, all the Martyrs that be with him, pray for vs: neither wil their interceſſion ceaſe, til we ceaſe our gronings. How Angels, ſaints, and men aliue are our aduocates. Saints in heauen pray for vs.

In this ſenſe therfore whoſoeuer praieth for vs, either aliue or dead, is our aduocate. as S. Auguſtine (ep. 59. to Paulinus circa med.) calleth the Biſhops, the peoples aduocates, when they giue them their benediction or bleſſing. So doth the holy Church call our B. Lady our aduocate, by the very words of S. Irenæus that you may ſee ſuch ſpeeches be no new inuentions of the later ages, but Apoſtolical. The obedient Virgin MARIE (ſaith he) is made the aduocate of the diſobedient virgin Eue. *And to confound the Proteſtants plainely, in that they thinke or pretend that the aduocation or patronage of Saints ſhould be iniurious to Chriſt, remember that * our Sauiour acknowledgeth Angels to be deputed for the protection* (which is nothing els but aduocation) of infants before the face of God, beſides the plaine examples in the old Teſtament Gen. 48. v. 16. Tob. 5. v. 27. & c. 12. v. 12. Dan 10. And this not onely the Catholike Church, but the very Engliſh Proteſtants themſelues in their ſeruice booke and in the Collect of Michaelmas day, profeſſe and pray for the ſame protection or aduocation of Angels, and defend the ſame againſt their yonger brethren the Puritanes. Iren. li. 3. c. 33. & li. 5. poſt med. The B. virgin is our aduocate. D. Hiero in Mat. c. 18. Angels are our protectors.

FVLKE. 5 The ſcripture neuer calleth any angell, ſaint, or creature liuing or dead our aduocate with the father, but only Ieſus Chriſt, therfore none can be ſo called without derogation to his office to whom it is proper. S. Auguſtine ſaith, If S. Iohn had offered himſelfe to be a mediator or aduocate as Permenian placed the biſhop mediator betweene the people and God, he ſhould be no true Apoſtle but antichriſt. Cont. ep. Parm. lib. 2. c. 8. But forasmuch as the word Aduocate is borrowed of lawyers, & ſignifieth him that is to plead the iuſtice of his clients cauſe, not euery one which may or doth pray for vs, can be called our aduocate, but he onely that can plead his iuſtice, which he hath giuen vs before God his father, to obteine mercy for vs. Therefore if angels and ſaints departed doe pray for vs, which we know not by the ſcriptures, as we know that our brethren aliue doe pray for vs: yet are they no aduocates of our, but petitioners & intreaters for vs, nor no mediators, by whoſe worthineſſe we may looke to obteine remiſſion of our ſinnes. Neither doth S. Auguſtine ſay any thing againſt vs, when he ſaith that the ſaints liuing, the biſhops or paſtors doe pray for vs. For they pray not as aduocates, but as felow members, nor yet the ſaints departed (if they doe pray for vs) dare vſurpe the office of Chriſt, to be aduocates to plead their iuſtice or merits for vs, as you in your blaſphemous praiers to them doe often require them. And therefore you labor in vaine, by ſeeking out certaine places of the fathers, where the word Aduocate is vſed in another ſenſe, to couer the wickedneſſe of your multitude of aduocates ſet vp to obteine mercy by their merits, either with Chriſt or without him. S. Auguſtine calleth not the biſhops the peoples aduocates abſolutely, which reproueth Parmenian for calling the biſhop the peoples mediator, vnderſtanding mediator for the ſame that is called aduocate in this place: but he ſaith the Prelates as it were aduocates do offer to the moſt mercifull power of God, thoſe whom they haue vndertaken by impoſition of hands. Chriſt our onely aduocate.

You ſee he doeth not call them abſolutely or properly aduocates, but ſheweth wherein they reſemble aduocates, not in that principall point of the Aduocates office, whereof the Apoſtle heere ſpeaketh. Neither doeth your Popiſh Church call the virgine Marie your aduocate, in ſuch ſenſe as Irenæus or his interpretour, calleth her the aduocate of Eue: For Irenæus meaneth, neither in reſpect of her merits nor of her praiers, that Marie is made the aduocate of Eue, but that by her obedience vnto the worde of God, she conceiued Christ the Sauiour of all men, as Eue by her disobedience deceiued Adam, in whome destruction came vpon all men. But to confounde the Protestants plainely, Christ acknowledgeth angels to be deputed for the protection of infants, and in other places the protection of all the faithfull is ascribed to them. A plaine confusion. The angels are appointed to the protection of the faithfull, therefore not onely they but saints departed also bee our aduocates. As though the angels could not protect the elect against their aduersaries, except they were their aduocates also with God the father, to purchase remission of sinnes for them. But the Protestants themselues (you say) pray for the protection and aduocation of angels: Indeed we pray to God that he will protect vs by the ministery of his holy angels, because we read in the Scriptures that the angels are Gods ministers for the defence of his chosen. But for the aduocation of Angels, that is, that they may be our aduocates, we pray not, neither are you able to prooue that the ministery of defence or protection is al one with aduocation: not that although protection of vs be deputed to angels, that it is also deputed to saints departed, who as they are of diuers natures, so they are not deputed to the same seruice or ministerie. Christ therefore (as S. Augustine saith vpon this place) is our aduocate, indeuour that thou sinne not: but if of infirmitie of this life, sinne haue crept vpon thee, immediately looke to it, immediately let it displease thee, immediately condemne it, and when thou hast condemned it, thou shalt come securely to the iudge, there thou hast an aduocate, be not afraid, lest thou shouldest leese the cause of this confession. For if a man in this life doth sometime commit himselfe to an eloquent tongue, and perish not, thou committest thy selfe to God the worde, and shalt thou perish? Crie, we haue an aduocate with the father. Beholde Iohn himselfe keeping humilitie, certeinly he was a iust man, and a great person, which drunke the secrets of mysteries of our Lords breast: he euen he which by drinking of our Lords breast, vttered his diuinitie, saying: In the beginning was the worde, and the worde was with God, euen he, being such a man, said not, you haue an aduocate with the father, but if any man shall sinne (saith he) we haue an aduocate: he said not you haue, nor you haue me, neither saith he, you haue Christ himselfe, but he set Christ, not himselfe to be an aduocate, and said, we haue, not you haue. He had rather place himselfe in the number of sinners, that he might haue Christ his aduocate, then that he should place himselfe to be an aduocate in steed of Christ, and to be found among the proud that are to be damned. Brethren, we haue Iesus Christ the iust himselfe to be our aduocate, he is the propitiation for our sinnes: he that held this hath made no heresie, he that held this hath made no schisme. For when are schismes made? when men say, we are iust, we sanctifie the vncleane, we iustifie the vngodly, we aske, we obteine: but what said Iohn? If any man haue sinned, we haue an aduocate with the father, Iesus Christ the iust. But some man wil say, then doe not holy men aske for vs? then do not bishops and ouerseers aske for the people? But marke the Scriptures, and see that ouerseers also commend themselues to the people. For the apostle saith to the people: Praying also for vs. The apostle praieth for the people, the people praieth for the apostle: we pray for you brethren, and pray you also for vs, let all the members pray one for another, let the head make intercession for all. You see then that the mutuall duety of the members praying one for another, doth differ from the aduocation of Christ, which is the head, and who onely pleadeth iustice for vs, as an aduocate with the father, to whom we may be bolde to come without mediation or aduocation, and much lesse merits and satisfaction of any other.

RHEM. 6 2 For the whole worlds.) S. Augustine gathered here of against the Donatistes, & all other heretikes, that woulde driue the Church into corners or some certaine countries, from the vniuersalitie of all Nations (whereof it was named by the Apostles, Catholike) that the true religion, and Church, and consequently the effect of Christs propitiation, death, and aduocation, perteineth not to one age, nation, or people, but to the whole world. S. Augustine vpon this place to. 9. tract. 1. in ep. Io. — The Catholike Ghurch is the only true church

FVLKE. 6 As the Donatists would driue the church into Africa, so the papists into Europe, in a part whereof onely their popish doctrine reigneth. — Papists are Schismatikes.

RHEM. 7 4 He that saith he knoweth.) To know God here, signifieth (as it doth often in the Scriptures) to loue, that is, as in the last chapter, to be in societie with him, and to haue familiar and experimental knowledge of his graces. If any vaunt themselues thus to know God, and yet keepe not his commaundements, he is a liar, as al Caluinistes and Lutherans, that professe themselues to be in the fauour of God by onely faith: affirming, that they neither keepe, nor possibly can keepe his commaundements. — Not only faith.

FVLKE. 7 A vaine cauill, we affirme that we neither keepe, nor possibly can keepe Gods commaundements perfectly. for then we might truely say we haue no sinne, which no man can say. Yet by his grace, not of our strength, we keepe his commandements (which are charitie saith S. Augustine) though not in such perfection as his iustice requireth, yet in such measure as his mercy in Christ accepteth. If papists affirme that they keepe Gods commandements so perfectly that they sinne not, they deceiue themselues, and the truth is not in them. — Cauilling.

RHEM. 8 18 Many antichrists.) The holy Apostle S. Iohn (saith S. Cyprian) did not put a difference betwixt one heresie or schisme and an other, nor meant any sort that specially separated themselues, but generally called al without exception, antichristes, that were aduersaries to the Church, or were gone out from the same. And a litle after, It is euident that al be here called antichristes, that haue seuered themselues from the charitie and vnitie of the Catholike Church. So writeth he ep. 76. nu. 1. ad Magnum. Whereby we may learne, that al Heretikes, or rather Arch-heretikes be properly the precursors of that one and special Antichrist, which is to come at the last end of the world, and which is called here immediately before, ὁ ἀντίχριστος, that peculiar and singular Antichrist. — Al Heretikes are antichrists the forerunners of the great Antichrist.

FVLKE. 8 We learne by this, that Antichrist is no singular man, but the greatest heresie and pride maketh that great and speciall Antichrist, of whom the Apostle speaketh. 2. Thess. 2. — Antichrist no singular man onely.

RHEM. 9 19 They went out from vs.) An euident note and marke, whereby to conuince all Heretikes and false teachers, to wit, that being once of the common Catholike Christian fellowship, they forsooke it, and went out from the same. Simon Magus, Nicolas the Deacon, Hymeneus, Alexander, Philetus, Arius, Macedonius, Pelagius, Nestorius, Eutyches, Luther, Caluin, and the like, were of the common societie of al vs that be Christian Catholikes, they went out from vs whom they saw to liue in vnitie of faith and religion together, and made themselues new conuenticles. Therefore they were (as the Apostle here sheweth) antichristes, and we and all that abide in the auncient fellowship of Christian religion, that went not out of their fellowship, in which wee neuer were, nor out of any other societie of knowen Christians, can not be Schismatikes or Heretikes, but must needes be true Christian Catholike men. Let our aduersaries tel vs, out of what Church we euer departed, when, and where, and vnder what persons it was that we reuolted, as we can tel them the yere, the places, the Ringleaders of their reuolt. — The marke of al heretikes is, their going out of the Catholike societie. The Catholikes cannot be proued to haue gone out.

FVLKE. 9 The Pope and Papistes are gone out from the Catholike Church of Christ, into the malignant and Antichristian Church of Rome, because they abide not in the ancient fellowship of Christian religion taught by the Apostles, and receiued in the primitiue Church. From whence Boniface the third went out manifestly, and by Gregories iudgement, became Antichrist, when he bought for a great summe of money, of Phocas the traitor and murderer, that vsurped the Empire, the title of vniuersall Bishop, and head of the Church, which prophane and Antichristian title, none of his Predecessors (as Gregorie testifieth) would euer vse before him. — The Pope Antichrist.

From that time, the Pope hath openly exerciſed tyrannie in the Church of God, and daily more and more increaſed in pride and impietie, vntill he had vtterly obſcured the doctrine of ſaluation, in the greateſt number of men, the remnant only excepted, which according to Gods election, were alwaies preſerued. Luther and Caluine therefore, went not out of the Catholike Church, but being called by the ſpirite of God, and his word in the Scripture, they came out of Babylon into the Church of Chriſt. Apoc. 18. 4. They came from the Papiſtes therefore, as S. Auguſtine came from the Manichees, and many other godly men, that haue beene reclaimed out of hereſies, wherein they had beene borne and bredde, and noſeled vp from their youth. Which Heretiks with as great equitie as you, might abuſe this text againſt them, and ſay, they went out from them. That you can tell the yeere, the places, and the Ringleaders of our reuolt, it is a vaine bragge. For we haue not reuolted from Chriſt and his Church, but from Antichriſt, and his ſlauiſh army of Popiſh Prieſts, prophecied of by Gregorie, which was performed in his next ſucceſſor ſaue one. See 2. Theſſ. 2. in diuerſe ſections, the Pope proued to be the great Antichriſt, vnto whom the reuolt was made from Chriſt and his faith.

RHEM. 10 19 They were not of vs.) He meaneth not, that Heretikes were not, or could not be in or of the Church, before they went out or fell into their hereſie or ſchiſme: but partly that many of them which afterward fall out, though they were before with the reſt, and partakers of al the Sacraments with other their fellowes, yet in deed were of naughtie life and conſcience when they were within, and ſo being rather as ill humors and ſuperfluous excrements, then true and liuely partes of the body, after a ſort may be ſaid not to haue beene of the body at al. So S. Auguſtine expoundeth theſe words in his commentarie vpon this place. tract. 3. but els where, more agreeably as it ſeemeth, that the Apoſtle meaneth, that ſuch as will not tarie in the Church, but finally forſake it to the ende, in the preſcience of God, and in reſpect of the ſmal benefite they ſhal haue by their temporal ſmal abode there, be not of or in the Church, though according to this preſent ſtate, they are truely members thereof. Li. de corrept. & gr. c. 9. & de dono perſeuer. c. 8.

How Heretikes are of the Church, before they fall.

FVLKE. 10 Heretikes and other reprobates, may be in the outward ſocietie or fellowſhip of the Catholike Church, but they can neuer be true members of the Catholike Church of Chriſt, which is the number of Gods elect, the members of the body of Chriſt. So ſaith S. Auguſtine: Many that are not of vs, receiue the Sacraments with vs. They receiue Baptiſme with vs, they receiue with vs that which the faithfull doe know, the bleſſing and Euchariſt, and whatſoeuer is in the number of the holy Sacraments. They take the communication of the altar it ſelfe with vs, and yet they are not of vs: triall proueth that they are not of vs. You ſee that neither the receiuing of Baptiſme, nor of the Lordes Supper, which he calleth the communication of the altar, can make them of vs, which are none of vs, therefore the Sacraments are ſeales of Gods grace in the elect, they doe not giue grace of the worke wrought. Occumenius expounding this place, ſaith: They were not of vs, that is, of the lotte of them which are ſaued. Neither doth Auguſtine in the other places which you quote, gainſay this, but confirmeth it. There are ſome, which are called of vs the ſonnes of God, for the grace which they haue receiued but temporally, yet they are not of God, of whom Iohn ſaith, they went out from vs, but they were not of vs, &c. that is, when they ſeemed to be among vs, they were not of vs. Againe, they were in good, but becauſe they continued not therein, that is, they continued not to the ende, they were not (ſaith he) of vs, euen when they were with vs, that is, they were not of the number of the ſonnes, euen when they were in the faith of the ſonnes: becauſe they that are the ſonnes in deed, are foreknowen and predeſtinated, to be conformable to the image of his ſonne, and are called according to purpoſe, that they may be elect. For the ſonne of promiſe periſheth not, but the ſonne of perdition. Theſe men therefore were of the many that are called, but of the few that are choſen, they were not. You ſee therefore the Catholike Church, which is the body of Chriſt, conſiſteth onely of the elect, and predeſtinate vnto eternall life, of which number they are none, that beleeue for a time, and after fall away, for ſuch were neuer of the Church, though they were in it. In the other place: De dono perſeuer. c. 8. he vnderſtandeth them onely to be of vs, which are predeſtinate to life. The Pelagian preceedeth, and ſaith: Why hath he not graunted to ſome which worſhipped him with a good intent or faith, to continue to the ende? Why thinkeſt thou? but becauſe he doth not lye, which ſaith: they went out from vs, but they were not of vs, for if they had beene of vs, they ſhould or would haue taried with vs. You ſee, that S. Auguſtine neuer ſaith, that the reprobate are truely members of the Catholike Church or body of Chriſt, although they be for a time in the viſible Church, partakers of the Sacraments, haue ſome taſte of the grace of God, and ſome temporall faith for a ſeaſon, but neuer continue therein to the ende.

The reprobate are no true members of the Catholike Church.

RHEM. 19 That they may be manifeſt.) God permitteth hereſie to be, that ſuch as be permanent, conſtant, and choſen members and children of the Catholike Church, onely knowen to God before, may now alſo be made manifeſt to the world, by their conſtant remaining in the CHVRCH, when the winde and blaſt of euery hereſie or tentation driueth out the other light and vnſtable perſons.

By hereſies conſtant Catholikes are knowen.

RHEM. 11 20 Know all things.) They that abide in the vnitie of Chriſts Church, haue the vnction, that is, the holy Ghoſt, who teacheth all truth. not that euery member or man thereof hath al knowledge in him ſelfe perſonally, but that euery one which is of that happie ſocietie to which Chriſt promiſed and gaue the holy Ghoſt, is partaker of all other mens giftes and graces in the ſame holy Spirit, to his ſaluation. Neither neede any to ſeeke truth at Heretiks hands or others that be gone out, when it is within them ſelues and onely within them ſelues in Gods Church. If thou loue vnitie (ſaith S. Auguſtine) for thee alſo hath he, whoſoeuer hath any thing in it, take away enuie, it is thine which I haue, it is mine which thou haſt. &c. Tract. 32. in Euang. Ioan.

Euery good Catholike is ſufficiently taught by the Church to ſaluation.

FVLKE. 11 S. Auguſtine vnderſtandeth this, of the inward teaching by the holy Ghoſt, which muſt concurre with the outward miniſterie of the Church, that it may be profitable. It is the inward maiſter (ſaith he) that teacheth, Chriſt teacheth, his inſpiration teacheth, where his inſpiration and vnction is not, words ſonnd in vaine outwardly. So ſaith Beda: Except the ſpirit be preſent in the heart of the hearer, the ſpeach of the teacher is in vaine. No man therefore aſcribeth to man which teacheth, that he vnderſtandeth out of the mouth of him that ſpeaketh. For except there be one that teacheth within, the teachers tongue laboureth in vaine without. S. Iohn meaneth not therefore, that the implicite faith of the Papiſts is ſufficient, but that true Chriſtians haue diſtinct knowlege of all things neceſſarie to ſaluation, both by the outward preaching of the word, and by the inward vnction of the ſpirite.

Faith implicite.

CHAP. III.

RHEM. 1 It is not for the ſonne of God, to ſinne mortally, but for the ſonnes of the Diuel, whereby they are knowen one from an other, and not by onely faith. 11 True faith is, that we alſo loue our brethren, giuing both our life and ſubſtance for them. 19 Such vnfeined loue may haue great confidence before God. 23 becauſe the keeping of his commandements doth much pleaſe him, which conſiſt in faith and charitie.

FVLKE. 1 To continue in heinous ſinnes, is diueliſh, and not beſeeming the children of God. Yet by euery greeuous fall they are not knowen to be the ſonnes of the deuill. Dauid, although by the Deuils ſuggeſtion, he had com-

RHEM. 10 19 They were not of vs.) He meaneth not, that Heretikes were not, or could not be in or of the Church, before they went out or fell into their heresie or schisme: but partly that many of them which afterward fall out, though they were before with the rest, and partakers of al the Sacraments with other their fellowes, yet in deed were of naughtie life and conscience when they were within, and so being rather as ill humors and superfluous excrements, then true and liuely partes of the body, after a sort may be said not to haue beene of the body at al. So S. Augustine expoundeth these words in his commentarie vpon this place. tract. 3. but els where, more agreeably as it seemeth, that the Apostle meaneth, that such as will not tarie in the Church, but finally forsake it to the ende, in the prescience of God, and in respect of the smal benefite they shal haue by their temporal smal abode there, be not of or in the Church, though according to this present state, they are truely members thereof. Li. de corrept. & gr. c. 9. & de dono perseuer. c. 8.

How Heretikes are of the Church, before they fall.

FVLKE. 10 Heretikes and other reprobates, may be in the outward societie or fellowship of the Catholike Church, but they can neuer be true members of the Catholike Church of Christ, which is the number of Gods elect, the members of the body of Christ. So saith S. Augustine: Many that are not of vs, receiue the Sacraments with vs. They receiue Baptisme with vs, they receiue with vs that which the faithfull doe know, the blessing and Eucharist, and whatsoeuer is in the number of the holy Sacraments. They take the communication of the altar it selfe with vs, and yet they are not of vs: triall proueth that they are not of vs. You see that neither the receiuing of Baptisme, nor of the Lordes Supper, which he calleth the communication of the altar, can make them of vs, which are none of vs, therefore the Sacraments are seales of Gods grace in the elect, they doe not giue grace of the worke wrought. Occumenius expounding this place, saith: They were not of vs, that is, of the lotte of them which are saued. Neither doth Augustine in the other places which you quote, gainesay this, but confirmeth it. There are some, which are called of vs the sonnes of God, for the grace which they haue receiued but temporally, yet they are not of God, of whom Iohn saith, they went out from vs, but they were not of vs, &c. that is, when they seemed to be among vs, they were not of vs. Againe, they were in good, but because they continued not therein, that is, they continued not to the ende, they were not (saith he) of vs, euen when they were with vs, that is, they were not of the number of the sonnes, euen when they were in the faith of the sonnes: because they that are the sonnes in deed, are foreknowen and predestinated, to be conformable to the image of his sonne, and are called according to purpose, that they may be elect. For the sonne of promise perisheth not, but the sonne of perdition. These men therefore were of the many that are called, but of the few that are chosen, they were not. You see therefore the Catholike Church, which is the body of Christ, consisteth onely of the elect, and predestinate vnto eternall life, of which number they are none, that beleeue for a time, and after fall away, for such were neuer of the Church, though they were in it. In the other place: De dono perseuer. c. 8. he vnderstandeth them onely to be of vs, which are predestinate to life. The Pelagian proceedeth, and saith: Why hath he not graunted to some which worshipped him with a good intent or faith, to continue to the ende? Why thinkest thou? but because he doth not lye, which saith: they went out from vs, but they were not of vs, for if they had beene of vs, they should or would haue taried with vs. You see, that S. Augustine neuer saith, that the reprobate are truely members of the Catholike Church or body of Christ, although they be for a time in the visible Church, partakers of the Sacraments, haue some taste of the grace of God, and some temporall faith for a season, but neuer continue therein to the ende.

The reprobate are no true members of the Catholike Church.

RHEM. 19 That they may be manifest.) God permitteth heresie to be, that such as be permanent, constant, and chosen members and children of the Catholike Church, onely knowen to God before, may now also be made manifest to the world, by their constant remaining in the CHVRCH, when the winde and blast of euery heresie or tentation driueth out the other light and vnstable persons.

By heresies constant Catholikes are knowen.

RHEM. 11 20 Know all things.) They that abide in the vnitie of Christs Church, haue the vnction, that is, the holy Ghost, who teacheth all truth. not that euery member or man thereof hath al knowledge in him selfe personally, but that euery one which is of that happie societie to which Christ promised and gaue the holy Ghost, is partaker of all other mens giftes and graces in the same holy Spirit, to his saluation. Neither neede any to seeke truth at Heretiks hands or others that be gone out, when it is within them selues and onely within them selues in Gods Church. If thou loue vnitie (saith S. Augustine) for thee also hath he, whosoeuer hath any thing in it, take away enuie, it is thine which I haue, it is mine which thou hast. &c. Tract. 32. in Euang. Ioan.

Euery good Catholike is sufficiently taught by the Church to saluation.

FVLKE. 11 S. Augustine vnderstandeth this, of the inward teaching by the holy Ghost, which must concurre with the outward ministerie of the Church, that it may be profitable. It is the inward maister (saith he) that teacheth, Christ teacheth, his inspiration teacheth, where his inspiration and vnction is not, words sonnd in vaine outwardly. So saith Beda: Except the spirit be present in the heart of the hearer, the speach of the teacher is in vaine. No man therefore ascribeth to man which teacheth, that he vnderstandeth out of the mouth of him that speaketh. For except there be one that teacheth within, the teachers tongue laboureth in vaine without. S. Iohn meaneth not therefore, that the implicite faith of the Papists is sufficient, but that true Christians haue distinct knowlege of all things necessarie to saluation, both by the outward preaching of the word, and by the inward vnction of the spirite.

Faith implicite.

CHAP. III.

RHEM. 1 It is not for the sonne of God, to sinne mortally, but for the sonnes of the Diuel, whereby they are knowen one from an other, and not by onely faith. 11 True faith is, that we also loue our brethren, giuing both our life and substance for them. 19 Such vnfeined loue may haue great confidence before God. 23 because the keeping of his commandements doth much please him, which consist in faith and charitie.

FVLKE. 1 To continue in heinous sinnes, is diuelish, and not beseeming the children of God. Yet by euery grieuous fall they are not knowen to be the sonnes of the deuill. Dauid, although by the Deuils suggestion, he had committed adulterie and murther, yet was he not thereby knowen to be the Deuils sonne, but a disobedient sonne of God, whom by his mercy and chastisement, he called to repentance.

SEe what maner of charitie the Father hath giuen vs, that we should be named and be ‡ the sonnes of God. For this cause the world doth not know vs, because it hath not knowen him.

‡ Not by nature, as Christ is: but by grace and adoption.

2 My deerest, now are we the sonnes of God: and it hath not yet appeared what we shal be. Wee know that when he shal appeare, we shal be like to him: because we shal * see him as he is.

* How we shall see God, and be like vnto him in the next life. See S. Augustine ep. 111.112. & li.22. de ciuit. Dei.29.

3 And euery one that hath this hope in him ‡ sanctifieth himself, as he also is holy.

4 Euery one that committeth sinne, committeth also iniquitie: and ‖ sinne is iniquitie.

Is.53,4. 1.Pet.2,24.

5 And * you know that he appeared to take away our sinnes: * & sinne in him there is none.

6 Euery one that abideth in him, ‖ sinneth not: and euery one that sinneth, hath not seene him, nor knowen him.

7 Litle children, let no man seduce you. ‖ He that doth iustice, is iust: euen as he also is iust.

Io.8,44.

8 * He that commiteth sinne, is of the deuil: because the deuil ‖ sinneth from the beginning. For this, appeared the Sonne of God, that he might dissolue the workes of the deuil.

9 Euery one that is borne of God, committeth not sinne: because his seed abideth in him, and he can not sinne because he is borne of God.

10 In this are the children of God manifest, and the children of the deuil. Euery one that is not iust, is not of God, and he that loueth not his brother.

The Epistle for S. Polycarpus, Ian. 26.

11 Because this is the annuntiation, which you haue heard from the beginning, * That you loue one an other.

Io.13,35.

12 Not as * Cain, who was of the wicked, and killed his brother. And for what cause killed he him? Because his workes were wicked: but his brothers, iust.

Gen.4,8.

The Epistle vpon the 2. Sunday after Pentecost.

13 Maruel not brethren, if the worlde hate you.

14 We know that we are translated frō death to life, because we loue the brethren. He that loueth not, abideth not in death.

15 Whosoeuer hateth his brother: is a murderer. And you know that no murderer hath life euerlasting abiding in him self.

Io.15,13.

16 * In this we haue knowen the charitie of God, because he hath yeelded his life for vs: and we ought to yeeld our liues for the brethren.

Ia.2,15.

‡ Euery man is bound to giue almes according to his abilitie, when he seeth his brother in great necessitie.

17 * He that shal haue the substance of the world, and shal ‡ see his brother haue neede, and shal shut his bowels from him: how doth the charitie of God abide in him?

18 My

BEhold what charitie the father hath shewed vs euen that we should be called the sonnes of God: for this cause the world knoweth vs not, because it hath not knowen him.

2 Dearely beloued, nowe are we the sonnes of God, and yet it doeth not appeare what we shall be: But we know that when he shall appeare, we shall be like him: for we shall see him as hee is.

3 And euery man that hath this hope in him, purgeth him selfe, euen as he also is pure.

4 Whosoeuer committeth sinne, transgresseth also the law: for sinne is the transgression of the lawe.

5 And ye know that he appeared to * take away our sinnes, and in him is no sinne. Esai.53.5. 1.pet.2,22.

6 As many as abide in him, sinne not: whosoeuer sinneth, hath not seene him, neither knowen him.

7 Babes, let no man deceiue you: he that doeth righteousnesse, is righteous, euen as hee is righteous.

8 * He that committeth sinne, is of the deuil, for the deuill sinneth since the beginning: For this purpose appeared the sonne of God, to loose the workes of the deuill. Iohn 8.44.

9 Whosoeuer is borne of God, sinneth not: for his seede remaineth in him, and hee cannot sinne, because he is borne of God.

10 In this are the children of God knowen, and the children of the deuill: whosoeuer doeth not righteousnesse, is not of God, neither he that loueth not his brother.

11 * For this is the tidings that ye heard from the beginning, that ye should loue one another. Iohn.13.34.

12 Not as * Cain which was of the wicked, and slew his brother: And wherfore slew he him? because his owne workes were euill, and his brothers righteous. Gen.4.8.

13 Maruell not, my brethren, if the world hate you.

14 We knowe that we are translated from death vnto life, because we loue the brethren: he that loueth not his brother, abideth in death.

15 Whosoeuer hateth * his brother, is a manslear: and ye know that no manslear hath eternall life abiding in him. Leuit.19.17.

Hereby perceiue we loue, because he laide downe his life for vs: and we ought to lay downe our liues for the brethren.

17 * But who so hath this worldes good, and seeth his brother haue need, and shutteth vp his compassion from him: how dwelleth the loue of God in him? Luke 3.11.

18 My

18 My little children, let vs not loue in word, nor in tongue, but in deed & truth.

19 In this we know that we are of the truth: and in his sight wé shall persuade our hartes.

20 For if our hart do reprehend vs: God is greater thē our hart, & knoweth al things.

21 My deerest, if our hart do not reprehend vs, we haue confidence toward God.

Io.14,23. 24 And *he that keepeth his commaundements, abideth in him, and he in him. And in this we know that he abideth in vs, by the Spirit which he hath giuen vs.

18 My babes, let vs not loue in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in veritie.

19 Hereby we know that we are of the truth, and shall assure our hearts before him.

20 For if our heart condemne vs, God is greater then our hearte, and knoweth all things.

21 Dearely beloued, if our heart condevvne vs not, then haue we boldnesse toward God.

22 And whatsoever we aske, we receiue of him, because we keepe his commaundements, and doe those things which are pleasing in his sight. Mat.21.12. iohn 15.7.

23 * And this is his commaundement, that we should beleeue on the name of his sonne Iesus Christ, and loue one another, as he gaue vs commaundement. Iohn.6.29.

24 * And he that keepeth his commaundements, dwelleth in him, and he in him: and hereby we knowe that he abideth in vs, euen by the spirit which he hath giuen vs. Iohn.13.34.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. III.

RHEM. 2 3 Sanctifieth him self.) This teacheth vs that man sanctifieth him self by his free wil working together with God grace. S. Augustine vpon this place.

FVLKE. 2 S. Augustine meaneth, that our will being inlarged by Gods spirite, consenteth to the grace of God, not that it is free by nature: his wordes are these: Thou seest he hath not taken away free will, when he saith he sanctifieth him selfe, who doth sanctifie vs but God? But God doth not sanctifie thee, being vnwilling. Therefore in that thou ioynest thy will to God, thou doest sanctifie thy selfe. Thou doest sanctifie thy selfe, not by thy seife, but by him which came, that he might dwell in thee. He doth not therefore set out the strength of mans will, but sheweth, that the consent thereof to Gods grace, is wrought by God, and is not in the power of man. For it doth not helpe the Pelagian heresie (saith Beda) that it is said, of a man, he sanctifieth himselfe, as though any man without Gods helpe, by free will could sanctifie him selfe. Free will.

RHEM. 3 23 Loue one an other.) Lest any man should thinke by the words next before, onely faith in Christ to be commanded or to please God, he addeth to faith the commaundement of charitie or loue of our neighbour.

FVLKE. 3 We teach nor, that only faith is commaunded, but that only faith iustifieth before God, and that by faith all workes of charitie please God, and not by the merite or worthines of them. Heb.11. Slander.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. III.

RHEM. 4 4 Sinne is iniquitie.) Iniquitie is not taken here for wickednes, as it is commonly vsed both in Latin and in our language, as it is plaine by the Greeke word ἀνομία, signifying nothing else but a swarving or declining from the straight line of the law of God or nature. So that the Apostle meaneth, that euery sinne is an obliquitie or defect from the rule of the law: but not contrary, that euery such swarving from the law, should be properly a sinne, as the Heretikes do vntruely gather, to proue that concupiscence remaining after Baptisme is a very sinne, though we neuer giue our consent vnto it. And though in the 5. chapter following vers. 17. the Apostle turne the speach, affirming euery iniquitie to be a sinne, yet there the Greeke word is not the same as before, ἀνομία, but ἁμαρτία, by which it is plaine, that there he meaneth by iniquitie, mans actuall and proper transgression which must needes be a sinne. See S. Augustine cont. Iulian. li.5.c.3. S. Ambr. li. de Apologia Dauid c.13. Concupiscence remaining after Baptisme is no sinne, without consent.

FVLKE. 4 If sinne be euery transgression of the Law, it followeth that euery transgression of the Law is sinne, and so meaneth the Apostle by the word ἀδικία, as wel as by the word ἀνομία. For all sinne is vniustice, & al vniustice is sinne; therefore your vulgar Interpretor translateth both the words by one Latine word Iniquitas. Yea S. Augustine vpon this text, saith: Let no man say sinne is one thing, iniquitie is another thing, I am a sinnefull man, but I am not vniust: euery one that doth commit sinne, doth commit iniquitie, for sinne is iniquitie, what then shall we doe with our sinnes and iniquities? You see plainly S. Augustine taketh iniquitie to be as large as sinne, and all iniquitie to be sinne, as all sinne is iniquitie. Beda hath not onely the same words of S. Augustine, but also he addeth: All that sinne are guiltie of preuarication or transgression of the Law, that is, not onely they which contemne the precepts of the written Law, giuen vnto them, but they also, which either of infirmitie, or of negligence, or of ignorance, corrupt the innocencie of the naturall Law, which we all receiued in the first man that was created. You see Beda, not only taketh all to be sinne, which is iniquitie, and is contrarie to the equititie of Gods Law, but also that he compteth euen the corruption of innocencie, which is of infirmitie, to be sinne, therefore all concupiscence that is contrarie to the Law of God, which S. Paul expresly called sinne, Rom.7.7. Which seeing the Scripture neuer denieth to be sinne in them in whom it is pardoned, what hereticall madnesse is it, to wrest the Scriptures, to maintaine your owne false positions? Oecumenius both in this place, & in 1.Iohn.5. interpreteth iniquitie to be the same that sinne, as sinne is iniquitie We must know (saith he) that ἁμαρτία, that is, sinne, is a falling from that which is good, ἀνομία that is, iniquitie, is a transgression of the Law that is giuen. And both of these hath this beginning, namely, sinne is a degenerating from that which is good, iniquitie to doe against the Law that is set. And they agree the one with the other, and are about the same thing. For he which sinneth, erreth from the marke, which is according to nature, and in nature it selfe. For the scope or marke of mans nature, is to liue according to reason, farre from vnreasonablenes. Likewise, he that doth vniustly, offendeth about the Law giuen in nature, being affected intemperately. Therefore the Disciple of our Lord hath rightly changed the one into the other, or vsed them both for one. And 1.Iohn 5. he saith: The Apostle maketh a plaine diuision of Concupiscence is sinne.

sinne, as it were from the generall sinne, and saith: All iniquitie is sinne, whether it be vnto death, or not. So saith Beda vpon that place: There is so great diuersitie of sinnes, that whatsoeuer disagreeth from the rule of equitie, is numbred among sinnes. S. Augustine cont. Iul. Lib. 5. c. 3. saieth. Concupiscence of the flesh, against which the good spirite lusteth, is both sinne, because there is in it disobedience against the gouernment of the minde, and also a punishment of sinne, because it was rendred to the merites of the disobedient, and it is also the cause of sinne, by defection of him that consenteth, or by contagion of him that is borne. You see S. Augustine saith expresly, it is sinne, and wheresoeuer he seemeth to deny it to be sinne, he meaneth either because it is sinne of an other kind, then that whereto consent is giuen: or els because it is not imputed to them that he regenerated. S. Ambrose in Apologia Dauid, saith nothing to this purpose. But in his booke De Paradiso cap. 8. he saieth out of this text: What is sinne, but a transgression of the Law of God, and disobedience of the heauenly commaundements? And touching concupiscence, that it is sinne, he saith in his Comm. vpon the Ep. to the Rom. c. 7. He hath not discerned this concupiscence from sinne, but ioyned it to, signifying, that when there was not so much as any suspition, that this thing was not lawfull before God, I knewe (saieth he) that it is sinne.

RHEM. 5 6 Sinneth not.) Iouinian and Pelagius falsely (as Heretikes vse to doe) argued vpon these wordes, and those that folow vers. 9: the one, that the Baptized could sinne no more: the other, that no man being or remaining iust could sinne. But among many good sensesgiuen of this place, this seemeth most agreeable, that the Apostle should say, that mortall sinne doth not consist together with the grace of God, and therefore cannot be committed by a man continuing the sonne of God, and so is the like speach in the 9 verse following to be taken. See S. Hierom li. 2. cont. Iouinianum c. 1.

Hereticall exposition of Scriptures. No man in grace sinneth mortally.

FVLKE. 5 Vnderstanding mortall sinne as you doe, for euery transgression that deserueth death, as euery acte of adulterie, &c. Your exposition is as hereticall, as any that Iouinian or Pelagius made: whereof it should followe, that Dauid was not the sonne of God, when he committed adulterie, and consequently none of the predestinate. Therefore Augustine and Beda doe briefly expound this text, saying: In so much as he abideth in him, in so much he sinneth not, but no man abideth in him perfectly, therefore no man is free from sinne, but in part. Againe, S. Augustine saith: Hath not this man beleeued which sinneth? If he haue beleeued, as pertaining to his faith, he sinneth not. Didymus saith: He that consisteth in Christ which is iustice and sanctification, offendeth not. Augustine also vpon the 9. verse, saith: There is a certaine sinne, which he cannot commit, which is borne of God, which being not committed, other sinnes are loosed, which being committed, other sinnes are confirmed: meaning, that he which is borne of God, can not be voide of loue toward his neighbour, though he sinne particularly against the rule of charitie. The same meaneth Hierom against Iouinian, that in as much as we are the children of God, we neither commit sinne, nor can commit sinne, though in respect of our frailtie, because our renouation is not perfect, all the children of God doe sinne often. Therefore he sinneth not according to the Apostles meaning, in whom sinne doth not raigne, although he fall often, and haue need to say euery day, forgiue vs our trespasses.

The elect regenerate sinne not to death how.

True iustice.

RHEM. 6 7 He that doth iustice.) He doth inculcate this often, that mans true iustice or righteousnes consisteth in doing or working iustice, and that so he is iust, and biddeth them not to be seduced by Heretikes, in this point.

FVLKE. 6 But no man doth iustice perfectly, therefore no man is iust in Gods sight by doing iustice, but by faith. So saith S. Augustine vpon this text: He sanctifieth and purifieth vs, as he is holy or pure, he is holy by eternitie, we are holy or pure by faith. We are iust, as he is iust, but he is iust in vnchangeable perpetuitie, as we are iust by beleeuing in him, whom we haue not seene, that we may at length see him. And euen whē our iustice shal be perfect, when we shall be made equal to the Angels, neither then shall we be equal to him &c. Oecumenius vpon this text saith. God prouiding for his creature, being made iustice and sanctification, was manifested in the world, that he might take away the workes of the deuil which is sinne.

Iustification by workes.

RHEM. 8 Sinneth from the beginning.) The deuil was created holy and in grace, and not in sinne: but he fell of his owne free wil from God. Therefore these words, from the beginning, may be interpreted thus, from the beginning of sinne, and so the Apostle wil say, The deuil committed the first sinne. So S. Augustine li. 11. de ci. Dei. c. 15. expoundeth it. The most simple meaning seemeth to be, that he sinned from the beginning of the world, not taking the beginning precisely for the first instant or moment of the creation, but straight vpon the beginning, as it must needes also be taken in S. Iohns Gospel c. 8. 44.

How the deuil sinned from the beginning.

RHEM. 7 22 We shall receiue, because.) Let the Protestants be ashamed to say, that we obtaine all of God by onely faith, the Apostle here attributing it to the keeping of Gods commandements. Note here also that Gods commaundements are not impossible to be kept, but were then, and are now obserued of good men.

Not onely faith.

FVLKE. 7 The Apostle doth not attribute the granting of our requests to the merite of our works, or keeping of Gods commandements, but sheweth that charitie, or the keeping of Gods commandemēts is inseperable from faith, by which we haue confidence to be heard in our prayers for Iesus Christ take. Therefore Beda saith vpon this text: When Iohn had said, whatsoeuer we shall aske, we shall receiue of him, because we keepe his commandements: he addeth immediately. And this is his commandement, that we beleeue in the name of his sonne Iesus Christ, and loue one an other, as he hath giuen vs commandement. First he setteth downe his commandement in the singular number, and then consequently he addeth two commandements: namely faith and loue, because these two cannot be seperated one from the other. Where you note further, that Gods commandements are not impossible to be kept, but were then and now obserued of good men. We confesse they are not impossible to be kept in some measure, but perfectly there was neuer any that kept them, nor euer any that could keepe them, but onely Iesus Christ. S. Hierom against the Pelagians saith. God commanded things possible, and that I confesse: but all these possible things euery one of vs cannot haue, not through weakenesse of nature, lest thou shouldest scander God, but through wearinesse of minde, which cannot haue all vertues together and alwaies. Conc. Pel. li. 1. S. Augustine saith: No man in this life hath beene, is, or shalbe of perfect iustice. De sp. & lit. c. 35. Againe: The greater our knowledge is, so much the greater shalbe our loue: Therefore looke how much there wanteth now to our loue, so much we must beleeue to be wanting to perfect iustice cap. 36.

Merite.

The commandements impossible.

CHAP. IIII.

We may not beleeue all that boast of the spirit, but trie them, whether they teach Catholike articles of the faith (namely the incarnation of Christ:) whether their doctrine be not worldly, and themselues disobedient hearers of the Apostles. 7 We must loue one an other, considering the exceeding loue of God in sending his sonne to saue vs. 17 An argument of perfect charitie is, if we haue nothing in our conscience to feare in the day of iudgement. 19 And an argument that we loue God is, if we loue our brethren.

The Epiſtle vpon the firſt Sunday after Penrecoſt. Io.3,16.

9 * In this hath the charitie of God appeared in vs, becauſe God hath ſent his only begotten ſonne into the world, that we may liue by him.

10 In this is charitie: not as though we haue loued him, but becauſe he hath loued vs, and ſent his ſonne a propitiation for our ſinnes.

11 My deereſt, if God hath ſo loued vs: we alſo ought to loue one an other.

12 *God ‡ no man hath ſeene at any time. If we loue one an other, God abideth in vs, and his charitie in vs is perfited.

‡ No man in this life, nor with corporall eies, can ſee the proper eſſence or ſubſtance of the Deitie. See S. Auguſt. ad Paulin. de videndo Deo. ep. 112. Io.1,18. 1.Tim.6,16.

13 In this we know that we abide in him, and he in vs: becauſe he of his Spirit hath giuen to vs.

14 And we haue ſeene, and doe teſtifie, that the Father hath ſent his Sonne the Sauiour of the world.

15 Whoſoeuer ſhal confeſſe that IESVS is the Sonne of God, God abideth in him, and he in God.

16 And we haue knowen and haue beleeued the charitie, which God hath in vs. God is charitie: and he that abideth in charitie, abideth in God, and God in him.

17 In this is charitie perfited with vs, ‖that we may haue confidence in the day of iudgement: becauſe as he is, we alſo are in the world.

18 ‖Feare is not in charitie: but perfect charitie caſteth out feare, becauſe feare hath painefulneſſe. and he that feareth, is not perfect in charitie.

19 Let vs therefore loue God, becauſe God firſt hath loued vs.

20 If any man ſhall ſay, that I loue God: & hateth his brother, he is a lier. For he that loueth not his brother whom he ſeeth: God whom he ſeeth not, how can he loue?

21 *And

2 Hereby ſhall ye know the ſpirit of God: Euery ſpirite that confeſſeth that Ieſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh, is of God:

3 And euery ſpirit which confeſſeth not that Ieſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh, is not of God, and this is that ſpirit of Antichriſt, of whom ye haue heard how that he ſhould come: and euen now already is he in the world.

4 Litle children, ye are of God, and haue ouercome them: for greater is he that is in you, then he that is in the world.

5 They are of the world, therefore ſpeake they of the world, and the world heareth them.

6 We are of God, he that knoweth God, heareth vs: he that is not of God, heareth vs not. Hereby knowe we the ſpirit of veritie, and the ſpirit of errour.* Iohn 3.16.

7 Dearly beloued, let vs loue one another, for loue commeth of God: and euery on that loueth, is borne of God, and knoweth God.

8 He that loueth not, knoweth not God: for God is loue.

9  In this appeareth the loue of God to vs-ward, becauſe God hath ſent his onely begotten ſonne into the world, that we might liue through him.* Iohn 8.47.

10 Herein is loue, not that we loued God, but that he loued vs, and ſent his ſonne to be the agreement for our ſinnes.

11 Dearely beloued, if God ſo loued vs, we ought alſo to loue one another.

12 No man hath ſeene God at any time. If we loue one another, God dwelleth in vs, and his loue is perfect in vs.* 1.Io.1.12. 1.Tim.6.16.

13 Hereby knowe we that we dwell in him, and he in vs: becauſe he hath giuen vs of his ſpirite.

14 And we haue ſeene, and doe teſtifie that the father ſent his ſonne to be the ſauiour of the world.

15 Who ſo euer confeſſeth that Ieſus is the ſonne of God, in him dwelleth God, and he in God.

16 And we haue knowen and beleeued the loue that God hath to vs. God is loue, and hee that dwelleth in loue, dwelleth in God, and God in him.

17 Herein is the loue perfect in vs, that wee ſhoulde haue boldneſſe in the day of iudgement: For as hee is, euen ſo are wee in this world.

18 There is no feare in loue, but perfect loue caſteth out feare: for feare hath painefulneſſe, He that feareth, is not perfect in loue.

19 We loue him, for he loued vs firſt.

20 If a man ſay, I loue God, and yet hate his brother, he is a liar: For how can he that loueth not his brother whom he hath ſeene, loue God whom he hath not ſeene?

21 *And

Io.13,34. 15,12. 21 * And this commandement we haue from God: that he which loueth God, loue also his brother.

21 * And this commaundement haue we of him, that he which loueth God, should loue his brother also. Ioh.13.24. aud 15.12.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IIII.

RHEM. 1 Beleeue not euery spirit.) That is, Receiue not euery doctrine of such as boast themselues to haue the spirit. For there be many false prophets, that is to say, Heretikes, which shall goe out of the Church, and chalenge the spirit, and vaunt of Gods word, Scripture, and Gospel, which in deed be seducers. Heretical boasting of the spirit.

RHEM. 1 1 Proue the spirits.) *It is not meant by this place, as the Protestants would haue it, that euery particular person should of himselfe examine, trie, or iudge who is a true or false doctor, and which is true or false doctrine. But the Apostle here would euery one to discerne these diuersities of spirits, by taking knowledge of them to whom God hath giuen the gift of discerning spirits and doctrines (which S. Paul expresly saith is giuen but to some, and not to euery one. 1. Cor. 12.) and by obeying the Church of God, to whom Christ hath giuen * the Spirit of truth. And this is onely the sure way to proue the spirits and doctrines of these daies. And all they that would bring vs from our pastors and the Churches iudgement, to our owne priuate triall, seeke nothing els but to driue vs to miserable vncertaintie in all our beleefe. as Caluin doth, who vpon this place saith, that priuate men may examine the general Councels doctrines.* The Church only, not euery priuate man, hath to proue and discerne spirits. Io.14.16. Caluine.

FVLKE. 1 The Apostle meaneth, that not onely the whole Church together, but that euery man for himselfe, though not of himselfe, or by himselfe onely, but by such rules as the Scripture setteth downe, ought to trie whether the spirit be of God, before he giue credit to it. But you obiect that S. Paul saith expresly, the gift of discerning spirites and doctrines, is not giuen to all, but to some. And I answere, that miraculous gift is giuen to none that I know in these daies, more then the gift of healing, of interpretation of tongues, &c. But here the Apostle deliuereth a generall doctrine that concerneth euery one of the faithfull, as he will auoide seducing and deceites of false teachers. Where you adde, euery one must proue the spirits by obeying the Church, it is a very vncertaine triall, when the question is, where and with whom the Church is: for all heretikes make as great claime to the Church, as to the trueth. But you would make sure worke, that men without further tryall should receiue and obey you, because you say you are the Church and in the Church, you onely haue the gift of discerning spirits and doctrines. But they that would haue euery man to try the spirits by such rules as the Apostle setteth downe, doe not bring men from their pastors, and the Curches iudgement: but to approue the iudgement of their pastors (if they be true pastors) and of the Church, if it be the true Church. Yea they seeke to bring all men to such certaintie of their beleefe, that they may know it is grounded vpon the holy Scriptures. And if the decrees of Councels were not to be examined by this rule also, we should (as Caluin saith) accept many errours in stead of truethes: seeing many Councels both prouinciall and generall haue erred. And what company of men since the Apostles, are of greater credite then the Apostles themselues? yet the holy Ghost commendeth them in the Actes of the Apostles, which examined the doctrine of the Apostles by the Scriptures Actes 17.11. Tryall of spirits.

RHEM. 2 2 Euery spirit that confesseth.) The Apostle speaketh according to that time, and for that part of Christian doctrine which then was specially to be confessed, taught, and maintayned against certaine wicked Heretikes, Cerinthus, Ebion, and the like, that taught wickedly against the person and both natures of Christ IESVS. The Apostle therefore giueth the faithfull people this token to knowe the true teachers of those daies from the false. Not that this marke would serue for all times, or in case of all other false doctrines, but that it was then a necessarie note. As if a good Catholike writer, Pastor, or parents would warne all theirs now in these daies, to giue eare onely to such teachers as acknowledge Christ our Sauiour to bee really present, and sacrificed in the B. Masse, and that all such are true preachers and of God, the rest to be of the Diuell, or to be counted the spirit of Antichrist. Which spirit of Antichrist (he saith) was come euen then, and is no doubt much more now in all heretikes, all being precursors of that great Antichrist which shall come towards the later end. To confesse or deny any article which the Cath. church teacheth, is at all times a certaine marke of Catholike or heretike.

FVLKE. 2 The Apostle speaketh for all times, giuing a generall note to discerne all false doctrine concerning Christ, which eyther is in denial of his person, or of his offices. And this marke will serue for all times, and in case of all false doctrine, which is against the true faith of Iesus Christ. And by this all Christians may discerne the Pope to be Antichrist, and the Papists to be Heretikes. Because that although they confesse in wordes the person of Christ, (which diuers Heretikes denied,) yet they denied the offices of Christ, for which end he did become that person God and man: namely, to be our onely spiritual king, prophet & priest, sauiour, mediator, aduocate, redeemer, iustice, sanctification, wisedome &c. And so doth S. Augustine vnderstand this marke to conuince al Heretikes and Schismatikes, because not onely the person that came, but the ende for which he came must be considered, or els all Heretikes will after a sort, in tongue and wordes confesse, that Iesus Christ came in the flesh. But let vs inquire (saith S. Augustine) wherefore Christ came in the flesh, and we shall finde who they are which deny him to haue come in the flesh: for if you giue heed to their tongues, you shall heare many Heretikes confessing that Christ came in the flesh, but the truth conuinceth them wherefore Christ came in the flesh, &c. The like in effect saith Didymus vpon this text. And the text is plaine that the Apostle teacheth to discerne the spirite of Antichrist, which was not proper to his age, but was to be reuealed after his time. Therefore your example of him that teacheth Christ to be really present and sacrificed in the masse, is a note to discerne on Antichristian teacher, not a true spirit: for it is both against the truth of his body, and also against the dignitie of his eternall priesthod. The Pope is Antichrist, the Papistes Heretikes by this rule.

RHEM. 3 3 That dissoluteth.) To dissolue, loose, or separate IESVS a sunder, was proper to all those olde Heretikes that taught either against his Diuinitie, or Humanitie, or the Vnitie of his person, being of two natures, as Cerinthus, Ebion, Nestorius, Eutyches, Manes or Manicheus, Cerdon, Apelles, Apollinaris and the like. And this is one place by which we may see that the common Greeke copies be not euer authenticall, and that our olde approued translation may not alwaies be examined by the Greeke that now is, which the Protestants onely follow: but that it is to be presupposed, when our old Latine text differeth plainely from the Greeke, that in olde time either all or the more approued Greeke reading was otherwise, and that often the said Greeke was corrupted then or since by Heretikes or otherwise. For of the Greekes, S. Irenæus Lib. 3. cap. 18: among the Latine fathers S. Augustine tract. 6. in fine, S. Leo ep. 10. cap. 5. and Venerable Bede did read as we doe. and this reading maketh more against the saide Heretikes, then that which the common Greeke wowe hath, to wit, euerie spirit that confesseth not Christ to haue come in the flesh, is not of God. which is also in effect said before ver. 2. And that therefore it was corrupted and altered by Heretikes, see the wordes of Socrates also a Greeke writer, very agreeable to this purpose. Nestorius (saith he) being eloquent by nature, which is often in Heretikes, accounted him selfe therefore learned, and disdained to studie the olde interpreters, counting him selfe better then them all: being ignorant that in S. Iohns Catholike epistle the olde (Greeke) copies had, EVERY ONE THAT DISSOLVETH IESV, IS NOT OF GOD. So saith hee, adding moreouer that such as would Many old heretikes that dissolued Christ. The Greeke text corrupted by old heretikes. Li. 7. c. 33.

ſeparate the diuinitie from the diſpenſation of Chriſtes humanitie, tooke out of the olde copies this ſenſe. for which the olde expoſitours noted that theſe which would looſe IESVS, had corrupted this Epiſtle. See alſo the Tripartite lib. 12. cap. 4.

FVLKE. 3 It cannot be proued by this place, that the Greeke text which here differeth from the Latine, is corrupted. And although Socrates report that Neſtorius did thus corrupt it, yet his report is proued falſe, becauſe Cyprian, who was almoſt two hundred yeeres before Neſtorius, did reade as the Greeke copies are now, as I haue ſhewed in anſwere to your Preface Sect. 36. So did Didymus Alexand. in his comment vpon this text. How Irenæus did reade it is not certaine, becauſe his interpretour being of latter time doth follow for the moſt part the vulgar Latine text in his allegations of the Scripture: S. Auguſtine readeth according to the Greeke and the Latin alſo. Didymus alſo interpreteth after both: for Leo and Bede that were of later times, it is not ſo materiall if they follow the vulgar Latine, the ſenſe whereof is contayned in the Greeke. The Greeke text not corrupted.

RHEM. 4 6 In this we know.) This is the moſt ſure and generall marke to know the true ſpirits and prophets from the falſe: that thoſe which be of God, will heare and obey their Apoſtles and lawful paſtors ſucceeding the Apoſtles, and ſubmit themſelues to the Church of God: the other, that be not of God, will not heare either Apoſtle, paſtor, or Church, but be their owne iudges. A ſure marke of true or falſe teachers.

FVLKE. 4 They ſucceed not the Apoſtles that teach not their doctrine, but they are the true Prophets which are able to iuſtifie all that they teach by the writings of the Apoſtles, did teach the ſame doctrine that the Apoſtles taught. Contrariwiſe, they heare not the Apoſtles, whoſe doctrine agreeth not with the Scripture of the Apoſtles. And by this marke wee knowe vndoubtedly, that the Papiſtes are ſpirites of errour and not of trueth. Succeſſion, RHEM. 5 17 That we may haue confidence.) Confidence called in Latine Fiducia, is neither all one with faith, nor a perſuaſion infallible that maketh a man no leſſe ſecure and certaine of his ſaluation, then of the things that we are bound to beleeue, as the Proteſtants falſely teach: but it is onely a hope well corroborated, confirmed, and ſtrengthened vpon the promiſes and grace of God, and the parties merites. And the wordes both following and going before, proue alſo euidently againſt the Proteſtants, that our confidence and hope in the day of iudgement dependeth not onely vpon our apprehenſion of Chriſtes merites by faith, or vpon his grace and mercie, but alſo vpon our conformitie to Chriſt in this life, in charitie and good workes. And that is the doctrine of S. Peter when he ſaid, Labour, that by good workes you may make ſure your vocation and election. and S. Pauls meaning, when he ſaid, I haue fought a good fight, there is laid vp for me a crowne of iuſtice, which our Lord will render to me in that day, a iuſt iudge. Againſt the Proteſtants. ſpeciall faith and preſumptuous ſecuritie of ſaluation. 2. Pet. 1. 10. 2. Tim. 4. 7.

FVLKE. 5 Confidence whereof the Apoſtle here ſpeaketh, is a neceſſarie effect of iuſtifying faith, whereof the Apoſtle ſaith: being iuſtified by faith, we haue peace with God by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, by whom we haue acceſſe through faith &c. Rom. 5. 1. For want of which iuſtifying faith and confidence, the deuils, although they beleeue, yet they do tremble Iac. 2. And by this we ought to be as certaine of our ſaluation, as of any other thing that God hath promiſed, or which we are bound to beleeue. Seeing the ſame truth is in the performance of Gods promiſes, concerning our ſaluation, which is in the report of things done by God or Chriſt toward our ſaluation. Therefore to doubt thereof in reſpect of Gods truth, is blaſphemous againſt the immutabilitie of his truth. And therefore though the godly be aſſaulted of their infirmitie and of Satans temptation, to doubt often times of their ſaluation, yet they muſt oppoſe the certaintie of Gods trueth againſt ſuch aſſaults, and holding faſt the promiſes of God, aſſure themſelues of the effect of them. But with you it is onely an hope, whereby you meane an vncertaine hope that may be deceiued, and confound him that ſo hopeth. Confidence and certaintie of ſaluation.

This may well be the hope of the Papiſtes, but the hope of Chriſtians is moſt certaine, and confoundeth not, becauſe the loue of God is powred foorth into our hearts by his ſprite which he hath giuen vs Rom. 5. 5. but to examine the other part of your definition, you ſay it is well corroborated, confirmed, and ſtrengthened, vpon the promiſes and grace of God, and the parties merits. We ſee now what maketh the vnſufficiencie, what maketh the vncertaintie, not the promiſe or grace of God: (for the gifts of God are without repentance) but the parties merites, according to which the promiſe and grace of God (with you) is effectuall. And ſo you denie the promiſes of God to be founded in his meere grace, and his grace alſo you denie to be grace, ſeeing it is not effectuall but by merite of workes: for grace is no grace (ſaith the Apoſtle) if it be of workes Rom. 11. 6. So are you no leſſe enemies of the grace of God, then the Pelagians. And here we ſee what a poyſon of true faith mens merites are, that though a mans hope be wel corroborated, confirmed, ſtrengthened, not vpon them onely, but vpon them and vpon Gods promiſes and grace, yet it is but onely an hope, and no certaintie or aſſurance of ſaluation. But the wordes both following and going before, proue euidently againſt the Proteſtants, that our confidence and hope in the day of iudgement, dependeth not onely vpon apprehenſion of Chriſtes merites by faith, or vpon his grace and mercie, but alſo vpon our conformitie to Chriſt in this life, in charitie and good workes. Verely if it depend not onely vpon Chriſts grace, but vpon our workes, it dependeth not at all vpon his grace: If of grace (ſaith the Apoſtle) it is not at all of workes: for els grace is become no grace, if of works, it is not at all of grace, for els worke ſhould be no worke, Rom. 11. 6. Wherefore except we will exclude the grace of Chriſt altogether, we muſt holde that our confidence and hope dependeth onely vpon his grace and mercie. My whole hope (ſaith S. Auguſtine) is nothing els but by exceeding great mercie. Conf. li. 10. c. 29. What ſaith the Apoſtle then in this place againſt the Proteſtants? He ſaith that by this, charitie is perfected in vs, that as he is, ſuch ſhould we be in the world, that we may haue confidence in the day of iudgement: becauſe charitie is an argument of faith, by which we conclude that we haue true faith, as we may conclude the cauſe by the neceſſarie effectes thereof. Not that this imperfect charitie which we haue in this life, is a cauſe of this ſecuritie or confidence, but an argument of faith, by which we haue confidence in the meere grace and mercie of God, exhibited to vs in Chriſt, and not in the merite of our vnperfect charitie. And ſo meaneth S. Peter, that we ſhould make ſure our election and vocation by good workes, that is, confirme our faith of Gods election by the effects of faith, and ſo make it ſure to our ſelues and our owne knowledge, which is moſt certaine of it ſelfe, and is of meere grace and not of workes, as the Apoſtle ſaid Rom 11. 6.

Neither doth S. Paul truſt in the merite of his workes, to receiue a crowne of glorie, but in the certaintie of Gods promiſe, which he is moſt iuſt to performe, as he is moſt gracious in promiſing. Our conformitie therefore with Chriſt in this life in charitie and good workes, though farre from compariſon in equalitie or perfection of Iuſtice, is a thing neceſſarily adioyned to our ſaluation, but no cauſe thereof, being a fruite of the ſpirite of adoption, which is giuen vs according to Gods election and predeſtination, as S. Paul teſtifieth ſaying: Whom he hath foreknowen he hath predeſtinated to be conformable to the image of his ſonne Rom. 8. 29. And thoſe are the children of God, which haue not receiued the ſpirit of bondage to feare, but the ſpirite of adoption, to crie boldly, Abba, Father, and to be aſſured of the heauenly inheritance with Chriſt, with whom they are conformable formable in suffering, that they may be partakers with him in glorie Rom. 8.15. Therefore the Apostle in the 13,14. and 15. verses before, sheweth the cause whereupon this confidence is grounded: namely, the spirite of adoption and faith in the merites of Christ in this verse, and that which followeth, he sheweth the effectes of the same spirit and faith, by which we may know that we haue the spirit and true faith, and so haue confidence in the day of iudgement.

RHEM. 6 18 Feare is not in charitie.) The Heretikes very falsely vnderstand this place so, that Christian godly men ought to haue no doubt, mistrust, or feare of hell and damnation. Which is most euidently against the Scriptures, commending euery where vnto vs the awe and feare of God and his iudgements. Feare him (*saith our Sauiour Math.*10. that can cast body and soule into hel. *And Psal.*118, Pearse my flesh with thy feare. Which feare of Gods iudgements caused S. Paul and all good men to chastice their bodies, lest they should be reprobate and damned. And the wise man for this cause affirmeth him to be happie, that is euer fearefull. And holy Iob saith, I feared all my workes. And the Apostle, With feare and trembling worke your saluation. Which kinde of feare is euen in the iustest men and most full of charitie, consisting well with the same vertue, and is called Filialis timor, because it is such as the good childe ought to haue towarde his father.

The feare of God in iust men, consisteth with charitie.

1. Cor. 9. Pro. 28. Iob 6. 9. Phil. 2.

But there is a kinde of feare which standeth not with charitie, and is cleane against hope also, that which bringeth such perplexitie and anxietie of conscience, that it induceth a man to mistrust or despaire of Gods mercies. That seruile feare also which maketh a man often to leaue sinning and to do the externall workes of iustice, not for any loue or delight he hath in God or his lawes, but only for feare of damnation, though it be not ill in it selfe, but very profitable, as that which helpeth toward the loue of God, yet it standeth not with charitie neither, but is daily more and more lessened, and at length quite driuen out by charitie. Of these kindes of feares then the Apostle speaketh, and (as some expound) of the feare of men also, of which our Sauiour saith, Feare not them that kill the body.

What feare agreeth not with charitie.

Seruile feare is not ill.

Mat. 10.

FVLKE. 6 The very context doth shew, that feare is contrarie to confidence in the day of iudgement, whereof he speaketh in the former verse. And so doth S. Augustine vnderstand it, saying: Now of the same confidence, see what he saith: Whereby is charitie vnderstoode to be perfect? feare is not in charitie: What shall we then say of him which hath begonne to feare the day of indgement? If charitie were perfect in him, he should not feare. Neuertheless, he sheweth this feare to be first necessarie, as to make way for charitie to enter, as a bristle or needle doeth for a threed, which threed being entred, driueth out the bristle. He acknowledgeth also the continual feare and reuerence of God, which is neuer separated from Gods children, and very well agreeth with charitie, whereunto pertaine these textes of Scripture, which without cause you heape vp against vs, as though we denied that feare to be necessarie for all Gods children, whereas we speake of that feare which bringeth perplexitie and anxietie of conscience, which is contrary to confidence in the day of iudgement. For he that is not assured that his sinnes are forgiuen by the merits of Iesus Christ, can haue no quietnes of conscience, or confidence in the day of iudgement. But he that by Gods spirit, through a liuely faith (which by vnfained charitie he knoweth that he hath) is assured of the remission of his sinnes by the merits of Christes death, and that the righteousnes of Christ is giuen to him by God, whereby he is iustified before God: he trembleth not at the day of iudgement, in which he is sure he cannot be condemned, but loueth and desireth the comming of Christ vnto iudgement. Wherein he is certaine to receiue the crowne of eternall glory due to the iustice of Christ, and freely giuen to him by God, whom as an obedient childe he loueth and his brethren, as he hath commanded. Contrariwise, he that trembleth at the iudgement of Christ as the deuils doe, neither loueth God vnfainedly, whom he feareth as the deuils feare him, and not as his children feare him, nor hath a true and liuely faith, of which commeth true and perfect loue which casteth out feare, that hath torment in it. And here is to be marked, that the Apostle in this and such like places by perfect charitie meaneth not that which hath no defect, but that which is vnfained and accomplished in the effects of loue, and is like to the loue wherewith God loueth vs. Which hath shewed it selfe in deede, by giuing his Sonne to die for vs, so that the comparison (as Augustine often sheweth vpon the like textes) is not in quantitie or equalitie, but in similitude and qualitie onely. For els no charitie can be perfect, no not the charitie of Angels, as S. Augustine sheweth, *in Ioan. Tr.*4.

Popish feare.

CHAP. V.

They that loue God, must loue his naturall sonne IESVS, and his sonnes by adoption, and keepe his commaundements, which to the regenerate are light. 4 But not, vnlesse they continue in the Catholike faith, namely of this article, that IESVS is the sonne of God, and therefore able to giue vs life euerlasting, 14 and all our petitions, 16 and our praiers for all our brethren that sinne not vnto death, dying in their mortall sinnes by impenitence. Last of al, he warneth them not to communicate with Idols.

WHosoeuer beleeueth that IESVS is Christ, is borne of God. And euery one that loueth him which begate: loueth him also which was borne of him.

2 In this we know that we loue the children of God: when as we loue God, and keepe his commaundements.

3 For this is the charitie of God, that we keepe his commaundements: * and ‖ his commaundements are not heauy.

Math. 11. 30.

The Epistle vpon Dominca in albis or Low Sunday.

4 Because al that is borne of God, ouercommeth the world. and this is the victory which ouercommeth the world, our faith.

1. Cor. 15, 57.

5 Who is he * that ouercommeth the world, but he that beleeueth that IESVS is the sonne of God?

WHosoeuer beleeueth that IESVS is Christ, is borne of God: and euery one that loueth him which begate, loueth him also which is begotten of him.

2 By this we know that we loue the children of God, when we loue God, and keepe his commaundements.*

Matt. 12. 37.

*3 For this is the loue of God, that we keepe his commaundements: and * his commaundements are not grieuous.*

1. Cor. 15. 51.

4 For all that is borne of God, ouercommeth the world: and this is the victorie that hath ouercome the world, euen our faith.

5 Who is that ouercommeth the worlde, but he which beleeueth that Iesus is the Sonne of God?

6 This is hee that came by water and bloud IESVS Christ: not in water onely, but in water and bloud. And it is the spirit which testifieth, that Christ is the truth.

7 For there be ‖ three which giue testimonie in heauen, the Father, the Word, and the holy Ghost. and these three be one.

8 And there be three which giue testimonie in earth: the spirit, water, and bloud. ‖ and these three be one.

9 If we receiue the testimonie of men, the testimony of God is greater. because this is the testimonie of God which is greater, that he hath testified of his Sonne.

1o.3,36. 10 * He that beleeueth in the Sonne of God, hath the testimonie of God in him self. ☞ He that beleeueth not the Sonne, maketh him a liar: because he beleeueth not in the testimonie which God hath testified of his Sonne.

11 And this is the testimony, that God hath giuen vs life euerlasting. And this life is in his Sonne.

RHEM. 1 3 His commandements are not heauie. How can the Protestants say that Gods commandements can not possibly be fulfilled or kept in this life, seeing the Apostle saith, they be not heauie: and Christ saith, his yoke is sweete, and his burden light? *See for the full vnderstanding of this place. FVLKE. 1 Seeing our English word grieuous commeth of the latin word graue, which is not only weightie, but also troublesome, it better answereth both the Greeke & Latine, then the word heauie, which is properly that which is of great weight. And the same word being both in the Greeke and Latine 2. Cor. 10.7.18. You your selues tran- Cauilling.

ſtate ſore, his Epiſtles are ſore and vehement, but in effect there is no great difference. We acknowledge that Gods Commaundements are not heauie to him that is borne of God, which ouercommeth the worlde by faith. Otherwiſe the yoke of the Law, is ſuch a burden (as the Apoſtle confeſſeth) as neither we nor our fathers were able to beare, but beleeue to be ſaued by the grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Actes 15.10.11. Who hauing taken away the curſe of the Law, and ſatisfied for our tranſgreſſions of the Law, hath alſo giuen vs grace to loue the Lawe and commaundements of God, and in ſome weake meaſure to obſerue them. So that the curſe being taken away, our tranſgreſſions anſwered in Chriſt, and our harts framed by his grace to loue his commandements, and ſome ſtrength giuen vs to keepe them, they are not heauie, they are not burdenous or grieuous, and the yoke of Chriſt is ſweete, and his burden light vnto vs. Who chargeth vs not with the vntollerable burden of the Law, but eaſeth and refreſheth all them that labour and are heauie loden with it. And therefore the Proteſtants ſtill affirme, that in ſuch perfection as the iuſtice of God requireth, Gods commaundements cannot poſſibly be fulfilled in this life by any man, except our Sauiour Chriſt. Yet to him whoſe ſinnes are pardoned by his grace, and he is borne againe by his ſpirit, his Commandements are not burdenous. Not becauſe they can be perfectly fulfilled, but becauſe ſtrength is giuen to keepe them in part, and the tranſgreſſions of frailtie, are pardoned through Chriſt. S. Auguſtine de perfect. iuſtit. whither you ſend vs for the vnderſtanding of this text ſaith: For none other cauſe the Scripture affirmeth that Gods commaundements are not heauie, but that the ſoule which feeleth them to be heauie, may vnderſtand that it hath not yet receiued ſtrength, to which the Lords precepts are ſuch as they are commended, namely light and ſweete, and that he might pray with groning of his will, that he may obtaine the gift that maketh them eaſie. Againe, they are commended not to be heauie, that to whom they are heauie, he may vnderſtand that he hath not yet receiued the gift by which they may not be heauy, & that he ſhould not thinke he doth fulfill them, when he doth them ſo that they be heauie. For God loueth a cheerefull giuer, and yet when he feeleth them to be heauie, he may not be broken in diſpairing. But be compelled to ſeeke, to aske, to knocke. Therefore let vs heare in theſe teſtimonies which he hath ſet downe afterward, God commending his precepts not to be heauie, that the cõmandements of God (ſaith Cæleſtius the Pelagian Heretike) are not onely not impoſſible, but alſo not heauie or burthenous. Then follow thoſe textes in order which the Papiſts abuſe againſt vs, as their fathers the Pelagians did againſt S. Auguſtine, among which this text is one. To which S. Auguſtine thus anſwereth: *If they did vnderſtand that in Deuteronomie (as the Apoſtle Paul alleadgeth it) that with the hart men beleeue to iuſtice, with the mouth confeſſion is made to ſaluation: becauſe the whole haue no neede of the Phiſition but the ſicke, they ſhould be admoniſhed by this teſtimonie of the Apoſtle Iohn, which for this purpoſe he hath placed laſt. This is the charitie of God, &c. that to the loue of God the Commaundement is not heauie, which is not powred foorth into our harts but by the holy Ghoſt, not to the will of man by giuing to which more then they ought, they are ignorant of the iuſtice of God, which loue yet ſhall then be perfected, when all painefull feare is departed. RHEM. 3 16 A ſinne to death.) A ſinne to death is another thing then a mortall ſinne. for it is that mortall ſinne only, whereof a man is neuer penitent before his death, or in which he continueth till death, and dieth in it. I affirme (ſaith S. Auguſtine de correp. & grat. c. 12.) that a ſinne to death is to leaue faith working by charitie euen til death. So likewiſe in the words before, a ſinne not to death, is not that which we call a veniall ſinne, but any that a man committeth and continueth not therein till death.

What is a ſinne to death.

FVLKE. 3 The Apoſtle meaneth of ſin againſt the holy Ghoſt, for which no man ought to pray, becauſe Chriſt hath teſtified that it is irremiſſible. And although final impenitencie be alſo a ſin to death & foloweth the other, yet the Apoſtle ſpeaketh not thereof in this place, but of ſuch a ſin as we ſee a man commit in this life. Beda therefore thus writeth vpon this text: Here ariſeth a great queſtion, becauſe S. Iohn ſheweth plainly, that there are certaine brethren for whom we are not cõmanded to pray, whereas our Lord cõmandeth vs to pray euen for our perſecuters; which queſtion cannot otherwiſe be anſwered, except we cõfeſſe that there are ſome ſinnes in the brethren, which are more grieuous then the perſecution of enemies. Therefore the ſin of a brother to death, is when after the acknowledging of God, which is giuen him by the grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, a man doth oppugne or fight againſt the brotherhood, & is ſtirred and toſſed by the firebrands of enuie, againſt the grace it ſelfe, wherby he is reconciled to God. A ſin not vnto death is, if any man hath not enſtranged his loue frõ his brother, but by ſome infirmitie of mind hath not ſhewed the offices due to the brotherhood. Wherefore our Lord ſaid vpon the Croſſe, Father forgiue thẽ, becauſe they know not what they do. For hauing not been made partakers of the grace of the holy Ghoſt, they had not yet entred into the fellowſhip of the holy brotherhod. And bleſſed Stephen prayeth for them by whõ he was ſtoned, Becauſe they had not yet beleeued Chriſt, neither did they yet fight againſt the common grace. But the Apoſtle Paul for this cauſe I beleeue, prayeth not for Alexander, becauſe he had been a brother and had ſinned to death, that is by the firebrands of enuie, he had fought againſt the brotherhood. But for them which had not broken of their loue, but fainted through feare, he prayeth that it may be forgiuen thẽ. For ſo he ſaith: Alexander the Copperſmith hath done me much euill, the Lord reward him according to his works. Whom thou alſo auoide, for he hath greatly reſiſted our ſayings. Afterward he addeth them for whom he prayeth, ſaying thus: In my firſt defence no man ſtoode with me, but all forſooke me, let it not be imputed to them. Sinne vnto death alſo, may be taken for ſinne continuing to death, for which he forbiddeth any man to aske. For that ſinne which is not corrected in this life, the pardon thereof is in vaine asked after death. But if we looke diligently to thoſe words that follow, the former ſenſe ſeemeth to agree more to the tenor of this text. And this former ſenſe in the very ſame words is giuen by S. Auguſtine De ſermone Domini in monte, lib. 1. prope finem: Wherefore that he ſaith, De corrept. & gra. c. 12. is thus to be vnderſtoode, that to forſake faith which worketh by loue, is a ſinne vnto death: for he ſaith in the ſame place, that ſeeing that ſinne is not expreſſed, many and diuers things may be thought of it. S. Hierom comm. in 14. Hierom ſaith. *Stultum eſt pro eo orare qui peccauerit ad mortem dicente Ioanne: Eſt peccatum ad mortem non pro illo dico vt roget quis. Omnis iniquitas peccatum eſt, & eſt peccatum non ad mortem. Ieiunia & preces, & victime & holocauſta tunc proficiunt quando recedimus à vitijs, & flemus antiqua peccata. RHEM. 4 16 For that I say not.) If the sinne to death whereof he speaketh, be the sinne wherein a man dieth without repentance, according to S. Augustines words before rehearsed: then the prayer which he speaketh of, must needes be prayer for the dead. because he speaketh of praying, or not praying, for them that died in deadly sinne, exhorting vs to pray, and encouraging vs to doe it with confidence to be heard, if we pray for them that departed this life not in deadly sinne: and contrariwise in maner dissuading and discouraging vs from praying for such as continued in wickednes euen to their liues end. And S. Augustine setteth downe the Churches practise agreeable to the Apostles meaning, li.21.c.24. de Ciuit. Dei. If there be any (saith he) that persist till death in impenitence of hart, doth the Church now pray for them, that is, for the soules of them that so are departed? So saith he. And this is the cause that Concilium Bracharense primum cap.34. forbiddeth to pray for such as die in desperation, or kill them selues: and the reason, why the Church forbeareth to pray for Heretikes that die in their heresie, or maintaine heresie vnto death and by their death.

Prayer for the dead.

Some of the dead may not be prayed for.

And that the place is most properly or onely meant of praying for the departed, this conuinceth, that neither the Church nor any man is dehorted here from praying for any sinner yet liuing, nor for the remission of any sinne in this life: all sinnes (of what sort soeuer) being pardonable, so long as the committers of them be in case and state to repent: as they be, so long as they be in this world. And we see that the Church prayeth, and is often heard, for Heretikes, Iewes, Turkes, Apostats, and what other infidels or ill men soeuer, during their liues. And it is great blasphemie that the Caluinistes vtter vpon this place: to wit, that Apostasie and certaine other sinnes of the reprobate, can not be forgiuen at all in this life. Which they hold, onely to auoide the sequele of praying for the dead vpon these words of S. John, besides that they must take vpon them presumptuously, to know and discerne of Gods secretes, who be reprobate, and who be not, and according to that, pray for some, and not for other some. all which is most wicked and absurd presumption.

It is proued that the Apostle speaketh of praying for the dead. The caluinists blasphemie, to auoid this sense of the Apostle.

As for their allegation, that S. Ieremie the Prophet was forbidden to pray for the Iewes, and warned that he should not be heard, Cap 7.11.14: there is great difference, first, he had a reuelation by the words of God, that they would continue in their wickednes, as we haue not of any certaine person, whereof S. Iohn here speaketh. secondly, Ieremie was not forbidden to pray for the remission of their sinnes, nor had deniall to be heard therein for any mans particular case, whereof the Apostle here speaketh: but he was tolde that they should not escape the temporall punishment and affliction which he had designed for them, and that he would not heare him therein.

FVLKE. 4 By that which is said before in the last Section, it may appeare vpon how weake a foundation, prayer for the dead is grounded. The sinne whereof S. Iohn speaketh, is not that onely nor specially which S. Augustine saith to be a sinne vnto death, but that which Christ saith to be the sinne against the holy Ghost, which shall neuer be forgiuen, such as was the sinne of Iudas, of the Pharisees, and of Alexander the Coppersmith. And yet it is a sorie Argument that should be drawen of this place (if it were so to be vnderstood) Some of the dead may not be prayed for, as they that die without repentance, Ergo al the rest may be praied for. Which is as good as this, Alexander the Coppersmith might not be prayed for after his death, Ergo Iudas and the Pharisees might be prayed for after their death: which might not be prayed for when they were aliue. But that the text cannot be vnderstoode of praying for the dead, it is manifest by the very wordes. For he saith not, If any man shall see that his brother hath sinned not to death: but if any shall see his brother sinning, which prooueth that his brother is aliue, for he sinneth not when he is dead, neither can a man see him sinning when he is dead. So the text is. He shall giue life to them that doe sinne not vnto death, therefore the plaine wordes of the text are, that the man sinneth to death, or sinneth not to death, which is not to be prayed for, or which is to be prayed for. But who so not onely sinneth, but also is seene to sinne or sinning, whether to death or not to death, is aliue and not dead, therefore prayer is to be made by this text, for him that is aliue, and not for him that is dead. Now let vs see how you couince that this place is most properly or onely, meant of praying for the dead. Because (say you) neither the Church nor any man is dehorted here from praying for any sinner yet liuing, nor for the remission of any sinne in this life. A proper conuiction and a learned Argument, when that is taken for a reason, which is the whole matter in question. But how prooue you that no man is dehorted from praying for any sinner yet liuing? You answere, All sinnes are pardonable, so long as the committers be aliue, for so long they are in case to repent. But our Sauiour Christ saith, That he that sinneth against the holy Ghost, and the sinne against the holy Ghost shal not be pardoned in this world, nor in the world to come. And the Apostle saith, It is impossible for them that fall away after they haue beene lightened, &c, to be renued by repentance. Matth.12.31. Hebr.6.4. &c. Therefore that you say is false.

Prayer for the dead.

Sinne against the holy Ghost.

You adde further, That the Church prayeth and is often heard for Heretikes, Iewes, Turkes, Apostats, and other wicked whatsoeuer during their liues. I answere, the true Church prayeth not for them that sinne against the holy Ghost, or be such Apostates of whom the Apostle speaketh, by any generall entendment of her prayers, nor for any speciall person knowen to be such, and if she should pray for them, she should not be heard to obtaine pardon for them, which cannot and will not repent. But it is a great blasphemie to say, (say you) that Apostasie, and certaine other sinnes of the reprobate, can not be forgiuen at all in this life. If it be a blasphemie to say that Christ himselfe and his Apostles said, What is it to speake contradictorie to them as you doe? The sinne of blasphemie against the holy Ghost shall neuer be forgiuen saith Christ, it shall sometimes say you. It is impossible for such to be renued by repentance (saith the Apostle,) it is not impossible for any say you. And if we holde this onely to auoide the sequele of praying for the dead vpon these wordes, Why did not S. Paul pray for Alexander the Coppersmith, but against him? Why doe Augustine and Bede interprete the text of them, that of enuie and malice oppugne the grace of God and the brotherhood? Why doeth Oecumenius expound it of them that shew no conuersion, though they be liuing? Yea of them that be mindefull of iniuries, Besides this (you say) we must take vpon vs presumptuously to know and discerne of Gods secretes, who be reprobate and who not. But it is no presumption in the intention of our prayers to except al the reprobate, as our Sauiour Christ doeth expresly, 17.9. And if any doe manifestly shew himselfe to be such an one, by blaspheming the holy Ghost, or by wilfull and malitious obstinacie, it is no presumption to cease praying for him, but it is lawfull to pray God to confound them, as Dauid doth the malitious enemies of Christ, Psalme 109. As S. Paul prayeth against Alexander, 2. Timoth 4.14. And the Church prayed against Iulian the Apostata, Theodoret. Hist. lib.4.cap.9.& 17. & 19. By which it may appeare how vainely you cauill about Ieremie, who was forbidden to pray for the people: for as their obstinacie was reueiled to Ieremie, so the wickednesse of some sheweth it selfe openly, of whom S Iohn speaketh that they sinne vnto death. That he was not forbidden to pray for remission of their sinnes, but for release of their punishment, it is a vaine distinction: for if they would or could haue repented of their ſinnes, the Prophets might aſſure them, that they ſhould eſcape the puniſhment, and ſo he doth aſſure them. cap. 26.13. I will conclude therefore with the ſaying of S. Auguſtine in the place before mentioned. De ſerm: Dom. in monte. lib. 1. The difference of ſinnes, diſtinguiſheth Iudas betraying, from Peter denying: not that we muſt not pardon him that repenteth, leſt we come againſt that ſaying of our Lord, wherein he commandeth that we muſt alwaies pardon our brother, deſiring that his brother would forgiue him: but becauſe there is ſo great a filthineſſe of that fault, that he cannot ſubmit himſelfe to the humilitie of entreating, although he be compelled of an euill conſcience, both to acknowledge his ſinne, and alſo to vtter it. For when Iudas had ſaid, I haue ſinned, in that I haue betrayed innocent bloud, he ran ſooner of deſperation to the rope, then of humilitie to aske pardon. Wherefore it is much to be regarded, to what kinde of repentance, God giueth pardon. For many much ſooner doe confeſſe that they haue ſinned, & are ſo angry with themſelues, that they would vehemently that they had not ſinned: but yet they lay not downe their life, to make their hart humble and obedient and to deſire pardon: which affection of the minde, it is to be beleeued, that they haue already of their condemnation, for the greatneſſe of their ſinne. And this peraduenture is to ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt, that is after grace of the holy Ghoſt receiued, to oppugne the brotherly charitie, by malice and enuy, which ſinne our Lord ſayeth, is not to be forgiuen in this world nor in the world to come.

RHEM. 5 21 From idoles.) It is ſo knowen a treacherie of Heretikes to tranſlate idola *images (as here and in a number of places ſpecially of the Engliſh Bible printed the yeere 1562.) that we needs not much to ſtand vpon it. The antiquity of holy images.

The vſe and fruite of holy images.

FVLKE 5 It is well knowen, to them that haue but meane knowledge in the greeke tongue, that the word which the apoſtle vſeth, when the apoſtle did write, was taken for the ſame that we call an image, and here to all the Dictionaries olde and new beare witneſſe. Therfore it was no corruption to tranſlate in this place, and much leſſe in many other places of the ſcripture, out of the hebrew tongue, Images or Idols indifferently: as I haue ſhewed at large in my defence of our tranſlations againſt Greg. Martyn. cap. 3. throughout. Therefore ſayth Tertullian vpon this text: little children (ſayth Iohn) keepe your ſelues from idols not now from idolatrie, that is as it were from the ſeruice, but from the idoles that is from the very image of them. Ab ipſa effigie eorum. Origen in Exod. H. 8. non ſolum idolum fieri vetat, ſed & ſimilitudinem omnium, &c. And ſeeing you worſhip your popiſh images, as groſſely as the Gentiles worſhipped their images, that which is ſpoken againſt heathenish idols and idolatry, is rightly applied againſt popiſh idoles and idolatrie. And therefore we regarde not the curſes, of that blaſphemous and idolatrous councell of Nice the ſecond, but oppoſe againſt it, and all the defenders, of it, the curſes of God himſelfe. Deut. 27.15. Curſed be hee whoſoeuer ſhall make a carued image. &c. and pſ. 97.7. Confounded be all they that worſhip grauen images.

Ad hoc neceſſarium eſt vocabuli interpretatio εἶδος Græce formam ſonat ab eo per diminutionem εἰδωλον deductum aquè apud vos formulam fecit. Igitur omnis forma vel formula idolum ſe dici expoſcit. Omnia igitur colit humanus error preter ipſum omnium Conditorem. Eorum imagines idola, imaginum conſecratio Idolatria. De Idolatria.

Where you ſay in our later tranſlations, we haue corrected our vnhoneſt dealing, it is falſe: for we haue freely vſed the one worde or the other, as there is no difference of them in thoſe places. And although the vſe of our Engliſh ſpeach, hath made the name of Iodole odious, and of image indifferent: yet neither the greeke worde word εἴδωλον nor the Latine word Simulachrum, which your vulgar latine interpreter vseth in this place, hath any such odious signification, as the word idole hath in the English. For Lactantius calleth men Viua Dei simulachra, the liuing images of God. De vero Dei cultu. lib. 6. c. 13. And de origin. err. lib. 2. c. 2. he hath a whole chapter, de Simulachris & vero Dei simulachro, of images and of the true image of God. And Arnobius or Minutius Felix cont. gent. lib. 8. saith, Deformis ipse simulachrum, Man himselfe is the image of God. S. Ambrose also in 1. Cor. 10. simulachrum verè nihil est quia imago videtur rei mortuæ. A similitude nothing in deede, because it seemeth to be an image of a dead thing. In pl. 45 he saith, the Prophet did not compare God, imaginibus terrenis & scrupeis, to images or similitudes made of earth or stone. S. Augustine vseth the name of image and simulachrum, for all one, Cont. Faust. lib. 22. c. 17. Cum ex desiderio mortuorum constituerentur imagines, vnde simulachrorum vsus exortus est, When for desire or loue of the dead images were made whereof the vse of simalachres or Images did arise. And octogint. quæst. Q. 78 which is intituled De simulachrorum pulcritudine, of the beautie of Images he ascribeth to God, the cunning by the which they are made beautifull. Isidorus originum lib. 8 saith, Simulachra finxerunt, vt haberent aliquid ex imaginum contemplatione &c. They made the counterfects or images of men, that they might haue some comfort in beholding their images. By these and many other testimonies of Latine writers, it is manifest, that Simulachrum is not taken alwaies in the euill part, but signifieth an image, which is indifferent, to an image lawfull and vnlawfull. Therefore you professing to translate the Latin, and not the Greeke, to colour your shamefull worshipping of idoles, doe bewray your vnhoneſt dealing, in rendring for the word Simulachris, idols, where you should haue said Images, as some of our translations haue.

Now for hauing the images of holy things in Churches you say God himselfe doth warrant vs, who commaunded the Iewes to make the Cherubines. So that by that commandement be like, he abrogated the second commaundement, in which he forbade all making and worshipping of images. But we must not so thinke: for that second commandement, is the eternall law of God, wherein he forbiddeth vs to make to our selues, any grauen image, yet denieth not, but he may command what images he thinketh good himselfe for the vse of religion. By the same reason you may say, and the olde Idolaters defended their horrible murther and Idolatrie. That God doth warrant vs to kill our children and to offer them in sacrifice, because he commanded Abraham so to doe: or God warranteth euery priuate man to kill an offender, because he commandeth the magistrate to put to death heinous offenders, but of this argument see more. In Heb. cap. 9. sect. 4. But S. Hierom addeth great force to this argumẽt saying that in respect of those sacred images partly, they did so great reuerence to the holy place, called sancta sanctorum. Paula and Eustochium in deede say, that the Iewes did in times past, reuerence the Holy of holies, because there were the Cherubines, and the propitiatorie, and the arke of the testament, Manna, the rodde of Aaron, and the golden altar. The meaning is, they had great estimation of that place, because there were so many holy mysteries of their religion. Not that they worshipped the place, in respect of the images which they neuer saw, but because all those things, were Sacraments of Gods presence, and monuments of his great works and mercie towards them.

But if they were commanded to make, these resemblances according to such forme, as was prescribed by God, it followeth not, that we which are forbidden to make images in any vse of religion, are warranted contrarie to that generall commaundement to make any images, by that speciall precept which pertained onely to them and that time, and for those images onely not to be worshipped, nor to be seene of any, but onely of the high Priest, once in the yeere. As for the second Councell of Nice, that was gathered by an Idolatresse and wicked woman, to ouerthrowe the godly councels of Constantinople and Ephesus, by the which the hauing in Churches, and worshipping of Images was condemned: can be no warrant for so foule an abuse so expressely contrarie to the manifest word of God. And that false councell was condemned in the West, by a councell held at Frankford, as Carolus Magnus in his booke against images, doth testifie. The same witnesseth Ado Viennensis in Anno. 727. toward the end. The false synod which the Greekes call the seuenth, was there also, (meaning at Frankford) vtterly abbrogated. The same is testified by other auncient writers. For the story reported by Eusebius see Matth. 8. section the ninth. For the images of Peter and Paul mentioned in Saint Augustine, the trueth is, they were neither in the Churches, nor set vp to be worshipped, but painted vpon walles in diuers places of Rome, wherevpon certaine heathen Sorcerers feined that bookes were made of magike by Christ, and deliuered to Peter and Paul. But so (saith Saint Augustine) they were worthie to be deceiued, which sought Christ and his Apostles, not in holy Scriptures, but in painting walles, and no maruaile if they being such fayners were deceiued by painters. De consens. Euang. lib. 1. c. 10. You see therefore how S. Augustine accompted of such images in his time.

But in Gregories time, which was about two hundreth yeeres after, they were gotten into the Church to be lay mens bookes, which the Scriptures call the doctrine of lyes, as S. Augustine said they were to those sorcerers. And then the people began to worship them, for which cause Serenus Bishop of Massilia in Fraunce, brake them in pieces in his diocesse. For which fact he was reproued by Gregorie, who yet commendeth him, that he forbadde the worship of images. lib. 7. Ep. 119. and Lib. 9. Ep. 9. where he saith. That you forbade them to be worshipped, we haue altogether commended you, but that you brake them we did reprehend you. That the Lutherans retaine images, it can not be defended by the word of God, though they detest the worshipping of them, and it cannot be without danger of idolatrie, if the Pastors be not diligent to teach their people to beware of it. See more of images. Matth. 8. sect. 9. Act. 17. sect. 5. Heb. 9. sect. 4. Abac. 2. 18.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF IOHN THE APOSTLE.

He commendeth the Lady and her ſonnes for continuing in the olde faith, bidding them ſo to doe hereafter alſo, leſt they loſe the reward of their workes in the day of iudgement: and to loue the true beleeuers, but with Heretikes to haue no ſocietie: expreſſing alſo the points then in controuerſie.

The translation of Rhemes.

THE Senior to the Lady Elect & her children whom I loue in truth, and not I onely, but alſo all that haue knowen the truth,

2 For the truth which abideth in vs, and ſhal be with vs for euer.

3 Grace be with you, mercie, peace from God the Father, and from Chriſt IESVS the Sonne of the Father in truth, and charitie.

4 I was exceeding glad, becauſe I haue found of thy children walking in truth, as we haue receiued cõmandement of the Father.

5 And now I beſeech thee Lady, not as writing a new commandement to thee, but that which we haue had ‖ from the beginning, * that we loue one an other.

Io.15,12 1.Io.3,11.

6 And this is charitie, that we walke according to his commandements. For this is the commandement, that as you haue heard from the beginning, you walke in the ſame:

7 Becauſe many ſeducers are gone out into the world, which doe not confeſſe IESVS Chriſt to haue come into fleſh: this is a ſeducer and an Antichriſt.

8 Looke to your ſelues, that you loſe not the things which you haue wrought: but that you may receiue a full ‡ reward.

‡ Reward for keeping faſt the Catholike faith.

9 Euery one that ‘ reuolteth, and perſiſteth not in the doctrine of Chriſt: hath not God. He that perſiſteth in the doctrine: the ſame hath both the Father, and the Sonne.

‘ To goe backe or reuolt from the receiued truth and doctrine Apoſtolicall, is damnable.

10 If * any man come to you, and bring not ‖ this doctrine: ‖ receiue him not into the houſe, ‖ nor ſay, God ſaue you, vnto him.

Ro.16,17.

11 For he that ſaith vnto him, God ſaue you, communicateth with his wicked works.

12 Hauing moe things to write vnto you: I would not by paper and inke: for I hope that I ſhall be with you, and ſpeake mouth to mouth: that your ioy may be full.

13 The children of thy ſiſter elect ſalute thee.

The translation of the Church of England.

THE elder vnto the elect Lady and her children, whom I loue in the trueth, and not I onely, but alſo all that haue knowen the trueth:

2 For the truthes ſake which dwelleth in vs, and ſhalbe with vs for euer:

3 Grace be with you, mercy, and peace from God the Father, and from the Lord Ieſus Chriſt, the ſonne of the Father in truth and loue.

4 I reioyced greatly that I found of thy children walking in trueth, as we haue receiued a commandement of the father.

5 And now I beſeech thee, Lady, not as though I wrote a new commandement vnto thee: but that ſame which we haue had from the beginning, that we ſhould loue one an other.

6 And this is the loue, that we ſhould walke after his commandements: This is the commandement, that as ye haue heard from the beginning, ye ſhould walke in it.

7 For many deceiuers are entred into the world, which cõfeſſe not that Ieſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh. This is a deceiuer, and an Antichriſt.

8 Looke on your ſelues, that we loſe not that we haue wrought: but that we may haue a full reward.

9 Whoſoeuer tranſgreſſeth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Chriſt, hath not God: He that endureth in the doctrine of Chriſt, hath both the Father and the Sonne.

*10 If there come any vnto you, and bring not this learning, * him receiue not to houſe, neither bid him God ſpeede.* Rom.16.17.

11 For he that bidaeth him God ſpeed, is partaker of his euill deeds.

12 Hauing many things to write vnto you, I would not write with paper and inke: but I truſt to come vnto you, and ſpeake with you mouth to mouth, that your ioy may be full.

13 The ſonnes of thy elect ſiſter greete thee, Amen.

ANNOTATIONS.

RHEM. 1

6 From the beginning.) This is the rule of a Chriſtian Catholike man, to walke in that faith and worſhip of God which he hath receiued from the beginning. Which is, that which we now call according to the Scriptures, the tradition of the Apoſtles: that which is come to vs from man to man, from Biſhop to Biſhop, and ſo from the Apoſtles. So ſhall a faithfull man auoide ſeducers that riſe vp in euery age, teaching new doctrine.

FVLKE. 1

Wee can haue no certaine knowledge, what was the faith and worſhippe of God in the beginning, but by the holy Scriptures. Nor what was the tradition of the Apoſtles, but by the writing of the Apoſtles, which Ignatius in his time affirmed, for certainetie, to bee committed to writing. Euſeb. lib. 3. cap. 35. For there can be no certainetie in receiuing from man to man, from Biſhoppe to Biſhoppe, ſeeing a doctrine may be ſo receiued for a thouſand yeeres and more, and yet be ſhort of the beginning. Yea, there were Heretikes euen in the Apoſtles time as Cerinthus, Hebion, the Nicolaites, Simon Magus gus &c. whose heresie, if it had beene deliuered from man to man euer since that time, yet was not from the beginning, but is confuted by the writings, of the Apostles, not to haue come from the Apostles. They therefore teache newe doctrine, which are not able to prooue there doctrine by the holie scriptures, and the doctrine of the holy scriptures is ancient, though men can not shewe, by what succession of men it came vnto vs.

RHEM. 2 10 This doctrine.) The Apostles, and true Pastors their lawfull successors, and the Church of God in holy Counc'l, vse to set downe the true doctrine in those pointes. Which Heretikes call into controuersie. Which being once done and declared to the faithfull, they neede no other marke or description to knowe an Heretike or false teather by, but that hee commeth with an other doctrine then that which is set downe to them. Neither can the Heretikes shift themselues, as nowe a daies they would doe, saying, let vs first be proued Heretikes by the Scriptures, let them define an Heretike. No this is not the Apostles rule. Many a good honest shepheard knoweth a woolfe, that cannot define him, but the Apostle saith, If he bring not this set doctrine he is a seducer. So holy Church saith now, Christ is really in the B. Sacrament, vnder forme of bread and wine &c. If therefore he bring not this doctrine, he is a seducer, and an Heretike, and we must auoid him. whether in his owne definitions and censures he seeme to him selfe an Heretike or no. To bring wilfully an other doctrine then the Catholike Church setteth downe, is alwaies a marke of seducers and Heretikes.

FVLKE. 2 10 The doctrine whereof S. Iohn speaketh, is that which he and the rest of the apostles preached: the summe whereof, is conteyned in the holy scriptures. The Apostles (sayth Irenæus) preached the Gospel, and after by the will of God, they deliuered it vnto vs in the scriptures, which should be the foundation and pillar of our faith. Lib. 3. cap. 1. Therefore whatsoeuer the ministers of the church, that haue succeeded the apostles haue set down in councels, or otherwise, is so to be taken for true doctrine, as it agreeth with the preaching of the Apostles, conteyned in their writings. For not all that is set downe in councel is true, seeing councels both prouinciall & generall may erre & be corrected the latter of the former, (as S. Augustine sayth) when by any triall of things, that is opened, which before was shut, & that is knowen, which before was hidden: This vseth he when by the Donatists he was presséd with the authority of a councel holden in Africa, for rebaptizing them, that had ben baptized by Heretikes. De bapt. Con. Donat. cap. 2. But you say, it is not the apostles rule, that an Heretike should be conuinced by the scriptures. Yes verely, for the doctrine wherof he speaketh, is the doctrine of Christ, as it appeareth in the ninth verse, & the doctrine of Christ is conteined in the scriptures, as he himself saith. Search the scriptures, for they beare witnesse of me. Iohn 5. 39. And the Apostles, which taught the whole doctrine of Christ, taught nothing concerning Christ but that which is conteyned in the scriptures. Act. 26. 22. Rom. 1. 2. 2. Tim. 3. 14. & 15. Therefore it is the Apostles rule, that an heretike should be conuinced by the holy scriptures, seeing we haue no other certeine testimonie, what was the doctrine of Christ and the Apostles, as S. Augustine sheweth, in the place aboue noted. That many an honest Shepheard knoweth a wolfe, that cannot define him, it is a fond argument, to proue that an heretike is not to be conuinced by the scriptures. For a natural and bodily wolfe, may be knowen by certeine markes though not by the scripture or his difinition, but a spirituall woolfe or heretike, must be knowen by such markes and notes, as are set downe in the holy Scriptures, though euery man be not able to make a scholastic all definition of an Heretike. The sufficiencie of the Scriptures. Councels may erre.

Therefore he that bringeth not the doctrine of Christ, set downe in the scriptures, is a seducer, not hee that bringeth not such doctrine, as the Pope hath not set downe in his decrees, or in his counterfect Councels. Neither doeth the holy Church say now, Christ is realy present &c. but the prophane synagogue of Sathan, and the Church of Antichrist maynteineth that heresie, contrary to the holy Scriptures, and the articles of Christes incarnation, ascension, and sitting at the right hand of God in heauen.

RHEM. 3 10 Receiue him not.) Though in such times and places where the communitie or most part bee infected, necessitie often forceth the faithfull to conuerse with such in worldly affaires, to salute them, to eate and speake with them, and the Church by decree of Counsell, for the more quietnesse of timerous consciences prouideth, that they incurre not excommunication or other censures for excommunicating in worldely affaires with any in this kinde, except they bee by name excommunicated or declared to be Heretikes: yet euen in worldly conuersation and secular actes of our life, wee must auoide them as much as we may, because their familiaritie is many waies contagious and noysome to good men, namely to the simple: but in matter of religion, in praying, reading their bookes, hearing their sermons, presence at their seruice, partaking of their Sacraments, and all other communicating with them in spirituall things, it is a great damnable sinne to deale with them. When and wherein to conuerse with Heretikes, is tolerable when and wherein it is damnable.

FVLKE. 3 That Church which decreeth any other communication with heretikes and infidels, then the scripture here alloweth and elsewhere to be lawfull, sheweth it selfe to be the Church of Antichist. And here you may gather, what good subiectes the Papists be to our soueraine Lady the Queenes Maiestie, whome they take by the blasphemous bull, and Antichristian auctoritie of Pope Pius the fifth to be excommunicated. And what loyall duetie they yelde vnto her maiestie, by the diuelish dispensation of Pope Gregory the 13. procured by two errant traytorous Iesuites Campion and Parsons, of which the one hath suffered according to his demerites, the other remaineth, for what purpose God knoweth. The Papists no good subiectes.

RHEM. 10 Nor say, God saue you.) S. Ireneus (li. 3. c. 3.) reporteth a notable storie of this holy Apostle touching this poynt, out of S. Polycarpus, which is this. There be some (sayth he) that haue heard Polycarpe say that when Iohn the disciple of our Lord was going to Ephesus, into a bath, to wash him selfe, & saw Cerinthus the heretike within the same, he suddenly skipt out, saying that he feared lest the bath should fall, because Cerinthus the enemie of truth was within. So saith he of S. Iohn, and addeth also a like worthy example of Polycarpe himselfe: who on a time meeting Marcion the Heretike, and the said Marcion calling vpon him, and asking him whether he knew him not: Yes, quoth Polycarpe, I know thee for Satans sonne and heire. So great feare (saith S. Irenæus) had the Apostles and their disciples to communicate in word only, with such as were adulterers or corrupters of the truth. as S. Paul also warned, when he said, A man that is an Heretike, after the first and second admonition auoid. So far Irenæus. If then, to speake with them or salute them, is so earnestly to be auoided according to this Apostles example and doctrine: what a sinne is it to flatter them, to serue them, to marrie with them, and so foorth? S. Iohn would not be in one bath with Cerinthus the Heretike. The like zeale of S. Polycarpe and other Apostolike men in not communicating with heretikes.

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF IOHN THE APOSTLE.

He commendeth Gaius, for continuing in the truth, and for sustaining or succouring true preachers, 9 noting Diotrepes for the contrary, and praising Demetrius.

The translation of Rhemes.

THE Seniour to Gaius the deerest, whome I loue in truth.

2 My deerest, concerning all things I make my prayer that thou proceede prosperously, and fare wel, as thy soule doth prosperously.

3 I was exceeding glad when the brethren came, and gaue testimony to thy truth euen as thou walkest in truth.

4 Greater || thanke haue I not of them, then that I may heare my children do walke in truth.

5 My deerest, thou doest faithfully whatsoeuer thou workest on the bretbren, ‡ and that vpon strangers.

6 They haue rendred testimonie to thy charitie in the sight of the Church: whiem thou shalt doe wel, bringing on their way in maner worthie of God.

7 For, for his name did they depart, taking nothing of the Gentiles.

8 We therefore ought to receiue such: that we may be coadiutors of the truth.

9 I had written perhaps to the Church: but he that louoth to beare [b] primacy among them, Diótrepes doth not receiue vs.

10 For this cause, if I come, [c] I wil aduertise his workes which he doth: with malicious words chatting against vs, & as though these things suffise him not: neither himself doth receiue the brethren, and them that do receiue, he prohibiteth, and casteth out of the Church.

11 My deerest, do not imitate euil, but that which is good. He that doeth wel, is of God: he that doth il, hath not seene God.

12 To Demetrius testimonie is giuen of all, and of the truth it selfe, yea and we giue testimonie: and thou knowest that our testimony is true.

13 I had many things to write vnto thee: but I would not by inke & pen write to thee.

14 But I hope forthwith to see thee, and we will speake mouth to mouth. Peace be to thee. The freends salute thee. Salute the freends by name.

|| pleasure. χαρὰν, χάριν.

‡ A great grace to be benificial to strangers, specially to them that be of our Catholike faith and suffer for the same.

[b] He seemeth (saith Bede) he was an Arche heretike or grand Sect-maister.

[c] commonebo. ὑπομνήσω.

[c] That is, I wil rebuke them & make them knowen to be wicked. Bede.

The translation of the Church of England.

THE elder vnto the welbeloued Gaius, whom I loue in the truth.

2 Beloued, I wishe in all things that thou prosperedst and faredst well, euen as thy soule prospereth.

3 For I reioyced greatly when the brethren came, and testified of the trueth that is in thee, how thou walkest in the truth.

4 I haue no greater ioy, then for to heare how that my sonnes walke in veritie.

5 Beloued, thou doest faythfully whatsoeuer thou doest to the brethren, and to strangers:

6 Which haue borne witnesse of thy charitie before the Church: whom if thou bring forward on their iourney after a godly sort, thou shalt do well.

7 Because that for his names sake they went forth, taking nothing of the Gentiles.

8 We therefore ought to receiue such, that we might be helpers to the trueth.

9 I wrote vnto the church: but Diotrephes which loueth to haue the preeminence among them, receiueth vs not.

10 Wherefore if I come, I will declare his deedes which he doeth, ieasting on vs with malicious wordes: and not content therewith, neither he himselfe receiueth the brethren, and forbiddeth them that would, and thrusteth them out of the Church.

11 Beloued, followe not that which is euill, but that which is good. Hee that doeth well, is of God, but he that doeth euill, hath not seene God.

12 Demetrius hath good report of all men, and of the trueth it selfe: Yea, and we our selues also beare record, and yee know that our record is true.

13 I had many things to write: but I will not with inke and pen write vnto thee.

14 I trust I shall shortly see thee, and we shall speake mouth to mouth. Peace be vnto thee. Thy louers salute thee. Greete our friends by name.

IN the Gospel these are called Fratres Iesu, the brethren of Iesus: Iames and Ioseph, and Simon, and Iude. Mat.13. Their father is called Alphæus, where Iames is termed, Iames of Alphæus: and their mother, Maria Iacobi minoris. Marie the mother of Iames the yonger and of Ioseph. Which Marie in an other place being called Maria Cleophæ, we perceiue their father was named both Alphæus and also Cleophas. Mat.10. Mar.13 And that this Cleophas was brother to Ioseph our Ladies husband. Hegesippus telleth vs. Therefore because Ioh 19. *Ioseph was called the father of Christ, his brothers children, were called the brethren, that is (according to the custome of the Scripture also) the kinsmen of our Lord: and not because they were the children of Ioseph himselfe by an other wife, much lesse (as Heluidius the heretike did blaspheme) by our B. FVLKE. I

S. Paule doth not signifie that the Lordes brethren were in auctoritie, somewhat more then the Apostles, or lesse in auctoritie then Peter, when he sayth that the other Apostles, and the brethren of our Lord and Cephas, did lead about their wiues. But he signifieth that in respect of their carnall alliance or kindred, they were also specially regarded, and Peter in respect of his primacy ouer the circumcision. And where as you wil not graunt that the Apostles caried their wiues about with them, but other strange women. Hegesippus testifieth of S. Iude that he was a maried man, and had children, when he sheweth that his childrens children or nephewes (τὰ ἔκγονα, the sonnes of his sonne or sonnes were persecuted by Reuocatus in the daies of Domitian. *Euseb. lib.*3. *cap.*20. Then who would thinke that Peter and Iude both proued to haue wiues, the one by Scripture, the other by good story, would cary strange wemen about with them, and not their owne wiues? which could not be but offensiue, both to the Iewes and to the Gentiles, and to the church of God, which giuing of offence the Apostles condemned and forbade in all other. That which S. Augustine hath told vs that he writeth against those which misconstred S. Pauls epistles, and held onely faith, perteineth not vnto vs, for we hold not that only faith to be sufficient which hath no good works, but that faith only doth iustifie without works, although it be neuer void of good workes. And this doctrine taught so largely by S. Paule, and so plainely, none of the other Apostles doeth gainesay, nor S. Iude in this epistle. The old faith which he exhorteth the Christians to keepe, is not the popish faith which is of later inuention, but the faith and doctrine of Christ set foorth in the holy scripture.

He exhorteth them to stand to their old faith, shewing them by examples, that it is damnable not to continue and be constant: 8 inueighing against the lecherie, blasphemie, apostasie, hanketing of the heretikes. 14 and that their damnation was long foretold. 17 Catholikes therefore to be vnmoueable, to reproue the obstinate, to recouer al not desperate, to confirme the weake, and to liue themselues vertuously and without mortal sinne, which by Gods grace they may doe.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 1 8 Deſpiſe dominion.) Such be heretikes that will not be ſubiect to any ſuperior, or that refuſe to obey the lawes either of Spiritual or Temporal rulers, in which kind (ſpecially in blaſpheming the ſupreme Spiritual Magiſtrate) the Proteſtants doe paſſe.

FVLKE. 1 The pope an heretike by the papiſts rule. Such an heretike and worſe then an heretike is Antichriſt the Pope, which will not be ſubiect to any ſuperior, and which refuſeth to obey any law, either of ſpiritual or temporall rulers, no not the decrees of a generall councell, although he himſelfe haue once approued them, as Martine 5. did the councell of Conſtance, and Eugenius the 4. the councell of Baſill. Yet both refuſed to obey the law or decree of the councell, which defineth that the generall councell is aboue the Pope. Such an heretike is the Pope, and ſo greatly deſpiſeth dominion, and blaſphemeth maieſtie, that with moſt vile termes he doeth take vpon him to depriue kings of their royall dignitie which they haue by lawfull ſucceſſion and election, and approbation of all their ſubiects, and diſchargeth their ſubiects of their loialtie and obedience vnto their ſoueraigns. As Pius 5. did in that heretical and Antichriſtian bull, giuen out againſt Queene ELIZABETH the moſt honorable prince in all Chriſtendome. Such heretikes are the Pope and the Rhemiſh papiſts, as ſuborne horrible traitors, and murtherers, to murther their ſayd moſt gracious and honorable ſoueraigne: and that with ſuch abhominable hypocriſie, that they did ſet out a printed booke, declaring it vnlawfull to kill her maieſtie for none other ende, but to make her maieſtie and the councell, ſecure and out of ſuſpicion of them, that they might with more opportunitie, accompliſh their traiterous deuiſed murther. As was openly confeſſed and prooued, at the araignemnt of Babington, Ballard, and the reſt of thoſe helliſh monſters. Alſo the letters of Cardinall Como written to Parrie, doe teſtifie of the Popes approbation of that moſt vile and deteſtable treaſon, and murther intended.

ANNOTATIONS.

RHEM. 2 9 For the body of Moyſes.) When, why, or how this altercation or combat was betweene S. Michael and the Diuel about Moyſes body, no man can declare. only thu we ſee that many truthes, and ſtories were kept in the mouthes and harts of the faithful, that were not written in Scriptures canonical, as this was among the Iewes.

Truthes vnwritten, and knowen by tradition.

FVLKE. 2 The body of Moſes was buried by God, as appeareth Deut 34.6. that no man ſhould know where his ſepulchre was. Therefore it is like that this altercation was immediatly before that time, when the deuil deſired to haue the body of Moſes diſcouered, that it might be abuſed to idolatry. As it harh alwayes beene the practice of ſatan to perſecute the ſaincts while they liue, and to make idols of their bodies when they are dead. That ancient father which wrote the booke De mirabilibus ſacræ ſcripturæ, which goeth vnder the name of S. Auguſtine lib. 1. c. 35. writeth thus of the body of Moſes: For two cauſes, as wiſe men ſay, no man was priuie of his death, nor of his ſepulchre. That no man ſhould ſee that face, which had ſhined through the familiaritie of the Lordes ſpeach vnto him, ſtricken downe or dimmed with the heauineſſe of death. And leſt the people of Iſrael, if they had knowen where his ſepulchre was, ſhould haue adored it. Wherefore as moſt men thinke, he caried away with him the rod wherewith he had done woonders, leſt it ſhould haue beene adored: ſeeing the children of Iſrael, did afterward adore the ſerpent which he made,

Superſtition auoided,

Where you gather that many trueths and ſtories were kept in the mouthes and hearts of the faithfull, that were not written in the ſcriptures canonicall, It is true: yet that proueth not that the ſcripture canonicall did not conteine all doctrine neceſſarie to ſaluation. And euen the doctrine here taught is expreſſed in the canonicall ſcriptures Deut. 34.6. and Zacharie. 3. 2. though ſome circumſtances might be receiued of tradition, as the names of Iames and Iambres. 2. Tim. 3. 8. And yet Beda thinketh that the body of Moſes in this place might be taken for the people of Iſrael, of whome Moſes had beene head, whome Satan deſired to reteine in captiuity, when Ieſus praied for their deliuerance. Zach. 3. and ſo do ſome late interpretors thinke.

Vnwritten veities.

The ſufficieney of the ſcripture.

RHEM. 3 10 They blaſpheme.) He ſpeaketh of Heretikes, who being ignorant in Gods myſteries and the diuine doctrine of his Church, when they can not reproue the things, then they fall to execrations, irriſions, and blaſphemies againſt the Prieſts, Church and Sacraments, and whatſoeuer is godly.

Ignorance maketh Heretiks blaſpheme.

FVLKE. 3 Such heretikes are the papiſts, which when they cannot reproue by the ſcripture, the heauenly doctrine taught by Luther, Caluine, and other godly and learned teachers, they inuent ſuch monſtrous ſlanders and lies againſt them, to deface their perſons, as no man of reaſon can thinke they ſhould euer haue beene ſuffered to liue in any ſocietie of men (being no tyrants but meane ſubiects) if their maners had beene ſo vngodly as theſe ſhameleſſe heretikes doe blaſpheme. Beſide that ſome of their ſlanders are vnpoſſible, as that Luther ther should be begotten of a deuill &c. which yet the proud censurer of maister Charke is not ashamed to defend. As for their common scornings, execrations, and slanders of the true church and faithfull pastors of the same, which the sacraments and whatsoeuer is godly and agreeable to the holy scriptures, as the communion table, the marriage of the ministers, the singing of psalmes &c. are so well knowen, that I need not stand to repeat them.

The papiſts be heretikes by their owne diſcription.

RHEM. 4 11 Cain, Balaam, Core) The Apostle would haue Heretikes specially to be knowen by the resemblance they haue, first to Cain, in that for enuy that his brothers seruice and sacrifice was accepted and his reiected, slewe his said brother, and was a fugitiue from the face and citie of God, which is the Church. Secondly, by their resemblance to Balaam: who for mony was induced to curse Gods people, as couetousnes is commonly the cause that first maketh Heretikes and false Prophets whereupon S. Augustine saith, He is an Heretike that for temporal commodities sake either coineth or followeth new opinions. S. Augustine de Vtil. cred. cap. 1. And lastly by the resemblance they haue with the ancient & notorious Schismatike Core, and his companions, who forsooke the ordinarie Priesthood appointed by God, and would needes do sacrifice themselues without lawful calling. Heretikes resembled to Cain, Balaam and Core.

FVLKE. 4 Such in deede be al Heretikes, & such be al their sacraments, seruice, and offices in their Church, as Cores were in his schismatical tabernacles. And as pride was the cause of his reuolting from the obedience of Moyses and Aaron his Priests & true Gouernours: so is intolerable pride the cause of al Heretikes forsaking their lawful Pastors and Rulers, and namely of forsaking Christes owne Vicar in earth, our true Aaron, as S. Bernard calleth him. De consid li. 2. cap. 8. To al such forsakers the Apostle here giueth the curse and Væ due to the said three, Cain, Balaam, and Core, and telleth them that the storme of darknes and eternal damnation is prouided for them: most liuely describing al Heretikes (as in some we to our woe haue experience by their maners in our daies) in al this passage euen to the end of the epistles.

The papists Cains, Balaamites, Cores. The crueltie of Cain, the couetousnesse of Balaam, and the vsurpation of the priesthood of Core, did neuer agree to any heretikes more properly, then to the papists. Who in murthering Gods saincts, farre passe all other heretikes: in couetousnesse had preuailed so much, that they became lordes of the earth: in vsurpation of the priesthood farre passe the arrogancy of Core. Seeing they make claime to the priesthood according to the order of Melchisedech, which is peculiar to the person of our sauiour Christ, of whose priesthood, Aaron (whom Core and his fellowes would haue displaced) was but a shadow and figure. And as pride was the cause of Corees reuolting from the obedience of Moses and Aaron, so much more is it the cause of the popes reuolting from the obedience of the emperour, and of the generall councell, and of arrogating to himselfe to be Christes owne vicar, without any scripture of deputation from Christ. Howsoeuer Bernard being deceiued by his inchantments, in his booke of consideration, doth inconsiderately call the pope Aaron in dignity, yea in order Melchisedech, in vnction Christ, yet in the same booke he saith, he is not made superiour to haue dominion, yea he biddeth the pope learne, that he had neede of a ploughstaffe, not of a scepter. Againe he saith, Dominion is forbidden the Apostles. Goe thou and vsurpe if thou dare st, either exercising dominion the Apostleshippe, or exercising the Apostleshippe dominion. Thou art plainelie forbidden from either of both, if thou wilt haue both alike together, thou shalt leese both. Or else thinke not that thou art excepted from the number of them, of whom God complaineth thus, They reigned but not of me, They were princes but I knew them not.

This and much more writeth Bernard against the antichristian tyranny and vsurped auctoritie of the pope, although he yeelded to his antichristian titles, and thought also more highly of his dignity then the scripture doth allow him. S. Iude therefore, describing all heretikes, doth comprehend especially antichrist and his ministers, as Beda saith: who shall iustly be cast into eternall darkenesse of torments, because they brought into the church of God the darknesse of errors vnder the name of light.

RHEM. 5 16 These are they which segregate themselues.) The conditions of Heretikes in the later daies, that is, euer since Christs time, not of these onely of our age. For there were many that forsooke Gods Church and segregated themselues from the fellowship of the faithful euen in the primitiue Church: that we may the lesse marueil at these mens segregating themselues, and going out from the rest into seuerall sectes, which S. Augustine therefore calleth Segregations. Al Heretikes segregate themselues.

FVLKE. 5 We haue not segregated our selues from the church as heretikes, but from heretikes as true catholikes alwayes haue done. We haue gone out of Babylon as the holy ghost hath commanded all the faithfull, after her wickednesse is openly discouered Apoc. 18. that we should not communicate with her sinnes, nor be partakers of her plagues. The pope therefore and his ministers haue separated themselues from the vnity of the catholike church, to mainteine his antichristian primacy, as Beda saith of the rebellion of Core: Quicunque &c. whosoeuer through desire of vndue primacy doe deuide themselues from the vnity of the holy church, knowing and foreseeing how great mischiefs they take in hand, doe goe downe to the hell of wickednesse. So did pope Boniface the third, which not ignorantly (for by his predecessor Gregory, he was taught how great mischiefe he tooke in hand) but of antichristian pride, bought the primacy for a great summe of mony, of the murthering vsurper of the empire Phocas, and separated himselfe from the vnitie of the catholike church, and so descended with the rest of his successors, and all their ministers into an hell of wickednesse. Beholde these are they among others in our daies, which doe segregate themselues, as their predecessors did before them, being sensual and void of the spirit of God. The pope is gone out of the church.

THE

THE ARGVMENT OF THE APOCALYPSE OF S. IOHN.

RHEM. 1 THat which the old Testament foretold of Christ himselfe, the Apostles could report the fulfilling thereof in the new Testament, by way of an historie, euen from his Conception to his Glorification. But of his Church, they could not doe the like: because in their time it did but beginne: being to continue long after them, euen to the end of the world, and then at length to be glorified, as Christ her Spouse already is. Hereupon God would haue S. Luke to report in the Actes of the Apostles, the storie of the Churches beginning, and for the rest of it to the end, (that we might receiue this benefite also by the Apostles handes) he would S. Iohn to tell vs of it in this booke by way of a prophetie.

Of which booke S. Hierome saith: The Apocalypse of S. Iohn hath as many sacraments or mysteries, as words. Yea more then that, In euery word there are hid manifold and sundrie senses. Therefore it is very little that can here be noted, in respect. Yet to giue the good Catholike (whose comfort is here) some little helpe, the booke may be deuided into fiue parts. Hier. ad Paulin.

1 part. The first (after the Proeme) conteineth seuen Epistles from Christ now in glorie, to seuen Churches of Asia, or (for, these he maketh all one) to the seuen Bishops of those Churches: meaning not to those only, but to all his Churches and bishops, throughout the world: saying therefore in euery one of them, to al in general: Hee that hath an eare, let him heare what the Spirit saith to the Churches. As also in euery one he exhorteth vs to fight manfully (in this spirituall warfare of ours against sinne) for the victorie, and in euery one accordingly promiseth vs a reward in heauen. But before this, in the beginning of euerie one, he partly commendeth, partly reprehendeth, and exhorteth to penance. Where this is much to be noted, and feared, that among so many, he reproueth somewhat in all, saue only in two, which are the second and the sixt. In the beginning also of euery one, he taketh some peece out of the aparition going before, to frame thereof his stile agreeable to the matter of ech Epistle. Ca. 1. 2. 3.

2 After this admonition to Pastors and their flockes: the second part soloweth, wherein the Church and whole course thereof from the beginning to the end, is expressed in the opening of a booke in Gods hand, and the seuen seales thereof, by Christ. for the which, he seeth praise sung now in heauen and earth, not only to the Godhead, as before, but also (after a new maner) to Christ according to his Manhod. And here, when he is come to the opening of the last seale, signifying Domesday, he letteth that matter alone for a while, and to speake more fully yet of the said course of the Church he bringeth in another pagent (as it were of seuen Angels with seuen Trumpets. The effect of both the Seales and Trumpets, is this: That the Church beginning and proceeding, there should be raised against it, cruel persecutions, and pestilent heresies: and at length after heresies, a certaine most blasphemous Apostasie, being the next preparatiue to the comming of Antichrist: After al which, Antichrist himselfe in person shal appeare in the time of the sixt seale, and sixt trumpet, persecuting and seducing (for the short time of his reigne) more then al before him. The Church notwithstanding shall stil continue, and wade through al, because Christ her Spouse is stronger then al these aduersaries, who also straight after the said sixt time, shal in the seuenth, come in maiestie and iudge al. Ca. 4. to the 8. Ca. 8. to the 12.

3 Of the which iudgement, differing yet a while to speake at large, he doth first in the third part intreat more fully of the Deuils working by Antichrist and his companie against the Church, that the iustice of Christ afterward in iudging, may be more manifest. C. 12. 13. 14.

4 At length therefore in the fourth part he commeth to the seuen last plagues, the seuenth of them conteining the final damnation of the whole multitude, societie or corps of the wicked, from the beginning of the world to the end. Which multitude, in the Gospel and first Epistle of this same S. Iohn (as also in the other Scriptures commonly) is often called Mundus, the world. and here he calleth it partly, Meretricem, a whore or harlot, because with her concupiscence she entiseth the carnal and earthly man away from God: partly, Ciuitatem Babylon, the Citie of Babylon, because it maketh warre against Hierusalem the citie of God, & laboureth to hold Gods people captiue in sinne, as it was shadowed in Nabuchodonosor and his Babylonians, leading & holding the Iewes with their Hierusalem, in captiuitie, vntil Cyrus (in figure of Christ) deliuered them. But whether all these seuen plagues should be vnderstood (as the seuenth) of Domesday it selfe, it is hard to define. More like it is, that the first sixe are to go before Domesday: but whether corporally and literally (so as Moyses plagued Egypt) or rather spiritually, it is more hard to define. Yet it seemeth more easie, to vnderstand them corporally, as also the plagues wherewith Elias and his fellow shal in the time of Antichrist plague the wicked (which peraduenture shal be the same last plagues) whereof we read in this booke c. 11. v. 6. But not content to haue described thus the damnation of the whole adulterous and bloudy societie, he doth also expressly report of their three grand Captaines damnation, which are these, Antichrist, and his Falseprophet, and the Deuil himselfe the author of all this mischiefe. C. 15. to the 21. 1 Io. 2. Apoc. 17.

5 Finally, on the other side, in the fifth part he reporteth the vnspeakable & euerlasting glorie, that the Church after all this suffering shal by Christ her glorious spouse be assumpted vnto. And so he concludeth the booke. C. 21. 22.

FVLKE. 1 As this booke conteineth a prophecie of the state of the church vntil the end of the world, so it is no maruell if many things seemed obscure to the auncient fathers, before they were fulfilled, which are now cleere and euident to vs, after they be accomplished. Yet concerning antichrist & his citie where he should reigne, the Apostle doth plainely describe them, that many of the auncient fathers did see plainely that he shoulde be a Romane tyrant, and haue his cheefe see at Rome: as I haue declared vpon 2. Thess. 2. And the description of Babylon cap. 17. with the angels interpretation, is so euident of Rome, that it is extreme impudencie to denie it, or to shift it off vnto the whole multitude and corps of the wicked, as more plainely shall appeere when we come to the annotations vpon that chapter. That Elias shall come any more in person, it is a vaine surmise vpon the eleuenth chapter, where it is said, that notwithstanding the greatest tyrannie of antichrist, yet God will giue strength to his two witnesses, which signifieth the small number, and yet sufficient, to be accepted of them that shall oppose themselues against the crueltie and pride of Antichrist. And euen as the Pharisees deceiued the Iewes, concerning the comming of Elias, that they should not acknowledge Christ to be come, because Elias was not come in person, though he were come in spirit and office, so their successors the Papists deceiue the ignorant, that they should not acknowledge the manifestation of antichrist, vnder pretence that Elias is not yet come in person, with his fellow Enoch. Of whose personall returne the scripture speaketh nothing, but of two witnesses, representing the small number, yet the lawfull testimonie of them that gaue their liues for the gospel of Christ, and for admonishing the church of the deceits and tyrannie of antichrist. Rome the seat of antichrist.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. I.

FVLKE. 1 Seeing Christ himselfe appeared to Paul, why might he not appeare to Iohn.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. I.

RHEM. 2 1 APOCALYPSE.) Of the Apocalypse thus writeth the auncient father Denys, Bishop of Corinth, as Eusebius alleageth him l. 7. c. 20. hist. Eccl. Of this booke (saith he) this is my opinion, that the matter thereof is farre more profound then my wit can reach vnto, and I doubt not but almost in euery sentence of it, there lieth hidden a certaine sense exceeding mysticall and maruelous, which though I vnderstand not, yet I conceiue that vnder the wordes there is a deepe meaning, and I measure not the matter by reason, but attribute all to faith, taking it to be more high and diuine, then I can by cogitation comprise: not reprooving that which I vnderstand not, but therefore I admire with reuerence, because my wit can not attaine to it. Againe S. Augustine saith, that in the Apocalypse many things are obscurely spoken, to exercise the minde of the reader: and yet some fewe things left euident, that through them a man may with labour search out the rest. specially for that the author so repeateth the same things in diuers sortes, that seeming to speake of sundry matters, in deed is found but to vtter the same things diuers waies li. 20. de Ciuit. Dei c. 17. Which we set downe here in the beginning, to warne the good Christian Reader, to be humble and wise in the reading both of all other holy Scriptures, and namely of this diuine and deepe prophecie: giuing him further to vnderstand, that we wil in our Annotations, according to our former trade and purpose, onely or cheefely note vnto the studious, such places as may be vsed by Catholikes, or abused by Heretikes, in the controuersies of this time, and some other also that haue special maner of edification, and that as breefely as may be, for that the volume groweth great.

An admonition to the reader concerning the difficultie of this booke.

FVLKE. 2 Among those things that are so euident by S. Augustines confession, in this prophecie, there is nothing more cleare, then Rome to be that whore of Babylon, and the chiefe city of Antichrists dominion. In so much that S. Augustine calleth Rome the Westerne Babylon, the second Babylon, an other Babylon, the daughter of the former Babylon, the earthly citie, as it is opposite to the citie of God. De ciuitat. lib. 16. c. 2. 22. & 27. The same was acknowledged by most of the ancient Fathers, Irenæus, Tertullian, Victorinus, Ambrose, Hierome, Primasius, Arethas, Ambrosius, Ansbertus, as in due place is shewed. Which if it were euident by the wordes and circumstance of the text, when the prophecie was not yet fulfilled, how much more manifest is it now, when we see the performance of that which so long before was described?

Rome is Babylon.

RHEM. 3 4 To the 7. Churches. That certaine numbers may be obserued as significatiue and mystical, it is plaine by many places of holy Scripture, and by auncient Doctors special noting of the same to many purposes. Whereby we see the rashnes of our Aduersaries, in condemning generally al religious respect of certaine numbers in our praiers, facts, or actions. Namely the number of Seuen, is mysticall, and prophetical, perfect, and which (as S. Augustine saith) the Church knoweth by the Scriptures, to be specially dedicated to the holy Ghost: and to appertaine to spiritual mundation, as in the Prophets appointing of Naaman to wash seuen times in Iordan, and the sprinkling of the bloud seuen times against the tabernacle. l.4. quæst. in numer. q.23. See l.5. c.5. de Gen. ad lit. & l.5. quæst. in Deuter. q.42. Al these visions stand vpon Seuens, seuen churches, seuen angels, seuen starres, seuen spirits, seuen candlesticks, seuen lampes, seuen trumpets, seuen vials, siuen hornes of the Lambe, seuen hilles, seuen thunders, seuen heads of the dragon, signifying the Diuell: seuen of the beast that is antichrist: seuen of the beast that the harlot rid vpon: finally the number also of the visions is specially marked to be seuen, in this booke. and euery time that this number is vsed in this prophecie, it hath a mysterie and a more large meaning, then the nature of that number is precisely and vulgarly taken for. As when he writeth to seuen Churches, it is to be vnderstood of al the Churches in the world: as the seuen Angels, for al the Angels or gouernours of the whole Catholike Church: and so forth in the rest, because the number of Seuen, hath the perfection of vniuersalitie in it, as S. Augustine saith l.5. quæst. in Deut. q.42.

The number of seuen mystical specially in this booke.

FVLKE. 3 That certaine numbers in the scripture are noted to be significatiue and mystical, we acknowledge by many places in the Scriptures, especially in the Prophets. But hereof it followeth not, that there must be a superstitious respect of numbers in our praiers, feasts, or other actions, which is not prescribed or appointed to vs by the holy Ghost. For albeit the number of seuen, of ten, and some other, are often repeated in this prophecie, and other, to describe some mysteries of godlines, and some also of wickednes: it is no reason that we should imagine, that praiers, or fastes, numbred by seuens and by tennes, or any like numbers, shall be more acceptable to God, which smelleth more of heathenish Pharisaicall and Pythagoricall vanitie, then of Christian religion. For one praier, or other action of pietie, or two or fower, or eight, or nine, performed of faith and true deuotion, are more acceptable then all the Rosaries, Ladie Psalters, and other like superstitious repetitions, consisting vpon seuens or tennes, or any other mysticall numbers, which God regardeth not, but the faith and charitie, out of which such actions of religion or loue do proceed. But that in praiers, fasts, and other actions, a religious respect is to be had, you proue out of Augustine, which saith, that seuen, which is a number of perfection, the Church knoweth to be especially dedicated to the holy Ghost, and to appertaine to spiritual mundation. In deed S. Augustine saith: De Gen. l.5. c.5. That the Scripture commendeth, and the Church knoweth, that the number of seuen is quodam modo, after a sort dedicated to the holy Ghost: which he speaketh of the rest of the seuenth day, which the Church obserueth according to the Scripture. What is this to commend a religious respect of this number, in praying, fasting, or other actions? In the second place, Quæst. in Num. cap. 33. speaking of Eleazars sprinkeling of the bloud of the Sacrifice propitiatorie seuen times. Hee saith: Therefore it was seuen times, because that number it selfe perteineth to clensing. Whereby he meaneth, that the number of seuen, vsed in the Ceremoniall clensing of the law, did signifie perfect clensing by the sacrifice propitiatorie of Christ, not that there is any vertue of clensing in the number, or that our praiers or fastings numbred by seuen, be more pure, then if they be numbred by fixe, or nine, or then if there be no respect of the number, but of the affection of him that praieth or fasteth. In the 3. place, Quæst. in Deut. l.3. c.22. He sheweth that the number of seuen is a perfect number, consisting of three and fower, the first whole odde number, and the first whole euen number. But he saith no word to approue this religious respect of numbers, in praying, or fasting, or other actions, whereof you speake. Therefore in these allegations and quotations, you doe nothing els but abuse your Reader, for S. Augustine hath no such meaning, of the superstitious obseruation of numbers, to commend praiers and fastings, or other Christian actions.

RHEM. 4 4 From the 7. spirites.) The holy Ghost may be here meant, and so called for his seuenfold gifts and graces, as some expositors thinke. but it seemeth more probable that he speaketh of the holy Angels, by comparing this to the like in the 5. Chapter following: where he seemeth to cal these, the seuen spirites sent into the world, as S. Paul to the Hebrues (cap.1,14.) speaketh of Angels, and so the Protestants take it in their commentaries: which we note, because thereupon they must needs confesse that the Apostle here giueth or wisheth grace and peace, not from God onely, but also from his Angels: though that benediction commeth one way of God, and an other way of his Angels or Saintes, being but his creatures. And so they may learne, that the faithfull of ech ioyning in one speach, God and our Lady, our Lord and any of his Saints, to helpe vs or blesse vs, is not superstitious, but an Apostolical speech. and so the Patriarch said (Gen.48.v.16.) The Angel that deliuereth me from al euils, blesse these children. See the Annot. Act.15,28.

Grace and peace from God and the holy angels.

God and our Lady saue vs, and the like.

FVLKE. 4 First, al the ancient Interpretors in a manner, vnderstand the seuen spirites, to be the holy Ghost, who in his seuenfold giftes or operations, is knowen in the Church. But to admit, that they signifie the whole number of the blessed Angels that waite vpon the throne of God, as cap. 5. as Arethas, and some Protestants (as you say) in their Commentaries vpon this text doe take it: yet it followeth not, that we must confesse, that the Apostle here giueth, or wisheth grace and peace, not from God onely, but also from the Angels, as auctors of this grace, or peace, togither with God, or any meanes to procure it by their merites or worthines, but as ministers of Gods will and pleasure, appointed for their sakes, that shall inherite saluation, Heb.1,14. Therefore thus writeth Arethas vpon this text. Some haue taken the seuen spirites to be the seuen operations of the holye Ghost; but it is more probable, to take them for Angels, not that they are comprehended with the Almightie Trinitie, or that we must thinke them to be of equall honour with it, but because they serue and obey him, if wee must beleeue the Prophets, testifying that all things serue him, and Dauid the progenitor of God, saying: Blesse God al ye Angels, being mightie in power, which fulfill his worde. And certainly to say, that to comprehend the diuinitie and the nature of Angels, is to shewe an equallitie of honour, betweene the Almightie Trinitie, which is the auctor of all creatures, and a ministeriall substance, is not the part of one that hath vnderstanding, or but meane vnderstanding, but of him that is ignorant, as I thinke, that this creature delighteth to stande by the Lorde, and to minister vnto him: which forme of speach Paul also vsing in his Epistle to Timothy, speaketh in this manner: I charge thee in the sight of God, and his elect Angels. And this saying is of one that followeth the same. But also to adde in this place, which are in the presence of the throne of God, it is a speach of him that testifieth their ministeriall order, not their equall honour. First therefore the Apostle giueth no grace or peace, but praieth for grace and peace, to be giuen onely by God for Iesus Christes sake, though in dispensing of the same, for the saluation or preseruation of his elect, he vse the ministerie or seruice of Angels, and therefore praieth for Gods benefites to be bestowed vpon the Church, by such ministerie of the holie Angels, as he hath appointed. Who continually waite vpon the throne of God, to receiue and execute his commaundement, for the benefite and preseruation of his Church. Therefore they are adioyned as seruants vnto their Lord, for their Ministeries sake, in which respect they are named also before our Sauiour Christ, for that they bee onely Ministers, and not meritorious causes of Gods blessings vnto his Church, as our and their Lorde Iesus Christ is. Therefore God onelie is auctor of grace and peace, dispensing the same in some manner by the seruice of his Angels, but not for for their merits or worthines, but onely for the worthines and merites of Iesus Christ, who hath loued vs, and washed vs from our sinnes, &c. as it followeth in the text. Therefore those superstitious prayers of the Papistes, God and our Ladie helpe, our Lorde and his Saintes helpe, or blesse, are nothing like to this praier of the Apostle. For although God vse the ministerie of Angels, in dispensing of his graces and blessings, for the preseruation of his Church, (as he doeth also the ministerie of men vpon earth,) yet he vseth not the ministerie of the blessed Virgine Marie, or of the Saintes departed out of this life, for any such purpose: and much lesse doth graunt his graces or blessings, for the merites or worthines either of Angels, or of Saintes, as Papistes in their prayers desire to obteine them, not by the ministerie of Angels, nor by the praier of Saintes onely, but for their merites and worthines. Therefore the Angell whereof Iacob speaketh, whether it signifieth Christ, as Precopius saith expressly in Gen. c. 48. or the Minister by which Christ did protect him, is nothing like to the Popish praiers which desire grace, blessing, and saluation, by the merites of blessed Marie, by the merites of such a Saint, by the blood of Thomas, and such like.

RHEM. 5 6 A kingdom and Priests,) As all that truely serue God, and haue the dominion and superioritie ouer their concupiscences and whatsoeuer would induce them to sinne, bee kings: so all that emploie their workes and themselues to serue God and offer all their actions as an acceptable sacrifice to him, bee Priestes. Neuertheleſſe, as if any man would thereupon affirme that there ought to be no other earthly powers or kings to gouerne in worldly affaires ouer Christians, hee were a seditious Heretike, euen so are they that vpon this or the like places where all Christians be called Priests in a spirituall sort, woulde therefore inferre, that euery one is in proper signification a Priest, or that all be Priests alike, or that there ought to be none but such spiritual Priests. for it is the seditious voice of Core, saying to Moyses and Aaron, Let it suffice you, that al the multitude is of holy ones, and the Lord is in them. Why are you extolled ouer the people of the Lord? Num. 16.

How all Christians be both kings and Priests.

FVLKE. 5 As the spirituall kingdome and Priesthood of Gods children, taketh not away the eternall kingdome and Priesthood of Christ, so neither the earthly kingdomes of the worlde, nor the Ecclesiasticall Eldership of ministerie of the Church. And yet all true Christians are Priestes alike, because there is none other sacrificing Priesthood, left but the eternall Priesthood of Christ, and the spiritual Priesthood of al his Saints. Wherefore you doe nothing but cauill in this place, as in many other, vpon the ambiguitie of this English worde Priest, and Priesthood, which according to the Etymologie from the Greeke worde whence it is deriued, signifieth the Eldership and Elders of the Church: but according to the common vse of speach, is taken for a sacrificer, and the office of sacrificing. Wherefore if you did write these notes in Latine or Greeke, euery childe might see your vnlearned collection. The word which the holy Ghost here vseth, is ἱερεῖς, in Latine Sacerdotes, in English Sacrificers: this office of sacrificers and sacrificing, we say, and boldly say, is either singular to Christ, in respect of his sacrifice propitiatorie, and all other parts of his holy office, perteining to our perfect reconciliation and redemption, or else it is common to al true Christians, in respect of their spirituall sacrifices of praise, and thankes giuing. Neither is this word euer applied in the New Testament, to any Ecclesiasticall order, and function of men, but they be called Episcopi, Presbyteri, Diaconi, Ministri, Præpositi, Doctores, and such like, that is, Ouerseers, Elders, Ministers, Gouernours, Teachers, &c. But neuer they are called more then any other Christian men or women, ἱερεῖς, Sacerdotes, that is, sacrificers, or sacrificing Priests. Therefore if the Scripture speake properly and truely, all Christians are sacrificers alike, and onely Christ is our eternall high sacrificer, or sacrificing Priest. Wherefore they that vsurpe that sacrificing Priesthood, which is peculiar to him, do much more shew themselues seditious rebels, then Core, who chalenged the figuratiue and temporall sacrificing Priesthood of Aaron, which was but a shadow of the true and eternall sacrificing Priesthood of Christ. As for the holy Ecclesiasticall offices, or ministerie and gouernment of the Church, we know they be not common to al, but vnto those onely, that are lawfully ordeined vnto them.

RHEM. 6 10 On the Dominicall day.) Many notable points may be marked here. first, that euen in the Apostles time there were daies deputed to the seruice of God, and so made holy and different, though not by nature. yet by vse and benediction, from other profane or (as we cal them) worke-daies

Secondly, that the Apostles and faithful abrogated the Sabboth which was the seuenth day, and made holy day for it, the next day folowing, being the eight day in count from the creation: and that without al Scriptures, or commaundement of Christ that we reade of, yea (which is more) not onely otherwise then was by the Law obserued, but plainely otherwise then was described by God himselfe in the second commandement, yea and otherwise then he ordained in the first creation, when he sanctified precisely the Sabboth day, and not the day folowing. Such great power did Christ leaue to his Church, and for such causes gaue he the holy Ghost to be resident in it, to guide it into al truths, euen such as in the scriptures are not expressed, And if the Church had authoritie and inspiration from God, to make Sunday (being a worke-day before) an euerlasting holy day: and the Saturday, that before was holy day, now a common worke-day: why may not the same Church prescribe and appoint the other feastes of Easter, Whitsuntide, Christmas, and the rest? for the same warrant she hath for the one, that she hath for the other.

Difference of holy daies and worke daies. Sunday made holiday by the Apostles and the Churches auctoritie. Other feastes ordained by the Church.

Thirdly, it is to be noted that the cause of this change was, for that now we Christians esteeming more our redemption, then our first creation, haue the holy day which was before the remembrance of Gods accomplishment of the creation of things, now for the memorie of the accomplishment of our redemption. Which therefore is kept vpon that day on which our Lord rose from life to death, which was the day after the Sabboth, being called by the Iewes, vna, or prima Sabbathi, the first of or after the Sabboth. Matth. 28. Act. 20. 1. Cor. 16. Fourthly, it is to be marked, that this holy day by the apostles tradition also, was named Dominicus dies our Lords day, or, the Dominike, which is also an old Ecclesiasticall word in our language, for the name Sunday is a heathenish calling, as al other of the weeke daies be in our language: some imposed after the name of planets, as in the Romans time: some by the name of certaine Idols that the Saxons did worship, and to which they dedicated their daies before they were Christians Which names the Church vsed not, but hath appointed to eol the first day, the Dominike, after the Apostle here: the other by the name of Feries, vntil the last of the weeke, which she calleth by the old name, Sabboth, because that was of God, and not by imposition of the heathen. See the marginal Annotation Luc. 24. 1.

As Saturday was in memorie of the creation, so Sunday of Christs resurrection. The Church vseth not the Heathenish names of daies: but Dies Dominicus, feriæ, Sabbatum.

Lastly obserue, that God reuealeth such great things to Prophets, rather vpon holy daies, and in times of contemplation, sacrifice, and praier, then on other profane daies. and therefore as S. Peter (Act. 10.) had a reuelation at the sixt houre of praier, and Zacharie (Luc. 1.) at the houre of incense, and Cornelius (Act. 10.) when he was at his praiers the ninth houre, so here S. Iohn noteth that he had al these marueilous visions vpon a Sunday.

God gineth greater grace at holy times of praier and fasting.

FVLKE. 6 That the Lordes day was sanctified in steede of the Iewish Saboth, for the assemblies of the faithful to the publike exercises of religion, we learne by this place. But that there were any other holy daies beside this, we finde not in the Scriptures.

Secondly, the Apostles did not abrogate the Iewish Saboth, but Christ himselfe by his death, as he did all other ceremonies of the Lawe, that were figures and shadowes of things to come, whereof he was the bodie, and they were fulfilled and accomplished in him, and by him. And this the Apostles knew, both by the Scriptures, and by the worde of Christ, and by his holie spirite. By the Scripture also they knewe, that one day of seuen, was appointed to be obserued for euer, during the worlde, as consecrated and hallowed to the publike exercises of the religion of God, although the ceremoniall reste, and prescript day according to the Lawe, were abrogated by the death of Christ. Nowe for the prescription of this daie, before any other of the seuen, they had without doubt, either the expresse commaundement of Christ, before his ascention, when he gaue them precepts concerning the kingdome of God, and the ordering and gouernment of the Church, Act.1,2. or elle the certaine direction of his spirite, that it was his will and pleasure it should so be, and that also according to the Scriptures. Seeing there is the same reason of sanctifying that day, in which our Sauiour Christ accomplished our redemption, and the restitution of the worlde by his resurrection from death, that was of sanctifying the day, in which the Lorde rested from the creation of the worlde: where you say, it was otherwise prescribed by God himselfe in the seconde commaundement: First, I meruaile what accompt you followe of the tenne Commaundements, when this Commaundement of the Sabboth, both in the 20. of Exodus, and the fifth of Deuteronomie is the fowerth Commaundement. And although you leaue out the commaundement against idolatrie, because it should be too manifest a conuiction of your impietie, yet I see not how you can make the commaundement of the Saboth, the second commaundement, except you will also exclude the third commaundement against the taking of the name of God in vaine. But to let this passe as a grosse ouersight, I answer to the matter, the prescript of the day, as of the maner of rest, and other rites in obseruing thereof, was a ceremoniall, as circumcision, bloud, strangled, and the sacrifices instituted from the beginning of the world, and therefore abrogated togither, with the ceremonies first instituted in mount Sina. Wherefore this abrogation of the Iewish Saboth, and institution of the Lordes day, doth not proue any power in the Church, to abrogate any thing prescribed by God in the Scriptures, or to institute any thing of like nature, and necessitie of obseruing, beside the Scriptures. For although the Church in daies or times, which are indifferent, may take order for some other daies or times, to be solemnized for the exercises of religion, or that the remembrance of Christes natiuitie, resurrection, ascension, or the comming of the holy Ghost, may be celebrated either on the Lords daie, or any other time: yet there is great difference betweene the auctoritie of the Church in this case, and the prescription of the Lordes daie, by the Apostles. For the speciall memories of those thinges are indifferent of their nature, either to be kept on certaine daies, or left to the discretion of the Gouernours of the Church, to be celebrated as any other occasion shall be offered. Neither if they be assigned to certaine daies in the yeere, is it necessarie they should be kept on those daies, which they are now vsed, rather then on other daies, in which they haue of olde beene vsed. Yea the Pope hath taken vpon him of late, to alter all those festiuall daies, that for many hundred yeeres haue beene obserued otherwise. But to change the Lordes day, and to keepe it on Munday, Tuesday, or any other day, the Church hath none auctoritie. For it is not a matter of indifferencie, but a necessarie prescription of Christ himselfe, deliuered to vs by his Apostles. The Church therefore, hath promised to be ledde into all truth, so she followe the rule of truth, which is the word of God, expressed in the holy Scriptures. Not that she hath the same assurance of Gods spirite, which the Apostles had, who were so directed thereby, that although they were fraile men, by nature subiect to errour, yet they could not decline in their writings and ordinances for the Church, from the truth, or the holy Scriptures. Wherefore the Church hath not nowe the same warrant of the spirite which the Apostles had, neither may she alter any thing that they (as the Embassadours of Christ,) haue prescribed to bee perpetuall, nor make anie thing necessarie by nature, which they haue left indifferent.

The sufficiencie of the scriptures. The Lords day.

The 4. Commaundement.

Auctoritie of the Church.

Thirdly, the cause of this change, was not our estimation that either we haue, or ought to haue of our redemption aboue our creation, but the ordinance of God, who as first he sanctified the rest from creation, for the glorie of that worke: so now also he sanctifieth the day of the restitution of the world, for his glorie of the accomplishment of our redemption. Moreouer, as the name of Sunday and the reste, is of the Heathenish beginning, and therefore were better to be otherwise termed, as the first, the second, the third from the Lordes daie, as the Iewes called their daies from the Saboth: so your terme of feries, is no lesse Heathenish, then the common English names, being taken not out of the scriptures, but from the Heathenish terme of Feria, and Feriæ, as witnesseth Isidorus Orig. lib.6. And Sextus Pompeius de verbis veteribus, saith: that Feria was called à feriendis victimis, or striking the Heathenish sacrifices.

Your last obseruation, that God reuealeth such great things, rather vpon holy daies, or giueth grace at holy times, is friuolous, for not in respect of the holines of the day, or time, he giueth reuelations, or his graces, but according to his pleasure. Times of praier, contemplation, and other godly exercises, he chuseth often, not for the worthines of the times, but for the better disposition of his seruants in such exercises, to receiue them. And yet there is nothing perpetually obserued in this matter. God appeared to Moses, keeping of sheepe, Exod.3. To Amos following his herd, Amos 7. To the Prophets commonly in their sleepe.

RHEM. 7 13 Vested in a Priestly garment.) He appeared in a long garment or vestment proper vnto priests (for so the word podéres, doth signifie, as Sap.18.24.) and that was most agreeable for him that represented the person of Christ the high Priest, and appeared to Iohn being a most holy Priest, and who is specially noted in the Ecclesiasticall historie for his Priestly garment called, pétalon or lámina. Priestly garments.

FVLKE.7 S. Iohn was an Elder of the Church, as he calleth himselfe, *Epist.*2.&3. But he was no sacrificer or sacrificing Priest. Neither is he noted for his Priestly garment: for Petalon signifieth a plate, or brouch, and not a garment, except you will say a brouch is a garment. Now that Petalon which Polycrates, (as Eusebius reporteth) saith, that S. Iohn did beare, is not to be vnderstood grãmatically, as though S. Iohn did weare such a plate in his cappe or hatte, but it is a figuratiue allusion, vnto that plate of gold, which the high Priest of the law did weare vpon the ornament of his head, in which was grauen these wordes, The holines of the Lorde. Eucherius instruct.ad Salon.c.de vestibus. Therefore he saith, (in respect of the diuine knowledge and holines, that was in this Apostle Iohn,) that he leaned vpon the Lordes breast, and was made the Priest that bare the Petalon or plate. Which if the Papists wil haue to be literally & absolutely vnderstood, that S. Iohn was a Priest, and ware the Priestly garment, they must acknowledge, that he was the high Priest. For this Petalon or plate, was for none other to weare, but onely for the high Priest, as it is manifest by Exod 28,3. and c.39.30. Then if Iohn were the high Priest of Christian religion, as Aaron and his successors were of the Iewish people, it followeth, that Iohn was aboue Peter, and all the Apostles, in this dignitie of the high Priests office. Which thing rather then the Papists wil graunt, I dare say, they will acknowledge, that Iohn was not a sacrificing Priest, nor nor did weare that Priestly ornament, which was proper to the high Priest onely.

RHEM. 8 20 The seuen starres.) The Bishops are the starres of the Church, as the Churches themselues are the golden candlestickes of the world: no doubt to signifie, that Christ preserueth the truth onely in and by the lawfull Bishops and Catholike Church, and that Christs truth is not to be sought for, in corners or conuenticles of Heretikes, but at the Bishops handes, and Mat.5.15.  vpon the candlestick which shineth to all in the house.* The true religion manifest as the light on a candlestick.

FVLKE.8 The ordinarie meanes of continuance of the truth, (though not the only meanes,) is by the teaching of the Bishops, and Elders of the Church. Therefore when the Bishops and Priestes of the Popish Church, were for the most part dombe dogges, and ignorant asses, that had no knowledge to teache, or els were teachers of errour and darkenes, rather then of truth and light, no meruaile, though the golden candlestickes were remoued from Rome, and other places, where in auncient time they were set: so that ignorance and heresie so mightily preuailed, as in the kingdome of Antichrist. For S. Iohn by the Angels of the Churches, meaneth not all that should weare on their heads, myters, and hold crozier staues in their handes like dead idoles: but them that are faithfull messengers of the Lords word, and vtter and declare the same. Not the angels of Sathan, though they be transfigured into the angels of light: but the Angels of God and Christ. The Popish Church therefore hath neither starres nor candlestickes in which true religion should shine, but either idols of Bishops, or wolues in stead of Shepheards. Succession.

RHEM. 9 20 The Angels of the Churches.) *The whole Church of Christ hath S. Michael for her keeper and Protector, and therefore keepeth his holy day onely by name, among all Angels. And as earthly kingdomes haue their speciall Angel Protectors, as we see in the 10. Chapter of Daniel: so much more the particular Churches of Christendom. See S. Hierom in 34. Ezech. But of those Angels it is not here meant, as is manifest. And therefore Angels here must needes signifie the Priestes or Bishops specially of the Churches here, and in them all the gouernours of the whole and of euery particular Church of Christendome. They are called Angels, for that they are Gods messengers to vs, interpreters of his will, our keepers and directors in religion, our intercessors, the cariers and offerers of our praiers to him, and mediators vnto him vnder Christ, and for these causes and for their great dignitie they are here and in * other places of Scripture called Angels.* Angels Protectors. Bishops and Priestes are called Angels. Malac.2.7.

FVLKE.9 The whole Church hath Christ himselfe, which is the true Michael, to be her Protector, and not one, but many holy Angels to defend her vnder him. That earthly kingdomes haue their speciall angels Protectors, it is not proued out of Daniel. For the Princes of the Persians and Grecians spoken of cap. 10. were no Angels, but earthly Princes. For Angels do no resist Christ and his Angels the defenders of the Church, as the Prince of Persia did verse 13. Although Hierom vpon that place of Daniel, doth affirme that he was an Angel, and vpon Ezechiel 34. that the Shepheards of Israel, according to mysticall vnderstanding, were the Angels of euery Church, to whom Iohn doth write in the Apocalypse, and whose Angels daily see the face of God. But the text is so plaine against the Shepheards of Israel, that a man might meruaile what S. Hierom meant to drawe it to the Angelike spirites, against whom the holy Ghost setteth foorth no prophecies: neither doe they neglect any charge that is committed to them. Angels.

Wherefore among many other reasons this is one inuincible, to proue that they are not heauenly spirites, to whom S. Iohn writeth: but ministers of the Church, that some of the Angels are reprehended for their offences, and exhorted to repent and amend, which pertaineth not to the heauenly spirites. But where as you make the Bishops and Priests our intercessors, the cariers and offerers of our prayers, and mediators vnto God vnder Christ, you gather more then the place will afforde. For they are called the Angels of the Churches, because they be Gods messengers vnto the Churches, not intercessors, cariers, or mediators vnder Christ. For that was Parmenians errour, who placed the Bishop mediator of intercession betweene the people and God, condemned by S. Augustine, who would not allow S. Iohn himselfe to be mediator betweene God and vs. cont. ep. Parm. lib. 2. cap. 8. Christ our only mediator of intercession.

The ministers of the Church therefore do pray for the people, either of common charitie, as the people pray for them, or els as the mouth of the people: to conceiue or vtter the publike prayers in the name of the people for order and comelinesse to be obserued in the Church. But any office of mediation, aduocation, or intercession, to present the prayers of the people vnto God vnder Christ, that they may be acceptable, they haue not by the holy scriptures which teach, that all our prayers are accepted by the onely mediation and aduocation of Christ: See Iohn 2. Sect. 5.

13 I knowe where thou dwellest, where the seate of Satan is: and thou holdest my name, and hast not denied my faith. And in those daies Antipas my faithfull witnesse, who was slaine among you, ‡where Satan dwelleth.

‡ The speciall residence of Satan is where the faithfull are persecuted for Christs truth, where not to deny the Catholike faith for feare, is much here commended. Nu.24,14. 25,2.

14 But I haue against thee a few things: because thou hast there, them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balac *to cast a scandal before the children of Israel, to eate and commit fornication:

15 So hast thou also them that holde the doctrine of the Nicolaites.

16 In like maner doe penance. If not: I will come to thee quickly, and will fight against them with the sword of my mouth.

17 He that hath an eare, let him heare what the Spirit saith to the Churches, To him that ouercommeth I will giue the hidden manna, & wil giue him a *white ‡counter: and in the counter a newe name written, which no man knoweth, but he that receiueth it.

* ψηφον. calculum. * Fulke. This translation is false, vnlearned, and ridiculous. For the word in both tongues signifieth a stone properly, in which it was vsed to write the names of them that were elected to honor, or absolute from crime. Mos erat antiquis, niueis atrisque lapillis, His damnare reos, illis absoluere culpa. Ouid. Meta. li. 15. ‡ None of these are any thing worth without the other.

18 And to the Angel of the Church of Thyatira write, Thus saieth the Sonne of God, which hath eies as a flame of fire, and his feete like to latten.

19 I know thy ‡ workes, and faith, and thy charitie, & ministerie, and thy patience and thy last workes moe then the former.

20 But I haue against thee a few things: because els I will come vnto thee shortly, and will remoue thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent.

6 But this thou hast, because thou hatest the deedes of the Nicolaitans, which deedes I also hate.

7 Let him that hath an eare, heare what the Spirite saith vnto the Churches: To him that ouercommeth, will I giue to eate of the tree of life, which is in the middest of the Paradise of God.

8 And vnto the Angell of the Church of Smyrna, write, These things saith he that is first and the last, which was dead and is aliue:

9 I know thy workes, and tribulation, and pouertie, (but thou art rich:) and I know the blasphemie of them which call themselues Iewes, and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan.

10 Feare none of those things which thou shalt suffer: beholde, the deuill shall cast some of you into prison to tempt you, and ye shall haue tribulation tenne daies: be thou faithfull vnto the death, and I will giue thee a crowne of life.

11 Let him that hath an eare, heare what the spirit saith vnto the Churches. He that ouercommeth, shal not be hurt of the second death.

12 And to the Angel of the Church in Pergamos, write, These things saith he which hath the sharpe sword with two edges.

13 I knowe thy works, and where thou dwellest, euen where Satans seate is, and that thou holdest fast my name, and hast not denied my faith, euen in those daies, when Antipas my faithfull martyr was slaine among you, where Satan dwelleth.

14 But I haue a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that maintaine the doctrine of Balaam, which taught †Balac to put a stumbling blocke before the children of Israel, that they should eate of meate sacrificed vnto idoles, and commit fornication.

Num.24.14. † Some reade taught in Balac.

15 Euen so hast thou them that maintaine the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, which thing I hate.

16 Repent, or els I wil come vnto thee shortly, and wil fight against them with the sword of my mouth.

17 Let him that hath an eare, heare what the Spirit saith vnto the Churches. To him that ouercommeth will I giue to eate Manna that is hid, and will giue him a white stone, and in the stone a newe name written, which no man knoweth, sauing he that receiueth it.

18 And vnto the Angell of the Church of Thyatira, write, These things saith the Sonne of God, who hath eies like vnto a flame of fire, and his feete are like fine brasse.

19 I knowe thy workes, and thy charitie, service, and faith, and thy patience, and thy deedes, which are more at the last then at the first.

20 Notwithstanding, I haue a fewe things against

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 1 1 To the Angel. That which before he willed him to write to the Church, he now willeth to be written to the Angels or Biſhops of the ſame onely, where we ſee, it is all one, to the Church, and to the head or gouernour thereof.

FVLKE. 1 The whole prophecie was commanded to be ſent to the Churches, certaine ſpeciall admonitions and inſtructions to the Angels of the Church, yet pertayning to the whole Church: but hereof it followeth not that euery Church, and the head and gouernour there of is all one.

RHEM. 2 4 Thou haſt left.) By this we ſee is plainely refuted that which ſome heretikes hold, that a man once in grace or charitie can neuer fall from it.

FVLKE. 2 Although the elect can neuer finally fall out of the grace and fauour of God, whereby he loued them in Chriſt, before the world was made: yet they may decay in particuler graces, as in zeale of faith and feruencie of loue for a ſeaſon, and be renewed againe by repentance. The elect can not fall away finally.

RHEM. 3 9 Pouertie.) This Church repreſenteth the ſtate of them that are ſpoiled of their goods, empriſoned, and manifoldly afflicted for the Catholike faith.

FVLKE. 3 The true Catholike Church when it is perſecuted, is often in tribulation and pouertie. But the Papiſts which are puniſhed for their obſtinacie, and contempt of godly lawes, are no more like the Church here puniſhed, then the Donatiſts, that for their like obſtinacie, were puniſhed by pecuniarie mulctes in S. Auguſtines time. Againe, the Engliſh Papiſtes are for the moſt part of the richeſt and wealthieſt perſons in the countries where they dwell: therefore nothing reſembling the Angel of the Church of Smyrna, whether it were Polycarpus, or whoſoeuer he were. Papiſt puniſhed iuſtly.

RHEM. 4 11 Second death.) The death of the body is the firſt death: the death of the ſoule, the ſecond, which martyrs are ſureſt to eſcape of all men.

FVLKE. 4 Not onely martyrs, but all other true Chriſtians, that by faith ouercome the world, are ſure to eſcape the ſecond death, which is damnation: for there is no damnation to them that are in Chriſt Ieſus Rom.8.1. All true Chriſtians ſure to obtaine ſaluation.

RHEM. 5 22 According to his workes.) Who ſeeth not here that good workes deſerue ſaluation, as ill workes damnation: and that it is not faith alone that God rewardeth, but that faith which worketh by charitie.

FVLKE. 5 Neither doe you ſee here, that good workes deſerue ſaluation: neither can you by any good and lawfull argument make any other men to ſee it. That it is none other faith that God rewardeth, but that faith which worketh by charitie, we agree with you, and by that faith we are iuſtified before God without workes, Rom.3. Merite.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. II.

RHEM. 6 1 Holdeth the ſeuen.) Much to be obſerued, that Chriſt hath ſuch care ouer the Church and the Biſhops thereof, that he is ſaid here to beare them vp in his right hand, and to walke in the middes of them: no doubt to vphold and preſerue them and to guide them in all truth. Chriſts care of his Church.

Chriſt

FVLKE.6 Christ preserueth and guideth the Church, and all the true Shepheards thereof in all trueth, so long as they will humbly obey his voice, and be ruled by his word which is the truth: from which, if they will negligently or wilfully decline, they cannot looke that Christ shall preserue them in truth. How the Church may erre.

RHEM. 2 Thy workes, labour, patience &c.) Things required in a Bishop. first, good workes, and great patience in tribulation. next, zeale and sharpe discipline toward offenders is here commended in them. thirdly, wisedome and diligence in trial of false Apostles and preachers comming in sheepeskinnes: where is signified the watchful prouidence that ought to be in them, that Heretikes enter not into their flockes. Speciall vertues required in a Bishop.

RHEM. 7 5 Will moue.) Note that the cause why God taketh the truth from certaine countries, and remoueth their Bishops or Churches into captiuitie or desolation, is the sinne of the Prelates and people. And that is the cause (no doubt) that Christ hath taken away our golden candlesticke, that is, our Church in England. God graunt vs to remember our fall, to doe penance and the former workes of charitie which our first Bishops and Church were notable and renowmed for. Sinne is the cause that God taketh the Cath. faith from countries.

FVLKE.7 If burning charitie, and zeale of popery, coulde haue kept your popish Prelates in their seates of tyrannie, they were not behinde in the time of your last possession of them. But God be praised that hath remoued those cruell wolues, the wasters of his flocke, and hath set vp againe the golden candlesticke of his Church, in which doe shine many godly Bishops and teachers, in heauenly doctrine and Christian conuersation.

RHEM. 6 Because thou hatest.) We see here that of all things, Christian people (specially Bishops) should haue great zeale against Heretikes and hate them, that is, their wicked doctrine and conditions, euen as God hateth them. for which onely zeale, our Lord saith here that he beareth with some Churches and Prelates, and saueth them from perishing. Zeale against Heretikes.

RHEM. 8 6 Of the Nicolaites.) Heretikes haue their callings of certaine persons, as is noted at large Act. 11. 26. These had their name of Nicolas, one of the 7. first Deacons that were chosen Act. 6. Who is thought to haue taught communitie of women or wiues, and that it was lawfull to eate of meate offered to idoles. Which later point is such a thing, as if one shoulde holde it lawfull to receiue the bread or wine of the new Communion, which is a kinde of Idolothyta, that is, idolatrous meates. for though such creatures be good by creation, yet they be made execrable by profane blessings of Heretikes or Idolaters. And concerning the name of Nicolaites giuen here by our Lord himselfe to those Heretikes, it is a very paterne and marke vnto the faithfull for euer, what kinde of men they should be, that should be called after the like sort, Arians, Macedonians, Nestorians, Lutheranes, Zuinglians, &c. See S. Hierom cont. Lucifer. in fine. Nicolaites the first Heretikes so called, as a pa. terne of Arians, Lutherans, and the like peculiar calling.

FVLKE.8 The names of Lutherans and Zuinglians, are but malitious slanders, as of olde time Alexandrians, Athanasians, Ioannites, &c. which were true Catholikes so nicknamed by Heretikes. The bread and wine which we blesse, according to the institution of Christ, in the celebration of the Lordes Supper, are the communion of the body and blood of Christ: therefore he that calleth them idolatrous meates, except he repent in time, shal one day finde the reward of this blasphemie. Hierom against the Luciferians, speaketh against them that were iustly called after any other name then of Christ, because their doctrine was of a later inuention then the doctrine of Christ: as the Marcionites, Valentinians, Montanists, & Papists, and such like. As for our religion, hath not Luther or Zuinglius for the auctors but Christ, as we are able to proue by the holy scriptures: so are not the Papistes able to proue their doctrine, therefore they deny the sufficiencie of holy scriptures. Names of Heretikes.

RHEM. 9 14 To cast a scandal.) Iosephus writeth that when Balaam could not curse Gods people, nor otherwise anoy them, he taught Balac a way how to ouerthrow them: to witte, by presenting vnto them their Heathen women very beautifull: and delicate dishes of meate offered to Bel-phegor: that so being tempted they might fall to Heathenish maners and displease God. To which craftie councell of Balaam the Apostle resembleth Heretikes fraude, who by offering of libertie of meate, women, Church goodes, breach of vowes, and such other licentious allurements, cause many moe to fall, then by their preaching. Balaam ouercomming Gods people by persuasion of lecherie and bellecherie, was a type of Heretikes.

lib. 4. Antiq. c. 6.

2. Pet. 2, 15. Iude. v. 11.

FVLKE.9 We offer no libertie of meates, other then the scripture offereth, which condemneth the prohibition of meates, to be the doctrine of deuils: we allowe no libertie of women, but in holy and lawfull matrimonie: the forbidding whereof the scripture maketh to be a note of deuils apostasie. As for the libertie of Church goodes, we offer not to any man, but if you meane the conuerting of landes and goodes abused to maintaine popish idolatrie, to the maintenance of the crowne and the Realme, you may well remember they were your owne Prelates that committed Abbey landes in King Henries daies vnto the Princes disposition. And if you thinke it carnall libertie to possesse any such Church goodes, you may doe well to perswade a number of your fauorites to renounce the possession of their Abbey landes, and other riches of the Babylonicall Church, and to restore them into the Princes handes. If you refuse so to doe, it is you that graunt libertie of Church goodes more then we. For we do not accompt the goodes and landes of Idolaters, abused to the maintenance of Idolatrie, to be the goodes consecrated to the necessarie and lawfull vses of the Church. As for breach of vowes, we offer no libertie, but as the ancient fathers, Cyprian, Epiphanius, Hierom, & Augustine taught according to the scriptures we affirme the mariage euen of them that haue rashly made a vow of continencie, which they are not able to keepe, to be lawfull mariage, and to be better then the burning celibate, and abhominable life of the Popish Clergie. Epiph. Her. 61. ad Demet. August. de bono viduit cap. 10. Cyprian ep. 62. Forbidding of meates and mariage. Carnall libertie.

RHEM. 10 20 The woman Iezabel.) He warneth Bishops to be zealous and stout against false Prophets and Heretikes of what sort soeuer, by alluding couertly to the example of holy Elias that in zeale killed 450. false prophets of Iezabel, and spared not Achab nor Iezabel them selues, but told them to their faces that they troubled Israel, that is, the faithfull people of God. And whether they were any such great woman then, a furtherer and promotour of the Nicolaites, whom the Prophet should here meane, it is hard to say. Zeale against Heretikes. Achab and Iezabell. 3. Reg. 18.

FVLKE.10 Beda maketh no question, but that there was a woman which contrarie to Ecclesiasticall order, was permitted, not onely to teache, but to teach false doctrine. And so the text is plaine, not onely that shee vsurped the name of a Prophetesse, but also that shee had time of repentance graunted vnto her. Which can not be applied to Achabs wife, who tooke not vpon her to be a prophetesse, neither had time of repentance graunted to her, so many hundreth yeeres after her death. Ambrosius Ambertus saith, that according to some translation, shee was the Bishop of Thyatiras owne wife whom he so tolerated. Neither is the Angel of Thiatyra commaunded to kill her, as Elias by Gods special and extraordinarie commandement slew the false prophets. But your late practises do interprete what you would insinuate, if you thought it conuenient to vtter it in plaine English. Treason and murther.

RHEM. 11 21 Shee will not repent.) See free will here most plainely, and that God is not the proper cause of obduration or impenitence, but man himselfe onely. Our Lord giueth sinners so long life, specially to expect their amendment: but Iezabel (to whom the Apostle here alludeth) would neuer repent. Free wil. God is not author of euil.

FVLKE.11 It is no freedom but miserable captiuitie, to be obdurated in sinne and wickednes. Notwithstanding, whom soeuer God hardeneth, he enforceth not their will, but yet as a iust iudge, not as an euill auctour, he doth properly harden them, which wilfully and obstinately harden themselues. That God giueth time of repentance, Freewill.

it

it maketh ſinners more inexcuſable, but it proueth not that they haue power to repent of their free will, without the grace of God.

RHEM. 12 22 They that commit aduoutrie with her.) Such as communicate with Heretikes, ſhal be damned (alas) with them. for not only ſuch as were in their harts, of Iezabels religion, or inwardly beleeued in Baal, but ſuch as externally for feare worſhipped him (which the Scriptures call, bowing of their knees to Baal) are culpable. as now many bow their knees to the Communion, that bow not their harts. They that communicate with Heretikes, ſhall be damned with them.

3. Reg. 19. v. 18. Ro. 11.

FVLKE. 12 They that receiue the holy Communion as hypocrites, are guiltie of the body and bloud of our Lord, and ſhall not eſcape vengeance vnleſſe they repent, although in outward ſhew they ſeeme to communicate, not with heretikes, but with the Church of Chriſt.

RHEM. 13 26 I will giue him power.) Obſerue that not only Angels haue power and regiment ouer countries vnder God, but now for the honour of Chriſts humane nature, and for his miniſterie in the world, the Saincts deceaſed alſo, being in heauen, haue gouernement ouer men and Prouinces, and therefore haue to do with our affaires in the world. Which is againſt the Heretikes of theſe daies, that to take away our praiers to Saincts, would ſpoile them of many ſouereaine dignities, wherein the Scriptures make them equall with Angels. Saincts alſo are Patrones, not onely Angels.

FVLKE. 13 It can not be prooued that Angels haue power and regiment ouer ſeuerall Countries vnder God, but as they are appointed to ſerue God according to his pleaſure, without any ſuch certaine limitation of places or Countries. But much leſſe it can be proued out of the Scriptures, that the Saincts departed haue gouernement ouer men or prouinces, or any thing to doe with our affaires in this worlde. For the power that our Sauiour Chriſt promiſeth to giue to euery Chriſtian that ouercommeth, is the participation of his kingdome and heauenly inheritance ouer all the world wich God giueth him, as it is in the 2. Pſalme: and not a ſpeciall commiſſion to one Sainct ouer one Countrie, and to an other ouer an other Countrie. As George for England, Denis for Fraunce, &c. but participation of his generall inheritance to euery one of his Saincts. That is, ſpiritually to ouercome the world by faith in this life, and after this life, when they are perfectly vnited to him at the time of the vniuerſall iudgement, he will actually put them in full poſſeſſion of his royall inheritance. The auctour of the Commentaries that goe vnder the name of S. Auguſtine doth thus expound this text Hom. 2. The Church in Chriſt hath this power, ſeeing with him God hath giuen vs all things, as the Apoſtle ſaith, He calleth the rodde of Iron for the rigour of iuſtice, and by the ſame rodde the good are corrected, and the wicked broken in pieces. So ſaith Beda vpon this text: The Church hath this power in Chriſt as the body in the head. In whom according to the Apoſtle, God hath giuen vs all things. Arethas vnderſtandeth it partly of the gouernment of the Church in this life, partly of the reward in the day of iudgement. To him which ſhall get a price by fighting and wreſtling, I will for a triumph of victorie giue power ouer the nations, as our Lord ſaith in the Goſpels, to him which had rightly diſpenſed his pounds & talents, be thou ruler ouer ten Cities, and to an other, ouer fiue Cities: for theſe things ſignifie a certaine gouernment and power giuen to the Saincts ouer them that are weaker, and them that haue need to be directed: therefore it is written, The rodde of thy kingdome is a rod of direction, for that which is ſaid is wont to be ſignified by the rodde of direction, meaning, that it bringeth not ſuch correction as puniſheth, but ſuch as reformeth. But the Iron rodde no man ſaith to be giuen to any other ende, but to breake in pieces, by the puniſhment of thoſe which are clothed with diſobedience, and are like to earthen pots. As alſo the rodde of power, was not ſent out of Sion for any other end, but to rule. And becauſe an Iron rod is promiſed to euery one that ouercommeth, and they were thoſe which by ready obedience were purchaſed to God, they alſo ſhalbe iudges of the vnbeleeuers, becauſe the Lord ſaith: that euen the Niniuites ſhalbe raiſed vp vnto iudgement or condemnation of the froward generation. Victorinus ſaith briefly according to this laſt ſentence of Arethas: It is as much to ſay, as he ſhall make him a iudge among the reſt of the Saincts. Ambroſius Ansbertus who wrote about 700. yeeres agoe, interpreteth this reward firſt to be promiſed to all the elect: That power (ſaith he) which the onely begotten Sonne of God being made man in time receiued of his father, he promiſeth to giue to his elect, but in himſelfe by whom the whole body is ruled, and vnto whom the whole body of the Church is vnited. For he (as the Apoſtle ſaith) is the head of all the elect. If any member therefore ſhall be worthy to continue with the head, he is truely ſaid to haue that which the head himſelfe is proued to poſſeſſe by right of inheritance. Secondly more ſpecially he applieth it to the preachers that gouerne the nations, whom by preaching they conuert with the word and diſcipline in this life, whom after the end of their labours, they ſhall not gouerne, but reſt with them for euer. Conſtat, &c. It is certaine that whoſoeuer ſhall come to the ende of his labour, ſhall now no more gouerne the people, but with them whom he hath ſtudied to gouerne, ſhall reſt with them. Rupertus vnderſtandeth it onely of the doctrine and diſcipline of the Church. Richardus de ſancto victore, not onely of the doctrine and diſcipline of the Church in this life, but alſo of the iudgement and condemnation of the wicked, with Chriſt in the ende of the world. Haymo expoundeth it firſt of the reward, that all the elect do poſſeſſe by inheritance as the members of Chriſt, to whom it belongeth principally, Secondly of the doctrine and diſcipline of the Church. So that this is a new and inforced interpretation neuer heard of before in the Church, that the ſaincts deceaſed ſhould haue gouernment ouer men and prouinces, and to doe in the affaires of this world, &c. Which was neuer heard of, nether in the ancient Church, or of the elder ſort of writers in the Romiſh Church, neither can it be proued out of the text. Therfore your prayers to ſaincts, or other ſoueraigne dignities aſcribed to them by the Papiſts, haue no ground in the Scriptures, either vpon this text or vpon any other. Angels. Saincts departed haue no gouernment ouer men liuing, prouinces in the world.

CHAP. III.

RHEM. 1 He is commanded to write to the Churches of Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicia: recalling them that erre to penance by threatning, but praiſing the reſt, and promiſing reward to him that ouercommeth: 15 deteſting alſo the cold indifferent Chriſtian. 20 He ſaith that God knocketh at the doore of mens harts by offering his grace, for to enter into him that will open vnto him by conſent of free will.

FVLKE. 1 There is nothing in this Chapter to proue that man hath ſuch freedome of will, that he can giue any conſent to Gods calling, but as of vnwilling, he is framed and turned by Gods grace to be willing. Free will.

AND to the Angel of the Church of Sardis, write, Thus ſaith he that hath the ſeuen Spirits of God, and the ſeuen ſtarres, I know thy works, that thou haſt the name that thou liueſt, and thou art dead.

2 Be vigilant, & confirme the reſt of the things

AND write vnto the Angel of the Church that is at Sardis, Theſe things ſaith hee that hath the ſeuen ſpirits of God, and the ſeuen ſtarres, I knowe thy workes, euen that thou haſt a name that thou liueſt, and thou art dead.

2 Be awake and ſtrengthen the things which remaine, things which were to die. For I finde not thy workes ful before my God.

3 Haue in minde therfore in what maner thou haſt receiued and heard: and keepe,& do penance. If therefore thou watch not, *I wil come to thee as a theefe, and thou ſhalt not know what houre I will come to thee.

4 But thou haſt a few names in Sardis, ‘which haue not defiled their garments:and they ſhal walke with me in whites, becauſe they ‡ are worthy.

4 ‖He that ſhall ouercome, ſhal thus be veſted in white garments, and I wil not put his name out of the booke of life, and I will confeſſe his name before my father, and before his Angels.

6 He that hath an eare, let him heare what the Spirit ſaith to the Churches.

7 And to the Angel of the Church of Philadelphia write,Thus ſaith the Holy one and the True one, he that hath the * key of Dauid: he that openeth,and no man ſhutteth: ſhutteth,and no man openeth.

Eſa.22,22.

8 I know thy works.Behold I haue giuen before thee a doore opened which no man can ſhut:becauſe thou haſt a litle power,and haſt kept my word, and haſt not denied my name.

9 Behold I wil giue of the ſynagogue of Satan,which ſay they be Iewes, and are not, but doe lie. Behold I wil make them come and ‖adore before thy feete. and they ſhall know that I haue loued thee.

10 Becauſe thou haſt kept the word of my patience, and I wil keepe thee from the houre of tentation, which ſhall come vpon the whole world to tempt the inhabitants on the earth.

11 Behold I come quickly:hold that which thou haſt,‖that no man take thy crowne.

12 He that ſhal ouercome, I wil make him a piller in the temple of my God: and he ſhal goe out no more: and I will write vpon him the name of my God, and the name of the citie of my God, new Hieruſalem which deſcendeth out of heauen from my God, & my new name.

13 He that hath an eare, let him heare what the Spirit ſaith to the Churches.

14 And to the Angel of the Church of Laodicia write,Thus ſaith ‘Amen,the faithful and true witneſſe, *which is the beginning of the creature of God.

7 And write vnto the Angel of the Church of Philadelphia, Theſe things ſaith he that is holy and true, which hath the key of Dauid, which openeth, and no man ſhutteth, and ſhutteth, and no man openeth.

8 I know thy workes: behold, I haue ſet before thee an open doore, and no man can ſhut it: for thou haſt a little ſtrength, and haſt kept my ſayings, and haſt not denied my Name.

9 Beholde, I will make them of the ſynagogue of Satan, which call themſelues Iewes, and are not, but doe lie: beholde, I will make them that they ſhall come and worſhip before thy feete, and ſhall know that I haue loued thee.

10 Becauſe thou haſt kept the wordes of my patience, therefore I will keepe thee from the houre of temptation, which will come vpon all the world, to trie them that dwell vpon the earth.

11 Beholde, I come ſhortly, holde that faſt which thou haſt, that no man take away thy crowne.

12 Him that ouercommeth, will I make a pillar in the Temple of my God, and he ſhall goe no more out: and I wil write vpon him the Name of my God, and the name of the citie of my God, which is newe Hieruſalem, which commeth downe out of heauen from me God: and I will write vpon him my new name.

14 And vnto the angel of the Church which is in Laodicea, write, Theſe things ſaith Amen, the faithful & true witneſſe, the beginning of the creatures of God.

15 I knowe thy workes, that thou art neither colde nor hotte: I would they were colde or hotte.

16 So then becauſe thou art luke warme, and nethier colde nor hot, I will ſpewe thee out of my mouth:

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. III.

RHEM. 2 4 *Which haue not.) Such as haue not committed deadly sinne after baptisme.

FVLKE.2 There is no man which liueth after Baptisme, but he committeth sinne worthie of death euery day: yet they are said not to defile their garments which doe not yeelde vnto grieuous sinnes, and continue in them. Arethas expoundeth it of them which haue not defiled this garment of the flesh with filthie actions. Rupertus likewise which haue kept their bodies vncorrupted. Richardus de S. Victore also of them that haue not committed heinous offences, or else haue washed their garments cleane by dayly repentance. So also doth Ambrosius Anssbertus vnderstand it. None free from sinne.

RHEM. 3 4 Are worthy.) Note that there is in man a worthinesse of the ioyes of heauen, by holy life, and this is a common speach in holy Scripture, that man is worthie of God, of heauen, of saluation.

FVLKE.3 They are worthy by the worthinesse of Christ, and not by the merite of their owne workes. Rich. de S. Victore saith in the person of Christ. I take them that are worthie to be my companions, the vnworthy I leaue. But they that are worthie should by no meanes be worthy, except they receiued their worthines of me. Ambros. Ansb. saith likewise in the person of Christ, of them that haue not sinned grieuously after Baptisme: Either because they are cleane, or because they are worthy by my acceptation. Merite.

RHEM. 4 20 Knocke, if.) God first calleth vpon man and knocketh at the doore of his hart: that is to say, offereth his grace, and it lieth in man to giue consent by free will holpen also by his grace.

FVLKE.4 It lieth not in the freedome of mans will, to giue consent to Gods calling, before his captiue will be enlarged by the grace of God. The grace of God therefore doeth not onely helpe, but wholy conuert man according to the Scripture: Conuert vs, ô Lord, and we shall be conuerted, Ps.80. & 85. Ierem.31.18. & 19. Free will.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. III.

RHEM. 5 5 He that shall ouercome.) In all these speaches to diuers Bishops and their Churches, he continually encourageth them to constancie in faith and good life, by setting before their eies the reward of the next life. And yet the Caluinists would haue no man doe good in respect of such reward. Doing well in respect of reward.

FVLKE.5 A false slander: Caluine would haue men to be encouraged to doe good in hope of the reward, but not onely nor chiefly in respect of reward, but rather for the glory of God, and of loue and duety towards God. The end of well doing.

RHEM. 6 9 Adore before thy feete.) You see this word of adoration is in Scripture vsed for worship of creatures also, and that to fall before the feete of holy men or Angels for duety and reuerence, is not idolatrie, except the proper honour due to God, be giuen vnto them. See the Annotations vpon the 19. and 22. Chapter concerning the Apostles prostration before the Angell. And the Aduersaries euasion, saying that the adoration was of God onely: and that, before the feete of the party, signifieth nothing else but, in his presence, is false and against the phrase of Scriptures. as 4. Reg. 4. where the Sunamite adored Eliseus, falling downe before his feete. and 4. Reg. 2. the sonnes of the Prophets adored him in the same sort. and here it is adoration cannot be meant but of the Bishop or Angell of Philadelphia, because he promiseth this honour as a reward; and as an effect of his loue towards him, saying, And they shall know that I haue loued thee. And that which he saith in the 22. Chapter, I fell downe to adore before the feete of the Angell; the very same he expresseth in the 19. Chapter, I fell before his feete to adore him: making it all one, to adore before his feete, and to adore him. Adoration of creatures called Dulia.

FVLKE.6 The word which the Apostle vseth, signifieth to do reuerence by bowing the body. And this may be done to creatures, when ciuil reuerence is onely intended: as to Princes, Magistrates, and other men in any dignitie. And so haue Angels (appearing in the shape of men) beene reuerenced without offence by holy persons, as three Angels by Abraham, before he knew they were Angels, or that one of them was Christ, or represented the person of God. But religious reuerence is due onely to God, and not to be giuen either to holy men or Angels. Therefore Peter forbiddeth Cornelius to worship him, who did not worship him as God, but as a diuine man with religious worship Acts 10. So the Angel forbiddeth Iohn to worship him Apoc. 19. who knew that the Angel was not God, and purposed not to worship him as God, but yet to giue him religious worship, which is due onele to God. Therefore if the adoration be meant here of the Bishop of Philadelphia, (as it is not vnlike) it signifieth such reuerence as is due to a godly bishop, and as the Sunamite and the sonnes of the Prophets did to Eliseus, not any religious worship which is wholy due to God. Yet Arethas seemeth to take it otherwise: He saith they shall runne to the Church not after a common sort, but with great fewor & contrition, for that he meaneth by adoring, and shall those to be placed among them that are lowest or least in the Church. But though he meane they shall acknowledge Adoration with religious reuerence, due onely to God.

knowledge him to be a true paſtour, and yeeld vnto him that honour which is due to them that gouerne well, yet this place proueth not that any religious worſhip is to be giuen to any creature. Ambroſ. Ansbert. vnderſtandeth this adoration to pertaine to the whole Church, and ſheweth wherein it conſiſteth: Quid enim eſt, &c. What is it for the Iewes to adore before the feete of the Church, but by imitating to worſhip, and by worſhipping to imitate the examples of her action.

RHEM. 7. 11 That no man take thy crowne.) That is, his crowne of euerlaſting life and glory, if he perſeuere not to the end in faith and good workes: otherwiſe an other ſhall enter into his place, as Mathias did both to the dignitie of the Apoſtleſhip, and to the heauenly crowne due for the well vſing and executing of the ſame function: which Iudas might and ſhould haue had if he had perſeuered to the end, and as the Gentiles came into the grace and place of the Iewes. Other difficulties concerning this kinde of ſpeach are reſolued in Schoolemen, and are not here to be ſtoode vpon. Perſeuerance in good and continuing to the end.

FVLKE. 7. Exhortations to perſeuerance, doe not take away the certainetie of Gods election, who hath choſen thoſe that continue to the ende. The heauenly crowne due to the well vſing of the Apoſtolike function, is due by the promiſe of God, not of the merite of mans worke or labour. Iudas perſeuered not to the ende, becauſe he was from the beginning a reprobate, and the childe of perdition, Iohn 17. Gods election certaine. Merite.

RHEM. 16 Lukewarme.) Zeale and fervour is commendable, ſpecially in Gods cauſe: and the Neuters that be neither hote nor cold, are to Chriſt and his Church burdenous and lothſome, as lukewarme water is to a mans ſtomacke, prouoking him to vomite. and therefore he threateneth to voide vp ſuch Neuters out of his mouth. Neuters or indifferents in religion.

CHAP. IIII.

1. A doore being open in heauen, he ſaw one ſitting in a throne, 4 and round about him foure and twentie ſeniors ſitting, 6 and the foure beaſtes here deſcribed, 9 which with the 24. ſeniors continually glorified him that ſate in the throne.

The 2. part firſt, the booke with 7. ſeales: ſecondly, 7 Angels with trumpets. THE 2. VISION. In which is repreſented vnto vs the glorie and maieſtie of God in heauen, and the inceſſant honour and prayſes of all Angels and Saincts, aſſiſting him. Which is reſembled in the dayly honour done to him by all orders and ſortes of holy men in the Church militant alſo.

AFter theſe thinges I looked, and behold a doore open in heauen, and the firſt voice which I heard, was as it were of a trompet ſpeaking with me, ſaying, Come vp hither, and I will ſhew thee the thinges which muſt be done quickliy after theſe.

2 Immediatly I was in ſpirit: and behold there was a ſeate ſette in heauen, and vpon the ſeate one ſitting,

3 And he that ſate, was like in ſight, to the Iaſper ſtone, & the Sardine: and there was a raine-bowe round about the ſeate, like to the ſight of an Emeraud.

4 And rounde about the ſeate, foure and twentie ſeates: and vpon the thrones, foure and twentie ſeniors ſitting, clothed about in white garments, and on their heads crownes of gold.

5 And from the throne proceeded lightenings, and voices, and thunders: and ſeuen lamps burning before the throne, which are the ſeuen Spirits of God.

6 And in the ſight of the ſeate, as it were a ſee of glaſſe like to chryſtal & in ỹ middes of the ſeate & round about the ſeate ‡ foure beaſtes full of eyes before and behind.

7 And the firſt beaſt, like to a Lyon: and the ſecond beaſt, like to a calfe: and the third beaſt hauing the face as it were of a man: and the fourth beaſt, like to an egle flying.

8 And the foure beaſtes, euery one of them had ſix wings round about: and within they are full of eies. and they had no reſt day and night, ſaying ‖ Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God omnipotent, which was, and which is, and which ſhall come. Eſ. 6, 3.

9 And when thoſe beaſtes gaue glorie and honour and benediction to him that ſitteth vpon the throne, that liueth for euer ond euer.

10 The foure and twentie ſeniors fell downe before him that ſitteth in the throne, and adored him that liueth for euer and euer

AFter this I looked, and beholde, a doore was open in heauen: and the firſt voyce which I heard, was as it were of a trumpet talking with me, which ſaide, Come vp hither, and I will ſhew thee thinges which muſt be fulfilled hereafter.

2 And immediatly I was in the ſpirit: and beholde, a throne was ſet in heauen, and one ſate on the throne,

3 And he that ſate was to looke vpon like a Iaſper ſtone, and a Sardine ſtone: and there was a raine-bowe about the throne, in ſight like vnto an Emeralde.

4 And about the throne were foure and twentie ſeates, and vpon the ſeates I ſaw foure and twentie Elders ſitting clothed in white rayment, and they had on their heades crownes of golde.

5 And out of the throne doe proceede lightnings, and thunderings, and voyces: and there were ſeuen lampes of fire burning before the throne, which are the ſeuen Spirites of God.

6 And before the throne there was a ſea of glaſſe, like vnto Chryſtall: and in the middeſt of the throne, and rounde about the throne, were foure beaſtes full of eyes before and behinde.

7 And the firſt beaſt was like a Lion, and the ſecond beaſt like a Calfe, and the third beaſt had a face as a man, and the fourth beaſt was like a flying Egle.

8 And the foure beaſts had echo of them ſixe wings about him, and they were full of eyes within, and they had no reſt day neither night, ſaying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God almightie, which was, and is, and is to come.

9 And when thoſe beaſtes gaue glorie, and honour, & thanks to him that ſate on the throne, which liueth for euer and euer, Chryſoſtome affirmeth, (and there is no doubt of it,) but the Angels are preſent, at the celebration of the holy myſteries, and alwaies yeeld dewe honour to God and Chriſt. But of Popiſh conſecration, or adoration of the ſacrament, he ſpeaketh not although he amplifie the dignitie of the myſteries, by the excellencie of him that is repreſented by them, and is ſpiritually receiued of the faithfull: in which reſpect, he ſaith, in the former place by you quoted, that the common Lord of all, is touched or handled continually. That the Angels are preſent with the Prieſt, and the whole order of heauenly powers cryeth out, and the place rounde about the altar, is filled for the honor of him that lyeth there on. And againſt them that came vnreuerently to the Lords table, he ſaith in the other place, Doeſt thou not conſider, that the Angels are preſent at this wonderfull table, and doe compaſſe it about with reuerence? This proueth not that Chriſt is preſent, after any corporall maner of preſence, but ſpiritually to the faith of the worthy receiuers. For otherwiſe he is no more touched, then he is ſeene, and is neither lying nor ſtanding, nor after any bodyly geſture vpon the table, but preſent by his grace and ſpirite, to aſſure the faithfull of their ſpirituall incorporation with him, and nouriſhing by him. MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. V.

RHEM. 1 1 Booke written) He speaketh not of the damned in Hell, of whom there could be no question: but of the faithfull in Abrahams bosome, and in Purgatorie.

FVLKE. 1 He speaketh generally of all creatures, either in the world, or without, therefore you haue corruptly translated it, no man, whereby it might be thought, that some Angels could read it, though no man could. Neither can you proue your Limbo or purgatorie out of this place, rather then the Gentiles their Elysian fieldes. You say there could be no question of the damned in hell: And what question I pray you is there made of them, that are vnder the earth? You might as well say, seeing none in heauen was able, it was but folly to adde, or in earth, seeing there could be no question that any in earth were able to doe that, which none in heauen could perfourme. Againe, by your owne doctrine, Abraham before this time was remoued out of hell into heauen, with all the faithfull that were in his bosome: therefore they were not at the time of this vision vnder the earth, vnlesse perhaps in respect of their bodies. Therefore when neither the Angels, nor the soules of the faithfull in heauen could read the booke, what question could there be of the soules in purgatorie? All men therefore see, vpon how vaine a surmise, you would gather purgatory or Limbus out of this text. Limbus or purgatory.

RHEM. 2 9 Because thou wast slaine.) This maketh against the Caluinists who are not content to say that we merite not, but that Christ merited not for himselfe. Calu. Philip.2.v 9.

FVLKE. 2 This proueth not, that Christ did merite his glory which is due to him in respect of his diuinitie, but that by the glorious worke of redemption, he hath declared himselfe to be a person worthy of all honour and glorie.

RHEM. 3 13 To the Lambe.) All the said creatures are bound to giue honour, not onely to God, but to Christ as man, and our redeemer: and so they here do.

FVLKE. 3 All creatures, are bound to giue honour to Christ God and man, for the inseparable vnion of the two natures in one person. This note fauoureth somewhat of Nestorianisme, belike as though the meaning were, that if honour be not dewe onely to God, but to Christ as man, it is dewe also to other men. As Allen defendeth Christ to forgiue sinnes, not onely as God, but as man also, that he might proue that Priests forgiue sinnes as properly as Christ.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. V.

RHEM. 4 8 The prayers of Saincts.) Hereby it is plaine that the Saincts in heauen offer vp the prayers of faithfull and holy persons in earth (called here Saincts, and in Scripture often) vnto Christ. And among so many diuine and vnsearchable mysteries set downe without exposition it pleased God yet, that the Apostle himselfe should open this one point vnto vs, that these odours be the lauds and prayers of the faithfull, ascending and offered vp to God as incense, by the Saincts in heauen, that so the Protestants may haue no excuse of their errour, That the Saincts haue no knowledge of our affaires or desires. The Saincts in heauen offer our prayers to God.

FVLKE. 4 This place proueth not that the Saincts in heauen, doe offer vp the prayers of the Saincts in earth. For the foure and twentie Elders, doe represent the Church militant heare on earth, whose conuersation is in heauen as it is plaine by the tenth verse following. And so doe all the interpreters olde and newe commonly expound Prayers of Saincts.

expound it. Therefore you come to late with your gloſſe, to proue that Saincts in heauen, offer vp the prayers of the faithfull on earth. For the text is, that all the faithfull doe offer vp their prayers and thankeſgiuing for their redemption. Beda vpon the tenth verſe ſaith. Here it is more plainely declared, that the beaſtes and the Elders are the Church, which is redeemed by the bloud of Chriſt and gathered of the nations. Alſo he ſheweth in what heauen they are ſaying, they ſhall reigne vpon the earth. Haymo ſaith, All the elect are kings, becauſe they ſuffer not the tyrannie of vices to riſe vp in them ſelues &c. while they doe thus, they are Kings vpon the earth, becauſe they beate downe carnall and earthly deſires, and by the lawes of vertue, raigne as it were ouer the earth, that is ſubdued to them. Theſe two may ſuffice for an example of the reſt.

RHEM. 5 10 A kingdome and prieſts.) To ſerue God and ſubdue vices and ſinnes, is to reigne or to be a king ſpiritually. likewiſe to offer vnto him the ſacrifices of good works, is to be a prieſt after a ſort: though neither the one nor the other in proper ſpeach. See the Annotation before Chap. 1. v. 5. Spirituall kings and Prieſts.

FVLKE. 5 The ſpeach is true, though it be of a ſpirituall kingdome and ſacrificing prieſthood: not of an earthly kingdome, nor of a carnall prieſthood, ſuch as was the prieſthood of Aaron, which figured the eternall ſacrificing prieſthood of Chriſt, which he accompliſhed in one ſacrifice of eternall vertue.

RHEM. 6 13 Euery creature.) He meaneth the creatures in heauen, as Angels and Saincts. the holy perſon in earth, and thoſe that were in Limbo, or be in purgatorie (for of the damned in hell he cannot ſpeake in this caſe:) laſtly, of the peoples in Ilands (here called the ſea) which the Prophets vſe often to name ſeuerally. when they foretell the ſpreading of Chriſts glory through the world. as Eſa. c. 49. Here ye Ilandes and you people a farre of. &c. Limbus Patrum and Purgatorie.

FVLKE. 6 That which the Apoſtle ſaith of euery creature you doe violently reſtraine to angels and ſaincts, of whom he ſpake before. The foure and twentie Elders and the infinite thouſands of Angels. And now followeth the glory of God and Chriſt, acknowledged generally by all creatures of the world. Therefore here is no place for Limbo or purgatorie. Of all creatures (ſaith Arethas) as well inteleCtuall as ſenſible, as well liuing, as hauing onely their being by naturall meanes, God is glorified as the beginning and Auctour of all things, and his onely begotten Sonne of the ſame ſubſtance, and his moſt holy and quickening ſpirite. Rupertus alſo after he had ſhewed that all creatures in generall and not Angels and Saincts onely praiſe God, becauſe you ſay the damned in hell can not ſpeake in this caſe: ſaith thus of them. The power euen the creature that is vnder the earth, namely that which is incloſed in the priſon of hell, doth aſcribe vnto him, yet not with voluntarie confeſſion, but by conſtreined confeſſion of obedience. For euen the malignant ſpirites whither they will or no, ſhall acknowledge the power of him that ſitteth vpon the throne, and of the Lambe. Ambroſius Auſbertus, alſo vnderſtandeth it of the bowing of all knees, euen in them that are in hell according to the Apoſtle Phil. 2. Haymo likewiſe vnderſtandeth it of all creatures generally euen of the diuels in hell, which are ſubiect to the power of Chriſt, and muſt acknowledge his glory. Neither is there any auncient interpretor, that reſtraineth this creature, to reaſonable and holy creatures onely. And the text is manifeſt of all creatures in all partes of the world, and not of Angels or men onely. Therefore Limbo and purgatorie, cannot be foyſted into this text. Limbus et purgatorium.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. VI.

RHEM. 1 9 Vnder the altar.) Christ as man (no doubt) is this altar, vnder which the soules of all Martyrs liue in heauen, expecting their bodies, as Christ their head, hath his body there already. And for correspondance to their place or state in heauen, the Church vseth commonly their bodies also or relikes neere or vnder the altars, where our Sauiors body is offered in the holy Masse: and hath a speciall prouiso that no altars be erected or consecrated without some part of a Saincts body or relike. Conc. But for this purpose, note well the words of S. Augustine (or what other ancient writer soeuer was the author thereof)* Ser. 11. de Sanctis. Vnder the altar (saith he) of God I saw the soules of the slaine. What is more reuerent or honorable, then to rest vnder that altar on which sacrifice is done to God, and in which our Lord is the Priest: as it is written. Thou art a Priest according to the order of Melchisedec? Rightly doe the soules of the iust rest vnder the altar, because vpon the altar our Lords body is offered: neither without cause doeth he iust there call for reuenge of their bloud, where also the bloud of Christ is shed for sinners, and many other goodly words to that purpose.

Consecration of altars with Saincts relikes.

This (saith he) the wicked heretike Vigilantius (as S. Hierom writing against him witnesseth) abused to proue, that the soules of Martyrs & other Saincts were included in some certaine place, that they could not be present at their bodies & monuments (where Christian people vsed in the primitiue Church to pray vnto them, as Catholike men do yet) nor be where they list, or whether soeuer pray vnto them. To which the holy doctor answereth at large, that they be where soeuer Christ is according to his humanitie: for vnder that altar they be. Part of his wordes be these, that you may see how this blessed father confuted in that heresie the Caluinists al long before they were borne. Doest thou (saith he) prescribe lawes to God? Doest thou seuer the Apostles, that they may be kept in prison till the day of iudgement, and be kept from their Lord, of whom it is written, They follow the Lambe whither soeuer he goeth. If the Lambe be in euery place, then they that be with the Lambe, must be euery where. And if the diuell and wicked spirites gadding abroad in the world with passing celeritie, be present euery where: shal holy Martyrs after the shedding of their bloud, be kept close vnder an altar, that they cannot sturre out from thence? So answereth this learned doctor.

Saincts be present at their tombes and relikes.

The Caluinists heresie concerning the Saincts confuted by S. Hierom long agoe. Apoc. 14

Which

Which misliketh our Caluinists so much, that they charge him of great errour, in that he saith, Christ according to his humanitie is euery where, as though he were an Vbiquetarie Protestant. Where, if they had any iudgement, they might perceiue that he meaneth not, that Christ or his Saincts should be personally present at once in euery place at the, as God is: but that their motion, speed, and agilitie to be where they list, is incomparable, and that their power and operation is accordingly, which they may learne to be the holy Doctors meaning, by the wordes that folow of the Diuel and his ministers: whom he affirmeth to be euery where no otherwise but by their exceeding celeritie of being and working mischiefe now in one place, now in an other, and that in a moment. For though they be spirites, yet are they not euery where at once according to their essence. And for our new Diuines it were a hard thing to determine, how long Satan (that told our Lord he had circuited the earth) was in his iourney, and in the particular consideration and tentation of Iob: and how many men he assaulted in that his one circuit. No, no. Such curious companions know nothing, nor beleue nothing, but that they see with corporall eyes, and teach nothing but the way to infidelitie.

They vnlearnedly accuse S. Hierome as an Vbiquest.

How S. Hierome saith, Christ and his Saincts are euery where, Iob. 1.

FVLKE. 1 Your popish laying of the Martyrs bones (if they were the Martyrs bones) hath no correspondence with the lying of their soules vnder Christ, the heauenly altar. For your laying of their bones, is to haue them in a readines, for them that will commit idolatrie vnto them, and offer a reward vnto you. As for your altars, on which you offer the sacrifice of the masse, are so many blasphemies against the onely spirituall altar Christ, and the onely earthly altar whereon his sacrifice was offred, euen the crosse of Christ. Where you say, that your Church hath a speciall prouiso, that no altar be erected or consecrated without some part of Saincts bodies or reliques, and alleage for it the decree of the 2. Councell of Africa, cap. 50. and 5. Carth. c. 14. you abuse the reader: for there is no such prouiso in that decree. But that such superstitious altars as were set vp in euery corner of the countrey, by dreames or like superstitious conceipts, for memories of martyrs, shoulde bee removed. And that no altar should be erected as the memorie of a martyr, except there were some certaine tokens of such memorie, as their bodies, or the place of their dwelling, &c. I will set downe the decree, that the Reader may see how strong superstition was at that time, toward the reuelation of Antichrist, that the Fathers of the Church could not quietly represse it.

Reliques.

It is decreed, that the altars, which are set vp euery where in the fieldes, or in the wayes, as memories of martyres, In which no bodies or reliques of martyres are proued to be buried, be ouerthrowen by the Bishops of those places, if it may be. But if by meanes of tumult of the people, that can not be suffered to be done, yet let the people be admonished, that they frequent not those places, that they which be well aduised, be not there holden and bound with any superstition. And let no memory of martyres be allowed and accepted, except the body or some vndoubted reliques be there, or that some originall of their habitation, or possession, or suffering be there, deliuered from a most faithfull beginning. As for those altars, that are set vp in euery place by dreames, and vaine reuelations of any men, let them be by all meanes disallowed. You see of what Altars the Decree speaketh, namely, such as were vaunted to bee the memoryes of Martyres, where either was none, or but counterfeit monuments of the Martyres, such as bee most common in popery. S. Hierom against Vigilantius, defendeth the immoderate estimation of reliques, yet he vtterly denyeth adoration of them, or of the Martyres themselues, which you defend. S. Augustine also denyeth that the Priest standing at the altar, ouer the body of any Martyr, doth offer sacrifice to the Martyr, but to God only. And saith that all religious seruices vsed in the places of the Martyrs, are tokens ornaments of their memories, not things consecrated, or sacrifices of the dead men, as of gods. As for Gregorie liuing so neere the reuelation of Antichrist, it is no maruail, though he be more superstitious in reliques, yet he alloweth no such worship of them, as is in popery, but laying of them vp about the altars. That the Prophet alludeth to such custome of buriall of the Martyrs vnder the altar, it is a fond imagination when there were neither such Churches, nor Altars in his time. That which you cite out of the auctor of the Serm. De sanctis, is of their soules in heauen, and concerning the burial of their bodies, he sayth afterward. Therefore conueniently, and as it were for a certaine company or fellowship, the buriall of the Martyrs, is decreed to be there, where the Lordes death is daily celebrated, as hee himself saith: as often as you shall doe these things, you shall shew my death vntil I come againe, that they which died for his death, might rest vnder the mysteries of his Sacrament. But concerning the buriall of the Martyres bodies, it is certaine the Apostle speaketh not, but of the blessed rest of their soules. But this place you say, Vigilantius abused to prooue, that they coulde not bee present at their bodies, and monuments as S. Hierome witnesseth. But S. Hierome in this case is a partiall witnesse, inueighing against Vigilantius, which was as good a Catholike as hee, and allowed by godly Bishops of his countrey. Although Hierome strooue against them, as he doth against Vigilantius. Who did iustly mislike, the superstitious estimation of reliques, and did write a booke against it, which Hierom doth not confute with argumentes so much, as with raylyng, as Erasmus confesseth But to the matter, Vigilantius sayd, (as S. Hierome confesseth) That the soules of the Apostles and Martyres, were stilled either in Abrahams bosome, or in a place of rest, or vnder the altar of God, and coulde not be present at their graues, and where they list. Now let vs see what S. Hierome doeth answere. First, Wilt thou prescribe Lawes to God? No verely, but Gods Law prescribeth a place of rest vnto the soules of the departed, and not I, might Vigilantius answere. Secondly, Doest thou fetter the Apostles, &c. How vnworthy is this question of S. Hieroms learning? as though the Apostles were fettered, when they be limited by God to a place of rest, or coulde bee thought to bee kept in prison, when they are saide to remaine in heauen. That which is saide of them that followe the Lambe is not necessary to bee vnderstood, of the soules in heauen, but of them that immitate him on the earth: at least it must bee vnderstoode of all the elect, whereof many are in the Church vpon earth. Therefore it is no good conclusion, that the Saincts are euery where, because the Lambe whom they follow is euery where. Beside this absurditie, that followeth of it, that if the soules of the saincts bee present at their sepulchres, because they followe the Lambe, the Lambe also Christ in his humanitie, is present at the sepulchres of the Martyres. Finally, the reason that is taken of the celeritie or agilitie of deuilles, is vnsufficient to prooue, that the soules of martyres, passe to and fro in the worlde, as the deuilles doe. For the deuilles, not onelie by propertie of their nature, but also by Gods sufferaunce, haue such passage in the worlde, but the Saincts, by God are assigned to rest, in their place of heauenlynes, vntil the day of iudgement. Nowe whether Hierome did holde the errour of vbiquitie of Christes humanitie, it is to be thought, that hee did not, vpon good aduisement, though he thus reason against Vigilantius. And yet the conclusion must be such, or else the argument hath no shewe of reason. For except the soules of Saincts, can be in many places at one instant, how can they be present, at euery place where their reliques are, which in that time were dispersed into many places? Therefore by shew of this argument, Hierome would seeme to make them euery where with Christ, that it might be thought, they were not included in any place. But let vs see what a good Patrone Hierome hath of the Rhemists. First you say, they be vnlearned that accuse S. Hierome of this errour. But it is knowen, that many in this time, and some of those, that charge him with this errour, were as well learned as S. Hierome him-himselfe: at leastwise not inferiour in learning, to any English Papist in Rhemes. But if they had any iudgement (say you) they might perceiue, that he meaneth not, that Christ and his Saincts are personally present at once in euery place, but that their motion and agilitie to bee where they list, is incomparable, and their power accordingly. We may thinke in deede, that he holdeth it not as a resolute determination, that Christ or his Saincts are euery where, but yet his sophisticall argument importeth no lesse. For that which followeth of the celeritie of the diuels is an other argument, and not a declaration of his meaning in the former. But euen this shift of descant is insufficient, to excuse him of errour. For that you cannot otherwise institute his argument, except you will acknowledge that Christ is personally present in all those places, wheresoeuer the soules of the martyrs are supposed to be present with their reliques. And so he must according to his humanitie, be personally present in his manhood, in places innumerable, not onely in the Sacrament, but also in euery place where the Saincts reliques are, which I suppose your good masters of Sorbon, will not easily admit for a trueth. Yea the soules themselues must often be in many places at one instant: for their celeritie and agilitie will not serue them to be at diuers places at one instant. Where you say the diuel by exceeding celeritie, may be in diuers places in a moment: if you meane by a moment, a very short time I acknowledge it, but in an instant they cannot be in two places at once. Where you would haue our new diuines to determine How long Satan was in his iourney, when he sayd, he had circuited the earth, &c. I suppose it is an harder question, then any of your auncient diuines of Rhemes can determine. Yet we know, Satan needeth no long time for such a iourney, when the Sunne which is a body, goeth a farre greater iourney in 24 houres: But that in an instant he cannot goe round about the earth, we know because he is a creature, and it is proper to God to fill all places with his presence, and to know all things at one instant: where as no creature can haue either motion in an instant, or vnderstanding of many things together in an instant, but of one thing after an other. Therefore, euen the soules of the Saincts, if by agilitie or celeritie, they did passe into many places (as you hold they doe) and not rest in heauen: yet could they not vnderstand, all the petitions that are made to them in so many places at one instant, neither can any creature so vnderstand, but God onely, the creator of all things. Where you say we beleeue nothing, but that we see with our corporall eyes, it is vtterly false, for we beleeue vnto saluation, whatsoeuer the Scripture teacheth, and otherwise we acknowledge many things to be true, which we know by reason, and not by sense, as all reasonable men doe.

RHEM. 2 • 10 And they cried.) S. Hierome also against the saide Vigilantius reporteth, that he vsed an argument against the praiers of Saincts one of this place, for that these Martyres cried for reuenge, and could not obtaine. But we will reporte his wordes, that you may see how like one heretike is to an other, these of our daies to those of old. Thou saist in thy booke (saith S. Hierome c. 3.) that whiles we be aliue, one of vs may pray for an other: but after we be dead, no mans prayer shall be heard for an other: specially seeing the Martyres asking reuenge of their blood, could not obtaine. So saide the heretike. Against which the holy doctour maketh a long refutation, prouing that they pray much more after they be in heauen, then they did here in earth: and that they shall be much sooner heard of God, then when they are in the world. That Saincts pray for vs, S. Hierome proueth against the Heretike Vigilantius.

But for the Heretikes argument framed out of these wordes of the Apocalyps thus, These Martyres did not obteine, ergo Sanctes doe not pray for vs: it was so friuolous, and the antecedent so manifestly false, that hee vouchsafed not to stand about it. For it is plaine the Martyres here were heard, and that their petition shoulde be fulfilled in time appointed by God (whereunto they did and doe alwayes conforme themselues:) for it was saide vnto them, That they should rest yet a litle time, till, &c. And that Martyres prayers be heard in this case, our Sauiour testifieth Luc. 18. saying, And wil not God reuenge his elect that crie to him day and night? I say to you, he wil quickly reuenge them. And if God doe not heare the Saincts sometime nor graunt their requestes, is it therefore consequent that they doe not or may not pray? Then Christ himselfe shoulde not haue prayed his father to remoue the bitter cup of death from him, because that petition was not granted.

FVLKE. 2 Vigilantius perhaps maketh not this argument the onely ground of his opinion, (if his booke were extant) that the Saincts pray not for vs: But S. Hierome chuseth for his aduantage, that which he saw was most easie to confute. Neither doeth S. Hierome proue, by any testimonie of the Scripture, that the Saincts pray for vs. Neither hath he any arguments more then one, which hath no necessarie conclusion, That the Saincts praied for vs, while they liued, and were so be carefull for themselues: Ergo much more, after their victory and reward in heauen. And this he amplifieth by the examples of Moses, Stephen, and Paule, which prayed for men while they liued, and were heard. But this conclusion doeth not followe. For while they liued, they had commaundement and promise for mutuall prayers. But we know none out of the Scripture, that the soules departed, haue so pray for them that are liuing. And therefore we wil not take vpon vs, to determine, what they doe in that respect. But knowing by the Scriptures, Christ to be our mediatour and aduocate with God the Father, before whome we haue commandement to come, and to pray to him, and promise to be heard, we satisfie our selues, with that which God hath reuealed vnto vs, not doubting but it is sufficient for vs. Praier of Saincts.

RHEM. • 10 Reuengest thou not.) They do not desire reuenge vpon their enemies for hatred, but of charitie and zeale of Gods honour, praying that his enemies and the persecutors of his Church and Saincts, that will not repent, may be confounded: and that our Lord would accelerate his generall iudgement, that so they might attaine the perfect crowne of glory promised vnto them both in body and soule: which is to desire the resurrection of their bodies, which then shall triumph perfectly and fully ouer the persecutors that so cruelly handled the bodies of the elect, which shal then appeare glorious to the enemies confusion. How Martyres crie for reuenge.

RHEM. 11 Till their fellow seruants be complete.) Their is a certaine number that God hath ordeined to die for the testimonie of truth and the Catholike faith, for conformitie of the members to the head CHRIST our chiefe Martyr, and til that number be accomplished, the generall condemnation of the wicked persecutor shal not come, nor the generall reward of the elect.

14 And I ſayde to him, My Lord thou knoweſt. And he ſaid to me, Theſe are they which are come out of great tribulation, and haue waſhed their robes, and made them white in the bloud of the Lambe.

2 And I ſaw another Angel aſcending from the riſing of the Sunne, hauing the ſeale of the liuing God: and he cried with a loude voyce to the foure Angels to whom power was giuen to hurt the earth and the ſea,

3 Saying, Hurt not the earth, neither the ſea, neither the trees, till we ſhall haue ſealed the ſeruants of our God in their foreheads.

4 And I heard the number of them which were ſealed: and there were ſealed an hundred & fourtie and foure thouſand, of all the tribes of the children of Iſrael.

5 Of the tribe of Iuda were ſealed twelue thouſand. Of the tribe of Ruben were ſealed twelue thouſand. Of the tribe of Gad were ſealed twelue thouſand.

6 Of the tribe of Aſer were ſealed twelue thouſand. Of the tribe of Nephthali were ſealed twelue thouſand. Of the tribe of Manaſſes were ſealed twelue thouſand.

9 After this I beheld, and loe, a great multitude which no man could number, of all nations, and kinreds, and people, and tongues, ſtood before the throne, and before the Lambe, clothed with white garments, and palmes in their hands:

10 And cried with a loud voice, ſaying, Saluation be aſcribed to him that ſitteth vpon the throne of our God, and vnto the Lambe.

11 And all the Angels ſtood in the compaſſe of the throne, and of the Elders, and of the foure beaſts, and fell before the throne on their faces, and worſhipped God, 12 Saying, Amen: Bleſſing and glory, and wiſedome, and thankes, and honour, and power, and might, be vnto our God for euermore, Amen.

13 And one of the Elders anſwered, ſaying vnto mee, What are theſe which are arayed in white garments? and whence came they?

14 And I ſaid vnto him, Lord, thou woteſt. And he ſaid to me, Theſe are they which came out of great tribulation, and haue waſhed their long robes, and made them white by the blood of the Lambe.

15 Therefore are they in the preſence of the throne of God, and ſerue him day and night in his temple: and he that ſitteth in the throne will dwell among them.

himselfe: at leastwise not inferiour in learning, to any English Papist in Rhemes. But if they had any iudgement (say you) they might perceiue, that he meaneth not, that Christ and his Saincts are personally present at once in euery place, but that their motion and agilitie to bee where they list, is incomparable, and their power accordingly. We may thinke in deede, that he holdeth it not as a resolute determination, that Christ or his Saincts are euery where, but yet his sophisticall argument importeth no lesse. For that which followeth of the celeritie of the diuels is an other argument, and not a declaration of his meaning in the former. But euen this shift of descant is insufficient, to excuse him of errour. For that you cannot otherwise institute his argument, except you will acknowledge that Christ is personally present in all those places, wheresoeuer the soules of the martyrs are supposed to be present with their reliques. And so he must according to his humanitie, be personally present in his manhood, in places innumerable, not onely in the Sacrament, but also in euery place where the Saincts reliques are, which I suppose your good masters of Sorbon, will not easily admit for a trueth. Yea the soules themselues must often be in many places at one instant: for their celeritie and agilitie will not serue them to be at diuers places at one instant. Where you say the diuel by exceeding celeritie, may be in diuers places in a moment: if you meane by a moment, a very short time I acknowledge it, but in an instant they cannot be in two places at once. Where you would haue our new diuines to determine How long Satan was in his iourney, when he sayd, he had circuited the earth, &c. I suppose it is an harder question, then any of your auncient diuines of Rhemes can determine. Yet we know, Satan needeth no long time for such a iourney, when the Sunne which is a body, goeth a farre greater iourney in 24 houres: But that in an instant he cannot goe round about the earth, we know because he is a creature, and it is proper to God to fill all places with his presence, and to know all things at one instant: where as no creature can haue either motion in an instant, or vnderstanding of many things together in an instant, but of one thing after an other. Therefore, euen the soules of the Saincts, if by agilitie or celeritie, they did passe into many places (as you hold they doe) and not rest in heauen: yet could they not vnderstand, all the petitions that are made to them in so many places at one instant, neither can any creature so vnderstand, but God onely, the creator of all things. Where you say we beleeue nothing, but that we see with our corporall eyes, it is vtterly false, for we beleeue vnto saluation, whatsoeuer the Scripture teacheth, and otherwise we acknowledge many things to be true, which we know by reason, and not by sense, as all reasonable men doe.

RHEM. 2 • 10 And they cried.) S. Hierome also against the saide Vigilantius reporteth, that he vsed an argument against the praiers of Saincts out of this place, for that these Martyres cried for reuenge, and could not obtaine. But we will reporte his wordes, that you may see how like one heretike is to an other, these of our daies to those of old. Thou sayst in thy booke (saith S. Hierome c. 3.) that whiles we be aliue, one of vs may pray for an other: but after we be dead, no mans prayer shall be heard for an other: specially seeing the Martyres asking reuenge of their blood, could not obtaine. So saide the heretike. Against which the holy doctour maketh a long refutation, prouing that they pray much more after they be in heauen, then they did here in earth: and that they shall be much sooner heard of God, then when they are in the world. That Saincts pray for vs, S. Hierome proueth against the Heretike Vigilantius.

But for the Heretikes argument framed out of these wordes of the Apocalyps thus, These Martyres did not obteine, ergo Sanctes doe not pray for vs it was so friuolous, and the antecedent so manifestly false, that hee vouchsafed not to stand about it. For it is plaine the Martyres here were heard, and that their petition shoulde be fulfilled in time appointed by God (whereunto they did and doe alwayes conforme themselues:) for it was saide vnto them, That they should rest yet a litle time, till, &c. And that Martyres prayers be heard in this case, our Sauiour testifieth Luc. 18. saying, And wil not God reuenge his elect that crie to him day and night? I say to you, he wil quickly reuenge them. And if God doe not in all the Saincts sometime not graunt their requestes, is it therefore consequent that they doe not or may not pray? Then Christ himselfe shoulde not haue prayed his father to remoue the bitter cup of death from him, because that petition was not granted.

FVLKE. 2 Vigilantius perhaps maketh not this argument the onely ground of his opinion, (if his booke were extant) that the Saincts pray not for vs. But S. Hierome chuseth for his aduantage, that which he saw was most easie to confute. Neither doeth S. Hierome proue, by any testimonie of the Scripture, that the Saincts pray for vs. Neither hath he any arguments more then one, which hath no necessarie conclusion, That the Saincts praied for vs, while they liued, and were so be carefull for themselues: Ergo much more, after their victory and reward in heauen. And this he amplifieth by the examples of Moses, Stephen, and Paule, which prayed for men while they liued, and were heard. But this conclusion doeth not followe. For while they liued, they had commaundement and promise for mutuall prayers. But we know none out of the Scripture, that the soules departed, haue to pray for them that are liuing. And therefore we wil not take vpon vs, to determine, what they doe in that respect. But knowing by the Scriptures, Christ to be our mediatour and aduocate with God the Father, before whome we haue commaundement to come, and to pray to him, and promise to be heard, we satisfie our selues, with that which God hath reuealed vnto vs, not doubting but it is sufficient for vs. Praier of Saincts.

RHEM. 10 Reuengest thou not.) They do not desire reuenge vpon their enemies for hatred, but of charitie and zeale of Gods honour, praying that his enemies and the persecutors of his Church and Saincts, that will not repent, may be confounded: and that our Lord would accelerate his generall iudgement, that so they might attaine the perfect crowne of glory promised vnto them both in body and soule: which is to desire the resurrection of their bodies, which then shall triumph perfectly and fully ouer the persecutors that so cruelly handled the bodies of the elect, which shal then appeare glorious to the enimies confusion. How Martyres crie for reuenge.

RHEM. 11 Till their fellow seruants be complete.) Their is a certaine number that God hath ordeined to die for the testimonie of truth and the Catholike faith, for conformitie of the members to the head CHRIST our chiefe Martyr, and til that number be accomplished, the generall condemnation of the wicked persecutor shal not come, nor the generall reward of the elect.

RHEM. 1 3 We signe the seruants.) It is an allusion to the signe of the Crosse which the faithful beare in their foreheads, to shew they be not ashamed of Christ. S. August tract. 43. in Io.

FVLKE. 1 It is the signe proper to Gods elect, therefore not the signe of the crosse, which many reprobates haue receiued, nor any allusion to it, seeing there can be no allusion of that which is common to many hypocrites, vnto that whereby the true seruants of God are discerned. The signe of the crosse.

RHEM. 2 4 An hundred fourtie foure thousand.) He signifieth by these thousands & the multitude folowing, al the elect: but the elect of the Iewes, to be in a certaine number: the elect of the Gentiles to be innumerable.

FVLKE. 2 Though no man can number the elect of the Gentiles, yet their number is as certeine as the number of the Iewes, and as vndoubtedly knowen to God. The number of the elect is certeine.

CHAP. VIII.

1 The seuenth seale being opened, there appeare Angels with trompets: 5 and when an other Angel powred out fire taken from the altar, vpon the earth, there folow diuers tempestes. 7 In like maner, whiles foure Angels of the seuen sound their trompets, there fall sundrie plagues.

THE 4 VISION. AND when he had opened the seuenth seale, there was made silence in heauen, as it were halfe an houre.

2 And I saw seuen Angels standing in the sight of God: and there were giuen to them seuen trompets.

3 And an other Angel came, and stoode ‡ before the altar, hauing a golden censar: and there were giuen to him many incenses, that he should giue of the praiers of al saincts vpon the altar of gold, which is before the throne of God.

4 And the smoke of the incenses * of the praiers of the saincts ascended frō the hand of the Angel before God.

5 And the Angel tooke the censar, and filled it of the fire of the altar, and cast it on the earth and there were made thunders and voices and lightnings, & a great earthquake.

6 And the seuen Angels which had the seuen trompets, prepared them selues to sound with the trompet.

7 And the first Angel sounded with the trompet, and there was made haile and fire mingled in bloud, & it was cast on the earth, and the third part of the earth was burnt, and the third part of trees was burnt & al green grasse was burnt.

8 And the second Angel sounded with the trompet: & as it were a great mountaine burning with fire, was cast into the sea, and the third part of the sea was made bloud:

9 And the third part of those creatures died, which had liues in the sea, and the third part of the shippes perished.

10 And the third Angel sounded with the trompet, and a great starre fel from heauen, burning as it were a torche, and it fel on the third part of the flouds, and on the fountaines of waters.

11 And

AND when he had opened the seuenth seale, there was silence in heauen about the space of halfe an houre.

2 And I saw the seuen Angels which stoode before God, and to them were giuen seuen trumpets.

3 And an other angel came and stoode before the altar, having a golden Censer, and many odours were giuen vnto him, that he should offer with the prayers of all saincts vpon the golden altar which was before the throne.

4 And the smoke of the odours which came of the praiers of saincts, ascended vp before God, out of the angels hand.

5 And the angell tooke the Censer, and filled it with fire of the altar, and cast it into the earth: & voices were made, and thundrings, & lightnings, and earthquakes.

6 And the seuen angels which had the seuen trumpets, prepared them selues to blow.

7 The first angel blew, and there was made haile and fire mingled with the blood, and they were cast into the earth, and the thirde part of trees was burnt, and all greene grasse was burnt.

8 And the second angel blew, and as it were a great mountaine burning with fire was cast into the sea, and the third part of the sea turned to blood.

9 And the third part of the creatures which were in the sea, and had life, died, and the third part of the ships were destroyed.

10 And the third angel blew, and there fell a great starre from heauen, burning as it were a lampe, and it fell into the third part of the riuers, and into fountaines of water:

11 And

11 And the name of the ſtarre is called wormewod. and the third part of the waters was made into wormewod: and many men died of the waters, becauſe they were made bitter.

12 And the fourth Angel ſounded with the trompet, and the third part of the ſunne was ſmitten, & the third part of the moone, and the third part of the ſtarres, ſo that the third part of them was darkened, and of the day there ſhined not the third part, & of the night in like maner.

13 And I looked and heard the voice of one egle flying through the middes of heauen, ſaying with a loud voice, Wo, wo, wo to the inhabiters on the earth: becauſe of the reſt of the voices of the three Angels which were to ſound with the trompet.

11 And the name of the ſtarre is called wormewood, and the third part was turned to wormewood, and many men died of the waters, becauſe they were made bitter.

12 And the fourth angel blew, and the third part of the Sunne was ſmitten, and the third part of the Moone, and the third part of ſtarres, that the third part of them ſhould be darkened: and the day was ſmitten that the third part of it ſhould not ſhine, and likewiſe the night.

13 And I beheld, and heard an angell flying through the middes of heauen, ſaying with a loud voice, Wo wo, wo to the inhabiters of the earth, becauſe of the voices to come of the trumpet of the three angels which were yet to blow.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. VIII.

RHEM. 1 3 Before the altar.) The Prieſt ſtanding at the altar praying and offering for the people in the time of the high myſteries, Chriſt himſelf alſo being preſent vpon the altar, is a figure of this thing, and thereunto he alludeth.

FVLKE. 1 He alludeth to the ſacrificing prieſthood of the olde teſtament, where incenſe was offered at the altar, which now is the ſweete ſauour of the death of Chriſt, wherein the prayers of the ſaincts are acceptable. But if the prieſt ſtanding at the popiſh altar be a figure of this viſion, what was Chriſt ſitting at the table with his diſciples, when he inſtituted the holy myſteries? whereof the maſſe is nothing but a prophanation. Howbeit, this heauenly altar is the altar of incenſe not of ſlaine ſacrifices, therefore no reſemblance of the popiſh altar. The popiſh altar.

RHEM. 2 4 Of the praiers of the ſaincts.) If this be S. Michael or any Angel, and not Chriſt himſelf, as ſome take it, Angels offer vp the praiers of the faithful, as the 24 Elders did chap. 5. for this word, Saincts, is taken here for the holy perſons on earth, as often in the Scripture: though it be not againſt the Scriptures, that the inferior Sainct or Angel in heauen ſhould offer their praiers to God by their ſuperiors there. But hereby we conclude againſt the Proteſtants, that it derogateth not from Chriſt, that Angels or Saincts offer our praiers to God, as alſo it is plaine of Raphael. Tob. 12. 12.

FVLKE. 2 The commentary in S. Auguſtine ſaith, this angel is our Lord Ieſus Chriſt himſelfe. So doth Beda & Ambroſius Ansbertus take it. But if it ſignifie the miniſtery of angels, in preſenting prayers of the church, which are acceptable to God by the abundance of the incenſe or ſweet ſauour of the merit of Chriſtes death: it followeth not that the ſame office is deputed to the ſoules of the faithfull, nor that the angels or ſaincts are to be prayed vnto. That of the 24 Elders chap. 5. wee haue there ſhewed how it is vnderſtood of the church militant on earth. Where you ſay it is not againſt the ſcripture, that the inferior ſainct or angell in heauen ſhould offer their praiers to God by their ſuperiors, it is an idle fantaſie: for ſo we may imagine infinite fables, and ſay they be not againſt the ſcripture. But ſeeing the virgine Marie, by your doctrine, is Ladie of the angels, why doth not ſhee ſtand at the altar, and doe that which is heere aſcribed to the angell? Yea, if this angell offer the prayers of all ſaincts in heauen, he offereth the virgine Maries prayers alſo, and ſo ſhould be ſuperiour to her. But howſoeuer that be, you ſay, you conclude againſt the Proteſtants: That it derogateth not from Chriſt, that angels or ſaincts offer our praiers. In deed any miniſtery appointed by God to angels or men, doth not derogate to Chriſt. But firſt we reade no where in the ſcriptures, that the offering of our prayers is committed to the ſoules of them that are departed. Secondly, it is not without controuerſie, that the angels doe offer our praiers, ſeeing you cannot affirme that this angell doth not repreſent Chriſt. Thirdly, if it be granted, that this is the miniſterie of an angell, and not the mediation of Chriſt: yet it is manifeſt that the angell in this miniſtery commendeth not the prayers of all ſaincts by his merit, or by the dignitie of his owne perſon, but by the much incenſe that was giuen vnto him to adde to the prayers of ſaincts, that they might be acceptable: and ſo it maketh nothing for popiſh inuocation of ſaincts or angels. For the text is, that much incenſe was giuen to him, that he might giue or adde to the prayers of all ſaincts: for the word ἐπιδώσει is the datiue caſe, without any prepoſition, and the prepoſition de is not in all copies of your vulgar Latine tranſlation. The ſumme is, that in the middeſt of the helliſh troubles raiſed by antichriſt and his miniſters, the elect haue their prayers heard for their preſeruation by the merits of Chriſt, which is ſhewed by the viſion of the angell. To whom much ſweet incenſe was giuen, that he might adde it to the prayers of the ſaincts, the ſmoke whereof aſcending with the praiers of the elect, cauſeth them to be heard and accepted of God. Other curious ſpeculations may breed many more friuolous queſtions then the text doth ſerue to aſſoile. Prayer of ſaincts and to ſaincts.

Apoc.6,16.

6 And* in thoſe daies men ſhall ſeeke for death, and ſhal not finde it: and they ſhal deſire to die, and death ſhal flee from them.

7 And the ſimilitudes of the locuſtes, like to horſes ‖ prepared into battel: and vpon their heades as it were crownes like to gold: and their faces as the faces of men.

8 And they had heare as the heare of women: and their teeth were as of lions.

9 And they had habbegions as habbergions of yron, and the voice of their winges as the voice of the chariotes of many horſes running into battel.

10 And they had tailes like to ſcorpions, and ſtings were in their tailes: & their power was to hurt men fiue moneths.

The theefe Maiſter of heretikes.

11 And they had ouer them a king, the Angel of the bottomles depth, whoſe name in Hebrew is Abaddon, & in Greeke Apollyon: in Latin hauing the name Exterminans.

אבדון Abaddon, In Engliſh Deſtroier.

12 One woe is gone, and behold two woes come yet after theſe.

13 And the ſixt Angel ſounded with the trompet: and I heard one voice from the foure hornes of the golden altar, which is before the eies of God,

14 Saying to the ſixt Angel which had the trompet, Looſe the foure Angels which are bound in the great riuer Euphrates.

15 And the foure Angels were looſed, who were prepared for an houre, and a day and a moneth and a yere: that they might kil the third part of men.

16 And the number of the army of horſemen was twentie thouſand times ten thouſand. And I heard the number of them.

17 And ſo I ſaw the horſes in the viſion: and they that ſate vpon them, had habbergions of fire and of hyacinth and brimſtone. and the heades of the horſes were as it were the heads of lions: and from their mouth proceedeth fire and ſmoke, and brimſtone.

18 And by theſe three plagues was ſlaine the furnace, and the Sunne and the aire were darkned, by the reaſon of the ſmoke of the pit.

3 And there came out of the ſmoke Locuſtes vpon the earth, and vnto them was giuen power, as the Scorpions of the earth haue power.

4 And it was commanded them that they ſhould not hurt the graſſe of the earth, neither any greene thing, neither any tree: but onely thoſe men which haue not the ſeale of God in their foreheads.

5 And to them it was giuen that they ſhould not kill them, but that they ſhould be vexed fiue moneths, and their paine was as the paine that cõmeth of a Scorpion, when he ſhall haue ſtricken a man.

*6 * And in thoſe dayes ſhall men ſeeke death, and ſhall not finde it, and ſhall deſire to die, and death ſhall flee from them.* Eſai.2.19. oſee.10.8.

*7 * And the ſimilitudes of the Locuſtes was like vnto horſes prepared vnto battaile, and on their heades* were as it were crownes like vnto gold, and their faces were as it had bene the faces of men. Wiſ.26.9.

8 And they had heare as the heare of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of Lions.

9 And they had habergions, as it were habergions of iron, & the ſound of their wings was as the ſound of charets when many horſes run to battaile.

10 And they had tailes like vnto Scorpions, and there were ſtings in their tailes: and their power was to hurt men fiue moneths.

11 And they had a king ouer them, which is the angel of the bottomleſſe pit, whoſe name in the Hebrue tongue is Abaddon, but in the Greeke tongue hath his name Apollyon. That is to ſay, A deſtroyer.

12 One woe is paſt, & behold, two woes come yet after this.

13 And the ſixth angel blew, and I heard a voice from the foure hornes of the golden altar, which is before God,

14 Saying to the ſixth angel which had the trumpet, Looſe the foure angels which are bound in the great riuer Euphrates.

15 And the foure angels were looſed, which were prepared for an houre, and a day, and a moneth, and a yeere, for to ſlay the third part of men.

16 And the number of the horſemen of the armies were twentie thouſand times ten thouſand: And I heard the number of them.

17 And thus I ſaw the horſes in the viſion, and them that ſate on them, hauing fierie habergions of a Iacinct colour, and brimſtone, and the heads of the horſes were as the heads of Lions, and out of their mouthes commeth forth fire, and ſmoke, and brimſtone.

18 And of theſe three was the third part of the third part of men, of the fire and of the ſmoke and of the brimſtone, which proceded from their mouth.

19 For the power of the horſes is in their mouth, and in their tailes. for their tailes be like to ſerpents, hauing heads: and in theſe they hurt.

19 For their powers be in their mouthes, and in their tailes: for their tailes were like vnto Serpents, hauing heads, and with them they doe hurt.

20 And the remnant of the men which were not killed by theſe plagues, repented not of the deeds of their hands, that they ſhould not worſhip deuils, and idols of golde and ſiluer, and braſſe,* Pſal. 116.4. and 136.15. and ſtone, and of wood, which neither can ſee, neither heare, neither goe:

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. IX.

RHEM. 1 1 A ſtarre to haue fallen.) The fall of an Arch heretike, as Arius, Luther, Caluin, out of the Church of God, which haue the key of Hel to open and bring foorth al the old condemned hereſies buried before in the depth.

FVLKE. 1 Beda, Arethas, and Ambroſius Ansbertus vnderſtand this ſtarre to be the deuill. But if it be an Arch-heretike, it is the pope, which is antichriſt, and therefore a deſtroyer, as Chriſt is a Sauior. Who hath the efficacie of error giuen to ſeduce the reprobate: who is fallen from heauenly doctrine to earthly traditions: who hath his garde of Locuſtes and lions, with al ſubtiltie and crueltie to mainteine his wickednesſe. To whom all things in this prophecie agree moſt aptly: which by no meanes can be drawne to Luther and Caluin, which bring foorth no olde condemned hereſies, but teach the trueth againſt the hereſies both olde and lately inuented by antichriſt. And the looſing of the angels that were bound at the great riuer Euphrates, ſignifieth from whence the tyrannie commeth, euen from whence the falſe doctrine floweth, namely from Babylon. which (by the conſent of all ancient writers) in this prophecie ſignifieth the citie of Rome. The pope antichriſt.

RHEM. 2 20 Haue done penance.) This phraſe being the like both in Greeke and Latin, ſignifieth ſuch ſorrowfull and penall repentance as cauſeth a man to forſake his former ſinnes and depart from them, ὁ μετενόησαν ἐκ τῶν ἔργων. See the ſame phraſe c.2,21,22. & Act.8.v.22.

FVLKE. 2 This phraſe ſignifieth no popiſh penall ſatisfaction, but true repentance with ſorow for their ſinnes paſt, which cauſeth men not onely to depart from them, but to amend their liues.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IX.

RHEM. 3 4 Nor any greene thing.) The Heretikes neuer hurt or ſeduce the greene tree, that is, ſuch as haue a liuing faith working by charitie, but commonly they corrupt him in faith who ſhould otherwiſe haue periſhed for ill life, and him that is reprobate, that hath neither the ſigne of the Croſſe (which is Gods marke) in the forehead of his body, nor the note of election in his ſoule. Who are ſeduced by heretikes.

FVLKE. 3 If the ſigne of the Croſſe were Gods marke here ſpoken of, it could not be imprinted on the foreheades of ſo many reprobates. Therefore it is not that ſigne, whereby the elect are diſcerned from the reprobate. But rather confeſſion of Chriſt, proceeding from a liuely faith, which is giuen according to Gods election. The ſeale whereof, as S. Paul ſaith, is this. The Lord knoweth who be his, and let euery one that calleth vpon the name of the Lord Chriſt, depart from iniquitie. 2. Tim. 2, 19. So doth Ambroſius Ansbertus vnderſtand it, ſaying: They haue not the ſigne of God in their foreheads, which are not indued with that faith which worketh by loue. The ſigne of the Croſſe.

RHEM. 7 Prepared into battel) Heretikes being euer ready to contend, doe pretend victorie, and counterfeit gold: in ſhape as men, as ſmooth and delicate as women, their tongues and pennes full of gall and venim: their harts obdurate: full of noiſe and ſhuffling: their doctrine as peſtiferous and full of poyſon, as the taile and ſting of a ſcorpion. but they endure for a little ſeaſon. The manifold hypocryſie of Heretikes.

RHEM. 4 20 Idols of gold) Heere againe the new Tranſlatours abuſe the people, for idols ſaying images: the place being plainely againſt the pourtraites of the heathen Gods, which are here and in the Pſalme 95. called, dæmonia, Diuels. Heret. tranſlation.

FVLKE. 4 The Greeke word ſignifieth Images, as I haue ſhewed before, namely, 1. Iohn. 5. ſect. 5. and what are theſe Idols, but Images of golde, ſiluer, braſſe, ſtone, and wood, which the reprobate worſhip, and will not leaue worſhipping? But this text preſſeth the Papiſts ſore, and diſchargeth Luther and Caluine from being the Arch-heretike here deſcribed, for they teach men to abhorre all worſhipping of Images or Idols, made of any kinde of matter. But the Pope from the true worſhip of God hath brought his people by falſe doctrine, and tyrannie, to worſhip the worke of mens handes, which can neither ſee, heare, nor walke: and conſequently, to worſhip Deuils, and not God. For though they pretend to worſhip God and his Sainctes, by ſuch Images, as the Heathen did to worſhip God and his Angels, and not Deuils, yet the Scripture ſaith, they did worſhip Deuils. Becauſe Idolatrie is the ſeruice of the Deuill, and not of God, though Idolaters pretende and thinke to worſhip God, and not the Deuill. Where you ſay the place is plainely againſt the portraictes of the Heathen Gods, You forget that this is ſpoken of men, liuing after the opening of the ſeuenth ſeale, and vnder the ſound of the ſixth Angels tromper, which is toward the ende of the worlde. Now the Idols or Portraictes of the Heathen Gods, are aboliſhed long agoe. And you are wont to holde, that there are no Idols of golde, ſiluer, &c. ſince the Church hath beene ſpredde ouer all nations. Finally, there is no knowne people in the worlde, liuing in the time here ſpecified, that doth worſhip or hath worſhipped Images of golde, ſiluer, braſſe ſtone, and woodde, but the Papiſtes. Luther and Caluin cannot be this Arch-heretike, but the Pope.

An other ſtrong Angell crying out, 3 ſeuen thunders doe ſpeake. 6 The Angell ſweareth there ſhal bee time no more, but at the voice of the ſeuenth Angel the myſterie ſhall be fully accompliſhed. 9 He giueth Iohn a booke to deuoure.

CHRIST the valiant Angel is here deſcribed.

AND I ſaw an other Angel, ſtrong, deſcending from heauen, clothed with a cloud, and a raine-bow on his head, and his face was as the ſunne, and his feete as ‖ a piller of fire.

‖ pillers.

2 And he had in his hand a little booke opened: and he put his right foote vpon the ſea, and his left vpon the land.

3 And he cried with a loude voice, as when a lion roareth. And when he had cried, the ſeuen thunders ſpake their voices.

4 And when the ſeuen thunders had ſpoken their voices, I was about to write: and I heard a voice from heauen ſaying to me: Signe the things which the ſeuen thunders haue ſpoken: and ‡ write them not.

‡ Dan. 12, 7.

5 And * the Angel which I ſaw ſtanding vpon the ſea & vpon the land, [c] lifted vp his hand to heauen,

* Dan. 12, 7.

[c] This was the maner of taking an othe by the true God. as Deut. 32.

6 And he ſware by him that liueth for euer and euer, that created heauen & thoſe thinges which are in it: and the earth, and thoſe things which are in it: and the ſea, and thoſe things which are in it: That there ſhal be time no more:

7 But in the daies of the voice of the ſeuenth Angel, when the trumpet ſhal begin to ſound, the myſterie of God ſhal be conſummate, as he hath euangelized by his ſeruants the Prophets.

8 And I heard a voice from heauen againe ſpeaking with me, and ſaying: Goe, and take the booke that is opened, of the hand of the angel ſtanding vpon the ſea and vpon the land.

9 And I went to the angel, ſaying vnto him, that he ſhould giue me the booke. And he ſaid to me, * Take the booke, and [c] deuoure it: & it ſhal make thy belly to be bitter, but in thy mouth it ſhal be ‡ ſweete as it were honie.

* Ezec. 3, 1.

[c] By earneſt ſtudy and meditation.

‡ Apoc. 10, 10.

10 And I tooke the booke of the hand of the angel, & deuoured it: and it was in my mouth as it were honie, ſweete. and when I had deuoured it, my belly was made bitter, 11 And he ſaid to me, Thou muſt againe prophecie to Nations, and peoples, and tonges, and many kinges.

AND I ſawe another mightie Angel come downe from heauen, clothed with a cloude, and the raine-bow vpon his head: and his face as it were the Sunne, and his feete as it were pillers of fire.

2 And he had in his hand a little booke open: and he put his right foote vpon the ſea, and his left foote on the earth:

3 And cried with a loud voice, as when a Lion roareth: and when he had cried, ſeuen thunders vttered their voices.

4 And when the ſeuen thunders had vttered their voices, I was about to write: and I heard a voice from heauen, ſaying vnto me, ſeale vp thoſe things which the ſeuen thunders vttered, and write them not.

5 And the Angel which I ſawe ſtand vpon the ſea, and vpon the earth, lifted vp his hand to heauen,

6 And ſware by him that liueth for euermore, which created heauen, and the thinges that therein are, and the earth, and the things that therein are, & the ſea, and the things which therein are, that there ſhoulde bee no longer time.

7 But in the daies of the voice of the ſeuenth Angel, when he ſhal begin to blowe, and the myſterie of God ſhal be finiſhed, as he hath declared to his ſeruants the Prophets.

8 And the voice which I heard from heauen, ſpake vnto me againe, and ſaide, Goe, and take the litle booke which is open in the hand of the Angel which ſtandeth vpon the ſea, and vpon the earth.

*9 And I went vnto the Angel, and ſaid vnto him, Giue me the litle booke. And he ſaid vnto me, Take it, and eate it vp, and it ſhal * make thy belly bitter, but it ſhall be in thy mouth as ſweete as honie.*

Ezech. 2. 9. & 3. 1.

10 And I tooke the litle booke out of the Angels hand, and did eate it vp, and it was in my mouth as ſweete as hony: and aſſoone as I had eaten it, my belly was bitter.

11 And he ſaid vnto me, Thou muſt prophecie againe among peoples, and nations, and tongues, and to many kings.

S. Iohn measuring the Temple, 3 heareth of two witnesses that shal preach: 7 whom the beast comming vp from the sea shall kil. 11 but they rising againe ascend into heauen, 13 and seuen thousand persons are slaine with an earthquake: 15 And at the sound of the seuenth Angel, the foure and twentie seniors giue praise and thankes to God.

AND there was giuen me a reede like vnto a rodde: and it was said to me, Arise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that adore in it.

2 But the court which is without the temple, cast forth, and measure not that: because it is giuen to the Gentiles, and they shal treade vnder foote the holy citie ‡ two and fourtie monethes.

3 And I will giue to ‖ my two witnesses, and they shall prophecie a thousand two hundred sixtie daies, clothed with sackeclothes.

4 These are the two oliue trees and the two candlestickes that stand in the sight of the Lord of the earth.

5 And if any man will hurt them, fire shal come foorth out of their mouthes, and shal deuoure their enimies. and if any man wil hurt them: so must he be slaine.

6 These haue power to shut heauen, that it raine not in the daies of their prophecie: and they haue power ouer the waters to turne them into bloud, & to strike the earth with al plague as often as they wil.

‡ The great Antichrist. 7 And when they shal haue finished their testimonie: the ‡ beast which ascended from the depth, shall make warre against them, and shal ouercome them, and kil them.

8 And their bodies shal lie in the streates of the ‘ great citie, which is called spiritually Sodom and Aegypt, where their Lord also was crucified.

9 And there shal of tribes, and peoples, and tonges, and Gentiles, see their bodies for three daies and a halfe: and they shal not suffer their bodies to be laid in monuments.

‡ The wicked reioice, when holy men are executed by the tyrants of the world, because their life and doctrine are burdenous vnto them. 10 And the inhabitants of the earth ‡ shal be glad vpon them, and make merie: & shal send giftes one to an other, because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt vpon the earth.

11 And after three daies and a halfe, the spirit of life from God entred into them. And they stoode vpon their feete, and great feare fel vpon them that saw them.

12 And they heard a loud voice from heauen saying to them, Come vp hither. And they went vp into heauen in a cloude: and their enimies saw them:

13 And in that houre there was made a great earthquake: and the tenth part of the citie

AND there was giuen me a reede like vnto a rodde, and the Angell stoode by, saying, Rise and mete the Temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein.

2 But the court which is without the Temple cast out, and mete it not: for it is giuen vnto the Gentiles, and the holie citie shall they tread vnder foote fourtie and two moneths.

3 And I will giue power vnto my two witnesses, and they shall prophecie a thousand, two hundred, and threescore daies, clothed in sackecloth.

4 These are two Olive trees, and two candlesticks, standing before the God of the earth.

5 And if any man wil hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouthes, and consumeth their enimies: and if any man wil hurt them, this wise must he be killed.

6 These haue power to shut heauen, that it raine not in the daies of their prophecying: and haue power ouer waters, to turne them to bloud, and to smite the earth with al maner plagues, as often as they will.

7 And when they had finished their testimony, the beast that commeth out of the bottomlesse pit, shal make warre against them, and shall ouercome them, and kill them.

8 And their bodies shall lie in the streetes of the great citie, which spiritually is called Sodome and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified.

9 And they of the people, and kinreds, and tongues, and they of the nations shal see their bodies three daies and an halfe, and shal not suffer their bodies to be put in graues.

10 And they that dwell vpon the earth shall reioyce ouer them, and be glad, and shall send giftes one to another: for these two Prophets vexed them that dwelt on the earth.

11 And after three daies and an halfe, the spirite of life comming from God, entred into them: and they stoode vpon their feete, and great feare fel vpon them which saw them.

12 And they heard a great voice from heauen, saying vnto them, Come vp hither. And they ascended vp to heauen in a cloud, and their enimies sawe them.

13 And the same houre was there a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the citie fell, 14 The ſecond woe is gone: and behold the third woe will come quickly.

15 And the ſeuenth Angel ſounded with ¶ a trompet: and there were made loud voices in heauen ſaying, ‡The kingdom of this world is made our Lords and his Chriſts, & he ſhal reigne for euer and euer. Amen.

‡ The kingdom of this world vſurped before by Satan and Antichriſt, ſhal afterward be Chriſts for euer.

17 Saying: We thanke thee Lord God omnipotent, which art, and which waſt, and which ſhalt come: becauſe thou haſt receiued thy great power, and haſt reigned.

18 And the Gentiles were angrie, and thy wrath is come, & the time of the dead, to be iudged, & ‡to render reward to thy ſeruants the prophets and ſaincts, and to them that feare thy name, ‖ litle and great, and to deſtroy them that haue corrupted the earth.

19 And the temple of God was opened in heauen: and the arke of his teſtament was ſeene in his temple, and there were made lightenings, and voices, and an earthquake and great haile.

and in the earthquake were ſlaine names of men ſeuen thouſand: and the remnant were afraide, and gaue glorie to the God of heauen.

14 The ſecond woe is paſt, and beholde, the third woe commeth anon.

15 And the ſeuenth Angell blewe, and there were made great voyces in heauen, ſaying, The kingdomes of this world are our Lords, and his Chriſtes, and he ſhal reigne for euermore.

16 And the foure and twentie Elders which ſit before God on their ſeates, fell vpon their faces and worſhipped God, 17 Saying, We giue thee thankes, O Lorde God Almightie, which art, and waſt, and art to come: for thou haſt receiued thy great might, and haſt reigned.

18 And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, & the time of the dead that they ſhould be iudged, and that thou ſhouldeſt giue reward vnto thy ſeruants the Prophets and Saints, and to them that feare thy name, ſmall and great, and ſhouldeſt deſtroy them which deſtroy the earth.

19 And the temple of God was opened in heauen, and there was ſeene in his temple the Arke of his teſtament: and there folowed lightnings, and voices, and thundrings, and earthquake, and much haile.

Therefore can not be meant of three common yeeres and an halfe, more then of three vſuall daies and an halfe. But it is numbred by monethes and daies, for the comfort of the faithfull, that they may be aſſured it is limited by God, and but ſhort in compariſon of the euerlaſting kingdome of Chriſt. Hentenius a Papiſt, in his Preface to his tranſlation of Arethas, ſaith: It is not poſſible, that Antichriſt in ſo ſhort a time of three common yeeres and an halfe, ſhould obtaine ſo many kingdomes and prouinces. Yet our Remiſh Papiſtes force not of impoſſibilities, ſo they might haue an argument to prooue, that the Pope is not Antichriſt.

Furthermore, that they liue alſo in Paradiſe, it is partly gathered out of the Scripture Eccleſi. 44, 16. where it is plainely ſaid of Enoch, that he is tranſlated into Paradiſe, as al our Latin exemplars do reade: and of Elias, that he was taken vp aliue it is euident 4. Reg. 2. And S. Irenæus ſaith, it is the tradition of the Apoſtles, that they be both there. li. 5. in initio. Dicunt Presbyteri (ſaith he) qui ſunt Apoſtolorum Diſcipuli. So ſay the Prieſts or Auncients that are the ſcholers of the Apoſtles. See S. Iuſtine q. 85. ad orthodoxos. Finally, that they ſhal returne into the compaaie of men in the end end of the world, to preach against Antichrist, and to inuite both Iewes and Gentiles to penance, and so be martyred, as this place of the Apocalypse seemeth plaine, so we haue in part other testimonies hereof: Malac. 4. Eccl. 44, 16. 48, 10. Mat. 17, 11. See also Hypolytus booke of Antichrist and the end of the world. All which being wel considered, the Heretikes are to contentious and incredulous, to discredite the same, as they commonly doe.

FVLKE. 4 Christ shall haue his two witnesses alwaies, euen in the hotteſt persecution of Antichrist. And therefore there is no neede of Enoch and Elias, neither doth the text speake of them. The comming of Elias was prophecied by Malachie, before the comming of Christ, and accomplished in Iohn Baptist, as our Sauiour Christ testifieth, Math. 17, 12. Beda in this place, vnderstandeth the Church, lightned with the doctrine of the new and olde Testament. So doth the Commentarie that is in S. Augustines workes. Ambrosius Ansbertus saith: In these two witnesses, we do so take Enoch and Elias, the one before the Law, the other in the Law, that in their speciall persons we consider the whole generall, that is, the holy Church in her preachers. And concerning the common opinion of Enoch and Elias, it hath no ground in the Scripture. For the prophecie of Malachie was fulfilled in Iohn the Baptist. And Arethas confesseth that there is no testimonie of Enoch in the scripture, but that he was translated, which proueth not his comming againe. And where you say, that they liue in Paradise, you shall heare what Victorinus an old writer saith vpon this text. Many thinke this to be Helias, or Helizeus, or Moyses, but they are both dead: but the death of Ieremie is not found. For al our auncetors haue deliuered by tradition, that this is Ieremie. You see what credite is to be giuen to auncient tradition, without the Scripture, and how certaine it is that Enoch and Elias shall come againe. Saint Augustine saith not, it is a most notorious knowne thing. But that the Iewes shall be conuerted to Christ, before the daie of iudgement. Celeberrimum est, &c. It is a matter very common in the speech and opinion of the faithfull, or commonly said and thought of the faithfull. But that opinion true or false, perteineth not to this text, where the Iewes are not conuerted, but antichrist confuted by the testimony of Christs witnesses. In the second place is the same opinion of Elias, to come before the iudgement. In the third place he saith: Puto, I thinke that Enoch and Elias remaine in their mortall body: but of their comming to preach against Antichrist, he speaketh not. S. Hierom also thinketh, they are not dead: but of their comming to prophecying, he saith nothing Epist. 61. But in Psalm. 20. he saith the remnant of the Iewes, shall beleeue in the ende by Enoch and Elias, which toucheth not our text in hand. Ambrosius indeede vnderstandeth these witnesses to be Enoch and Elias in Psal 45: but Hilarie contendeth that they must be Moses and Elias. And these two Prophets (saith he) we vnderstand to be them, that shal preuent his comming, whom the Apocalypse of Iohn saith, that they shal be slaine by Antichrist, although there haue been diuers opinions of many men, either of Enoch or of Ieremie, because that one of them must die as Helias. But we cannot corrupt, with the opinion of our sense, the faith of the trueth which our Lord hath reuealed to the three forenamed witnesses, neither thinke that any other shall come, then they which were seene to come for the confirmation of faith. You see that certeine iudgement is to be taken of the auctoritie and opinions of the fathers, without the Scripture. On the other side, Prosper maketh no question, but they shal be Enoch and Elias. Likewise Gregorie, and Beda in Mar. 9. speaketh of the comming againe of Elias, but neuer a word of Enoch. Chrysostome also thinketh, that Elias shall come againe to conuert the Iewes: but of Enoch he is so farre from affirming that he shall come, that he condemneth it of curiositie, to enquire what is become of him, or to what ende he was translated. in Epist. ad Hebr. Hom. 22. in Gen. Hom. 21. The later writers Oecumenius and Theophylact, follow Chrysostome for Elias, but of Enoch they say nothing, Damascen will haue them both. Thus you see the matter is not so cleere in the opinion of antiquitie, as the papists would haue it seeme by the multitude of quotations. Enoch and Elias.

But you will prooue that they be aliue in paradise: But what place is paradise but Heauen? as the Apostle declareth 2. Cor. 12. 2. and 4. for earthly paradise, either by the flood, or before, was defaced. Now what doctrine it is to affirme, that men in mortall bodies ascended into Heauen, and that before the ascension of Christ, I leaue it to the learned to consider. As for your prooues, are like your doctrine: for first Ecclesiasticus is no Canonicall Scripture, neither if it were, is it truely translated in your vulgar Latin text: for in the Greeke there is no mention of Paradise. It is euident in deede, that Elias was taken vp aliue: but not that he continueth aliue. Yea because it is said expresly, that he was taken vp into heauen, it is certeine that his body was not caried into heauen: for Christ was the first, that in his whole humanitie ascended into heauen. That which Irenæus saith cannot be true, because he saith they were translated into the earthly Paradise, where Adam was first placed, and that Sainct Paul was rapt vp into that paradise, who saith expresely, that he was rapt into the third heauen, which is figuratiuely called Paradise, because it is a place of felicitie, as was that earthly garden which God planted in Eden. The testimonie of the auncients, which he alledgeth for a proofe, is no better then the like tradition of theirs, that our Sauiour Christ was aboue 50. yeeres of age. Lib. 2. cap. 39. Iustine, or whosoeuer was auctor of those questions, thinketh not onely Enoch and Elias to be aliue, but also all those whose bodies arose at the resurrection of Christ, to be changed togither at his comming: by which opinion, he ouerthroweth your opinion, who holde that they shall be slaine by Antichrist. The testimonies of Scripture which you alledge, are altogither against you. For Malachie speaketh but of one comming of Elias, which the Angel Luke 1. 17. and Christ himselfe Matth. 11. 14. and cap. 17. 12. doeth interprete of Iohn Baptist. So doth Hierom vpon Malachie, ascribing the opinion of his comming in the flesh to Iewes and Iewish Heretikes.

And that which deceiued Chrysostome, and other of the auncient fathers, to thinke that he should come in person, was the corrupt translation of the Septuaginta, where in stead of Elias the Prophet (as it is in the Hebrue) they did reade Elias the Thesbite: vpon which addition, S. Chrysostome groundeth that opinion in Math. Hom. 58. As though the Prophet must needes meane Helias in person, and not in spirite and office onely, because he nameth his countrie, where as Malachie hath not that addition, the Thesbite: neither in the Hebrue, nor in the vulgar Latine, nor in S. Hieromes translation. Of the former place of Ecclesiasticus, I haue spoken before. In the later he must be vnderstood according to the prophecie of Malachie, expounded of Iohn the Baptist, or els he hath no ground of his saying. Hippolitus hath more fables then that of Enoch and Elias: for he holdeth that Antichrist shal be a deuil incarnate, and that not onely Enoch and Elias, but Iohn the Diuine, the writer of this Apocalypse, shall also come with them before the second comming of Christ. Let the indifferent reader therefore iudge, whether we be contentious and incredulous, because we yeelde not to these various, inconstant, and fabulous opinions of many of the auncient fathers. Or rather whether you would not make the world secure of the second comming of Christ, which confirme such fantasies, that it might be thought Antichrist is not yet come.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XII.

RHEM. 1 14 A time and times.) This often inſinuation that Antichriſtes reigne ſhalbe but three yeeres and a halfe (Dan. 7,25. Apoc. 11,2.3. and in this Chap. v. 6. c. 13,5.) proueth that the heretikes be exceedingly blinded with malice, that holde the Pope to be Antichriſt, who hath ruled ſo many ages.

FVLKE. 1 You may as well ſay that Antichriſtes raigne ſhall be but three daies and an halfe. But the viſion comprehending generally all the perſecution that Satan ſhall raiſe againſt the Church, from the Aſcention of Chriſt to the end, doth manifeſtly confute that fantaſie of three common yeeres and an halfe, which the holy Ghoſt meaneth, of halfe a myſticall or propheticall weeke, the meaſure whereof is knowen onely to God. And therefore it is ſometime numbred by 1260. daies, ſome time by 42. moneths, ſome tims by three daies and an halfe, and here indefinitely a time and times, and halfe a time. The time of Antichriſts raigne.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XII.

RHEM. 2 6 The woman fled) This great perſecution that the Church ſhall flee from, is in the time of Antichriſt, and ſhall endure but three yeeres and a halfe, as is noted v. 14. in the margent. In which time for all that, ſhe ſhal not want our Lordes protection, nor true Paſtors, nor be ſo secret, but all faithfull men ſhall know and follow her: much leſſe ſhal ſhe decay, erre in faith, or degenerate and folow Antichriſt, as Heretikes do wickedly faine. As the Church Catholike now in England in this time of perſecution, becauſe it hath no publike ſtate of regiment nor open free exerciſe of holy functions, may be ſaid to be fled into the deſert, yet it is neither vnknowen to the faithfull that follow it, nor the enemies that perſecute it: as the hid companie that the Proteſtants talke of, was for ſome worlds together, neither knowen to their friendes nor foes, becauſe there was in deede none ſuch for many ages togither. And this is true, if we take this flight for a very corporall retiring into wilderneſſe. Where in deede it may be, and is of moſt expounded, to be a ſpirituall flight, by forſaking the ioyes and ſolaces of the worlde, and giuing her ſelfe to contemplation and penance, during the time of perſecution vnder Antichriſt. And by enlarging the ſenſe, it may alſo very well ſignifie the deſolation and affliction that the Church ſuffereth and hath ſuffered from time to time in this wilderneſſe of the world, by all the forerunners and miniſters of Antichriſt, Tyrants and Heretikes. The Church ſhal flee as to a deſert in Antichriſts time, but not decay or be vnknowen, no not for ſo ſhort a time.

FVLKE. 2 The auctor of the Coment in S. Auguſtine ſaith, that the time mentioned in the 14. verſe, ſignifieth an yeere an an hundred yeeres. by whoſe accompt, the perſecution of Antichriſt ſhould be three hundred and fiftie yeeres. And in deede from the time of the chaſing away of the Church into deſert places, when the Pope by cruell warres and tyranny, baniſhed the faithfull whom he perſecuted by the names of Waldenſes, Albigenſes, Pauperes de Lugduno, Picardi &c. vnto the time that the Goſpell beganne againe to be openly profeſſed by Wickliffe and others, it is about the time of 350. yeeres: but thereof we may not raſhly iudge. Beda ſaith: By the number of theſe daies which maketh three yeeres & an halfe, the holy Ghoſt comprehendeth all the times of Chriſtianitie, becauſe Chriſt whoſe bodie the Church is, preached ſo long in the fleſh. And vpon the 14. verſe he ſaith. He deſigneth the whole time of the Church comprehended before in the number of daies. Ambroſius Anſbertus ſaith. The number of 1260. daies in which the woman tarieth & is fed in the wilderneſſe, doth ſo ſignifie the courſe of preaching or end of perſecution, in which the olde enemie is permitted to rage againſt the holy Church by that damned man whom he ſhall poſſeſſe: that neuertheleſſe it comprehendeth the beginning either of the preaching or of the perſecution in which Chriſt beganne to preach and ſuffer: yea the whole time of this preſent life which is betweene the beginning and the ende. Rupertus expoundeth theſe daies for ſo long time, as the Church being a ſtranger in the world, ſuffereth perſecution. Haymo ſaith, it may be referred vnto all the time from the aſcention of Chriſt to the ende of the world. But in this deſert you ſay, the true Church ſhall not decay &c. in faith or degenerate and follow Antichriſt. No verely, the true Church of Gods elect, ſhall alwaies continue conſtant and ſound in faith, in all articles neceſſarie to ſaluation: neither doe we euer ſay otherwiſe. But the greateſt part of the viſible Church, ſhall be ſeduced by Antichriſt, as it is manifeſt here, and 2. Theſ. 2. Where you ſay the hid companie that we ſpeake of, was for ſome worldes knowen neither to their freends nor foes. It is falſe, for the true members of the Church they were knowen, though not alwaies to their enemies. For this flight into the wilderneſſe, is graunted to the Church for her preſeruation from the tyrannie of Antichriſt, who would not ceaſe to perſecute her, if ſhe were within his reach and knowledge. But that there were ſuch companies, it is manifeſt by this, that they haue beene openly knowen in theſe daies to haue had their countinuance in Morauia, Bohemia, Calabria, Piemont, and other places. If you follow other allegoricall ſenſes, you muſt be enforced to giue ouer your fantaſie of three vulgar yeeres and an halfe, to be the time of Antichriſts raigne, which yet before you make to be ſo plaine, that you compt vs exceedingly blinde with malice that will not ſee it. The time of Antichriſtes perſecution.

RHEM. 3 7 A great battell) In the Church there is a perpetuall combat betwixt S. Michael (protector of the Church militant as he was ſometime of the Iewes Synagogue Dan. 10. 21.) and his Angels, and the Diuell and his miniſters, the perfect victorie S. Michael fighting with the dragon.

victorie ouer whom, ſhall be at the iudgement. Marke here alſo the cauſe why S. Michael is commonly painted fighting with a dragon.

FVLKE. 3 Michael both here and Daniel 10. ſignifieth Chriſt, which is Lord of the Angels: for the Angels cannot be ſaid to be any other Michaels Angels, but onely the Angels of God and Chriſt. The auctor of the comentarie vnder S. Auguſtines name ſaith: By Michael vnderſtand thou Chriſt. But it is a weightie note, to marke the cauſe why S. Michael is commonly painted fighting with a dragon. But if it be of this viſion, your painters haue forgotten the dragons ſeuen heads with diademes and tenne hornes: for they paint the dragon with one head onely. And they giue S. Michael a paire of skoles or balances in his hand to weigh ſoules in, which I meruaile if you can defend alſo by the Scriptures. The picture of S. Michael.

RHEM. 4 15 To be caried away.) By great perſecution he would draw her, that is, her children from the true faith: but euerie one of the faithfull elect, gladly bearing their part thereof, ouercome his tyrannie. At whoſe conſtancie he being the more offended, worketh malitious attempts in aſſaulting the frailer ſort, who are here ſignified by the reſt of her ſeed that keepe the commandements, but are not ſo perfect as the former. Antichriſts attempts to draw from the true faith.

FVLKE. 4 When the deuil cannot preuaile againſt the whole Church, to roote her out of the earth, he aſſaulteth the ſeuerall members of her, which are her ſeed in euery age, and ſo doth Beda expound it.

CHAP. XIII.

1 A beaſt riſing vp out of the ſea, hauing ſeuen heads and ten hornes and ten diademes, 5 blaſphemeth God, 7 and warreth againſt the Saincts and deſtroyeth them. 11 And an other beaſt riſing out of the earth with two hornes, was altogether for the foreſaid beaſt, conſtraining men to make and adore the image thereof, and to haue the character of his name.

AND I ſawe ‖ a beaſt comming vp from the ſea, hauing ſeuen heads, and tenne hornes, and vpon his hornes ten diademes, and vpon his heads names of blaſphemie.

2 And the beaſt which I ſawe, was like to a libarde, and his feete as of a beare, and his mouth, as the mouth of a lion. And the dragon gaue him his own force & great power.

3 And I ſawe one of his heads as it were ſlaine to death: and the wound of his death was cured. And all the earth was ‡ in admiration after the beaſt.

4 And they adored the dragon which gaue power to the beaſt: and they adored the beaſt, ſaying, Who is like to the beaſt? and who ſhall be able to fight with it?

5 And there was giuen to it a mouth ſpeaking great things and blaſphemies: and power was giuen to it to worke two and fourtie moneths.

6 And he opened his mouth vnto blaſphemies towarde God, ‡ to blaſpheme his name, and his tabernacle, and thoſe that dwell in heauen.

7 And it was giuen vnto him ‖ to make battaile with the ſaincts, and to ouercome them. And power was giuen him vpon euery tribe and people, and tongue, and nation,

11 And I ſawe ‡ an other beaſt comming vp from the earth: and he had two hornes like to a lambe, and he ſpake as a dragon.

12 And al the power of the former beaſt he did in his ſight: and he made the earth & the inhabitants therein, to adore the firſt beaſt, whoſe wound of death was cured.

13 And

AND I ſawe a beaſt riſe out of the ſea, hauing ſeuen heads, and ten hornes, and vpon his hornes tenne crownes, and vpon his heads the name of blaſphemie.

2 And the beaſt which I ſaw was like a Leoparde, and his feete were as the feete of a Beare, and his mouth as the mouth of a Lion and the dragon gaue him his power, and his ſeate, and great auctoritie.

3 And I ſawe one of his heads as it were wounded to death, and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world wondred after the beaſt.

4 And they worſhipped the dragon which gaue power vnto the beaſt, and they worſhipped the beaſt, ſaying, Who is like vnto the beaſt? Who is able to warre with him.

5 And there was giuen vnto him a mouth, ſpeaking great things, and blaſphemies, and power was giuen vnto him, to doe fourtie and two moneths,

6 And he opened his mouth vnto blaſphemie againſt God, to blaſpheme his name, and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heauen.

7 And it was giuen vnto him to make warre with the ſainctes, and to ouercome them: And power was giuē him ouer al kindreds, & tongues, and nations.

8 And all that dwel vpon the earth, ſhal worſhip him, whoſe names are not writtē in the booke of life of the lambe, which was killed from the beginning of the world.

9 If any man haue an eare, let him heare.

10 He that leadeth into captiuitie, ſhall goe into captiuitie: He that killeth with a ſword, muſt be killed with a ſworde. Here is the patience and the faith of the ſainctes. Gen. 9. 6. matth. 26, 5.

11 And I beheld another beaſt comming vp out of the earth, and he had two hornes like a lambe, and he ſpake as did the dragon.

12 And he doth all that the firſt beaſt could doe in his preſence, and he cauſed the earth and them which dwell therein, to worſhip the firſt beaſt, whoſe deadly wound was healed.

13 And

13 And he did many signes, so that he made also fire to come downe from heauen vnto the earth in the sight of men.

14 And he seduceth the inhabitants on the earth through the signes which were giuen him to doe in the sight of the beast, saying to them that dwel on the earth, that they should make ‖ the image of the beast which hath the stroke of the sword, and liued.

15 And it was giuen him to giue spirit to the image of the beast, and that the image of the beast should speake: and should make, that whosoeuer shal not adore the image of the beast, be slaine.

16 And he shall make all, little and great, and rich, and poore, and free-men, & bond-men, to haue a character in their right hand, or in their foreheads.

17 And that no man may bye or sel, but he that hath ‖ the character, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

18 Here is wisedom. He that hath vnderstanding, ‖ let him count the number of the beast. ‖ For it is the number of a man: and ‖ the number of him is sixe hundred sixtie sixe.

13 And he doeth great wonders, so that hee maketh fire come downe from heauen on the earth in the sight of men.

14 And deceiueth them that dwell on the earth, by the meanes of those signes which he had power to doe in the sight of the beast, saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they shoulde make an image to the beast which hath the wound of a sword, and did liue.

15 And hee had power to giue a spirit vnto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speake, and should cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

16 And he causeth all, both small and great, riche and poore, free and bonde, that hee shoulde giue them a marke in their right hand, or in their foreheads.

17 And that no man might buy or sell, saue he that had the marke, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

18 Here is wisedome, let him that hath wit, count the number of the beast: For it is the number of a man, and his mother is sixe hundred threescore and sixe.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XIII.

RHEM. 1 3 In admiration.) They that now folow the simplest and grossest heretikes that euer were without seeing miracles, would then much more folow this great seducer working miracles.

FVLKE. 1 This is the vniuersalitie that the Papistes bragge of, when all the earth is in admiration of the lying signes and false miracles of Antichrist: whereas the doctrine of the Gospel, being confirmed by the miracles of Christ and his Apostles, hath no need of any other miracles. Popish vniuersalitie and miracles.

RHEM. 2 6 To blaspheme his name.) No heretikes euer liker Antichrist, then these in our daies, specially in blasphemies against Gods Church, Sacraments, Saincts, ministers, and all sacred things.

FVLKE. 2 The whole religion of Poperie, is nothing but blasphemie against God and Christ and his Church, and the blessed Angels and saincts that dwell in heauen: while they teach that God onely doeth not properly remit sinnes, is not onely to be serued, Christ is not our onely high Priest after the order of Melchisedech. The Masse is a sacrifice propitiatorie for the quicke and the dead, the Angels and saincts are mediatours and aduocates, the Virgine Marie may commaund her sonne by her motherly auctoritie. The bloud of Thomas is meritorious of the kingdome of heauen, for all men that will pray to ascend thither by it, with innumerable like blasphemies: And the true Church of God that ascribeth all honour and glorie of our saluation to God only and Christ our Sauiour, the Antichristians blaspheme to be heretic all, and persecute with fire and sword. The blasphemies of Antichrist.

RHEM. 3 11 An other beast.) An other false prophet inferior to Antichrist, shall worke wonders also, but all referred to the honour of his master Antichrist. So doth Caluin and other Arch-heretikes peruert the world to the honour of Antichrist, and so do their scholers also for the honour of them.

FVLKE. 3 You know that Caluine and the rest whom you blasphemously call Arch-heretikes, doe worke no miracles therefore they cannot be this false propher. Caluine no false prophet.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XIII.

RHEM. 4 1 A beast comming vp.) This beast is the vniuersal company of the wicked, whose head is Antichrist: and the same is called (Apoc. 17.) the whoore of Babylon. The 7 heads be expounded (Apoc. 17.) seuen kings: fiue before Christ, one present, and one to come. The 10 hornes be also there expounded to be 10 kings that shal reigne a short while after Antichrist. This dragon is the Diuel, by whose power the whore or beast or Antichrist worketh, for in the words folowing (v. 3 & 4) Antichrist is called the beast, to whom the dragon, that is, the Deuil giueth that power of feined miracles. and as we adore God for giuing power to Christ and his folowers, so they shal adore the Deuil for assisting Antichrist and giuing him power. Many mysteries expounded.

FVLKE. 4 This beast (by consent of the most auncient interpreters, and other fathers of the Primitiue Church,) is the Romane Empire, as it is enemie to God and Christ: one of the heads whereof is Antichrist. The whore of Babylon, Apoc. 17. is the citie of Rome vpholden by this beast, where the 7. heads be also expounded to be seuen hils vpon which the woman sitteth, which woman is there also said to be the great Citie, which hath dominion ouer the Kings of the earth, which can be none other but the Citie of Rome: For Rome onely had the kingdome at that time. These seuen kings are the seuen principall heads of gouernment of the Romane Empire, whereof fiue were abolished before Christ, one, (which was of the heathen Emperours) was present, and the seuenth then to come is the Pope, which is Antichrist. They that worship Antichrist, worship the deuill, not in their intent, (for Antichrist boasteth himselfe to be God) but because they worship him who hath his power of the deuil, and serueth the deuil in deceiuing the world. Rome the Seate of the Pope which is Antichrist.

RHEM. 5 7 To make battel with the saincts.) He shal kil the saincts then liuing, Elias & Enoch, and infinit moe that professe Christ. whereby we must learne, not to maruel when we see the wicked persecute & preuaile against the iust, in this life. Then shal his great persecution and crueltie trie the saincts patience, as his wonderfull meanes to seduce shal trie the stedfastnes of their faith, which is signified by these words folowing, Here is the patience and the faith of saincts. And when it is said, Great persecution by Antichrist and his ministers.

They

They adored the beast, whose names are not written in the booke of life of the Lambe, it giueth great solace and hope to al them that shal not yeld to such persecutions, that they are of Gods elect, & their names written in the booke of life. Their blessednes that continue constant.

FVLKE. 5 The two witnesses spoken of Chap. 11. haue beene slaine long agoe, but still are raised vp in spirit, while other succeed in their place. Of Enoch and Elias, See Chap. 11. Sect. 4.

RHEM. 6 14 The image of the beast.) They that now refuse to worship Christs image, would then worship Antichrists. And we may note here, that as the making or honouring of this image was not against the honour of Antichrist, but wholy for it, as also the image erected of Nebuchodonosor, and the worship thereof was altogether for the honour of him, so is the worship of Christs image, the honour of Christ him selfe, and not against him, as Protestants madly imagine. The honour of Christs image is for the honour of Christ.

FVLKE. 6 They that refuse to worship Christs image, because God hath forbidden to worship any images Exod. 20. wil neuer worship the image of Antichrist: no though it be not a dead image, but haue a spirit and doe speake, as the Popes Legates and deputies in euerie Countrie doe, which be nothing els, but the image of Antichrist. But it is a very strange Argument that you make in defense of the worshipping of Christs image: As the making and honouring of Antichrists image is not against the honour of Antichrist, but wholy for it, & likewise of Nabuchadnezars image: so is the honour of Christs image, the honour of Christ himselfe and not against him. A very good similitude, If Christ had commanded, and not forbidden such honour to be giuen vnto him: You shall not doe so to the Lord your God, Deut. 4. 23. & cap. 12. 4. Therefore you might better conclude. As the worship of Antichrists image, & of Nebuchanezars image is idolatrie and false worship, so is the worshipping of the image of Christ, or of any of his Saincts. It is therefore a madde imagination of the Papists, to thinke that Christ will be worshipped with images, which he hath expresly forbidden to be made in any vse of Religion. And if they were not made like to those things which they worship (as the Prophet denounceth to idolaters) that is void of sence and vnderstanding, (as their images be which they worship) they would not for shame defend such grosse idolatrie, to be true worship of God. Worshipping of Images.

RHEM. 7 17 The character or the name.) As belike for the peruerse imitation of Christ, whose image (specially as on the Rhoode or crucifixe) he seeth honoured and exalted in euery Church, he wil haue his image adored (for that is Antichrist, in emulation of like honour, aduersarie to Christ) so for that he seeth al true Christian men to beare the badge of his Crosse in their foreheads, he likewise wil force al his to haue an other marke, to abolish the signe of Christ. By the like emulation also & wicked opposition he wil haue his name and the letters thereof to be sacred, and to be worne in mens caps, or written in solemne places, and to be worshipped, as the name of IESVS is and ought to be among Christian men. And as the ineffable name of God was among the Iewes expressed by a certaine number of 4. characters (therefore called Tetragrámmaton*) so it seemeth the Apostle alludeth here to the number of Antichrists name.* Antichrists triple honour against the honour of Christ.

And here it is much to be noted, that the Protestants plucking downe the image of Christ out of all Churches, and his signe of the crosse from mens foreheads, and taking away the honour and reuerence of the name IESVS, doe make roome for Antichrists image, and marke, and name. And when Christs images and ensignes or armes shalbe abolished, and the Idol of Antichrist set vp in steed thereof, as it is already begon: then is the abomination of desolation which was foretold by Daniel and our Sauiour. The Protestants by abolishing of Christs image, & crosse and irreuerence to the name IESVS, make a ready way to the honor of Antichrist.

FVLKE. 7 Antichrist by his triple crowne, signifieth the triple honour he vsurpeth against the honour of Christ. The triple honour of Christ, is that he is our only soueraigne King, high Priest, and Prophet in religion. Of al which honour the Pope doth go about to spoile him, while he chalengeth that he himselfe is the supreme head of the vniuersall Church, the highest Priest in the same, and the onely prophet that cannot erre. In stead of which triple honour due to Christ onely, he assigneth to him a roode or Crucifixe, a superstitious marke of his Crosse, and the wearing of the name of IESVS in mens cappes, the power and vertue whereof he hath driuen out of their hearts. So vsurping the true honour of Christ, he scorneth him rather then honoureth him, with dead images, vaine signes, and superstitious abusing of his holy and mightie name: as the Souldiers did when they crowned him with thornes, clothed him in a robe of purple, & gaue him a reede in his hand in stead of a Scepter. And yet the Pope alloweth none of these counterfect honours to be proper to Christ. For euery Saincte hath his Image, many Saincts haue their characters, especially Peter his crosse keyes, and Mary hath her name commonly, where IESVS hath his. Finally he brought the world to that state, that no man might haue any worldly affaires therein, except he acknowledged the Popes crosse keyes, that is his auctoritie, or his soueraigntie, or himselfe to be a member of the Romish Italian or Latin Church. In which is conteined the number of his name. But the Protestants in defacing the Idols, & abolishing the superstitious abuse of the signe of the Crosse, and name of Iesus, haue taken away the derision and mockerie of Antichrist, which is contrary to the word of God, that they might restore to Christ his true honour that is due to him, as King, Priest, and Prophet, according to the holy Scriptures. The Pope spoyleth Christ of his true honour.

RHEM. 8 18 Let him count.) Though God would not haue it manifest before hand to the world, who in particular this Antichrist should be: yet it pleased him to giue such tokens of him, that when he commeth, the faithful may easily take notice of him, according as it is written of the euent of other prophecies concerning our Sauiour. That when it is come to passe, you may beleeue. In the meane time we must take heed that we iudge not ouer rashly of Gods secrets, the holy writer here signifying, that it is a point of high vnderstanding, illuminated extraordinarily by Gods spirit, to recken right and discipher truely before hand, Antichrists name and person. Antichrists name secret. Io. 14. 29.

FVLKE. 8 As rashnes is alwaies condemned, so are we here exhorted with wisedome and vnderstanding to compt the number of the beast, which is not innumerable, but the number of a man, such as by mans vnderstanding may bee found out, especially, when we see the prophecie in all other notes of Antichrist, to be fulfilled in the Pope.

RHEM. 9 18 It is the number of a man.) A man he must be, and not a Diuel or spirit, as here it is cleere, and by S. Paul 2. Thessal. 2. where he is called, the man of sinne. Againe, he must be one particular person, and not a number, a succession, or whole order of any degree of men: because his proper name, and the particular number, and the characters thereof be (though obscurely) insinuated. Which reproueth the wicked vanitie of Heretikes, that would haue Christs owne Vicars, the successors of his cheefe Apostle, yea the whole order of them for many ages together, to be this Antichrist. Who by his description here & in the said Epistle to the Thessalonians, must be one special man, and of a particular proper name, as our Lord IESVS is. And whosoeuer he be, these Protestants vndoubtedly are his precussors for as they make his way by ridding away Christes images, crosse, and name, so they exceedingly promote the matter by taking away Christs cheefe minister, that al may be plaine for Antichrist. Antichrist shalbe one special man and of a peculiar name.

If the Pope had been Antichrist, & had been reuealed now a good many yeers sithence, as these fellowes say he is to them, then the number of this name would agree to him, and the prophecie being now fulfilled, it would euidently appeare that he bare the name and number here noted. for (no doubt) when he commeth, this count of the letters or number of his name which before is so hard to know, wil be easie. for he wil set vp his name in euery place, euen as we faithful men doe now aduance The Pope cannot be Antichrist.

IESVS.

IESVS. And what name proper or appellatiue of al or any of the Popes do they finde to agree with this number, notwithstanding they boast that they haue found the whole order and euery of them these thousand yeeres to be Antichrist, and the rest before euen from S. Peter, foreworkers toward his kingdom?

FVLKE. 9 It can not be proued that Antichrist must be one particular person, and not a number or succession of men in one degree, because his name, and the particular number and the characters thereof, be insinuated. But contrariwise it is manifest by this place, that Antichrist is not one particular person. For the beast by all reason and circumstances, by the description in Daniel, and by the consent of the best and most auncient interpreters, is the Romane Empire, the number of whose name is here offered to be compted. But taking the beast as you doe, for the vniuersall company of the wicked, which hath seuen heads, whereof Antichrist is the last: seeing you confesse, sixe of them to be no singular persons, but whole states and successions of men that haue persecuted the Church, and the sixt to be the state of the Romane Emperours: how can the seuenth be taken for a singular person, more then the other sixe? Therefore there is no way for you to auoyde, but as the heathen Emperour of Rome was the sixt, so the Apostatical Pope of Rome is the seuenth. Antichrist no singular person.

That you say the Pope is Christs Vicar, and successour of the chiefe of the Apostles, it is nothing but beggerly demaunding of the whole matter in controuersie. Neither doth the description of Antichrist. 2. Thess. 2. proue that he is one singular man, as I haue shewed in that place. Neither can the abolishing of idolatrie and superstition, whereby Christs honour is defaced, make way for Antichrist, who hath inuented such meanes to dishonour Christ, and to aduaunce himselfe. But if the Pope had beene Antichrist (you say) and reuealed so long agoe, we should haue knowen the number of his name agreeing vnto him. So we doe, as it was found out soone after this prophecie was written, as it is testified by Irenæus. That Antichrist shall set vp his name in euerie place, as you set vp the Name of IESVS, it is a vaine fantasie, and hath no proofe out of the Scriptures. We haue founde in deede the whole order of Popes since they haue vsurped that Antichristian name, to be Antichrist, euen by the iudgement of Gregorie bishop of Rome. And many of his predecessors foreworkers toward his kingdome, especially those that forged the decree of the Bishop of Romes primacie, which was discouered in the Councel of Africa. Yet that all the rest from S. Peter were foreworkers toward the kingdome of Antichrist, we neither say nor thinke, for many of them doubtlesse were true Bishops, faithfull teachers, and constant Martyrs.

RHEM. 10 18 The number 666.) For asmuch as the auncient expositors and other do thinke (for certaine knowledge thereof no mortal man can haue without an expresse reuelation) that his name consisteth of so many, and such letters in Greeke, as according to their maner of numbering by the Alphabete make 666, and for asmuch as the letters making that number, may be found in diuers names both proper and common: (as S. Irenæus findeth them in Latinos and Teitan, Hippolytus in ἀρνεμαι, Aretas in Lampetis, and some of this age in Ludérus, which was Luthers name in the Alman tongue:) therfore we see there can be no certaintie, and euery one frameth and applieth the letters to his owne purpose. and most absurd folly it is of the Heretikes, to apply the word, Latinos, to the Pope: neither the whole order in common, nor euer any particular Pope being so called. and S. Irenæus the first that obserued it in that word, applied it to the Empire and state of the Romane Emperour, which then was Heathen, and not to the Pope of his daies or after him. and yet preferred the word, Teitan, as more agreeable, with this admonition, that it were a very perilous & presumptuous thing to define any certaintie before hand, of that number and name. And truely whatsoeuer the Protestants presume herein of the Pope, we may boldly discharge Luther of that dignitie. He is vndoubtedly one of Antichrists precursors, but not Antichrist him self. Al framing of letters to expresse Antichrists name, is vncertaine. Iren li. 5. in fine.

FVLKE. 10 It is true that many names may be inuented, whose letters make this number, but the Spirit of God speaketh not of fained names, nor biddeth men to faine names that haue this number in it, for thereof can come nothing but vncertaintie. But he willeth him to compt the number of his name, which then the beast had: which name many of the faithful before Irenæus time iudged to be λατεινος: And Irenæus affirmeth that it was very like to be so in deed, because the most true kingdome hath that name. For they be Latines (saith he) which now doe raigne, Lib. 5. By which we note first that his iudgement was, that Antichrist should be no singular man, but an order & succession of men. Secondly, that the beast then reigned in the heathen Emperours which afterwardes should reigne in Antichrist. The toy of Luthers name is worthy to be laughed at, seeing it is no hard matter to drawe any mans name almost to it: if you may change the letters at your pleasure, and take vpon you to know a mans name better then himselfe. But you say it is most absurd folly to apply the word Latinos to the Pope. And why so I pray you, is not he a Latine, as well as the Romane Emperour? Your reason is, that neither the whole order, nor any particular Pope was so called. For any particular Pope we striue not, But is not the Pope head of the Latine Church, as the Emperour was of the Latine Empire? Therefore if the Emperour might be called Latinos, (by Irenæus iudgment,) much more the Pope, who is so much a Latine, that he will allow no exercise of Religion, but in Latine. That he condemneth the Greeke Church, because it wil not be subiect to his Latine Law. Which hath caused all priuate men to pray in Latine. Which alloweth no translation of the Scripture as authenticall, but his Latine, no not the originall of Hebrue and Greeke, which he blaspheneth to be corrupted: and therefore must giue place to his Latine. In somuch that the setter foorth of the Complutense edition, in his preface to him, saith, He placed the Latine text betweene the Hebrue and Greeke, as Christ betweene two theeues. Finally, when it is so notorious that he is the head of the Latines, that the ignorant people knowe no other proper difference of his religion, but that it is Latine. That Irenæus applied that name to the state of the heathen Emperours, it was right, for then the sixt King reigned: and Antichrist the seuenth head of the Latine beast was not come, as he is now in the Papacie. That he preferreth the name Teitan, it was because he sawe not the fulfilling of the prophecie in the comming of Antichrist, the accomplishment whereof, he willed men to waite for, that they be not deceiued by the coniectures of diuers names. But now that Antichrist is come and discouered, we see plainely that Latinos is his name. Yea we see that רומית the Hebrue name of the beast signifying Romane, hath the same number: and it is not by chaunge that Ecclesia Italica in the accompt of the Greeke letters, fulfilleth the same number. The time of his manifestation also falling about that yeere of our Lord 666. especially the composition of the Latin seruice by Pope Vitalian to be obserued in all regions subiect to the Romish tyranny. What time also Constantius the Emperour hauing remoued the chiefe ornaments of the auncient Empire of Rome to Constantinople, left the Citie of Rome to the Popes pleasure, maketh for the better vnderstanding of this number. That you discharge Luther of his dignitie of Antichrist, he is much beholding to you. But if you will make him vndoubtedly one of his precursors, you must proue his doctrine against Poperie, to be contrary to the Scriptures: but that you will neuer be able to doe. Antichrists name.

The Epistle vpon S. Innocents day in Christmas.

AND I looked, and behold ‡ a Lambe stood vpon mount Sion, and with him an hundred fourtie foure thousand hauing his name, & the name of his Father written in their foreheads.

‡ Christ, and the same in number of elect that were signed chap. 7.

2 And I heard a voice from heauen, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of great thunder: and the voice which I heard, as of harpers harping on their harpes.

3 And they sang as it were a newe song before the seat & before the foure beasts, & the seniors, and no man could ‖ say the song, but those hundred fourtie foure thousand, that were brought from the earth.

‖ learne μαθεῖν,

4 These are they which were not defiled with women. For they are ‡ virgins. These follow the Lambe whithersoeuer he shall goe. These were brought from among men, 'the first fruites to God and the Lambe:

5 And in their mouth there was found no lie. for they are without spot before the throne of God.

6 And I sawe an other Angel flying through the middes of heauen, hauing the eternal Gospel, to euangelize vnto them that sit vpon the earth, and vpon euery nation, and tribe, and tongue, and people:

7 Saying with a loud voice, Feare our Lord, & giue him honour, because the houre of his iudgement is come: and adore ye him *that made heauen and earth, the sea and al things that are in them, & the fountaines of waters.

Ps. 145. Act. 14.

8 And an other Angel followed, saying, *Fallen fallen is that great ‡ Babylon, which of the wine of the wrath of her fornication made al nations to drinke.

Esa. 21. Ier. 51. Apo. 18.

9 And the third Angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, If any man adore the beast & his image, and receiue the character in his forehead, or in his hand:

‡ The great damnation that shall follow them that forsake Christ & the Church, and worship Antichrist or his image.

10 ‡ He also shal drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is mingled with pure wine in the cup of his wrath, and shal be tormented with fire and brimstone in the sight of the holy Angels & before the sight of the Lambe.

11 And the smoke of their torments shal ascend for euer and euer: neither haue they rest day and night, which haue adored the beast, and his image, and if any man take the character of his name.

12 Here is the patience of saincts, which ‡ keepe the commandements of God and the faith of IESVS.

13 And

AND I looked, and loe, a Lambe stood on the mount Sion, and with him an hundreth, fourtie, and foure thousande, hauing his fathers name written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard a voice from heauen as the sound of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder: and I heard the voice of Harpers, harping with their harpes.

3 And they sing as it were a newe song before the throne, and before the foure beasts, and the Elders, and no man coulde learne that song, but the hundred and fourtie and foure thousand, which were redeemed from the earth.

4 These are they which were not defiled with women, for they are virgins: These are they which followe the Lambe whithersoeuer hee goeth: These were redeemed from men, being the first fruites vnto God, and to the Lambe.

5 And in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without spotte before the throne of God.

6 And I sawe another Angel flee from the middes of heauen, hauing the euerlasting Gospell to preach vnto them that dwell on the earth, and to all nations, and kindreds, and tongues, and people.

*7 Saying with a loude voyce. * Feare God, and giue glorie to him, for the houre of his iudgement is come: and worship him that made heauen and earth, and the sea, and fountaines of waters.* Actes 14.13. ps. 146.6.

*8 And there followed another Angel, saying, * Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great citie, for she made all nations drinke of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.* Esai. 21.8. iere. 51.8.

9 And the third Angel followed them, saying with a loude voice, If any man worship the beast and his image, and receiue his marke in his forehead, or in his hand.

10 The same shall drinke of the wine of the wrath of God: yea, of the pure wine which is powred in the cuppe of his wrath, and hee shalbe punished in fire and brimstone before the holy Angels, and before the Lambe.

11 And the smoke of their torment ascendeth vp euer more: And they haue no rest day nor night which worshippe the beast and his image, and whosoeuer receiueth the print of his name.

12 Here is the patience of the saincts: Here are they that keepe the commandements of God, and the faith of Iesus.

13 And

b The Epiſtle in a daily Maſſe. for the dead.

13 b And I heard a voyce from heauen, ſaying to me, Write, Bleſſed are the dead which dy in our Lord ‖ from hence forth now, ſaith the ſpirit, that they reſt from their labours. for their workes folowe them.

14 And I ſaw, and behold a white cloude and vpon the cloude one ſitting like to the Sonne of man, hauing on his head a crowne of gold, and in his hand a ſharpe ſickle.

15 And an other Angel came forth from the temple, crying with a loude voice to him that ſate vpon the cloud, *Thruſt in thy ſickle, and reape, becauſe the houre is come to reape, for the harueſt of the earth is drie.

Ioel.3. Mat.13.

16 And hee that ſate vpon the cloude, thruſt his ſickle into the earth, and the earth was reaped.

17 And an other Angel came forth, from the temple which is in heauen, him ſelfe alſo hauing a ſharpe ſickle.

18 And an other Angel came forth from the altar, which had power ouer the fire: and he cried with a loude voice to him that had the ſharpe ſickle, ſaying, Thruſt in thy ſharp ſickle, and gather the cluſters of the vineyard of the earth: becauſe the grapes thereof be ripe.

19 And the Angel thruſt his ſharpe ſickle, into the earth, and gathered the vineyard of the earth, and caſt it into the great c preſſe of the wrath of God:

c ληνὸν lacum. fat, trough, lake

20 And the preſſe was troden without the citie, and bloud came forth out of the preſſe, vp to the horſe bridles, for a thouſand ſixe hundreth furlongs.

13 And I heard a voyce from heauen ſaying vnto mee, Write, Bleſſed are the dead, which hereafter die in the Lorde, Euen ſo ſayth the ſpirite, that they may reſt from their labours, and their workes follow them.

14 And I looked, and behold, a white cloude, and vpon the cloude one ſitting like vnto the ſon of man, haning on his head a golden crowne, and in his hand a ſharpe ſickle.

15 *And another Angell came out of the temple, crying with a loude voyce to him that ſate on the cloud, Thruſt in thy ſickle and reape, for the time is come to reape for the Harueſt of the earth is ‖ ripe. Ioel.3.

‖ Or, dryed.

16 And he that ſate on the cloude thruſt in his ſickle on the earth, and the earth was reaped.

17 And an other angel came out of the temple, which is in heauen, hauing alſo a ſharpe ſickle.

18 And another Angel came out from the altar, which had power ouer fire, and cryed with a loude cry to him that had the ſharpe ſickle, ſaying, Thruſt in thy ſharpe ſickle, and gather the cluſters of the vineyarde of the earth, for her grapes are ripe.

19 And the Angel thruſt in his ſharpe ſickle on the earth, and cut downe the vineyard of the earth, and caſt it into the great winefat of the wrath of God.

20 And the winefat was troden without the citie, and blood came out of the fat, euen vnto the horſe bridles, by the ſpace of a thouſand and ſixe hundred furlongs.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XIIII.

RHEM. 5 13 From hence forth now.) This being ſpecially ſpoken of Martyrs (as not onely S. Auguſtine ſeemeth to take it, but the Caluiniſts themſelues, tranſlating, in domino, for our Lords cauſe) the Proteſtants haue no reſon to vſe the place againſt Purgatory or praier for the departed, ſeeing the Catholike Church and all her children confeſſe that all Martirs are ſtraight after their death, in bliſſe, and neede no praiers. Whereof this is S. Auguſtines knowen ſentence. He doth iniury to the Martyr, that praieth for the Martyr. Ser. 17 de verb. Apoſt. c. 1. and againe to this purpoſe he writeth thus moſt excellently tract. 84. in Ioan. We keepe not a memory of Martyrs at our Lords table, as we doe of other that reſt in peace, that is, for the intent to pray for them, but rather that they may pray for vs &c. Beza. Praying for the dead, and vnto Saincts, at the alar. The place abuſed againſt Purgatorie, anſwered.

But if we take the words generally for al deceaſed in ſtate of grace, as it may be alſo, then we ſay that euen ſuch, though they be in purgatorie and Gods chaſtiſement in the next life, and neede our praiers, yet (according to the foreſaid words of S. Auguſtine) doe reſt in peace, being diſcharged from the labours, afflictions, and perſecutions of this worlde, and (which is more) from the daily dangers of ſinne and damnation, and put into fallible ſecuritie of eternall ioy with vnſpeakeable comfort of conſcience, and ſuch in deede are more happie and bleſſed then any liuing, who yet are vſually in the Scriptures called bleſſed, euen in the middes of the tribulations of this life. Whereby we ſee that theſe words, from hence forth they ſhall reſt from their labours, may truely agree to them alſo that are in Purgatorie, and ſo here is nothing proued againſt purgatorie. Laſtly, this aduerbe, à modo, in Latine, as in Greeke ἀπάρτι, doth not properly ſignifie from this preſent time forward, ἀπάρτι ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν ward, as though the Apostle had said, that after their death and so forward they are happie: but it noteth and ioyneth the time past together with the time present, in this sense, that such as haue died since Christs ascension, when he first entring into heauen opened it for others, goe not to Limbus patrum, as they were wont before Christs time, but are in case to goe straight to blisse, except the impediment be in themselues. Therefore they are here called blessed, that die now in this state of grace and of the new Testament, in comparison of the old faithfull and good persons. Photius in Lexico.

FVLKE. Though Beza doth translate it so as it seemeth to pertaine only to martyrs, yet the phrase doeth not necessarily import so much, for then he would haue said rather, which are killed or slaine for the Lord. And seeing to liue in the Lord or in Christ Iesus, is a phrase of Scripture, signifying to liue godly and in the faith of Christ, 2. Tim. 3. 12. so to die in the Lord, signifieth to die in the faith of Christ, as 1. Thess 4. 16. the dead in Christ, are called all that haue died in the faith of Christ before his comming to iudgement. Therefore they that die in the Lord, are not they onely that die for the Lordes cause, but all that die in the faith of Christ, who are to be comforted against the troubles of this life, and the persecution of Antichrist, & not they onely whom Antichrist shall kill and murther, but euen they also that for the Lordes cause, are killed all the day long, and accompted as sheepe of the slaughter, which is the condition of all Gods children in this life. Seeing then this blessednesse pertaineth to all that die in the faith of Christ, there is no purgatorie paines for them after this life, nor any need of praiers. By that which S. Augustine saieth of the memorie of Martyrs vsed in his time, if we compare it with the elder vsage, in which they offered sacrifice for Patriarkes, Prophets, Martyrs, and all the elect departed: as appeareth by Cypr. Ep. 38. Epipha. hær. 75. and the olde Liturgies: it is easie to gather, that the auncient memories and oblations for the dead, were neither masses nor praiers, but praises and thankes giuing, though afterward by litle and litle, the superstition of praying for the dead, and the opinion of purgatory began to be receiued. And yet purgatorie was not confirmed in S. Augustines time, as it appeareth by his doubting thereof in some places. Ench ad Laurent. cap. 69. De fide & oper. c. 16. De octo Quæst. Dulc. q. 1. and his vtter denying of a third place: Hypognostic lib. 5. De verb. Apost. ser. 14. But seeing you confesse the place may be vnderstood of all that die in the fauour of God: you say, that though they be in purgatorie, they rest in peace according to S. Augustines wordes. But those wordes of S. Augustine doe confute your purgatorie, where there is no more rest then is in hell, if we beleeue your fables of your torments of purgatory, which tell vs that they differ onely, in that the one is temporall, the other eternall. They that praied for the dead therefore in S. Augustines time, compted them to rest in peace, yet to be delaied of their blessed felicitie for a season: as the Greekes doe at this day which deny your purgatorie, yet pray for the dead. But (say you) they rest in peace, because they be discharged of the trouble of this life, &c. A miserable rest, to be discharged of the common afflictions of this life (whereof they suffer lest, whom you affirme to goe to purgatorie) to be tormented with hellish paines after this life, and that for so many thousand yeeres as the Popes pardons are able, to release them, and yet will not of his charitie giue them, but couetously selleth them. But it is more (you say) that they are discharged from daily danger of sinne and damnation, and put to infallible securitie of eternall ioy, with vnspeakeable comfort of conscience. Verily, the elect that are iustified by faith, though they be subiect to sinne of infirmity, yet are out of danger of damnation, euen while they are in this life, Rom. 8. 1. and of sinning vnto death, 1. Ioh. 5. 18. and as for the infallible certaintie of eternall ioy, with vnspeakeable comfort of conscience, they haue also in this life by the testimonie of Gods spirit, Rom. 8. 16. Therefore although their state were such in purgatorie, as you say, yet it were worse then the state of this life, in which be all the good things that you can say of purgatorie, and yet there is not that terrible flame and torment which you say is in purgatorie. Purgatorie. Praiers for the dead.

But seeing they be soules and not bodies, that be in purgatorye: I maruaile how they can haue such vnspeakeable comfort of minde, wherein they suffer such vntollerable torments, as you hold their paynes to be, or what paynes they can suffer in their soules, which enioy vnspeakeable comfort of their consciences. For the vnspeakeable comfort of conscience, will ouercome all other griefes of body or minde: and the discomfort of conscience, is the greatest torment that the soule can suffer. As for your fables of burning, and scalding, whipping, and racking, yea freezing of soules in the yce, and such like, whereof your Legends & promptuaries are full, you may tell to olde wiues, on winter nights by the fire side: but men indewed with knowledge and vnderstanding, will not be perswaded that the conscience feeling vnspeakeable comfort (as you say,) can be tormented with any such things. Seeing therefore the holy ghost sayth, that the dead in Christ doe rest from their labours, it is certaine they feele no purgatory paynes, which are infinitely greater then any labours of this life, if they be such as you would make men beleeue they are. Lastly (you say) the aduerbe doth not signifie properly from this time forward, but it noteth together the tyme past with the time present. Verily S. Iohn vseth it to signifie from this time forward, not only in this place, but also in his gospel Ioh. 1. 51. Where Christ saith to Nathaniel, from henceforth, you shal see heauen open &c. where he doth not note and ioyne the time past, with the time present, but speaketh altogether of the time to come: so he meaneth, that from their death forwarde they are blessed, and rest from their labours. A modo tum id est à tempore mortis requiescere docet Beda in hunc locum. But that the Apostle doth not meane they should bee blessed, because they go not into Limbus patrum, it is manifest by this reason, that all that went to Limbus patrum by your owne confession were blessed, were in Abrahams bosome, and in happy rest, and rested from their labours, therefore they enioyed that happinesse, which is heare pronounced of the dead in the Lorde. That you ende Limbus patrum at Christs ascension, and hold that Christ by descending into hell deliuered the fathers from thence. I meruaile where you place them, for those fourtie daies, that were betweene his resurrection and ascension.

And if any of the elect died in that meane time, howe they were deliuered out of Limbus patrum, except you fayne that Christ descended to hell after his resurrection. But you say further, that such as haue dyed since Christes ascension, are in case to goe streight to blisse, except the impediment be in themselues. But the spirite acknowledgeth no impediment of blisse of them that die in the Lorde but sayth they are blessed, that are dead in the Lorde. Whereas if there had bene any other impediment, hee coulde not haue pronounced them absolutely blessed: but should haue added the exception of that impediment, which might keepe them from blessednesse. Which seeing the spirit neither here, nor any where in the scriptures hath declared, it is but a forged impediment, that taketh away the ioy and comfort which the spirit giueth to all them that die in the Lorde. This blessednesse therefore is absolute, and not in comparison, nor with exception: and the reason of their blessednes is added, for that they rest from their labours & troubles. And their works follow them vnto euerlasting reward, according to gods promise, by whose grace they haue bene iustifyed by faith, exercised in good works, and ended their course in the Lord.

The harlot Babylon clothed with diuers ornaments, 6 and drunken of the bloud of Martyrs, sitteth vpon a beast that hath seuen heads and ten hornes: 7 all which things the Angell expoundeth.

AND there came one of the seuen Angels which had the seuen vials, and spake with me, saying, Come, I will shewe thee ‡ the damnation of the great harlot, which sitteth vpon ‘ many waters,

4 And the woman was clothed round about with purple and scarlet, & gilted with gold and precious stone, and pearles, hauing a golden cuppe in her hand, full of the abomination and filthinesse of her fornication.

4 And the woman was araied in purple and scarlet colour, and decked with gold, precious stone and pearles, hauing a cuppe of gold in her hand, full of abominations, and filthinesse of her fornication.

6 And I sawe the woman drunken with the blood of the Saincts, and with the blood of the martyrs of Iesus: And when I sawe her, I wondred with great maruelle,

7 And the Angell saide vnto me, Wherefore maruelleſt thou? I will shew thee the mysterie of the woman, and of the beast that beareth her, which hath seuen heades and tenne hornes.

12 And the ten hornes which thou ſaweſt: are ‡ ten kings, which haue not yet receiued kingdom, but ‖ ſhal receiue power as kings one houre after the beaſt,

13 Theſe haue one counſell and force: and their power they ſhall deliuer to the beaſt.

14 Theſe ſhal fight with the Lambe, and the Lambe ſhall ouercome them, becauſe * he is Lord of lords, and King of kings, and they that are with him, called, and elect, and faithful.

15 And he ſaid to me, The waters which thou ſaweſt where the harlot ſitteth: are peoples and nations and tonges.

17 For ‡ God hath giuen into their harts, to doe that which pleaſeth him: that they giue their kingdō to the beaſt, till the words of God be conſummate.

12 And the ten hornes which thou ſaweſt, are ten kings, which haue receiued no kingdome as yet: but receiue power as kings at one houre with the beaſt.

13 Theſe haue one mind, and ſhal giue their power and ſtrength vnto the beaſt.

17 For God hath put in their harts to fulfill his will, and to doe with one conſent, for to giue their kingdome vnto the beaſt, vntil the wordes of God ſhall be fulfilled.

The finall damnation of the whole company of the reprobate is deſcribed, cap. 20. 14. &c. Therefore the great Whore in this chapter, ſignifieth the congregation of Antichriſt, the members whereof be all ſpirituall citizens of Rome: their whole faith and religion, depending vpon the ſea of Rome, and their head vſurping all his tyrannie, by pretenſe of right of that citie. A liuely image of which viſion God made manifeſt to the whole worlde, when a whore was made head of the Romiſh church, called Iohn the 7. and of ſome the 8. commonly Pope Ioane. Which ſo wringeth the Papiſtes at the heart, that they haue no way to ſhift it of, but by impudent denying of that which is ſo notorious, euen in their owne ſtories of their popes liues.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XVII.

RHEM. 4 — 5 Babylon.) In the end of S. Peters firſt Epiſtle, where the Apoſtle dateth it at Babylon, which the auncient writers (as we there noted) affirme to be meant of Rome: the Proteſtants will not in any wiſe haue it ſo, becauſe they would not be driuen to confeſſe that Peter euer was at Rome. but here for that they thinke it maketh for their opinion, that the Pope is Antichriſt, and Rome the ſeate and citie of Antichriſt, they will needes haue Rome to be this Babylon, this great whore, and this purple harlot. for ſuch fellowes, in the expoſition of holy Scripture, be led onely by their preiudicate opinions and hereſies to which they draw all things without all indifferencie and ſinceritie.

The Proteſtants here will needs haue Babylon to be Rome, but not in S. Peters epiſtle.

But

But S. Auguſtine, Aretas, and other writers, moſt commonly expound it, neither of Babylon it ſelfe a citie of Chaldæa or AEgypt, nor of Rome, or any one citie, which may be ſo called ſpiritually, as Hieruſalem before chap. 11. is named ſpirituall Sodome and AEgypt, but of the generall ſocietie of the impious, and of thoſe that preferre the terrene kingdom and commoditie of the world, before God and eternal felicitie. The author of the Commentaries vpon the Apocalypſe ſet foorth in S. Ambroſe name, writeth thus: This great whore ſometime ſignifieth Rome, ſpecially when at that time when the Apoſtle wrote this, did perſecute the Church of God. but otherwiſe it ſignifieth the whole citie of the deuil, that is, the vniuerſall corps of the reprobate. Tertullian alſo taketh it for Rome, thus. Babylon (ſaith he) in S. Iohn is a figure of the citie of Rome, being ſo great, ſo proud of the Empire, and the deſtroyer of the Saincts. Which is plainely ſpoken of that citie when it was heathen, the head of the terrene dominion of the world, the perſecutor of the Apoſtles and their ſucceſſours, the ſeate of Nero, Domitian and the like, Chriſts ſpecial enemies, the ſinke of idolatrie, ſinne, and falſe worſhip of the Pagan gods. Then was it Babylon, when S. Iohn wrote this, and then was Nero and the reſt figures of Antichriſt, and that citie the reſemblance of the principall place (whereſoeuer it be) that Antichriſt ſhal reigne in about the later end of the world.

By Babylon (according to al the fathers) is ſignified, partly the whole ſocietie of the wicked partly the city of Rome, onely in reſpect of the terrene & heatheniſh ſtate of them that perſecuted the Church. Li. aduerſ. Iudæos.

Nowe to apply that to the Romane Church and Apoſtolike See, either nowe or then, which was ſpoken onely of the terrene ſtate of that citie, as it was the ſeate of the Emperour, and not of Peter, when it did ſlea aboue thirtie Popes Chriſtes Vicares, one after another, and endeuoured to deſtroy the whole Church: that is moſt blaſphemous and fooliſh.

The Church in Rome was one thing, and Babylon in Rome an other thing. Peter ſate in Rome, and Nero ſate in Rome. but Peter, as in the Church of Rome: Nero, as in the Babylon of Rome: Which diſtinction the Heretikes might haue learned by S. Peter him ſelfe ep. 1. chap. 5. writing thus, The Church ſaluteth you, that is in Babylon, coelect. So that the Church and the very choſen Church was in Rome, when Rome was Babylon. whereby it is plaine that, whether Babylon or the great whoore doe here ſignifie Rome or no, yet it cannot ſignifie the Church of Rome, which is now, and euer was differing from the terrene Empire of the ſame. And if, as in the beginning of the Church, Nero and the reſt of the perſecuting Emperours (which were figures of Antichriſt) did principally ſit in Rome, ſo alſo the great Antichriſt ſhal haue his ſeate there, as it may well be (though others thinke that Hieruſalem rather ſhal be his principal citie:) yet euen then ſhal neither the Church of Rome, nor the Pope of Rome be Antichriſt, but ſhal be perſecuted by Antichriſt, and driuen out of Rome, if it be poſſible. for, to Chriſts Vicar and the Romane Church he will beare as much good will as the Proteſtants now do, and he ſhall haue more power to perſecute him and the Church, then they haue.

The Church of Rome is neuer called Babylon.

S. Hierom epiſt. 17. c. 7. to Marcella, to draw her out of the citie of Rome to the holy lande, warning her of the manifolde allurements to ſinne and ill life, that be in ſo great and populous a citie alludeth at length to theſe words of the Apocalypſe, and maketh it to be Babylon, and the purple whoore. but ſtraight way, leſt ſome naughtie perſon might thinke he meant that of the Church of Rome, which hee ſpake of the ſocietie of the wicked onely, hee addeth: There is there in deede the holie Church, there are the triumphant monument of the Apoſtles and Martyrs, there is the true confeſſion of Chriſt, there is the faith praiſed * of the Apoſtle, and Gentilitie troden vnder foote, the name of Chriſtian daily aduancing it ſelfe on high. Whereby you ſee that whatſoeuer may bee ſpoken or interpreted of Rome, out of this worde Babylon, it is not meant of the Church of Rome, but of the terrene ſtate, in ſo much that the ſaid holy Doctor li. 2. aduerſ. Iouinian. c. 19.) ſignifieth that the holines of the Church there, hath wiped away the blaſpemie written in the foreheade of her former iniquitie. But of the difference of the olde ſtate and dominion of the Heathen there, for which it is reſembled to Antichriſt. and the Prieſtly ſtate which now it hath, read a notable place in S. Leo ſerm. 1. in natali Petri & Pauli.

Ro. 11.

FVLKE. 4 In the ende of S. Peters epiſtle, for a poore helpe to prooue that Peter was at Rome, you will needes haue Babylon to bee taken for Rome, whereunto in deede the conſent of auncient writers, mooued with the light of this chapter, agreeth. Yet can it neither neceſſarily nor probably be gathered out of that epiſtle, ſeeing there appeareth no reaſon why he ſhould not call it Rome, being that citie whereof he was biſhop, (if wee beleeue the Papiſtes) and which ſhould bee the heade of Chriſtian religion, and the Ieruſalem of Chriſtians, as the Papiſtes affirme. There appeareth, I ſay, no reaſon why he ſhould refuſe to call it Rome: (eſpecially ſeeing there is no other teſtimonie in the Actes of the Apoſtles, of his comming thither) and why hee ſhould call it by the odious and infamous name of Babylon, which was the olde enimie of the Church, and the ſeate of Antichriſt, rather then Sainct Paule writing to the Romanes, or to Timothie of his perſecution at Rome. Except perhappes by the ſpirite of prophecie hee did foreſee how his ſucceſſours in that place ſhould abuſe his name, and the dignitie of that ſea, to ſet vp the kingdome of Antichriſt there: and for that cauſe would admoniſh the faithfull, that they ſhould take Rome not for the Ieruſalem of Chriſtians, but for Babylon the citie of Antichriſt, which in time to come, was to be reuealed in that place. But in this chapter where Rome is moſt plainely deſcribed vnder the name of Babylon. the papiſtes by all meanes would auoid that expoſition, becauſe they ſee manifeſtly, that Babylon which is Rome, is here deſcribed to be the ſeat and citie of Antichriſt.

Babylon is Rome.

Theſe are the fellowes that in expoſition of the holy Scriptures, be led onely by their preiudicate opinions and hereſies to which without any reaſon and ſinceritie, they drawe all things. And if you marke their notes from the beginning to the ende, you ſhall ſee, that in verie fewe they haue any colour out of the wordes of the text, to conclude their notes, but for the moſt part they bring their preiudicate opinions to the text, and ſo drawe not their notes out of the Scripture. But drawe the Scriptures to their opinions, which can neuer be concluded out of the Scripture. As for Peters being at Rome, wee affirme it cannot bee prooued out of the Scriptures: yet for the conſent of auncient writers, wee yeeld vnto it, as to a matter of ſtorie, but no article of our faith. And if Peters being at Rome were as certaine out of the Scriptures, as Paules comming thither, and being there: it coulde make nothing for the Antichriſtian auctoritie, which the Pope claymeth vnder colour of his being there. Who if he were there, was the chiefe Apoſtle of the circumciſion, and not of the Gentiles, as it is manifeſt by the holy Scripture, Galathians 2. And what prerogatiue ſo euer hee had, being an Apoſtle, it ceaſed with the death of his perſon, as the Apoſtleſhip of Paule, and of the reſt: although the fruite of their labours in preaching and writing, ſhall continue to the ende of the world.

But S. Auguſtine (you ſay) and Arethas expound not this place of Rome, but of the ſocietie of the vngodly. S. Auguſtine in deede ſaieth often, that Babylon repreſenteth the ſocietie of the vngodly, as Ieruſalem the Church of the faithfull, but yet he acknowledgeth the olde citie of Babylon in Aſſyria, to haue beene the head citie of that ſocietie before Chriſt, and Rome to be the head citie of the ſame ſocietie ſince the comming of Chriſt: and this he doth commonly inſinuate in his bookes De ciuit. Dei, as I haue ſhewed before. Among which this one teſtimonie ſhall ſerue vs to repeate. We ought where neede is to make report of the Aſſyrian kings, that it may appeare how Babylon which was the firſt Rome, commeth foorth in the world with this ſtranger the citie of God. And the affaires which we muſt enter into this booke for the compariſon of both the Cities, the earthly and the heauenly, we muſt take out of the Greekes and Latines, where Rome it ſelfe is, which is the ſecond Babylon. You ſee therefore moſt euidently that as olde Babylon of the Aſſyrians was the head of the ſocietie of the impious, againſt the Church of the Iewes: ſo Rome of the Latines, is the head of the ſocietie of the vngodly, againſt the Church of the Chriſtians. For this cauſe he calleth Rome an other Babylon, the ſecond Babylon, the weſterne Babylon, the daughter of the elder Babylon, Concerning Arethas, as he tooke his commentary out of the auncient Greeke writers, ſo he cannot diſſemble their iudgement, that by Babylon is ſignified olde Rome. But being a Grecian liuing farre from Italy, and out of the tyrannie of the Romiſh Antichriſt, and knowing more diſorder in Conſtantinople in his time then he did in Rome, he declareth that in his opinion, it ſignifieth rather Conſtantinople, which was called newe Rome, then olde Rome in Italie. Yet becauſe all things could not agree to Conſtantinople, he inclineth to that opinion, that Babylon ſignifieth the world of wicked men. Neuertheleſſe he confeſſeth: That other writers hauing diſcuſſed this reuelation, haue interpreted it to be olde Rome, or an vniuerſall kingdome, which extendeth to the ſecond comming of our Lord. And in the ende he leaueth it to the readers diſcretion to take it for olde Rome or newe Rome, or the time of the life of Antichriſt. Therefore neither S. Auguſtine nor Arethas denie it to bee expounded of Rome, but rather confirme that moſt ancient expoſition, which alſo is cleere by the texr it ſelfe, verſ. 9. & 18. As for later writers, that liued vnder the tyrannie of the Romiſh antichriſt, were glad to wreſt it any whither, rather then to incurre the hatred of Rome, by diſciphiring it, to be the citie of Antichriſt. Yet ſometime there haue not wanted they, that haue beene bolde to tell the Pope openly, that Rome is Babylon. For the church of Leodium being miſerably afflicted by Pope Paſcall the ſecond, doth thus write againſt him: In times paſt I was woont to interpret, that Peter by Babylon would ſignifie Rome, becauſe Rome at that time was confuſed with idolatrie and all filthineſſe. But now my ſorrow doth interpret vnto me, that Peter calling the Church gathered together in Babylon, foreſaw (by ſpirit of prophecie) the confuſion of diſſention, wherewith the Church at this day is rent in pieces. As for the poore men of Lyons, whom they called by the name of Waldenſes, Leoniſtæ, and ſuch like opprobrious names, did plainely affirme, and conſtantly beleeue, that the church of Rome is this whoore of Babylon, and the pope antichriſt, as Reinerius an inquiſitor witneſſeth of them, which liued more then three hundred yeeres agoe. And ſaith they were more pernicious to the Romiſh church then all other ſects, for three cauſes. The firſt, Becauſe it hath beene of longer continuance. For ſome ſay it hath indured ſince the time of Sylueſter. Other ſay it hath indured ſince the Apoſtles time. The ſecond cauſe is, becauſe it is more generall. For there is almoſt no land, in which this ſect doth not creepe. The third cauſe, for that all other ſects doe bring in an horror with the heinouſneſſe of their blaſphemies againſt God. This ſect of the Leoniſts, hath a great ſhew of godlineſſe, becauſe they liue iuſtly before men, and beleeue all things well concerning God, and all the articles which are contained in the Creed, they blaſpheme and hate onely the church of Rome. This is the teſtimonie of a cruell enemy and perſecutor of them, by which you may ſee, that Antichriſt after he was diſcloſed, was acknowledged by many true Chriſtians, to be that he is, although many alſo were deceiued by him (though none of the elect finally) to their deſtruction.

The auctor of the commentarie in S. Ambroſe name, and Tertullian, you confeſſe to vnderſtand this Babylon to be Rome, to whom afterward you adde S. Hierome: ſo might you haue done Primaſius, and Victorinus, elder then S. Hierome, and Ambroſius Ansbertus, who did write about 700. yeeres agoe. But you ſay Rome was Babylon when it was heathen, as in Tertullians time, and when Saint Iohn wrote this. Verie good, that which was Babylon in Saint Iohns time, is the ſame that hee prophecieth to bee the chiefe citie and ſeate of Antichriſt, as it is manifeſt to all that reade the prophecie. But Rome was then Babylon, ergo Rome is the citie which hee prophecieth that it ſhould be the ſeate of antichriſt. But in the daies of Victorinus, Ambroſe, Auguſtine, Hierome, Primaſius, &c. Rome was not heathen, yet of them taken to be Babylon, therefore of them taken to be the citie where antichriſt (when he was reuealed) ſhould ſit, and not a reſemblance onely of it. Eucherius de ſpiritualibus formulis c. 10. Babylon aut mundus, aut Roma in apocalypſi: Et Babylon magna venit &c. Paulinus ep. 10. ad Seuerum, calleth Rome Babylon and the daughter of Babylon. Ep. 31. Poteras Roma intentas ſibi illas in apocalypſi minas non timere, ſi talia ſemper ederent munera Senatorij tui. ad Alothium. But to apply that to the Romane Church, and apoſtolike ſee, either now or then (you ſay) it is moſt blaſphemous and fooliſh. In deed to apply it to the true Romane church or the right ſucceſſion in the apoſtolike ſee, which was in the daies of S. Iohn, or in the time of the Chriſtian emperours, it were both folly and blaſphemie: but to apply it to the church of Rome, and counterfect ſucceſſion of Popes, it is wiſedome and holineſſe. For Saint Iohn prophecieth not onely of the crueltie of the terrene eſtate of that citie, but alſo of the falſe prophet and antichriſt, which ſhould vſurpe an eccleſiaſticall ſtate and dignitie in that citie. The church of Rome in deede, was one thing, and Babylon in Rome was another thing, while the church of God was at Rome, and was perſecuted by the heathen emperors. But when the emperour of Rome was Chriſtian, one of the heads of the beaſt was wounded to death, as c. 13. euen that ſixt head, which was the perſecutor in the time of S. Iohn. But this head was healed in Conſtantius the heretike Emperor, Valens, and Iulian the apoſtata &c. and ſtill the ſeuenth head was to come. But great preparation was made for him, while the biſhop of Rome grewe beyond the limits of a Chriſtian miniſterie, into forreine and heatheniſh dominion, as Socrates teſtifieth lib. 7. c. 11. in the time of the Chriſtian emperours. And when the myſterie of iniquitie wrought not ſo cloſely in that ſee, but the forgerie of the biſhops was diſcouered in the Africane councell, vnto which they obtruded a counterfect cannon of the councell of Nice for their primacie. And while Leo biſhop of Rome will not obey the decree of the generall councell of Chalcedon, which gaue equall priuiledge of dignitie to the biſhop of Conſtantinople, which was new Rome, with thoſe which the Church of Rome before had claimed as peculiar to her alone. ſeſs. vltim. In the beſt and moſt Chriſtian times of Rome therefore, when the head of the heathen empire was wounded to death, it was counted of the ancient fathers to be Babylon heere ſpoken of, becauſe of the ſeuenth head, which is the kingdome of antichriſt, that was looked for, to come in place of the ſixth head, which was the terrene ſtate of heatheniſh, hereticall, and perſecuting emperours. Therefore not the true church in Rome, but Rome the perſecutor of the ſaincts, firſt in the heathen and hereticall emperours, afterward in the proude popes and the kings ſubiect to them, is Babylon the mother of all abhominations. And ſo great is the force, and ſo manifeſt is the light of truth, that you are compelled to confeſſe in the ende, that antichriſt ſhall haue his ſeate in Rome, though vpon the eleuenth chapter you were reſolute of Ieruſalem. But that you would diſcharge the pope and the popiſh church, to whom all the prophecies doe ſo aptly agree to be antichriſt and his citie, you labour in vaine. For the blaſphemous pride and hereſies of the pope and his church, with the moſt abhominable liues of both, will eaſily conuince that he is the ſeuenth heade of the beast, which was to come, and we are not to looke for any other. That you adde out of Hierome, prooueth that he iudged not the church of Rome in his time to be the whoore of Babylon, but yet you cannot auoide, but he iudged the citie of Rome to be the whore of Babylon spoken of in this prophecie, in which antichrist should haue his chiefe seate of tyrannie. But aduers. Iouin. lib. 2. (you say) he signifieth that the holinesse of the church of Rome had wiped away the name of blasphemie, written in the forehead of her former iniquitie. In deede he saieth to Rome, that she had by confession of Christ put away the name of blasphemie, written in her forehead, which in his epistle to Algasia quæst. 11. he saith was Roma æterna, To Rome eternall. But that he meaneth this in respect of the true church onely that was there in his time, and yet looketh for this prophecie of the kingdome of antichrist, and the fall of Babylon to be fulfilled there. Hee saieth to Rome in the same place: The curse which our Sauiour hath threatened to thee in the Apocalypse, thou mayest escape by repentance, hauing the example of the Ninuites. You see he doeth acknowledge the damnation of the great whoore of Babylon to be behinde, not yet accomplished in his time, when the dominion of the heathen was altogether subuerted. The sermon Leo extolleth the conuersion of Rome from Gentilitie to Christianitie, by the preaching of Peter and Paule, but this question of Antichrist and his seate, he doth not once touch.

RHEM. 5 5 Mysterie.) S. Paul calleth this secrete and close working of abomination, the mysterie of iniquitie. 2. Thessal. 2. and it is called a little after in this chapter vers. 7. the Sacrament (or mysterie) of the woman, and it is also the marke of reprobation and damnation. Mysterie.

FVLKE. 5 Beda saith: It is declared that this name is mysticall, because it is discerned onely by wisedome. As for the marke of reprobation is not openly carried in the forehead, where this mysticall name is written, which S. Hierome interpreteth to be that inscription Roma æterna. To Rome eternall. So the heathen writers called the citie commonly Vrbs æterna, The eternall citie, supposing that the Empire of Rome should be eternall. Whom the papists succeeded when the ciuill empire was remooued from thence, setting the ecclesiasticall tyranny of antichrist vnder the colour of Peters see, and the eternall rocke of the church, against which the gates of hell shall not preuaile. So blasphemously peruerting the most comfortable promise of Christ touching the perpetuitie of his catholike church builded vpon the doctrine, faith, and confession of Peter and the rest of the Apostles, to the bishops personall succession of Peter in the pontificall see of Rome. Where neither the doctrine nor example of Peters life is to be found, nor any such power was euer in Peters person. And that prerogatiue which he had, descended not by succession to any other, more then Paules prerogatiue, or that which Iames, or that which Iohn enioyed in their Apostleship, did descend to any of the bishops that afterward succeeded in those churches which they planted or instructed. The name of blasphemie. Peters prerogatiue descended not.

RHEM. 6 This woman signifieth all persecutors of saincts. 6 Drunken of the bloud.) It is plaine that this woman signifieth the whole corps of all the persecutours that haue and shal shed so much bloud of the iust: of the Prophets, Apostles, and other Martyrs from the beginning of the world to the ende. The Protestants foolishly expound it of Rome, for that there they put Heretikes to death, and allow of their punishment in other countries: but their bloud is not called the bloud of saincts, no more then the bloud of theeues, mankillers, and other malefactors: for the shedding of which by order of iustice, no Commonwealth shal answer. Putting heretikes to death, is not to shed the bloud of saincts.

FVLKE. 6 The great abundance of bloud that Rome hath shedde, first vnder the heathen emperours, and then vnder the antichristian popes, more then euer Babylon of the East did powre out, is sufficient to make her drunke with the bloud of the saincts. For which crueltie shee deserueth as well as Ierusalem, that all the righteous bloud that hath beene shedde since the bloud of righteous Abell, should be imputed to her, and required at her handes. They whom you call heretikes, for the most part, and that are in any great number put to death at Rome, and by the tyrannie of the Romish iniquisition: are the true Christians and saincts here spoken of, whose godly way you call heresie, as the persecuting Iewes called it in S. Paul. Act. 24. 14. Therefore, though we allow the punishment of heretikes, both in our owne countrie and in others, yet we abhorre the crueltie of antichrist and his church, which condemneth true Christians, and murthereth them vnder colour of heretikes, himselfe and his false prophets being the greatest and most blasphemous heretikes that euer were. Rome drunke with the saincts bloud.

RHEM. 7. 9 Seuen hilles.) The Angel him selfe here expoundeth these 7 hilles to be all one with the 7 heads and the 7 kings: and yet the Heretikes blinded exceedingly with malice against the Church of Rome, are so madde to take them for the seuen hilles litterally, vpon which in old time Rome did stand: that so they might make the vnlearned beleeue, that Rome is the seat of Antichrist. But if they had any consideration, they might marke that the Prophets visions here are most of them by Seuens, whether he talke of heads, hornes, candlesticks, Churches, kings, hilles, or other things: and that he alluded not to the hilles, because they were iust seuen, but that Seuen is a mystical number, as sometime Ten is, signifying vniuersally al of that sort whereof he speaketh. as, that the seuen heads, hilles, or kingdomes (which are here al one) should be al the kingdomes of the world that persecute the Christians: being heads and mountaines for their height in dignitie aboue others. And some take it, that there were seuen speciall Empires, kingdomes, or States, that were or shalbe the greatest persecutors of Gods people. as of AEgypt, Chanaan, Babylon, the Persians, and Greekes, which be fiue. sixtly of the Romane Empire which once persecuted most of al other, and which (as the Apostle here saith) yet is, or standeth. but the seuenth, then when S. Iohn wrote this, was not come, neither is yet come in our daies: which is Antichrists state, which shal not come so long as the Empire of Rome standeth, as S. Paul did Prophecie. 2. Thessal. 2. The Protestants madnes in expounding the 7 hils, of Rome: the Angel him selfe expounding it otherwise.

FVLKE. 7. The Angell doth not expound those seuen hilles to be all one with the seuen heads, and the seuen kings. but sheweth most plainely, that the seuen heads of the beast doe signifie seuen hilles, vpon which the woman sitteth, that is, the citie is builded. For the woman vers. 28. is interpreted to be a citie. Also these seuen heades doe signifie seuen kings. Therefore hilles are taken litterally for hilles in one signification, as kings are in the other. For both these wordes, hilles and kings, are in the interpretation of this word, heads. And it had beene very superfluous to haue added, that they are hilles, and vpon which the woman sitteth, when he should meane nothing thereby, but they are kings, vpon which the citie doth not sit, but rather kings vpon the citie. For euerie interpretation must be more plaine and cleere then that which is interpreted. Therefore it should be a monstrous interpretation, to say the seuen heads doe signifie seuen hils, when he meaneth no hils but kings: for it is more plaine to vnderstand that heads are kings, then that hils are kings. This is therefore a brutish wrangling against so cleere light of truth, seeing you haue also confessed before, that it may well be that antichrist shall haue his seat at Rome. sect. 4. And if we be blinded with malice against the church of Rome, and so madde to take them for seuen hils litterally, what were so many of the ancient fathers, as affirmed Rome to be the the see of antichrist, by the cleere description of her in this chapter? Especially Victorinus and S. Hierome. The seuen heads (saith Victorinus) are seuen hils, vpon which the woman, that is, the citie of Rome, doth sit. The other saith Ep. 17. I suppose this place is holier then the Tarpeian rocke, which hauing beene so often stricken with thunder and lightnings from hea- Rome is described plainely, uen, ſheweth that it diſpleaſeth the Lord. Read the Apocalypſe of Iohn, and conſider what is there ſaide of the woman clothed in purple, and the blaſphemie written in her forehead, the ſeuen hils, the many waters, and the departure from Babylon. Were theſe ancient fathers alſo vnlearned? that thus vnderſtood and taught the citie of Rome to be the ſeate of Antichriſt, and the ſeuen hils to be taken litterally for thoſe famous hils by which Rome hath beene notoriouſly diſcerned from other cities, euen when it hath not been named: as Virgil in his Georgikes, ſaying: Septem quæ vnâ ſibi muro circundedit arces. She being but one, hath compaſſed ſeuen hils within her wall, is vnderſtood of all men, to be the citie of Rome, although the Poet doth not there expreſſe her name. But in olde time, you ſay, Rome did ſtand vpon thoſe hils, whereby you would inſinuate, that Rome doth not now ſtand vpon them, but for feare of another ſequel &c.

D. Sanders not fearing that conſequence (for what ſhould hee feare, that was not afraide to raiſe warre againſt his ſoueraigne in her owne realme of Ireland) counteth it a childiſh argument, by the ſeuen hilles to prooue the ſee of antichriſt to be at Rome: becauſe the citie is now gone from the hilles, and ſtandeth in the plaine of Campus Martius, and the pope ſitteth on the other ſide of the riuer vpon the hill Vaticane hard by S. Peters Church, by whom he holdeth his chaire, not at all deriuing his power from the ſeuen hilles, &c. But if the pope ſit now in another Rome then Peter the Apoſtle ſate, how will Sanders perſuade vs that he ſitteth in the chaire of Peter? For that Rome where Peter ſate, was builded vpon the ſeuen hilles, and not gone downe into the plaine of Campus Martius, nor ouer the riuer. Therefore, if the pope doe not at all deriue his power from the ſeuen hilles, he deriueth it not at all from Peters ſeate, for that was in the citie builded vpon ſeuen hilles. Beſide this, it is plaine, that although many of the people of late time haue remooued their habitations from the hils into the plaine, and the pope his pallace of pleaſure vnto the other ſide of the riuer: yet hath he not remooued his ſeat from them: for on them be ſtill to this day, his churches, monaſteries, and courts. For on the mount Cælius is the monaſterie of S. Gregorie the firſt, biſhop of Rome, builded by himſelfe, where his fathers houſe ſtood: the church of S. Iohn and Paule, where was a ſtately pallace, inhabited by diuers popes in times paſt. There is the hoſpitall of S. Sauiour, the church of S. Marie in Dominica. The church of S. Stephan the round. The church of the foure crowned, with a notable pallace belonging to it. The monaſterie of Eraſmus. The great cathedrall church or minſter of Laterane, which is ſaid to keepe the heads of the Apoſtles Peter and Paule, where are the goodlieſt buildings of the world. And that pallace (ſaith Blondus) as it is the principall ſeate of the popes of Rome, ſo of moſt of them it was in times paſt inhabited, euen vntill the daies of pope Nicholas the ſecond, which is was almoſt 1100. yeeres after Chriſt.

On the ſame hill did Eugenius the fourth build a moſt ſumptuous monaſterie, and repaired the olde pallace, as the principall ſeate of his popedome. There is alſo an houſe of Charterhouſe monkes, with the church of S. Croſſe in Ieruſalem. Beſide this, there is not one of the hilles at this day, in which the popes religion is not practiſed in churches and abbeies. The mount of Auentine hath three monaſteries, of Sabine, Boniface, and Alexius. The mount Exquilinus, hath the famous minſter of S. Maria maior, the churches of Antonie, Praxidis, Vitus, Euſebius, the fortie martyrs, Clemens, Peter ad Vincula, and Martin in montibus. Beſide the olde ruines of S. Cyriacus church, which is yet a title of a cardinalſhip. The mount Viminalis hath the churches of S. Laurence in Paliſperna & Potentiana. The mount Tarpeius or Capitoline hath a houſe of Friers called Ara Cœli, and a brickehouſe builded by Boniface the ninth, for keeping courts. The mount Palatine hath the churches of S. Nicholas and S. Andrew. To the mount Quirinalis belongeth S. Maria De Populo &c. But if we had any conſideration, we might marke (you ſay) that the Prophets viſions are moſt by ſeuens, and that he alluded not to the hilles, becauſe they were iuſt ſeuen. We know ſeuen to be a myſticall number of perfection as tenne, ſignifying Vniuerſalitie, of the thing ſpoken of: but when the Prophet himſelfe expoundeth the number of heads, of ſeuen hilles, and knowing that the ſaid great citie ſate vpon ſeuen hils, we muſt vnderſtand that he calleth them ſeuen hils becauſe they were iuſt ſeuen: as the ſeuen candleſtickes, and the ſeuen ſtarres doe ſignifie the ſeuen churches, and the ſeuen biſhops of them to whom he writeth, becauſe they were iuſt ſeuen, as they be rehearſed by name. c. 1. 11. and c. 2. & 3.

Likewiſe the ſeuen kings or kingdomes, which is another interpretation of the ſeuen heads, are called ſeuen becauſe they are iuſt ſeuen in number, as it is manifeſt by the accompt that the Angell maketh of them: ſaying fiue are fallen, one is, and the ſeuenth is not yet come. And although ſome take it for ſeuen ſpeciall kingdomes that perſecuted Gods people, yet it is manifeſt by the whole diſcourſe of the chapter, that the Apoſtle meaneth of ſeuen heads, or principall rulers of the Romane empire, as Kings, Conſuls, Decem viri, Tribuni militum, Dictators, Emperors, Popes: whereof fiue were fallen before S. Iohns time, the emperour then was, the pope was yet to come: which is the tyrannie of antichriſt, long ſince diſcouered, and is nowe not a little conſumed with the ſpirite of the Lordes mouth, which is his holy worde, preached in theſe daies, and ſhall bee vtterly aboliſhed by the comming of our Sauiour Chriſt to iudgement, as S. Paule did prophecie. 2. Theſſ. 2.

RHEM. 8 11 The ſame is the eight.) The beaſt it ſelf being the congregation of al theſe wicked perſecutors, though it conſiſt of the foreſaid ſeuen, yet for that the malice of al is complete in it, may be called the eight. Or, Antichriſt him ſelf, though he be one of the ſeuen, yet for his extraordinary wickednes ſhalbe counted the odde perſecutor, or the accompliſhment of al other and therefore is named the eight, Some take this beaſt called the eight, to be the Diuel. What is the eight beaſt.

FVLKE. 8 The kingdome of antichriſt being one of the ſeuen, that is a Romane tyranny, yet for that it is after another ſort then the other ſix, perſecuting the true church vnder the colour of the head of the catholike church, is alſo called the eight kingdome.

RHEM. 9 18 The great citie.) If it be meant of any one citie, and not of the vniuerſal ſocietie of the reprobate (which is the citie of the Diuel, as the church and the vniuerſal fellowſhip of the faithful is called the citie of God) it is moſt like to be olde Rome, as ſome of the Greekes expound it, from the time of the firſt Emperours, til Conſtantines daies, who made an ende of the perſecution. for by the auctority of the old Romane Empire, Chriſt was put to death firſt, and afterward the two chiefe Apoſtles, and the Popes their ſucceſſours, and infinite Catholike men throughout the world, by leſſer kings which then were ſubiect to Rome. Al which Antichriſtian perſecutions ceaſed, when Conſtantine reigned, and yelded vp the citie to the Pope, who holdeth not the kingdome or Empire ouer the world, as the Heathen did, but the fatherhod and ſpirituall rule of the church. Howbeit the more probable ſenſe is the other, of the citie of the Diuel, as the author of the homilies vpon the Apocalypſe in S. Auguſtine declareth. The double interpretation of Babylon.

FVLKE. 9 Without all peraduenture the great citie which in S. Iohns time had the dominion ouer the kings of the earth, was none other but the citie of Rome, and ſo it is expounded, not onely of ſome Greekes, but of the moſt of the Latine writers, as Iræneus, Tertullian, Ambroſe, Victorinus, Hierome, Auguſtine, Primaſius, as hath beene ſhewed before. Proſper alſo a Latine writer De prom. & prad. c. 7. ſaith: Who cannot vnderſtande Rome plainely deſcribed.

what citie he ſaith doth carry a cuppe full of the abhominations of vncleanneſſe, and fornication of the whole earth? when it is called eternall which is temporall, verily it is a name of blaſpheme: when mortall men, though kinges, therein are called Diui, that is, Gods, and their ſuppliants ſay vnto them: To your diuine power, to your altars, to your eternitie, &c. This the learned know to be the citie of Rome, which was called The eternall citie, and wherein the emperours were called gods, and the people flattered them with altars and blaſphemous titles of diuine power and eternitie: as they doe now their popes with the like blaſphemous termes of the moſt holie, and your holineſſe. Who haue alſo as blaſphemous tokens of diuinitie, as any of the heathen emperours had: in their triple crowne, their riding on mens ſhoulders, their attendance of kings and emperours, their thrones in the churches higher then the altars, and ſuch like blaſphemous pompes of heathenish and Antichriſtian pride. Ambroſius Ansbertus alſo a Latine writer 700 yeeres ſince, in his commentarie vpon chap. 14. verſ. 8. calleth Rome the ſecond Babylon, and vpon this chapter v. 3. he writeth thus: The Angel admoniſhed vs to know, that by the ſenſe of wiſdome following, the ſeuen heads are ſeuen hils, and ſeuen kings, that he might ſhew that vnto the ſimilitude of thoſe kings, he had brought Rome, which ſitting aloft vpon ſeuen hils, ſometimes gouerned the monarchy of the whole world: that in the name of that citie he had figured the power of the whole earthly kingdome.

Seeing therefore the conſent of moſt ancient writers, and your owne confeſſion added to the cleerenesſe of the text, acknowledgeth that the citie heere ſpoken of, is the citie of Rome: you cannot auoid but the ſame citie is the ſeat of antichriſt the ſeuenth head, as well as it was of the heathenish perſecutours that were the ſixth head. And although thoſe heathenish perſecutions did ceaſe while Conſtantine reigned, in whom the ſixth head was wounded to death, yet were they renued in his ſonne Conſtantius the Arrian, and his nephew Iulian the apoſtata, who raiſed perſecution afreſh againſt the church of God, though not ſo cruell as before. Where you ſay that Conſtantine yeelded the citie of Rome to the pope, in your meaning it is falſe, for he and his ſucceſſors for many yeeres after, held the dominion of that citie. But in truth, by remouing the ſeat of the empire partly to Conſtantinople, he yeelded place for the myſterie of iniquitie, to worke more eaſily, toward the open manifeſtation of antichriſt. But the pope (you ſay) holdeth not the kingdome or empire ouer the world as the heathen did, but the fatherhood and ſpirituall rule of the church. That the pope hath held the empire ouer the kings of the earth, and practiſed as great pride and tyranny euen againſt them that beare the name of the Romane emperors, and againſt other kings of the earth: the ſtories are full of examples. And that he ſtill claimeth the ſame empire and kingdome, his blaſphemous bull giuen out againſt the QVEENE of England, with other his antichriſtian practiſes againſt her crowne and dignitie, doe manifeſtly declare. It is not therfore a fatherhood and a ſpirituall rule, which he claimeth moſt blaſphemouſly ouer all the church. but vnder colour and pretenſe thereof, a temporall kingdome, and an earthly empire ouer the kings of the earth. And as his predeceſſours the heathen emperours, vnder title of their earthly empire, vſurped the auctoritie ouer all religion, and were called Pontifices maximi, that is, the cheefe gouernours of religion: So the popes vnder the title of the cheefe gouernement of religion, vſurpe all ſouereintie of earthly dignitie and temporall dominion. And ſeeing you confeſſe that by the auctority of the Romane empire Chriſt was put to death, it is eaſie to conclude, that not Ieruſalem, but Rome which is ſpiritually called Sodoma and Egypt, is that great citie ſpoken of chap. 11. which as it crucified our Lord, ſo alſo it killeth his prophets and ſaincts. Therefore without controuerſie Babylon is Rome, the head and chiefe of all perſecutors of the church of Chriſt, as old Babylon was of his people the Iewes, as S. Auguſtine himſelfe plainely teacheth. And ſo may the auctor of thoſe homilies in S. Auguſtin be vnderſtood: that one citie is principall in perſecution of the church, though the church hath many enemies beſide that city, and them that holde of it.

CHAP. XVIII.

The fall of Babylon, her iudgement, plagues and reuenges: for the which, 9 the kings, 16 and marchants of the earth that ſometime did cleaue vnto her, ſhal mourne bitterly: 20 but heauen, and the Apoſtles and Prophets ſhal reioyce.

AND after theſe things I ſaw an other Angel comming downe from heauen, hauing great power: and the earth was illuminated of his glorie.

Apoc. 14. 8. 2 And he cried out in force, ſaying, *Fallen fallen is Babylon the great: and it is become the habitation of Deuils, and c the cuſtodie of euery vnclene ſpirit, and the cuſtodie of euery vncleane and hateful bird:

3 Becauſe al nations haue drunke of the wine of the wrath of her fornication: and the kings of the earth haue fornicated with her: and the marchantes of the earth were made riche by the vertue of her delicacies.

4 And I heard an other voice from heauen, ſaying, Goe out from her my people: that you be not partakers of her ſinnes, and receiue not of her plagues.

5 Becauſe her ſinnes are come euen to heauen, and God hath remembred her iniquities.

6 Render to her as ſhe alſo hath rendred to you: and double ye double according to her

AND after that, I ſaw another angell come from heauen, hauing great power, and the earth was lightened with his glorie.

*2 And he cried mightily with a ſtrong voice, ſaying, Great Babylon is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of deuils, and the holde of all foule ſpirites, and a cage of all vncleane and hatefull birdes: Eſai. 21. 19, Iere. 51. 8,

3 For all nations haue drunken of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth haue committed fornication with her, and the marchants of the earth are waxed rich of the abundance of her pleaſures.

4 And I heard another voice from heauen, ſaying, Come away from her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her ſinnes, and that ye receiue not of her plagues.

5 For her ſinnes are gone vp to heauen, and God hath remembred her wickedneſſe.

6 Reward her euen as ſhe rewarded you, and giue her double according to her workes, and her workes: In the cuppe wherein ſhe hath mingled, mingle ye double vnto her.

7 As much as ſhe hath glorified her ſelf, and hath been in delicacies, ‡ ſo much giue her torment and mourning: becauſe ſhee ſaith in her hart, * I ſit a Queene, and Widow I am not, and mourning I ſhal not ſee.

8 Therfore in one day ſhal her plagues come, death, and mourning, and famine, and with fire ſhe ſhal be burnt: becauſe God is ſtrong that ſhal iudge her.

9 And ‡ the kings of the earth, which haue fornicated with her, and haue liued in delicacies, ſhall weepe, and bewaile them ſelues vpon her, when they ſhall ſee the ſmoke of her burning:

10 Standing farre of for the feare of her torment, Saying, Wo, wo, that great citie Babylon, that ſtrong citie: becauſe in one houre is thy iudgement come.

11 And the marchantes of the earth ſhal weepe, and mourne vpon her: becauſe no man ſhal bye their merchandiſe any more,

12 Merchandiſe of gold & ſiluer & precious ſtone, and of pearle, and fine linnen, and purple, and ſilk, & ſcarled, and al Thyne wood, and al veſſels of yuorie, and al veſſels of precious ſtone and of braſſe and yron and marble,

13 And cynamon, and of odours, and ointment, and frankencenſe, and wine, and oile, and floure, and wheate, and beaſtes, and ſheepe, and horſes, and chariotes, and ſlaues, and ſoules of men.

14 And the apples of the deſire of thy ſoule are departed from thee, and al fat and goodly thinges are periſhed from thee, and they ſhal no more finde them.

15 The marchants of theſe things which are made riche, ſhal ſtand farre from her for feare of her tormentes, weeping and mourning,

16 And ſaying, Wo, wo, that great citie, which was clothed with ſilke, and purple, and ſcarlet, and was gilted with gold, and pretious ſtone, and pearles:

17 Becauſe in one houre are ſo great riches made deſolate: and euery gouernour, and euery one that ſaileth into the lake, and the ſhipmen, and they that worke in the ſea, ſtoode a farre of,

18 And cried ſeeing the place of her burning, ſaying, What other is like to this great citie?

19 And they threwe duſt vpon their heades, and cried weeping and mourning, ſaying: Wo, wo, that great citie, in the which al were made riche that had ſhippes in the ſea, of her prices: becauſe in one houre ſhe is deſolate.

8 Therefore ſhall her plagues come in one day, death, and ſorow, and hunger, and ſhe ſhall be vtterly burnt with fire, for ſtrong is the Lorde which iudgeth her.

9 And they ſhall bewaile her, and the kings of the earth ſhall lament for her, which haue committed fornication with her, and haue liued wantonly with her, when they ſhall ſee the ſmoke of her burning:

18 And cried, when they ſaw the ſmoke of her burning, ſaying, What citie is like vnto this great citie?

19 And they caſt duſt on their heades, and cried, weeping and wailing, and ſaying, Alas, alas, that great citie, wherein were made rich all that had ſhippes in the ſea, by reaſon of her coſtlineſſe, for at one houre is ſhe made deſolate.* Iere. 51.

20 Reioyce ouer her thou heauen, and ye holy Apoſtles and Prophets, for God hath giuen your iudge-hath iudged your iudgement of her.

indgement on her.

21 And a mightie Angel tooke vp a ſtone, like a great milſtone, and caſt it into the ſea, ſaying, With ſuch violence ſhall that great Citie Babylon be caſt, and ſhall be found no more at all.

22 And the voice of harpers, and Muſitions, and of Pipers & Trumpetters, ſhal be heard no more at all in thee: and no craftesman, of whatſoeuer craft he be, ſhal be found any more in thee: and the ſound of a mill ſhall be heard no more at all in thee:

23 And the light of a candle ſhall ſhine no more at all in thee, and the voice of the bridegrome, and of the bride, ſhal be heard no more at all in thee: for thy marchants were the great men of the earth, and with thine inchantment were deceiued all nations.

24 And in her was found the bloud of the Prophets, and of the Saincts, and of all that were ſlaine vpon the earth.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XVIII.

RHEM. 1 21 Babylon that great.) By this it ſeemeth cleere that the Apoſtle meaneth not any one Citie, but the vniuerſall companie of the reprobate, which ſhall periſh in the day of iudgement: The olde Prophets alſo naming the whole number of Gods enemics myſtically, Babylon. as Ierem. c. 52.

FVLKE. 1 The Angell ſheweth, that whereas Babylon boaſted that ſhe was eternall, ſhe ſhal be vtterly deſtroyed, and neuer riſe againe. Therefore here is nothing to proue, that he meaneth not any one Citie, but rather that he meaneth the citie and kingdome of Rome, the ſee of Antichriſt, of whoſe vtter deſtruction, the Angell ſpecially prophecieth. For the deſtruction of the vniuerſall companie of the reprobate, in the day of iudgement, is deſcribed afterward, Cap. 20, 11, and ſo to the end of the Chapter. And Ieremie cap. 52. doth nothing elſe but hiſtorically deſcribe the captiuitie of Babylon, by Nabuchadnezer and his power, and the aduancing of Iehoiacim by Euilmerodoch King of Babylon, as euery man will confeſſe, that readeth the Chapter. Rome is Babylon.

CHAP. XIX.

1 The Saincts glorified God for the iudgement pronounced vpon the harlot, 7 the mariage of the Lambe is prepared. 10 The Angell refuſeth to be adored of S. Iohn. 11 There appeareth one (who is the word of God, and the King of kings and lord of lords) ſitting on a horſe, with a great armie, and fighting againſt the beaſt and the kings of the earth and their armies: 17 the birdes of the aire being in the meane time called to deuoure their fleſh.

THE Epiſtle for many martyrs. ALLELVIA.

AFTER theſe things I heard as it were the voice of many multitudes in heauen ſaying, Allelu-ia, Praiſe, and glory, and power is to our God:

2 Becauſe true and iuſt are his iudgements which hath iudged of the great harlot, that hath corrupted the earth in her whoredome, and hath reuenged the bloud of his ſeruants, of her hands.

3 And ‡ againe they ſaid, Allelu-ia. And her ſmoke aſcendeth for euer and euer.

4 And the foure and twentie ſeniors fell downe, and the foure beaſtes, and adored God ſitting vpon the throne, ſaying: ‖ Amen, Allelu-ia.

5 And a voice came out from the throne, ſaying: Say praiſe to our God al ye his ſeruantes: and you that feare him, litle and great.

6 And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of great thunders, ſaying, Alleln-ia: becauſe our Lord God the omnipotent hath reigned.

7 Let vs be glad and reioyce, and giue glory

AND after theſe things, I heard a great voyce of much people in heauen, ſaying, Alleluia: ſaluation, and glorie, and honour, and power be aſcribed to the Lord our God:

2 For true and righteous are his iudgements, for he hath iudged the great whore which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath throughly auenged the bloud of his ſeruants of her hand.

3 And againe they ſaid, Alleluia: and her ſmoke roſe vp for euermore.

4 And the foure and twentie Elders, and the foure beaſtes fell downe, and worſhipped God that ſate on the throne, ſaying, Amen, Alleluia.

5 And a voice came out of the throne, ſaying, Praiſe our Lord God all ye that are his ſeruants, and yee that feare him both ſmall and great.

6 And I heard as it were the voice of much people. euen as the voyce of many waters, and as the voice of ſtrong thundrings, ſaying, Alleluia: for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth.

glory to him: becauſe the mariage of the Lambe is come, and his wife hath prepared her ſelfe.

8 And it was giuen to her that ſhe clothe her ſelfe with ſilke glittering and white. For the ſilke are ‖ the iuſtifications of Saincts.

9 And he ſaid to me, Write, * Bleſſed be they that are called to the Supper of the mariage of the Lambe. ‡ And he ſaid to me, Theſe words of God, be true.

10 ‖ And * I fel before his feete, to adore him. And he ſaith to me, See thou doe not: I am thy fellow-ſeruant, and of thy brethren that haue the teſtimony of IESVS. Adore God. For the teſtimonie of IESVS, is the ſpirit of prophecie.

11 And I ſawe heauen opened, and behold a white horſe: and he that ſate vpon him, was called Faithful and True, and with iuſtice he iudgeth and fighteth.

12 And his eies as a flame of fire, & on his head many diademes. hauing a name written which no man knoweth but him ſelfe.

13 * And he was clothed with a garment ſprinkled with bloud: and his name is called ‘ THE VVORD OF GOD.

14 And the hoſtes that are in heauen folowed him on white horſes, clothed in white and pure ſilke.

15 And out of his mouth proceedeth a ſharpe ſword: that in it he may ſtrike the Gentiles. And * he ſhal rule them in a rod of yron: and he treadeth the wine preſſe of the furie of the wrath of God omnipotent.

16 And he hath in his garment and in his thigh written, * ‡ KING OF KINGES AND LORD OF LORDES.

17 And I ſaw one Angel ſtanding in the ſunne, and he cried with a loud voice ſaying to al the birdes that did flie by the middes of heauen, Come and aſſemble together to the great Supper of God:

18 That you may eate the fleſh of kings, and the fleſh of tribunes, and the fleſh of valiants, and the fleſh of horſes and of them that ſit on them, and the fleſh of al freemen and bondmen, and of litle and great.

19 And I ſaw the beaſt and the kings of the earth, & their armies gathered to make warre with him that ſate vpon the horſe and with his armie.

20 And the beaſt was apprehended, and with him the falſe-prophet: which wrought ſignes before him, wherewith he ſeduced them that tooke the character of the beaſt, and that adored his image. Theſe two were caſt aliue into the poole of fire burning alſo with brimſtone.

21 And the reſt were ſlaine by the ſword of him that ſitteth vpon the horſe, which proceedeth out of his mouth: and al the birds were filled with their fleſh.

nour to him: for the mariage of the Lambe is come, and his wife hath made her ſelfe readie.

8 And to her was graunted that ſhe ſhould be araied with pure and goodly raines: for the raines is the righteouſneſſe of Saincts.

*9 And he ſaid vnto me, Write: * Happie are they which are called vnto the Supper of the Lambes mariage. And he ſaid vnto me. Theſe are the true ſayings of God.* Matt.22. Luke 14.

10 And I fell at his feete to worſhip him: and he ſaide vnto me, See thou doe it not: for I am thy fellow ſeruant, and of thy brethren that haue the teſtimonie of Ieſus. Worſhip God: for the teſtimonie of Ieſus, is the ſpirite of prophecie.

11 And I ſaw heauen open, and beholde a white horſe, and he that ſate vpon him was called faithfull and true, and in righteouſneſſe he doth iudge and make battell.

12 His eies were as a flame of fire, and on his head were many crownes, and he had a name written, that no man knew but he him ſelfe.

*13 * And he was clothed in a veſture dipt in blond: and his name is called, The word of God.* Eſai. 63.

14 And the armies which were in heauen followed him vpon white horſes, clothed with white and pure raines.

15 And out of his mouth goeth a ſharpe ſworde, that with it he ſhould ſmite the Heathen and he ſhall rule them with a rod of yron: and he treadeth the wine fat of the fierceneſſe and wrath of Almightie God.

16 And he hath on his veſture, and on his thigh, a name written, King of kings, and Lord of lords.

17 And I ſawe an Angel ſtand in the Sunne, and he cryed with a loude voyce, ſaying to all the foules that flie by the middeſt of heauen, Come, and gather your ſelues together vnto the Supper of the great God:

18 That ye may eate the fleſh of kings, and the fleſh of high Captaines, and the fleſh of mightie men, and the fleſh of horſes, and of them that ſit on them, and the fleſh of all freemen, and bondmen, and of ſmall and great.

19 And I ſaw the beaſt, and the kings of the earth and their armies gathered together, to make battell againſt him that ſate on the horſe, and againſt his armie.

20 And the beaſt was taken, and with him that falſe Prophet, which wrought miracles before him, with which he deceiued them that receiued the beaſtes marke, and them that worſhipped his image. Thoſe both were caſt quicke into a pond of fire burning with brimſtone.

21 And the remnant were ſlaine with the ſworde of him that ſate vpon the horſe, which ſworde proceedeth out of his mouth: and all the foules were filled with their fleſh.

The Church Catholike doth often and ſpecially vſe this ſacred word, to ioyne with the Church triumphant, conſiſting of Angels and Saincts, who here are ſaid to laude and praiſe God with great reioycing, by the word Alleluia, and by often repetition thereof: as the Catholike Church alſo vſeth, namely in eaſter time euen till Whit-ſontide for the ioy of Chriſts reſurrection, which (as S. Auguſtine declareth ep. ad Ianuarium) *was the generall vſe of the Primitiue Church, making a greater myſterie and matter of it, then our Proteſtants now doe. Auguſtine alſo declareth) is a terme of ſignification and myſterie, ioyned with that time, and then vſed ſpecially in the Church of God, when ſhe repreſenteth to vs in her Seruice, the ioyes and beatitude of the next life: which is done ſpecially at Eaſter, by the ioyfull celebrating of Chriſts glorious Reſurrection and Aſcenſion, after the penall time of Lent which repreſenteth the miſerie of this life. All nations in the Primitiue Church ſang Amen and Alleluia.

This word is a ſacred, Chriſtian, myſticall, and angelicall ſong. and yet in the new Seruice Booke it is turned into, Prayſe ye the Lord, and Alleluia is quite gone, becauſe they loſt neither to agree with the Church of God, nor with the vſe of holy Scriptures, no nor with their owne tranſlations, but no maruell, that they cannot ſing the ſong of our Lord and of Angels in a ſtrange countrie, *that is, out of the Catholike Church, in the captiuitie of ſchiſme and hereſie. The Proteſtants profane this word by tranſlating it, and diminiſh the ſignification thereof. Pſal. 136.

FVLKE. 2 For the Latine text, it is not to be regarded, nor the Greeke of the olde Teſtament, how it pleaſed the interpreters to leaue theſe wordes vntranſlated. But in the Greeke of the newe Teſtament, which is indighted by the holy Ghoſt, it is materiall to conſider, that theſe wordes (as commonly vnderſtood, and eaſie to be vnderſtood of all Chriſtians) are many times kept in their naturall ſonnde, and not tranſlated into Greeke. Partly becauſe they were as well vnderſtood of them that profeſſed the religion, either of the Iewes or Chriſtians, as the Greeke wordes them ſelues: partly to expreſſe in relation of thinges done, more liuely the zeale of them that either affirmed any thing, or prayſed God in theſe termes. But where you ſay, they be not tranſlated, vnleſſe it be once or twiſe in the Pſalmes, it is falſe. For Amen is vſed but in the ende of foure Pſalmes, which are according to your accompt Pſal. 40. 71. 88. 105. And in euery one of theſe places it is tranſlated in the Greeke γένοιτο, γένοιτο, in the Latine Fiat, Fiat, which is in Engliſh So be it, So be it, where in the Hebrue it is Amen, Amen: except in the laſt, where Amen is but once in the Hebrue. So is Alleluiah twiſe at the leaſt tranſlated into Greeke and Latine Pſal. 134. 3. and 146. 1. αἰνεῖτε τὸν κύριον, in Latine, Laudate Dominum, which is in Engliſh, Praiſe ye the Lord. And we alſo retayne thoſe termes in many places of the newe Teſtament, where they cannot conueniently be tranſlated, becauſe they are ſo left in the originall. Why we tranſlate Amen ſome times Verely, in the place by you quoted, I haue declared ynough to ſtay your merueyling. But in our ſeruice bookes (you ſay) we tranſlate Allelniah into Praiſe yee the Lorde, as though it had not as good a grace in the acte of ſeruing God, as in the text of the Scripture. Surely we are perſwaded, that Prayſe ye the Lorde, which euerie man vnderſtandeth, hath a better grace and more agreeable to the doctrine of S. Paul 1. Cor. 14. in the acte of the publike ſeruice of God, then Alleluiah not vnderſtood but of the learned, although it bee in the text of the Scripture. As we thinke of all other Hebrew wordes, which are to be tranſlated into the vulgar tongue, that the church may take edifying by them. We may rather maruaile what mooued the Greeke and Latine Tranſlatours, to leaue it ſo often in the Pſalmes vntranſlated, and yet ſome times to tranſlate it. And if Alleluiah in the acte of ſeruing God, haue ſuch a grace aboue, Prayſe ye the Lorde, it hath the ſame aboue Laudate Dominum, which you your ſelues vſe in your dayly ſeruice. But it is a great matter that you vſe this holy word Alleluiah, to ioyne with the Church triumphant, betweene Eaſter and Whitſuntide: By which reaſon you are diſioyned from the Church triumphant, from Septuageſima to Eaſter, in which time you may not vſe it as Durande ſaith. But what a vaine reaſon this is, that you ioyne with the Church triumphant by vſing this terme, we may conſider a litle. Firſt Arethas, Beda, and other interpreters, vnderſtand the praiſe giuen to God to be of the Church militant in this world, and not of the Church triumphant. Which Church militant is ſaid to be in Heauen, becauſe the conuerſation of the faithfull liuing on earth, is notwithſtanding in Heauen. Secondly admitte it ſhould be meant of the Church triumphant, ſeeing the Angels and holy ſoules vſe no ſound of wordes in praiſing of God, why ſhould you thinke you ioyne with them in the ſound of Alleluiah, rather then in the ſound of Laudate Dominum, or Praiſe ye the Lord? Thirdly if the Angels and bleſſed ſpirits did vſe the ſound of the Hebrue word, yet they vſe that ſpeach which they all vnderſtand. But moſt times your Prieſtes, yea and Biſhops, are ignorant of the vnderſtanding of that word, as appeareth by Durande, which hath ſo many fond interpretations of it, as would moue laughter to any man that hath but ſmall ſight in the Hebrue tongue. How much more therefore are your people ignorant thereof? Wherefore vſing that terme which you vnderſtand not, you ioyne not with the Church triumphant, which vnderſtandeth the tongue of the Angels, and prayſeth not God without vnderſtanding: But Sainct Auguſtine ad Ian. maketh a greater matter of it then we doe.

Verely he ſheweth that it was vſed in his time, being as commonly vnderſtoode, as the reſt of the publike ſeruice, but other neceſſarie matter he maketh not of it, neither thinketh the ſound to be holier in Hebrue, then in Latine. If Vigilantius thought Alleluiah might neuer be ſung but at Eaſter, he held a ſuperſtitious opinion: but the matter is not of ſuch weight to make an hereſie of it. More like it is, that Vigilantius miſliked the innouation attempted to be brought in by Hierom, who as ſome write, brought the common vſe of Alleluiah from Ieruſalem. But the truth is (you ſay) that by the vſe of the holy Scriptures, it hath more in it then Prayſe ye the Lord: which if it be true, your vulgar Latine tranſlation hath erred as much as the Proteſtants, in tranſlating it Laudate Dominum: for that hath no more in it, then, Prayſe ye the Lord. And where as this terme hath but two wordes in it, the Verbe and the Noune. Your vulgar Tranſlator doeth commonly (and for ought I know) alwaies tranſlate the Hebrue Verbe, by the Latine Verbe, Laudo, Laudate, Laudet, Laudent, Laudat &c. In all which he hath ſhamefully erred, if our tranſlation of Alleluiah be not right to ſay, Prayſe ye the Lord. As for the ioy wherewith the praiſe of God ought to be ſet foorth in his Church, muſt be taught by Preachers, but cannot be expreſſed by Tranſlatours. If you would reply, becauſe it cannot be expreſſed, therefore the word muſt not be tranſlated, it is eaſie to reioyne vpon you, that then the ſame Verbe muſt be left vntranſlated, ſo often as it is vſed in the Scripture, which were too great an abſurditie. Wherefore this is nothing elſe but a malicious, fooliſh, and vnlearned quarrell, againſt the vſage of our Church, in prayſing the Lord in that ſound of wordes, which the people vnderſtandeth. As for your ſuperſtitious and childiſh difference betweene Alleluiah and Laus tibi Domine: the one for Lent, the other for Eaſter, I leaue to your ſelues, as meete for your hypocriticall ſeruice, which is in ſound of lippes and outwatd ſhewe, not in ſpirite and trueth.

The new found ſermons of S. Auguſtine de diuerſis, are matter meete for ſuch a queſtion. In Pſalm. 148. he maketh no ſuch fond difference, betweene Laus tibi Domine, and Alleluiah, but ſheweth, that the Church before Eaſter, ſpending the time in faſting and prayer, did celebrate the ſtate of this life, but in prayſing God at Eaſter, did ſignifie the life to come, which yet was not in poſſeſſion: For this is Alleluiah, which we ſing (ſaith he) which is interpreted as you know, Laudate Dominum, Praiſe ye the Lord. Here you ſee all the people vnderſtood Alleluiah, as well as Laudate dominum, and as well as our people vnderſtand, Prayſe ye the Lord. But it is a queſtion to be asked, why we leaue it out altogether, no leſſe then 9. times in the Bible 1577. in the 6. laſt Pſalmes. To anſwere you (for my part) I know no ſuch tranſlation, that leaueth it out as you ſay: for that Bible which I haue, printed 1577. hath Prayſe ye the Lord, ten times in the fiue laſt Pſalmes: for ſo many times Halleluiah is in the Hebrue. But in Pſal. 145. it is not in the Hebrue, and therefore not in the Engliſh: except peraduenture in ſome bookes of Pſalmes, printed for the ſpeciall vſe of reading and ſinging in the Church, it is omitted by the Printer, as all other titles and inſcriptions of the Pſalmes, which are not vſually read or ſung in the Church ſeruice. Which if it be ſo great a matter, we muſt aske the Papiſtes, why they haue left out Alleluiah altogether in their Portuis ſecundum vſum Eccleſiæ Sarum, In euery Pſalme where it is both in the Hebrue, and in their owne vulgar Latine tranſlation, not onely in thoſe ſixe laſt Pſalmes, but alſo in twelue other Pſalmes, namely, pſalm. 104. 105. 106. likewiſe pſal. 110. 111. 112. 113. 114. 115. 116. finally pſal. 134. and 135. But S. Auguſtine (you ſay) affirmeth, that Amen and Alleluiah be not tranſlated into any other language for the more holy auctoritie of the wordes ſo remaining. In deede he ſaith, that the knowledge of the Hebrue and Greeke tongues is needefull for men of the Latine ſpeach, to vnderſtand ſuch words which are often found vntranſlated, as Amen, Alleluiah, Racha, Hoſanna. Of which he ſaith, the antiquitie of the two former is kept for a more holy auctoritie, meaning that they doe ſet foorth more liuely, the godly affection of them that vſed them in the Scriptures: as if men in Engliſh will tell a ſtorie of a French man or German, when it commeth to his ſpeach, they will expreſſe a word or two of his countrie language, to make the narration ſeeme more liuely. But he doeth not affirme, that they be not tranſlated into any language, for then he ſhould ſpeake vntruely, as I haue proued in the beginning, ſeeing they were in his time tranſlated into Greeke and Latine, and he him ſelfe in Pſalme 148. tranſlateth Alleluiah, Laudate Dominum. Eucherius Alleluia in Latinum ſonat, Laudate Dominum. Iuſt. lib. 2. c. 2. Amen verè ſiue fideliter. Remigius in Pſ. 104. Interpretatur Alleluiah, Laudate Dominum. Neither doth he meane, that there is more holineſſe in the ſound of Hebrue ſyllables, then of the Latine. But as the Hebrue tongue is called the holy tongue, becauſe the holy Scriptures of the olde Teſtament were firſt written in it, which yet may be and haue beene in all good times of the Church, tranſlated into any other languages. In the 2. place Epi. 178. anſwering the like quarels of the Arian Paſcentius (which cauilled that the Greeke word Homouſion was not found in the Scripture) S. Auguſtine proueth, that the ſence and meaning thereof is founde in the Scriptures, and this terme he vſeth, becauſe it was agreed vpon in the Counſell of Nice, where Greeke Biſhops were the chiefe, that confuted the hereſie of Arius.

Now ſeeing the Church had receiued this Greeke terme, he thought it meete to be vſed, and not to be altered, ſo long as it were vnderſtood and knowen to haue the ſenſe in the Scriptures. As for example, when the Church of all Nations had receiued to ſing Amen and Alleluia in the Hebrue tongue, it was not lawfull for the Latine man, or the Barbarous man, to tranſlate them into their owne language: he meaneth in the publike ſeruice, ſeeing the people vnderſtood them, and the cuſtome of the Church is not without cauſe to be broken. But that they might not be tranſlated into other ſpeaches, or pronounced in other languages, if the people vnderſtood them not, it is farre from S. Auguſtines meaning.

S. Hierom Epiſt. 137. rendring a reaſon why theſe words and ſuch other, were reteyned in the Scriptures, ſaith: That the Septuaginta, or the Apoſtles prouided, that ſeeing the firſt Church was gathered together of the Iewes, they would would innouate nothing that might offend the beleeuers, but deliuered as they had receiued from children: but afterward when the Gospell enlarged into all Nations, things once receiued, could not be changed. Although Origen say, that because of the proprietie of euery language that they could not so well be expressed in other tongues as in their owne, it is much better to leaue them vntranslated, then by translating to diminish the force of them.

But notwithstanding this opinion of Origen, he doth translate both Amen as the 70. doe Fiat, or as Aquila did, Faithfully, and Alleluia, Laudate Dominum, Prayse ye the Lord But Gregorie will beare you witnesse, that our Nation, with their Christianitie, receiued the Hebrue word Alleluia. And what of that, so long as they vnderstood it? That the ploughmen in Palestine sang Alleluiah, Sainct Hierome reporteth, which they vnderstood, because it is all one in the Hebrue and Syrian language, which was their vulgar tongue: and therefore they might wel vnderstand it in the Monasterie, which was commonly vnderstood in al the world abroad. But it is a sacred, Christian, mystical, and angelical song, and yet in the new service it is turned into, Prayse ye the Lord. Why syrs? is not Praise ye the Lord a sacred, Christian, mysticall, and Angelicall song? doeth nothing please you but that which the people vnderstand not? That which the Angels sung in the Syrian tongue to the Shepheards at the Natiuitie of Christ, was a sacred, Christian, mysticall and Angelicall song: yet you sing it in your Masse, neither in the Syrian tongue in which they pronounced it, nor in the Grecke tongue, in which S. Luke did write it, but in Latine, and yet not in the Latine of your authenticall translation, nor in deede truely translated: for you sing in Excelsis, and not in Altissimis, and yet I thinke it were but a small matter to picke a quarrell against you.

Therefore Alleluiah is not quite gone, as you say falsely, when we haue the full sense and meaning of it in our language, much better then you haue of that Angels song, which you call Gloria in Excelsis. We sing therefore the Lords songes (his name be praysed for euer) in our owne Countrie, and in our owne language, and in the vnitie of the Church of God, out of the filthie sinke of Babylonicall superstition.

But last of all you thinke you may aske vs whether it be all one to say Matth. 21. Hosanna, and saue vs we beseech thee. And we thinke we may answere you, that it is not all one: for Hosanna signifieth, Saue we beseech thee, not saue vs. The people therefore prayed for the prosperitie and increase of the kingdome of Christ, as the Prophet taught them long before. And the Apostle to expresse their godly zeale, vseth the very word which they vttered. That it was a word of exceeding congratulation and ioy, it is not in the signification of the Verbe, but in that speciall vse of it, and so in the word Alleluia. It is one thing to translate, an other thing to giue the sense, according to the circumstance of the text translated.

Therefore Alleluia is as truely translated, and may as well be expressed in English by, Prayse ye the Lord: as it is in Latine by, Laudate Dominum: witnesse Sainct Augustine, Sainct Hierome, and your owne vulgar Latine Interpretour, who profane and diminish the signification thereof, by Laudate Deminum, as much as we doe, by Praise ye the Lord. I doubt not but your owne friendes will be ashamed in their harts, to see you thus wrangle without any iust cause about so vaine a quarrell.

RHEM. 3 8 Iustifications of Sainctes.) Here the Heretikes in their translations could not alter the word iustificatiõs into ordinances, or constitutions, as they did falsely in the first of Sainct Luke, whereof see the Annotation there verse 6. but they are forced to say in Latine, iustificationes, as Beza: and in English, righteousnesse, (for iustifications, they will not say in any case for feare of inconuenience.) *yea and they cannot denie but those iustifications be the good workes of Saincts. but where * they make this glose, that they be so called, because they are the fruites or effect of faith and of the iustice which we haue by onely faith, it is most euidently false and against the very text, and nature of the word. for there is no cause why any thing should be called a mans iustification, but for that it maketh him iust. so that,* iustifications, be the vertues of faith, hope, charitie, and good deedes, iustifying or making a man iust, and not effectes of iustification. neither faith onely, but they altogether be the very ornaments and inward garments, beautie, and iustice of the soule, as here it is euident.

Beza. Iustifications are good workes, not as the effectes of faith iustifying, but because them selues also with faith iustifie a man.

FVLKE. 3 For our translation of this word δικαιώματα Luke the 1. the Reader may be resolued in that place. We translate a word that hath diuerse significations, diuersely, as the vnderstanding of euery place requireth: So here we translate it iustifications, righteousnesse, or iust deedes, as the auctor of the Homilies in S. Augustine translateth them. Iusta facta, or any thing that hath the same sense. And we feare no inconuenience to translate it iustifications in English: for our iustification before God by faith onely, will neuer be ouerthrowen by that terme, though we denie not, but these iustifications be the good works of Saincts. But where we say they be so called, because they are the fruites of faith, and of the iustice which we haue by faith onely, (you say) it is most euidently false, and against the very text and the nature of the word. Concerning the text it is this. To her was graunted, that she should be clothed with fine linen or silke, cleane and shining: for the fine linen or silke are the iustification of Saincts, Iustification by faith onely.

This text compared with Apocalypse 7.14. sheweth whence the beautie of this garment commeth, verely, not of the iustice of men, but of the blood of the Lambe, and the merite of his sacrifice. Therefore the text hath no cuidence for you. But the nature of the word affordeth you a strong argument: for there is no cause (you say) why any thing should be called a mans iustification, but for that it maketh him iust. Here you reason childishly of the etymologie of the Latine word iustifico, which signifieth in deede properly to make iust, but in Scripture is often vsed to accompt iust, to declare iust, to acquitte in iudgement, as infinite words are vsed vnto other significations, then can be taken out of their precise etymologie, or deriuation.

Therefore you must reason (if you will gaine any thing) of the nature of the Greeke word δικαίωματα, except you will allow iustifications to be taken in as many significations as δικαίωματα be. If you will doe so as reason would enforce you, there is cause why a thing may be called a mans iustification, which doth not make him iust, but declare him to be iust. In the Psalmes oftentimes your vulgar Latine translation vseth this word Iustificationes tuas, for Gods iustifications, and Luke 1. Iustificationibus Domini. in the iustifications of the Lord. Might you not as well say? there is no cause why any thing should be called the Lords iustification, but for that it maketh him iust.

If there be cause why any thing may be called the Lords iustification, which doeth not make him iust, there is also cause, why a thing may be called a mans iustification, which doeth not make him iust, but declare him to be iust: and so are good workes the iustifications of Saincts, because they declare them to be iust, not because they make them iust before God, as we haue proued more at large Iac. 2. Wisdome is iustified of hir owne children, and yet she is not made iust by them. The Publicanes and sinners iustified God, yet they made not God Iust. Ierusalem hath iustified her sister Sodoma, yet she hath not made her iust, wicked iudges sometimes doe iustifie the vngodly men, yet they make them not iust. The Pharisees iustified themselues, yet they made not themselues iust. The Lawyers call that a mans iustification, which ma-keth neither the man nor his cauſe iuſt, but declareth them to be iuſt. Againe the word is not iuſtification, but iuſtifications in the plurall number, whereupon you may as well conclude, that euery good worke is a mans inſtification by making him iuſt, and ſo you haue not two iuſtifications making a man iuſt, according to your newe diſtinction, but infinite iuſtifications. But in trueth all theſe iuſtifications are the effect of one iuſtification, which is by faith, onely in the merites of Chriſt, and are the ornament and outwarde garment, declaring the inward iuſtice of the ſoule. For Garments are all without the thing clothed with them, and are not called inward, in reſpect of the thing clothed, but in reſpect of more outward garments. Therefore this pure ſhining garment is the light of good workes, proceeding from inward faith, and ſhining outwardly, to the glory of their heauenly Father.

RHEM. 4 10 And I fell.) The Proteſtants abuſe this place, and the example of the Angels forbidding Iohn to adore him being but his fellow ſeruant, and appointing him to adore God, againſt all honour, reuerence, and adoration of Angels, Sainctis, or other ſanctified creatures, teaching that no religious worſhip ought to be done vnto them. But in truth it maketh for no ſuch purpoſe, but onely warneth vs that Diuine honour and the adoration due to God alone, may not be giuen to any Angels, or other creatures. S. Augnſt. de vera relig. cap. vltimo. And when the Aduerſaries replie that ſo great an Apoſtle, as Iohn was, could not be ignorant of that point, nor would haue giuen diuine honour, vnto an Angell (for ſo he had beene an Idolater) and therefore that he was not reprehended for that, but for doing any religious reuerence or other honour whatſoeuer to his fellow ſeruant: we anſwere that by the like reaſon, S. Iohn being ſo great an Apoſtle, if this later kinde of reuerence had beene vnlawfull and to be reprehended, as the Proteſtants hold it is no leſſe then the other, could not haue beene ignorant thereof, nor would haue done it.

S. Iohns adoring of the Angell, explicated againſt the Proteſtants abuſing the fame. The Proteſtants are reſelled by their owne reaſon.

*Therefore they might much better haue learned of S. Auguſtine (q. 61. in Geneſ.) how this fact of S. Iohn was corrected by the Angell, and wherein the errour was. In effect it is thus, That the Angell being ſo glorious and full of maieſtie preſenting Chriſts perſon, and in his name vſing diuerſe words proper to God, as, I am the firſt and the laſt, and aliue and was dead, and ſuch like, might well be taken of S. Iohn, by errour of his perſon, to be Chriſt himſelfe, and that the Apoſtle preſuming him to be ſo in deede, adored him with Diuine honour: which the Angell correcting, told him he was not God, but one of his fellowes, and therefore that he ſhould not ſo adore him, but God. Thus then we ſee, Iohn was neither ſo ignorant, to thinke that any vndue honour might be giuen to any creature: nor ſo ill, to commit idolatrie by doing vndue worſhip to any Angell in heauen: and therefore was not culpable at all in his fact, but onely erred materially (as the Scholemen call it) that is, by miſtaking one for an other, thinking that which was an Angell, to haue beene our Lord: becauſe he knew that our Lord himſelfe is alſo * called an Angell, and hath often appeared in the viſions of the faithfull.*

S. Iohn erred onely in the perſon, miſtaking the Angel to be Chriſt himſelfe, and ſo adoring him as God. Apoc. c. 1. Eſa. 9. in Greco Malac. 3.

And the like is to be thought of the Angell appearing in the 22. of the Apocalypſe, whether it were the ſame or an other, for that alſo did ſo appeare, that Iohn could not tell whether it were Chriſt himſelfe or no, till the Angell told him. Once this is certaine, that Iohn did not formally (as they ſay) commit idolatrie, nor ſinne at all herein, knowing all dueties of a Chriſtian man, no leſſe then an An Angell of heauen, being alſo in as great honour with God, yea and in more then many Angels. Which perhaps may be the cauſe (and conſequently an other explication of this place) that the Angell knowing his great graces and merites before God, would not accept any worſhip or ſubmiſſion at his hands, though Iohn againe of like humilitie did it, as alſo immediatly afterward chap. 22. which belike he would not haue done, if he had beene preciſely aduiſed by the Angell but a moment before, of errour and vnduetifulneſſe in the fact. Howſoeuer that be, this is euident, that thus the Angels refuſing of adoration, taking not away the due reuerence and reſpect we ought to haue to Angels or other ſanctified perſons and creatures, and ſo theſe wordes, See thou dot it not, ſignifie rather an earneſt refuſall, then any ſignification of crime to be committed thereby.

S. Iohn ſinned not in this adoration. An other explication of place.

FVLKE. 4 This place is not abuſed by Proteſtants, but proueth inuincibly againſt Papiſtes, that all religious worſhip and ſeruice, belongeth to god, and may not be yeelded to any creature, But you ſay, it maketh for no ſuch purpoſe, but onely warneth vs, that diuine honour, and the adoration due to God alone, may not be giuen to any creature: yet the text is plaine, that all religious worſhip and ſeruice, is due to God alone, and to no creature. For the Angell ſaith not, worſhip God onely with this kinde of ſeruice, but worſhip God: ſignifying that this ſeruice was due onely to God. And this is that which S. Auguſtine ſaith: De vera religione cap. vltimo. Quare honoramus eos &c. We honour the Angels with loue, not with ſeruice, neither doe we build temples to them: For they will not be ſo honored of vs, becauſe they know that we our ſelues, when we are good, are the temples of the higheſt God. Therefore it is rightly written, that a man was forbidden by the Angell, that he ſhould not worſhip him, but one God onely, vnder whom he was a felow ſeruant with him. But they which inuite vs, that we ſhould ſerue them, and worſhip them as Gods, are like to proud men, which if they might, would likewiſe be worſhipped: but to ſuffer theſe men it is leſſe perilous, but to worſhip the Angell it is more dangerous. Afterward he concludeth in theſe words. Let religion therefore binde vs to one God omnipotent, becauſe betweene our minde by which we vnderſtand him to be Father and the truth, that is, the inward light by which we vnderſtand him, there is no creature interpoſed.

All religious worſhip belongeth onely to God.

Ry which ſentences it is manifeſt that he meaneth, that all religious worſhip and ſeruice, is due onelie to God, and that who ſo euer Angell or man, requireth or receiueth any religious worſhip or ſeruice, he vſurpeth that which is due onely to God. Where it is to be noted, that he ouerthroweth your diſtinction of Latria and Doulia, ſeeing he denieth religious Doulia or ſeruice, to be due vnto Angels, who are to be honoured with loue, not with ſeruice. But where we replie, that S. Iohn ſo great an Apoſtle could not be ignorant, that no Angel is to be worſhipped as God, and therefore intended not to worſhip the Angell as God. You anſwere by the like reaſon, if this later kinde of reuerence had beene vnlawfull, he could not haue beene ignorant thereof, nor would haue done it. Here againe we replie, it is manifeſt by his owne confeſſion, that he was twiſe deceiued in this point, not of ignorance, but of forgetfulneſſe in this extaſie of minde, while hee behelde the glorie of the Angell that ſhewed him theſe things. But the other errour of worſhipping the creature as the Creator was to groſſe error, to enter into any ſo religious and wiſe an hart as the Apoſtle had. Athanaſius cont. We

We might haue learned (you say) of S. Augustine, how this fact of S. Iohn was corrected by the Angel. S. Augustine in deede answering the question, howe the ciuil adoration yeelded by Abraham to the people of the land, might stand with that saying of Christ: (Thou shalt adore the Lord thy God, & him only shalt thou serue,) sheweth, that ciuile adoration is not there forbidden, but religious adoration and seruice, which is proper to God. Neither let it moue (saith he) that in an other place in a certeine Scripture, the Angel forbiddeth a man to adore him: for the Angel seemed or appeared to be such an one as he might be adored in stead of God: and therefore the worshipper was to be corrected. Whereby he meaneth no more, but that the glorious apparition of the Angel deceiued Iohn, to think that he might be adored with religious worship, which perteineth onely to God: whereas Angels are to be honoured (as he said before) with loue, not with religious seruice. But you say, the Angel was so full of maiestie representing Christes person, and in his name vsing diuers words proper to God, As I am the first and the last, and aliue and was dead, that he might well be taken by S. Iohn, by error of his person to be Christ himselfe. But this could not be for diuers causes. For this was not the same person that appeared in the first Chapter, like to the Sonne of man: which was Christ himselfe, and no Angel that presented his person. As Christ himselfe appeared in his owne person to S. Paul. Act. 9 And at other times, so did he there vnto Iohn.

Secondly S. Iohn confesseth, that this Angel which shewed him these things, was one of the seuen Angels that had the seuen vials Chap 17.1. Therefore he could not be deceiued in his person, to thinke hee was Christ. Thirdly, he willed him immediatly before, to write, Blessed are they that are called to the Supper of the Lambe, which S. Iohn was not ignorant to be Christ, according to the vision which he reporteth Chap. 5. Therefore it is manifest, that Iohn knew this Angel not to be Christ, and therefore erred not in his person to thinke he was Christ, and intending to worship him as Christ, but to worship him as an heauenly Angel, that had shewed him these things, and opened these great mysteries vnto him. Therefore in vaine you goe about to excuse his fault with your shamelesse distinction, which he doth plainly confesse, to the glory of God, & the edifying of the Church in the true and sincere worship of God. Where you say, he was not culpable at all in his facte, and sinned not in this adoration, you wil belike remoue the crime from Iohn to the Angel: who forbade him the fact, wherein he sinned not, nor was culpable at all. And it is a very grosse error of your Scholemen to holde, that if a man worship a deuil in the shape of an Angel, he sinneth not, nor committeth idolatrie formally, but onely erreth materially. As though sinne of ignorance and errour were no sinne, because it is not so great, as sinne against knowledge: and as though men were not bound to learne to knowe God, that they worship none in steade of God, nor with the worship that is due onely to God. The man of God that beleeued the olde Prophet which lyed vnto him, sinned grieuously, as appeared by his punishment, because he transgressed the word of the Lord; and did not examine his prophecie, by that which he was assured to be the word of God. 1. Reg. 13. So if Iohn had worshipped the Angel as Christ, he was culpable, because he did not first consider whether he were Christ in deede. But in trueth he did so appeare to be one of the 7. Angels, that Iohn coulde not be ignorant that he was not Christ. But where you defende him by his knowledge of all dueties of a Christian man, you labour in vaine to excuse him, seeing not onely in this place, but also after this admonition, he committed the same offence, as he confesseth Chap. 22. of humane frailtie and forgetfulnes, though not of generall ignorance of Christian duetie. Vpon which place Ambrosius Ambertus writeth thus: It is greatly to be marueiled why Iohn contrary to the prohibition of the Angel, would haue worshipped him the second time. For before in like maner he had forbidden him to adore him, and taught that God onely is to be adored. What meaneth it therefore, that contrary to his commandement, who verely as a messenger of truth, had told him before, that this honour of reuerence was of duetie to be offered not to a creature, but to the Creator, he would now honour him againe? Vnlesse perhaps he ioyned this and the former vision together, and repeateth the same things which he did before: or els being striken with great astonishment of the visions, he confesseth that he had forgotten that which the Angel commaunded him before, and so would haue adored him againe.

That you affirme, Iohn to haue been in as great honour with God, yea & in more then many Angels: You shew your boldnesse, to pronounce so confidently of that which no mortal creature knoweth. The worde of God telleth vs of the dignitie of the children of God after the resurrection, to be equall with Angels, but in this frailtie of life whereto they are subiect, they must needes be inferiour to Angels, seeing Christ himselfe in whome was no frailtie of sinne, was made inferiour to the Angels, by the suffering of his death, Hebr. 2.9. Your second explication is yet more absurd, that the Angel and S. Iohn should streine courtesie (as men doe) in yeelding and refusing reuerence one of another. But the words of the Angel doe plainly confute this fond glosse. For rendring a reason, why he will not be adored by Iohn, he saith, that he himselfe is his fellow seruant, He saith not, that Iohn is in graces and merites before God as good as hee. But he is a seruant as well as hee. But he is to worship God their common Lord, as much as he is: not to receiue worship of his fellow seruants. Secondly he saith, that he is fellow seruant not only of Iohn, but of the rest of his brethren that haue the testimonie of Iesus. And Cap. 22. and of them also that keepe the wordes of this booke, that is of all true Christians. Therefore he streineth not courtesie in respect of Iohns great graces and merits: for he will not receiue this worship of any Christian, by the same reason that he refuseth it of Iohn. Therefore as the words are manifest, Iohn is precisely admonished of the Angel, of errour and vnduetifulnesse in the fact, yet soone after of forgetfulnesse falleth into the same errour and vnduetifulnesse againe. But howsoeuer that be (you say) this is euident, that this the Angels refusing of adoration, taketh not away the due reuerence & respect we ought to haue to Angels, or other sanctified persons and creatures. This should be easily graunted, if you could stay here. For we would not by any meanes take away the due reuerence and respect we ought to haue to holy persons and things, whatsoeuer be sanctified by God. But it is euident that this the Angels refusing of adoration, taketh away all religious adoration or seruice of Angels or other creatures whatsoeuer, which is due onely to God. But where you say these words, See thou doe it not, signifie rather an earnest refusall, then any signification of crime committed thereby, It is very absurd. For these words be not onely of refusall, but of prohibition, (as euery childe knoweth,) and S. Augustine in the places before mentioned doth testifie. Seeing therefore they prohibite that which was not to be done (as S. Augustine also confesseth) the doing of that which the Angel forbiddeth, must needes be a crime, whosoeuer committeth it, and the greater after so earnest a prohibition.

RHEM. 5 And maruel it is that the Protestants making them selues so sure of the true sense of euery doubtful place by conference of other Scriptures, folow not here the conference and comparing of Scriptures that them selues so much or onely require. We wil giue them occasion and a methode so to doe, thus. He that doubteth of this place, findeth out three things of question which must be tried by other Scriptures. The first, whether there ought to be or may be any religious reuerence or honour done to any creatures, taking the word religion or religious worship not for that special honour which is properly and only due to God, as S. Augustine sometimes vseth it, but for reuerence due to any thing that is holy by sanctification or application to the seruice of God. The second thing is, whether by vse of Scriptures, that honour be called adoration in latin, or by a word equiualent equiualent in other languages, Hebrue, Greeke, or English. Lastly, whether we may by the Scriptures fall downe prostrate before the things, or at the feete of the persons that we so adore. For of ciuil duetie done to our Superiors by capping, kneeling, or other courtesie, I thinke the Protestants wil not stand with vs: though in deede, their arguments make as much against the one as the other.

Three points herein examined and proued by Scriptures.

1 Religious worship of creatures.

2 The same is called adoration.

3 Falling prostrate before the persons or things adored.

But for religious worship of creatures (which we speake of) let them see in the Scriptures both old and new: first, whether the Temple, the tabernacle, the Arke, the propitiatorie, the Cherubins, the altar, the bread of proposition, the Sabboth, and al their holies, were not reuerenced by al signes of deuotion and religion: whether the Sacraments of Christ, the Priests of our Lord, the Prophets of God, the Gospel, Scriptures, the name of IESVS such like (which be by vse, signification, or sanctification made holy) are not now to be reuerenced: and they shal finde al these things to haue been reuerenced and they shal find all these things to haue been reuerenced of all the faithfull, without any dishonor of God, & much to his honor. Secondly, that this reuerence is named adoration in the Scriptures, these speeches do proue Psal.98. Adore ye his footestoole, because it is holy. and Hebr.11. He adored the top of his rod. Thirdly, that the Scriptures also warrant vs (as the nature of the word adoration gineth in al three tongues) to bow downe our bodies, to fall flat on the ground at the presence of such things, and at the feet of holy persons, specially Angels, as Iohn doth here, these examples proue. Abraham adored the Angels that appeared to him, Moises also the Angel that shewed himself out of the bush, who were creatures, though they represented Gods person, as this Angel here did, that spake to S. Iohn Balaam adored the Angel that stood before him with a sword drawen. Num.22. Iosue adored falling flat downe before the feet of the Angel, calling him his Lord, knowing by the Angels owne testimony that it was but an Angel. Who refused it not, but required yet more reuerence, commaunding him to plucke of his shoes, because the ground was holy, no doubt so made by the presence only of the Angel.

Psal.5.137. Dan.6. 3.Reg 8. Iosu.7.Psal.98. 131.

Adoration of Prophets and holy persons. Dan.2.

Yea not only to Angels, but euen to great Prophets this deuotion was done, as to Daniel by Nabuchodonoser, who fell flat vpon his face before him, and did other great offices of religion, which the Prophet refused not, because they were done to God rather then to him, as S. Hierom defendeth the same against Porphyrie, who charged Daniel with intolerable pride therein, and the said holy doctor alleageth the fact of Alexander the great, that did the like to * Ioiadas the high priest of the Iewes. Howsoeuer that be (for of the sacrifice there mentioned there may be some doubt, which the Church doth alwaies immediatly to God, and to no creature) the fact of the prophets (4 Reg.2) to Elizeus, is plaine: where they perceiuing that the double grace and spirit of Elias was giuen to him, fel flat downe at his feete and adored. So did * the Sunamite. to omit that Achior adored Iudith, falling at her feete, as a woman blessed of God, and infinite other places.

* or. Jaddus.

4 Reg.4. Iudith.13.

All which things, by comparing the Scriptures, our Aduersaries should haue found to be lawfully done to men, and Angels, and soueraine holy creatures. Whereby they might conuince them selues, and perceiue, that that thing could not be forbidden S. Iohn to doe to the Angel, which they pretend: though the Angel for causes might refuse euen that which S. Iohn did lawfully vnto him, as S. Peter did refuse the honour giuen him by Cornelius, according to S. Chrysostoms opinion. ho.23. in c.10. Act. yea euen in the third chapter of this booke (if our Aduersaries would looke no further) they might see where this Angel prophecieth and promiseth that the Iewes should fall downe before the feete of the Angel of Philadelphia and adore.

FVLKE. 5 See the Annot. there.

Vnderstanding of the Scriptures by conference.

Concerning the expounding of doubtfull places of Scripture, by conference of other cleare places wherein you deride vs: S. Augustine saith, Nothing almost is fetched out of those obscurities, which is not found else where, to be vttered most plainely. De doct. Christ. lib.2. cap.6. Nowe this text is so cleare and euident of it selfe, as it is one of those places, which may serue to expounde the obscuritie or difficultie of other textes, where any doubt may arise concerning religious adoration and seruice, which is due onely to God. But seeing you will be blind in the cleare light of the Sunne at midde-day, and make doubt of this place where none at all needeth, but to cloake your shamefull idolatrie, yeelding religious worship and seruice to creatures: Let vs consider your three doubtes or questions. First whether there ought to be or may be any religious reuerence or honour done to any creature. But here (because you haue S. Augustine flat against the graund question,) you distinguish of this word Religion, and religions by petition of principle, or begging the matter in controuersie, that there is one kinde of religious worship proper to God, and an other to creatures, where as the question is, whether all Religion and religious worship and seruice be due onely to God. But because I will not striue with you about a terme, if we might agree about the matter: So that you will graunt with S. Augustine in the place by you quoted, That we may haue no Religion or religious worshippe and seruice of the workes of men, that is of Images, for the worke men them selues that make such things, are better then their workes, whom yet we ought not to worship. That we ought to haue no Religion or religions, worshippe and seruice of dead men: For if they liued godly, they are not so taken that they seeke such: but they will haue him to be worshipped of vs, by whose illumination they reioyce, that we are fellowe seruants of their dignitie or worthines. Therefore they are to be honoured for imitation sake, they are not to be adored for Religion.

God onely to be worshipped with religious seruice

Finally, that we ought to haue no religion of Angels, whome we honour with loue, not with seruice: I say, so that you will graunt all this with S. Augustine, I will not holde you so hard at the staues ende for this terme Religion, but answer your question. That there is a religious reuerence due to such things, as are holy by sanctification, and application to the seruice of God, in respect that they are by God sanctified and applied to his seruice. But this due reuerence and estimation of such things, is no religious adoration, worship or seruice of those things, or due to those things. Therefore the Temple, the Tabernacle, the Arke, the Propitiatorie, the Cherubims, the Altar, the bread of proposition, the Sabboth, and all their holies, were esteemed and reuerenced as holy things, but not adored, worshipped or serued, by religious kneeling to them, bowing to them, or praying to them. Likewise the Sacraments of Christ, are to be reuerently esteemed and honoured, as the seales of Gods promises: but not to be adored, worshipped, serued, kneeled to, or prayed vnto.

For to omit the Lords supper because it is in controuersie, what true Catholike euer said that Baptisme, or the water thereof is to be adored, worshipped, serued, by bowing or kneeling to it, or by praying to it? The like I say of the Gospel, Scriptures, or the name of Iesus, to which no religious adoration, worship, or seruice is due, although they are to be honoured and religiously esteemed for God and Christes sake, whose Word and Name they are. And although men may kneele while the Scripture is read, or bowe while Iesus or Christ is named, yet to the Bookes or the sound of the name, no adoration is to be giuen, but onely to God. As for Gods Priests and Prophets, are to be honoured with ciuill reuerence for religions sake, with charitie as S. Augustine saith of Angels, not with religious seruice, with duties of the second table, not with any duetie of the first table.

Your second question is, Whether that honour be called adoration in Latin, or by a word equiualent in other languages. Whereto I answer, That in the Scripture that religious reuerence & due estimation of holy things, is neuer called adoration, worship or seruice of those thinges, nor by any word equiualent For the Prophet Psal.98. saith nor, Adore his footestoole, but Adore ye at, or before his footstoole: because he is holy. For that 5. verse is plainly plainly expounded in the laſt verſe of the Pſalme, euen in your vulgar tranſlation. But in the Hebrue text it is plaine as I haue ſaid before. Likewiſe *Hebr.*11. the text is not, That Iacob adored the top of his rod, but that he adored vpon the end of his ſtaffe, that is leaning vpon his ſtaffe, as it proued in the anſwere to your notes vpon that text. Your laſt queſtion is, whether we may by the Scriptures fall downe proſtrate before thoſe things, or at the feet of the perſons that we ſo adore. To this queſtion I anſwer firſt, that with religious adoration we may not adore any thing or perſon, but God onely. But we may fall downe proſtrate, or kneele in adoring of God, before thoſe holy things and perſons. Where you ſay that our arguments make as much againſt ciuill duety, as religious, it is vtterly falſe. For we diſtinguiſh dueties of adoration, according as God himſelfe hath diſtinguiſhed them, by the two tables of his Lawe. And in the firſt table of religion, we find but one duety of adoration, which is prohibited to be giuen to any creature, and commaunded to be giuen onely to God. But that the Scriptures do warrant vs, to bow downe our bodies at the preſence, or at the feete of holy perſons, ſpecially Angels, you haue examples to proue. I might anſwere you, that examples are no warrant againſt a law, except they be allowed by the law, or the law maker. Although ſome auncient writers thinke, that before Chriſt came in the fleſh, Angels might be adored, but not ſince. But to examine your examples, Firſt you ſay, Abraham adored the Angels that appeared to him; *Gen.*18. Whereto I anſwere, he adored them with ciuil adoration, as honourable and reuerent perſonages, becauſe they came in the ſhape of men, ſuppoſing them to be men, as his preparation for them declareth: Yet one of them was Chriſt, whome, he might haue worſhipped with diuine honour. Secondly, you ſay: *Moyſes adored the Angel that ſhewed himſelfe out of the buſh, which was a creature, although he repreſented Gods perſon, Exod.*3. as the Angel that ſpake here to S. Iohn. Concerning the Angel that ſpake to S. Iohn, I haue anſwered before. But touching Moyſes, your owne vulgar Latine text is plaine, that it was the Lord himſelfe, and the Hebrue text calling him the Angel of the Lord, meaneth plainely Chriſt and no creature. So doeth S. Paul call him expreſly; 1.*Cor.*10.9. And Exod 13 32. he is called the Lord which ledde his people out of Egypt, that ſometime is called the Angel, becauſe he is the Angel of the Couenant, as Malachie calleth him, *Malach.*3.1.

Thirdly, Balaam adored the Angel that ſtoode before him with a ſworde drawen, Numb 22. I might anſwere peraduenture, that Balaams example, is meete for Balaamites to follow. But in deede the Hebrue text ſaith not, that he adored the Angel, but that he inclined his head, and bowed himſelfe vpon his face: adoring God, when he ſaw his Angel ready to take vengeance of him. But Ioſua adored falling flat downe before the feet of the Angel, calling him his Lorde, knowing by the Angels owne teſtimony, that it was but an Angel. I anſwere, he knewe by the Lords teſtimonie that it was Chriſt himſelfe, the Prince of the armies of the Lord, that appeared to him in the ſimilitude of a man. And within three verſes after he is called Iehoua, the Lord himſelfe. Wherefore neither this nor any other examples you can bring, prooueth that it is lawfull to adore, worſhip, or ſerue Angels.

Yet you proceede and ſay, that not onely to Angels, but alſo to great Prophets, this deuotion was done: as to Daniel by Nabuchodonoſar.

I anſwere, that no religious adoration was euer lawfully giuen to any Prophet, but ciuill adoration of loue, not of religious ſeruice, (though in reſpect of God, whoſe ſeruants they were,) as all ciuill honour giuen to earthly Kings and other perſons in auctority, is in reſpect of God, whoſe Miniſters they are, yet is no religious adoration, worſhip or ſeruice. And therefore it was ſhamefull idolatry that Nabuchadnezer would haue offered ſacrifice to Daniel, who (without doubt) did withſtande him, though it be not expreſſed. Yet it is eaſily to be gathered, not onely by the pietie of Daniel, that would neuer admit ſuch a ſacriledge, but alſo by the 47. verſe of that Chapter, where the Kings anſwere to Daniel is rehearſed, acknowledging that the God of the Iewes, is the onely God, to whome onely all religious ſeruice and worſhip is due. Therefore you do ſhamefully ſlaunder the holy Prophete, in ſaying that he did not refuſe that adoration and outward offices of Religion, yea and S. Hierome that he doth defend the ſame. And laſt of all, though Porphyrie was a wicked blaſphemer: yet it is ſhame to belye the deuill. For neither did Porphyrie charge Daniel with intollerable pride, but ſaid it was incredible, that ſuch a proude King would adore his captiue.

Therefore theſe be the words of S. Hierom vpon Daniel 2 46. At this place Porphyrie doth cauill, that the moſt proude King neuer would haue adored a captiue. As though the Lycaonians alſo would not haue offered ſacrifices to Paul and Barnabas, becauſe of the greatneſſe of their miracles. Therefore the errour of the Gentiles, which thinke all that is about themſelues to be Gods, ought not to be imputed to the Scripture, which doeth report all things ſimply as they were done. But alſo we may ſay this, that the King himſelfe did declare the cauſes of adoring and offering of boſtes, incenſe, and ſacrifice, ſaying vnto Daniel: Verely your God, is the God of Gods, &c. Therefore hee doeth not ſo much adore Daniel, as God which reueyled the myſteries in Daniel. As wee reade that Alexander the great, King of the Macedonians did, in the high Prieſt Ieboiada. But if this interpretation be myſliked, we muſt ſay, that Nabuchodonozar being confounded at the greatneſſe and aſtoniſhment of the wonders, knew not what hee ſhould do: as he that vnderſtood who was the true God, and Lord of Kings, and adored his ſeruant and burned incenſe to him.

You ſee plainely that S. Hierom doeth not defend this religious ſeruice to haue beene lawfully offered to Daniel, but yeeldeth reaſons that might moue the proud King to worſhip Daniel, as the Lycaonians would haue honoured Paul and Barnabas, or thinking to worſhip God in him, as Alexander did in giuing reuerence to Iaddus the high Prieſt. Finally the falling downe before Elizeus by the children of Prophets, and by the Sunamite, was ciuill and not religious adoration, ſo I ſay of Achior adoring Iudith. Therefore by comparing the Scriptures, we doe not finde that Religious adoration, worſhip, or ſeruice, may be done to any creature, howe holy ſoeuer, but onely to God and Chriſt: which S. Iohn was manifeſtly forbidden to doe to any other. But you ſay The Angel for cauſes, might refuſe that which S. Iohn did lawfully doe vnto him. But the Angel might not forbid that which was lawfull to be done, except you will ſet him to ſchole, and teach him ſuch diuinity as he neuer learned in heauen. For he doth here ſtreightly forbid him: ſaying, See thou doe it not, And addeth a reaſon why neither he ought to receiue ſuch adoration, nor Iohn to offer it: becauſe he is fellow ſeruant with him, and all true Chriſtians, to whome no ſuch adoration is due: But onely to God. Which if it had not beene his expreſſe meaning, he ſhould haue induced Iohn into an errour, and cauſed him to thinke that God onely is to be adored, which is an error by your doctrine, if Saincts, Angels, Images, reliques, &c, may be adored with religious adoration. And if there were cauſes, knowen to you, why the Angel might refuſe that which Iohn did lawfully vnto him, why doth he not rather expreſſe thoſe cauſes, then theſe which you hold to be no cauſes. If you know not thoſe cauſes, why do you dreame of that you know not, and denie thoſe to be cauſes which the Angel doeth expreſſe? Namely, becauſe he is a ſeruant, not the Lord, a creature, not God to whome onely all Religious ſeruice is to be giuen.

But you coniecture there were cauſes why the Angel might refuſe, that Iohn might lawfully giue to him, as Peter did refuſe the honour giuen him by Cornelius according to S. Chryſoſtomes opinion. But you do without ſhame ſlander S. Chryſoſtome: for there is no word to proue that Cornelius did lawfully offer to adore Peter, nor that Peter might lawfully take ſuch kinde of adoration, as I haue ſhewed, Acts 10. Sect. 7. For adoring of the Angel of Philadelphia, ſee the place Chap. 3. Sect. 6. Where Chriſt himſelfe and not this Angel, foreſheweth that adoration.

To conclude, Arethas ſaith, Worſhip not me (ſaith the Angel) as foreſhewing things to come, for this vtterance of prophecy is not mine, &c. By which you ſee that he meaneth, that Iohn worſhipped him as an Angel, which had foreſhewed theſe things, not as God, nor ſuppoſing that he was Chriſt. Ambroſius Ansbertus ſaith in the perſon of the Angel: Take heede that thou goe not about to yeelde vnto a creature, the honour which is proper to God onely: but rather conſider and giue thankes, becauſe he whom thou goeſt about to adore, is in nothing thy ſuperior, is in nothing now founde more excellent then thou: becauſe we are fellow ſeruants of one Lord, and fellow citizens of one citie, although according to the diſpenſation of the myſterie, he ſeemeth now to be preferred before thee. And herof certeinly thankes are to be giuen to the redeemer of vs all, becauſe that nature, which before did worſhip Angels, and was not forbidden: now by his comming, is both forbidden to adore them, and alſo is iudged in nothing inferior to them. And leſt we ſhould thinke that this dignity is proper onely to Iohn, when the Angel ſaid vnto him: See thou doe it not, I am thy fellow ſeruant, immediatly he added and ſaid: and of thy brethren, hauing the teſtimonie of Ieſus.

MARGINALL NOTES. CHAP. XX.

RHEM. 1 — 2 Bound him.) Christ by his Passion hath abridged the power of the Deuil for a thousand yeeres, that is, the whole time of the new Testament, vntil Antichrists time, when he shalbe loosed againe, that is, be permitted to deceiue the word, but for a short time onely, to wit three yeeres and a halfe.

FVLKE. 1 — If a thousand yeeres signifie no certeine nomber of yeeres, but the whole time of the new testament, neither doe the 42 moneths of Antichrists raigne, signifie a certaine nomber of three yeeres & an halfe, but rather the whole time of his raige, which is but short in comparison to the æternall raigne of Christ. — The time of Antichrists raigne.

RHEM. 2 — 4 I saw seates.) S. Augustine (li. 20 de Ciuit. Dei. c. 9.) taketh this to be spoken, not of the last iudgement, but of the Sees or Consistories of Bishops and Prelates, and of the Prelates them selues by whom the Church is now gouerned. As the iudgement here giuen, can be taken no otherwise better, then of that which was said by our Sauiour Mat. 18. Whatsoeuer you binde in earth, shall be bound in heauen: and therefore the Apostle saith, What haue I to doe to iudge of them that are without? — Bishops consistories & iudiciall power. 1. Cor. 5.

FVLKE. 2 — S. Augustine speaketh not of Popish Sees and Consistories, in which the Prelates of the Antichristian church take their ease in the one, and serue their couetousnesse or exercise their cruelty in the other: but he sayth, they are to be vnderstoode of sedes præpositorum, the Seates of the ouerseers or gouernours of the Church, and of the gouernours themselues, which execute iudgement by preaching the word of God, and exercising christian discipline.

RHEM. 3 — 4 And the soules) He meaneth (saith S. Augustine in the place alleaged) the soules of Martyrs, that they shall in the meane time, during these thousand yeeres, which is the time of the Church militant, be in heauen without their bodies, and reigne with Christ. for, the soules (saith he) of the godly departed, are not separated from the Church, which is euen now the kingdome of Christ for els there should be kept no memorie of them at the altar of God in the communicating of the body of Christ: neither should it auaile to hasten to Baptisme in the perils of death, for feare of ending our life without it: nor to hasten to be reconciled, if wee fortune for penance or of il conscience to bee separated from the same body. And why are all these things done, but for that the faithful departed also be members of the Church? And though for an example the Martyrs be onely named here, yet it is meant of others also that die in the state of grace. — During a thousand yeres (that is the time of this militant church) saincts reigne with Christ in soule only.

FVLKE. 3 — Ergo the rest of the soules frye not in purgatory, while the martyrs raigne in heauen with Christ. For although (sayth S. Augustine) they are not yet with there bodies, yet their soules do euen now reigne with him, while these thousand yeres doe runne, wherefore it is readde else where in the same booke. Blessed are the dead, which die in the Lord, from hence forth now, euen so sayth the spirit, that they may rest from their labours: for their workes follow them. So the church reigneth, now, first with Christ in the liuing and in the dead. For therfore as the apostle saith Christ dyed that he might haue dominion ouer the quicke and the dead. But he maketh mention of martyres soules only, for that they as chiefe do raigne being dead, which haue fought for the truth to the death: But of a part we vnderstand the whole, euen the rest that are dead which perteine to the Church, which is the kingdome of God. — Purgatory.

RHEM. — 5 The rest liued not.) The rest which are not of the happie number aforesaide, but liued and died in sinne, reigne not with Christ in their soules during this time of the new Testament, but are dead in soule spiritually, and in body naturally, till the day of iudgement. S. Auguſt. Ibidem. — The rest are dead and damned in soule, during the same time.

RHEM. 4 — 5 This is the first resurrection) As there be two generations, one by faith, which is now in Baptisme: and another, according to the flesh, when at the latter day the body shalbe made immortall and incorruptible: so there are two resurrections, the one now of the soules to saluation when they die in grace, which is called the first, the other of the bodies at the latter day S. Augustine li. 20. de Ciuit. c. 6. — The first resurrection, of the soule only.

FVLKE. 4 — Regeneration in the elect, is sealed to them by baptisme. But seeing baptisme may be giuen out of the church which shall afterward be effectuall in the church, when they that were baptised by heretikes, come to the catholike church, it is manifest that regeneration is not made in baptisme ex opere operato of the worke wrought. For they may haue the right seale of regeneration, which yet haue not the right faith and spirit of God, where-by they should be regenerated. — Opus operatum The worke wrought.

RHEM. 5 — 6 They shal be Priests.) It is not spoken (saith S. Augustine li. 20 de Ciuit c. 10.) of Bishops and Priests only, which are properly now in the Church called Priests: but as we call al Christians, for the mystical Crisme or ointment, so al, Priests, because they are the members of one Priest. of whom the Apostle Peter saith, A holy people, a kingly Priesthod. Which words be notable for their learning that thinke there be none properly called Priests — Priests some properly so called, some vnproper now in the new Testament, no otherwise then al Christian men and women, and a confusion to them that therfore haue turned the name Priests into Ministers. 1. Pet. 2.

FVLKE. 5 Because the common people in S. Augustines time, did commonly and specially call them in Latine Sacerdotes, which were bishops & elders, as the scripture nameth them: he giueth warning that the word Sacerdotes in this place, doth not signifie those speciall officers of the church, but all true Christians, which are all Sacerdotes, that is, Sacrificers, because they are members of that one high Sacrificer, Christ. But you thinke his words notable, because he saith, that bishops and elders are now properly called Sacerdotes, where he meaneth not, that this terme is properly apperteining to them, but that they were now, that is in his time, so called peculiarly, whereas the name is generall to all Christians. For he meaneth not that bishops and elders be called Sacerdotes, that is, sacrificers properly, and all other Christians vnproperly: but the aduerbe properly is opposite to generall, and signifieth no more then specially or peculiarly. Therefore this place is rather a reprouing then allowing of them that call the ministers of the Church properly or peculiarly by the name of Sacerdotes, which is common to all Christians, men and women. Neither is it any confusion to them which refuse not the name of priest, when it signifieth no more then the Greeke word importeth, which the Holy ghost vseth, and from whence it is deriued: but onely when by peruerse vsage of our English speech, it is taken to signifie a sacrificer, which indeed it doth not signifie. As for the name Ministers, being vsed in scripture, no man ought to refuse, but rather the name of Sacerdotes, which the scripture of the new testament, neuer vseth for a bishop, elder, or priest of the New testament. The name of priests.

RHEM. 6 7 Satan shal be looſed.) In the whole 8. chapter of the sayd 20. booke de ciuitate Dei, in S. Augustine, is a notable commentarie of these wordes. Where first he declareth, that neither this binding nor loosing of Satan is in respect of seducing or not seducing the Church of God: proouing that whether he be bound or loose, he can neuer seduce the same. The same (saith he) shal be the state of the Church at that time when the Diuel is to be looſed, euen as since it was instituted, the same hath it bene and shalbe at al time in her children that succeed each other by birth and death. And a litle after. This I thought was therefore to be mentioned, lest any man should thinke, that during the litle time wherein the Diuel shal be looſed, the Church shal not be vpon the earth, he either not finding it here when he shal be let loose, or cõsuming it whẽ he shal by al meanes persecute the same. Secondly he declareth, that the Diuell to be bound, is nothing els but not to be permitted by God to exercise al his force or fraud in tentations: as to be looſed, is to be suffered by God for a smal time, that is, for three yeres and a halfe, to practise and proue al his power & artes of tentations against the church and her children, and yet not to preuaile against them. Thirdly, this Doctor sheweth by what great mercy our Lord hath tied Satan and abridged his power during the whole millenarie or thousand yeeres, which is al the time of the new Testament vntil then: and with what wisedom hee permitteth him to breake loose that litle time of three yeers and six moneths, toward the later day, which shal be the reigne of Antichrist. Lastly, he sheweth what kind of men shal be most subiect to the Diuels seduction, (euen such as now by tentation of Heretikes goe out of the Church) and who shal auoid it. The binding and looſing of Satan explicated by S. Augustine.

By all which we may confute diuers false expositions of olde and late Heretikes, first, the auncient sect of the Millenaries, that grounded vpon these thousand yeeres named by the Prophet, this hereſie, that there should be so many yeeres after the resurrection of our bodies, in which we should reigne with Christ in this world, in our bodies, in all delightes and pleasures corporal, of meates, drinkes, and such like, which they called the first resurrection. of which hereſie Cerinthus was the author. Epiph. hær. 77 in fine. Hiero. Comment. in c. 19 Mat. Auguſt. hær. 8 ad Quod vult Deum. Eusebius also (li. 3. historiæ c. 33.) sheweth that some principal men were in part (though after a more honest maner concerning those corporal delicacies) of the same opinion, by misconstruction of these wordes of S. Iohn. Whereby we learne and al the world may perceiue, the holy Scriptures to be hard, when so great clerkes did erre, and that there is no securitie but in that sense which the Church alloweth of. The short reigne of Antichrist. Millenarii & Chiliaſtæ. The Scriptures hard.

The late Heretikes also by the said S. Augustines words are fully refuted, affirming not only that the Church may be seduced in that great persecution of the Diuels looſing, but that it hath been seduced euen a great peece of this time when the Diuel is bound: holding that the very true Church may erre or fall from truth to errour and idolatrie, yea (which is more blaſphemie) that the cheefe gouernour of the Church is Antichrist himselfe, and the very Church vnder him, the whoore of Babylon: and that this Antichrist, (which the Scriptures in so many places, and here plainely by S. Augustines exposition, testifie, shal reigne but a small time, & that toward the last iudgement,) hath been reuealed long sithence, to be the Pope himself, Christs owne Vicar, and that he hath persecuted the Saints of their sect for these thousand yeres at the least. Which is no more but to make the Diuel to be looſe, and Antichrist to reigne the whole thousand yeeres, or the most part thereof, that is, almost the whole time of the Churches state in the new Testament (which is against this and other Scriptures euidently, appointing that, to be the time of the Diuels binding:) Yea it is to make Antichrist and the Diuel weaker toward the day of iudgement then before, and the truth better to be knowen, and the faith more common, the neerer we come to the same iudgement: which is expreſly against the Gospel and this prophecie of S. Iohn.* By S. Augustines foresayd explication, is euidently deduced against the Proteſtants that the church cannot erre, and that the Pope can not possibly be Antichrist. An inuincible demonstration.

Mat. 24. Lu. 18, 8.

We see that the sects of Luther, Caluin, and other, be more spred through the world then they were euer before, and consequently the Pope & his religion lessened, & his power of punishing (or, as they call it) persecuting the said Sectaries, through the multitude of his aduersaries, diminished. How then is the Pope Antichrist, whose force shal be greater at the later end of the world, then before? or how can it be otherwise, but these Sect-Maisters should be Antichrists neere preuursors, that make Christs cheefe Ministers and the Churches cheefe gouernours that haue been these thousand yeres and more, to be Antichrists and them selues and their sectes to be true, that come so neere the time of the Diuels looſing and seduction and of the personal reigne of Antichrist?

FVLKE. 6 S. Augustine sayth, which you do fraudulently omit, to haue a simple collour of his authoritie against vs, If this be to the diuel, to be bound & shut vp, not to be able to seduce the church, then shal this be his looſing, that he may be able. God forbid. For the Church shal neuer be seduced by him, being predestinated & elected, before the constitution of the world of which it is said, The Lord knoweth who are his. And yet the Church shalbe here euen in that time in which the diuel is to be looſed: as since the time it was instituted, it hath beene here & shalbe at al times in her children or members which by birth succeed them that die. By this it is manifest, that S. Augustine speaketh not of the visible estate of the church, in which are many hypocrites, but of the congregation of the elect, that shall neuer faile, while the world standeth. Now let vs see, what you gather out of him. First, against the olde heretikes the Chiliastes, In which error certaine great clearkes were intangled: where vpon you inferre, that the scriptures are hard, and that there is no securitie, but in that sense which the Church holdeth. Concerning the hardnes of the scripture, it is a sory conclusion: because one prophecie of things to come is hard, therefore the whole scriptures generally are hard. But although we graunt vnto you that many things are hard in the scripture, yet it will not follow, that all things are hard there in. S. Augustine doth plainely teach you. De doct. christ. lib. 2. c. 6. That the holy ghost hath so magnifically tempered the scriptures, that by plaine and easie places he might prouide against famine, and by hard places he might wipe away lothsomnes, that commonly ariseth of plenty and abundance easilie gotten. And whence the The difficulty of the Scriptures. Interpretation of the church.

the ſecuritie of vnderſtanding thoſe difficulties is to be obteined, he ſheweth, when he ſaith, that nothing almoſt is with any great ſtudie gained out of thoſe obſcurities, which is not found elſwhere to be vttered in the ſcriptures moſt plainly. Meaning that all things neceſſary to ſaluation, are moſt plainely deliuered in the holy ſcriptures, though there be ſome things, perteining either to the times that are paſt, or to the time to come, which are not neceſſary for vs to know, that are difficult or hard to be vnderſtood. There is therefore vndoubted ſecurity, in the plaine text of the ſcripture, though they that boaſt themſelues to be the church, doe hold the contrary. Therefore the ſenſe which the church holdeth, muſt be grounded vpon the ſcriptures, if it be true, if it be not grounded vpon the ſcripture, there is no ſecuritie in holding it.

And ſeeing the church is oftentimes as vncertaine as the queſtion to be decided by the auctoritie thereof, what ſecuritie can there be in the ſenſe, which the church holdeth, before it be certaine, which is the church? And if there be ſo eaſie a rule for ſecuritie of truth in the ſenſe, which the church holdeth, it is maruaile that it was vnknowen to Papias, Irenæus, and ſo many of the ancient fathers of the primitiue church, which erred in this point: Of the kingdom of Chriſt to continue on the earth for a thouſand yeeres: which S. Auguſtine iudgeth to comprehend all the time of the church vpon earth, ſince the death of Chriſt to the ende. Although it may well be taken for 1000. yeeres after Chriſt, during which time, the deuil had no ſuch power to obſcure the grace of Chriſtes redemption, as he hath obteined ſince by the Popes doctrine of merites, ſatisfaction and iuſtification by workes. And as in Pope Ioane was a liuely image of the whore of Babylon, ſo of the looſing of Sathan in Pope Syluester 2. Who being a coniurer and ſorcerer, by the deuils meanes was made Pope, as it is famous, euen in the popiſh ſtories, a number alſo of whoſe Necromantical ſcholers, as (Benno the cardinall, who liued not long after him, affirmeth) by the deuils meanes, obteined the ſeat of Antichriſt But to returne to your obſeruations: you ſay, The late heretikes are by the ſaid words fully refuted, not only affirming that the church may be ſeduced, but alſo holding that the very true church may erre, and fall from trueth to error and idolatrie. What licentiouſnes of lying & ſlandering is this, that you vſurpe ſo commonly? which of vs euer ſaid? that any one of Gods elect might fall from Chriſt to idolatrie finally? much leſſe the whole church of the elect and predeſtinate, of which S. Auguſtine ſpeaketh. But this we ſay with S. Auguſtine, that They which being ouercome, doe follow the deuil, perteined not to the predeſtinated nomber of the ſonnes of God. And that, It is to be confeſſed, that when iniquitie abounded, the charitie of many waxeth cold: and that through the vnaccuſtomed and moſt grieuous perſecutions and deceipts of the deuil, when he is looſed, they which are not written in the booke of life, are many that ſhould yeeld. We ſay not therefore, that the whole church or any true member thereof ſhould be ſeduced vnto deſtruction, but that many of the viſible church, whoſe names are not written in the booke of life, haue bene ſeduced by Antichriſts perſecutions and deceits, ſpecially after Sathan was let looſe. We ſay alſo that the Pope which is the deuils vicar, and not Chriſtes, is Antichriſt, which hath no lawfull gouernement of the Church, but vſurpeth tyranny againſt the true church of the elect. And that he with his clergie which ſeduce the worlde, with his blaſphemous doctrine are the whore of Babylon, and not the Church of Chriſt. We ſay further, that the kingdome of Antichriſt, is but a ſhort time, in compariſon of the æternall kingdome of Chriſt, yet hath it continued many hundred yeeres, though not alwayes in like pride and tyrannie. But that he hath perſecuted the ſaincts, for a thouſand yeeres at the leaſt, we ſay not. For after hee was firſt reuealed in Pope Boniface the thirde, he did fortifie the errors of purgatorie and inuocation of Saincts, the vſe of images, and ſuch like, which were ſowed in the Church before him, and added many other errors vnto them. Seducing, firſt by hypocriſie and counterfecting of faſting and continencie, forbidding meates and mariage. Hauing a ſhew of Chriſtian ſimplicitie, expreſſed in the viſion of the beaſt with two hornes like the lambe, yet ſpeaking like the dragon, and procuring the full iuſtauration of the decayed Romaine Empire, (which is the beaſt with ſeuen heads and ten hornes,) in the See of Rome. Which once obteined, he wallowed in all filthie pleaſures of the fleſh, like an harlot, poyſoning, and alluring the kings of the earth to commit fornication with him, and hauing bewitched the earthly princes, to become obedient vnto him, then at length Sathan was looſed. And the true church, which deteſting thoſe abhominations, and not able any longer to abide the corruptions in doctrine and maners of his wicked retinue, departed out of Babylon, was moſt cruelly perſecuted, in thoſe whome they called Abigenſes, Waldenſes, pauperes de Lugduno, Picardi &c. and that more cruelly, then euer the heathen Emperours perſecuted the Chriſtians before Conſtantinus time. For in thoſe heathenith perſecutions for the moſt part, the Chriſtians were accuſed and condemned in ſome forme of Law, but in theſe cruelties, bloodie warres were held, and cruell battailes fought againſt them to deſtroy them vtterly, if it had bene poſſible.

In pope Sylueſter a liuely image of the looſing of Satan.

After which moſt cruell warres, when they were often driuen into mountaines and deſert places of the Alpes, Appennine, Hercinia ſilua and other corners of the world, or elſe diſperſed and kept cloſe in all regions of Europe, the bloodie inquiſition was ſet vp againſt them, which alſo hath conſumed many thouſandes of them. Yet was it neuer able ſo to ouercome them, but that not only diſperſed members, but euen whole Churches of them continued in the deſert corners, vntill it pleaſed God in this laſt time, to haue his goſpel openly preached, and his worde to make warre againſt Antichriſt, and to haue the victorie as in the chap. 19. verſ. 11. to the end of the chapter. Which prophecie is now in fulfilling, and ſhal be accompliſhed, let Antichriſt and all that take his part, rage neuer ſo much againſt it. We doe not therefore aſſigne, the whole thouſand yeeres, or the moſt part to Antichriſts raigne. For we hold that the chiefe tyrannie of Antichriſt (though he ſhewed himſelfe in clayme and vſurpation in part, and deceiued many before,) beganne at the ende of the thouſande yeeres, when Sathan was let looſe, after which time, the Popes crueltie was greateſt, when his hereſie by the Scholemen and the new ſects of fryers were moſt ſtoutly defended.

But that Antichriſt and the diuell ſhal be weaker toward the day of iudgement, then they were before, and the trueth better be knowen, and the faith more common among many, after Antichriſt is begun to be conſumed with the breath of our Lordes mouth, which is his holy worde: it agreeth not only with the prophecie of S. Paul, but it is moſt cleerely deſcribed in the chapter 19. verſe 11. to the end. Yea through the whole chapter: which is a prophecie of the ioy of the Church, after the condemnation of Antichriſt and the whore of Babylon is knowne therein: and of the preparation of the church, which is the Bride to the day of her mariage: of the victorie of the worde of God againſt Antichriſt: of the vaine attemptes of Antichriſt, and the kings of the earth to reſiſt the word of God and the kingdome of Chriſt. Againſt which there is nothing contrarie in the goſpell or in this prophecie of S. Iohn. For though faith ſhall be harde to be founde at the comming of our ſauiour Chriſt, and in fewe, in compariſon of the multitude of the vnbeleeuers, both open enemies and counterfect Chriſtians, yet faith ſhall be found in the elect, whome hee ſhall finde at his comming, as it is manifeſt 1. Theſſ. 4. 17. though they be not ſo many in number, as haue bene in other ages, that were before Antichriſt, nor ſo fewe, as were during the time of his greateſt tyrannie and perſecution. And ſeeing you see and confesse, that the Pope and his religion is lessened, and his power of crueltie diminished, I woulde (if it bee possible) that you might also see that the Pope is Antichrist, who is nowe consumed by the breath of the mouth of Christ, which is his holy worde: and with the two edged sworde that proceedeth out of the mouth of him, that sitteth on the white horse, whose name is the worde of God, and is rightly called King of Kings and Lorde of Lordes. Against whome it is folly to striue, for all his enemies must be made his footestoole. And by him Antichrist is lessened, and his crueltie diminished, so that his force shall not be greater but daily lesser, vntill he be vtterly destroyed and throwen into hell fire with the diuell and his angels according to this prophecie. For it is not the impudent claime that he maketh to bee Christes chiefe minister, and head of his Church, being the king of pride and the enemie of Christes church, that can any longer hide his wickednesse, which is layed so open by the preaching of the gospel, that all the elect of God may easily see it: though such as the God of this world hath blinded, will not open their eies, but obstinately refuse the light that is offred to their owne destruction.

RHEM. 7. 8 The campe of the Saincts.) S. Augustine in the said 20. booke de Ciuit. Dei cap. 11. It is not saith he, to be taken that the persecutors shal gather to any place, as though the campe of the saincts or the beloued citie should be but in one place, which in deede are no other thing but the Church of Christ spred through the whole world. And therefore whersoeuer the Church shal then be (which shal be in al Nations euen then, for so much is insinuated by this latitude of the earth here specified) there shal the tents of saincts be, and the beloued citie of God, and there shal shee be besieged by all her enemies, which shall be in euery countrie where shee is, in most cruel and forcible sort. So writeth this profound holy Doctor. Whereby we see, that, as now the particular Churches of England, Scotland, Flanders and such like, be persecuted by their enemies in those countries, so in the time of Antichrist the churches of all nations, as of Italie, Spaine, France, and all other which now be quiet, shall be assaulted as now the foresaid are, and much more, for that the generall persecution of the whole, shall be greater then the particular persecution of any churches in the world.

The campe of Saincts is the Catho Church through the world.

As now Heretikes in particular countries, so Antichrist shall persecute the Churches of all nations.

FVLKE. 7. That which you falsly say to be persecution in the church of England, Scotland, Flanders, &c. is in trueth the lessening and diminishing of Antichrist and his religion, which daily proceedeth euen in Italy, Spaine, France, and whersoeuer he maketh most cruell warres against the word of God. And that which you say shall be, that the Church of al nations is to be assaulted most grieuously, hath already bene performed by Antichrist the Pope. Although the battell here spoken of is a more generall consent of all the enemies of the church, inward and outward, secret and open, to make assault against it, though not in one place nor time, nor after one maner. But the vniuersall hatred of all the reprobate, is figured vnder the names of Gog and Magog, in which the Papists and Mahometists are the chiefe, though enemies one to the other. Yet agreeing as the Pharizes and Sadduces in hatred of Christ, so these in persecuting his Church. By this vision therefore, the church is comforted, that as she is instructed in the former visions, that neither the heathen persecutors without the Church, nor Antichrist sitting in the middest of the temple of God, should preuaile to destroy her, no more should all the enemies of the Church, consisting of hypocrites and infidels, which should be the greatest nomber toward the end of the world, though they ioyned in one against her, be able to ouetthrow her, but in fighting against her, they should gaine their owne vndoubted destruction.

RHEM. 9 There came downe a fire.) It is not meant of the fire of Hel (saith S. Augustine lib. c. 12. into which the wicked shal be cast after the resurrection of their bodies, but of an extraordinarie helpe that God will send from heauen, to giue succourse to the Saincts of the Church that then shal fight against the wicked: or, the very feruent and burning zeale of religion & Gods honor, which God wil kindle in the harts of the faithful, to be constant against al the forces of that great persecution.

What is meant by fire from heauen.

RHEM. 8 12 An other booke.) This is the booke of Gods knowledge or predestination, wherin that which before was hid to the world, shal be opened, and wherein the true record of euery mans workes shal be conteined, and they haue their iudgement diuersly according to their workes, and not according to faith onely, or lacke of faith onely. for, all infidels (as Turks, obstinate Iewes, and Heretikes) shal neuer come to that examination, being otherwise condemned.

The booke of euery mans works, opened in the day of iudgement.

FVLKE. 8 Men shal be iudged according to their works which are the fruits of faith or infidelitie. But in the booke of life is not conteined the record of euery mans works, but the names of the elect only: for which record there are other books opened before. Where you say infidels are otherwise condemned then for lacke of faith only, it is true, and yet if they had that faith only, by which God iustifieth the vngodly, they should not be infidels, but faithfull and fruitfull in good works, and not condemned, but glorified with the rest of the elect.

RHEM. 1

1 The tree of life. Chriſt is our tree of life: in the Church, by the B. Sacrament: and in heauen, by his viſible preſence and influence of life euerlaſting both to our bodies and ſoules: of whom Salomon ſaith, The tree of life to all that apprehend him. Prou 5.

FVLKE.1 Christ is our tree of life, not onely by the Sacrament of his supper (for then they only should be partakers of life in him which are partakers of the Sacrament) but by faith, and participation of his spirit, which last is common to all his elect, euen infants, which through infirmitie of their age, haue not faith actually.

RHEM. 2 8 To adore before.) You see it is all one to adore before the feete of the angel, and to adore the angel: though, to adore him, be not expressed as in the 19. chap. See the annotation there v. 10.

FVLKE.2 Wee see both are taught, when they are beside the word of God, as to adore an idole, and to adore before an idole, yet are they not all one. For some outwardly boweth before an idole, that in his heart detesteth it. But to adore before the arke, propitiatory, altar &c. which God by his word alloweth, is not to adore the arke, propitiatory, altar, &c. But God in those places, or in presence of those things. Adoration.

RHEM. 3 11 Let him be iustified yet.) Man by Gods grace and doing good workes, doth increase his iustice.

FVLKE.3 Man doing good works by Gods grace, doth increase that iustice which is a fruit of iustification by faith. But that iustice by which he is iust in the sight of God, he encreaseth not by good works: for it is perfect in Christ, in whom we are iust through faith. Iustus autem adhuc iustiora faciat. Fulg. de rem pecc. c. 17. Remig. in Psal. 10. Christ saith, Fecit vt qui iusti sunt iustificentur adhuc, & qui in sordibus, sordescunt adhuc: illi ad maius præmium, hi ad maiorem damnationem. Iustification.

RHEM. 4 12 According to his workes.) Heauen is the reward, hire, and repaiment for good workes, in all the Scriptures yet the aduersaries will not see it.

FVLKE.4 Heauen is the reward freely giuen to our good workes by the grace of God, not of the merite of workes, nor as an hire to him that worketh. Rom. 4.4. But as an inheritance to the children of God, Math. 25.34. Rom. 8.17. And it is said to be due, and rendred or repayed, not because it is merited or deserued by vs, but by Christ, and promised to vs. And this is the doctrine of all the Scriptures howsoeuer the enemies of Gods grace labour to obscure it. Merite.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XXII.

RHEM. 11 He that hurteth.) It is not an exhortation, but a commination or threatning, that how far soeuer the wicked increase in naughtines, God hath prouided answerable punishment for them.

RHEM. 5 18 If any man shall adde.) The author of the commentaries vpon this booke, bearing the name of S. Ambrose, saith thus of this point. He maketh not this protestation against the expositours of his prophecie, but against Heretikes. for the expositour doth adde or diminish nothing, but openeth the obscuritie of the narration, or sheweth the morall or spiritual sense. He curseth therefore Heretikes that vsed to adde somewhat of their owne that was false, and to take away other things that were contrarie to their heresies. So saith this auncient writer. And this was the propertie of them in all ages, and so it is of ours now, as we haue noted through the whole Bible, and as we haue in sundry places set forth to the sight of al indifferent readers in the new Testament, that all the world may see that the Apostles curse is fallen vpon them, and may beware of them. The curse against adding or diminishing is against Heretikes, not Catholike expositours.

FVLKE.5 You shall neuer be able to prooue that we haue added any thing that is false, or taken away any thing which is true in the whole Bible. What you haue done euen in this translation, and in your annotations, I leaue to the iudgement of the indifferent Readers that will peruse this answere, as also the defence of our translations against the slanderous booke of Gregorie Martine.

RHEM. 6 20 Come Lord Iesus.) And now O Lord Christ, most iust and merciful, we thy poore creatures that are so afflicted for confession and defense of the holy, Catholike, and Apostolike truth, conteined in this thy sacred booke, and in the infallible doctrine of thy deere spouse our mother the Church, we crie also vnto thy Maiestie with tendernesse of our harts vnspeakable, COME LORD IESVS QVICKLY, and iudge betwixt vs and our Aduersaries, and in the meane time giue patience, comfort and constancie to all that suffer for thy name, and trust in thee. O Lord God our onely helper and protector, tarie not long. AMEN. A briefe petition vnto IESVS Christ, to come quickly, as S. Iohn here speaketh, and to iudge the cause of Catholikes and Protestants.

FVLKE.6 The wordes of your prayer be good and godly, but that they proceed not from a faithfull heart, not onely your wilfull and obstinate mainteining of errors, against the most cleere light of the truth, with your intollerable licentiousnesse of lying and slandering the Saincts of God, doe sufficiently declare: but also your horrible practises of treason and murther, of our most gracious Soueraigne Lady, your naturall liege Queene, by your emissaries, Campion, Parsons, and other like trumpets of sedition, and other ministers of your wickednesse, Throckmarton, Someruill, Parry, Sauage, Babington, &c. and the Spanish inuasion by you procured and intended against your countrey, doth openly crie out against you, that you are men voyde of all feare of God, faith, good conscience and religion, so that euery true Christian man may say of you with the Prophet, Psal. 36. The wickednesse of the vngodly hath saide in my heart, there is no feare of God before his eyes, &c. Therefore though you can speake good words in hypocrisie, yet your heart knoweth, and your cauterized conscience can not but beare witnesse that you dare not abide the triall of Gods iudgement, howsoeuer (as all wicked offenders do commonly) you do presumptuously appeale vnto it: I will say no more, but with the whole Church of GOD conclude: COME LORD IESVS. Amen.

God be praysed.
